<SCRIPT language='JavaScript1.1' SRC="http://ad-emea.doubleclick.net/adj/N6010.133705.0666409185621/B4336495.4;abr=!ie;sz=120x600;click=http://ads.guardian.co.uk/event.ng/Type=click&FlightID=143551&AdID=165202&TargetID=42701&Values=239&Redirect=;ord=zobmbz,bfzndNngnupsw?"></SCRIPT> <NOSCRIPT> <A HREF="http://ads.guardian.co.uk/event.ng/Type=click&FlightID=143551&AdID=165202&TargetID=42701&Values=239&Redirect=http://ad-emea.doubleclick.net/jump/N6010.133705.0666409185621/B4336495.4;abr=!ie4;abr=!ie5;sz=120x600;ord=zobmbz,bfzndNngnupsw?"> <IMG SRC="http://ad-emea.doubleclick.net/ad/N6010.133705.0666409185621/B4336495.4;abr=!ie4;abr=!ie5;sz=120x600;ord=zobmbz,bfzndNngnupsw" BORDER=0 WIDTH=120 HEIGHT=600></A> </NOSCRIPT>
GUERR (52) 2010-03-09 18:12:27,514

Latest from politics

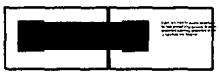
- Most viewed
- Latest
- Most commented

GUERR (52) 2010-03-09 18:12:21,341
Last 24 hours



1. 1. George Bush to David Cameron: don't derail Northern Ireland peace process (165 comments)
2. 2. Jon Venables case: time for a political truce | Michael White (151)
3. 3. Eric Pickles distances Tory party from rightwing training organisation (132)
4. 4. Alan Johnson on Tory crime policy – live (71)
5. 5. We will not be bullied, says UUP leader Sir Reg Empey (67)

Section classified

Guardian holiday offers

- Our choice
- Most popular
-

  Bruges by Eurostar - 3 nights from £249

-

  Uzbekistan - 11 nights from £1395

1. Brussels Jazz Marathon
2. Classical Spain
3. William Morris: A Great Victorian
4. Discover the Nile
5. Venice, Florence & Rome - A Tale of Three Cities

Javascript must be turned on in order to see the most popular holiday offers Find hand-picked holidays to hundreds of destinations
Enter place name [Search]

- Browse all Guardian holiday offers
- Sign up to Guardian holiday offers email

Find your MP

Enter name of the MP[ ] [Go]
Enter postcode or placename[ ] [Go]
Or browse the map | About this search

Latest news on guardian.co.uk

Last updated less than one minute ago

- News

  First woman to die in Afghanistan 'badly trained'

- Sport

  England raise security after bugging

Free P&P at the Guardian bookshop

-
  - Arsenic Century
  - £16.99 with free UK delivery
-
  - Music Instinct
  - £20.00 with free UK delivery

- Browse more politics books

- Sponsored features
-
-

- UK
- USA

USA

Search all jobs [Go]
Browse all jobs
{for result in results} <li> <h4> ${result.jobtitle} </h4>  ${ result.snippet } ${ result.state }  </li> {/for}

- Inscription House Health Center, Phy America Government Services, Inc. (AZPA)

  Facility: Phy America Government Services, Inc... Primary Care PhyAmerica Government Services, Inc. contracts with state and government agencies to provide... AZ

- VA Medical Center, Phy America Government Services, Inc.

  Job # 243167 Company / Facility: Phy America Government Services, Inc. VA Medical Center Location... shift. PhyAmerica Government Services, Inc. is an... GA

- Human Terrain Systems Team Leader - PPL ***

  years military or government experience at O-5 or above (O-4 USMC) or IA - 4 Level or equivalent OR - 3+ years civilian or government management experience... KS jobs by

Ads by Google

- Need Health Insurance?

  Compare Affordable Health Insurance Online - Rates from $30 / Month!

  Affordable-Health-Insurance.org

- Probate Lawyers.

  Skilled lawyers providing personal attention in Probate matters.

  www.LSSLawyers.com/

- Introducing Kates Haddock

  Try Our New Special Dish, Kate's Haddock! Locate A Restaurant Now

  www.BonefishGrill.com

Related information

Politics

- Northern Irish politics ·
- Ulster Unionist Party (UUP) ·
- Conservatives

UK news

- Northern Ireland
- Police

British and Irish PMs endorse Northern Ireland power-sharing deal
5 Feb 2010:
Gordon Brown and Brian Cowen endorse a deal to give Northern Ireland its first justice minister in one of the boldest steps since the 1998 Good Friday peace agreement
More video

27 Feb 2009

Tories promise to make Northern Ireland special tax zone as they link up with UUP

7 Dec 2008

'I want Ulster Unionists in cabinet', says David Cameron

5 Dec 2008

Iain Dale: An enlightened merger of Ulster Unionists and Conservatives

13 Jun 2002

UUP may merge with Tories

Peace protesters gather across Northern Ireland
11 Mar 2009:
Thousands gather across Northern Ireland to hold silent vigils in protest against the murders of two soldiers and a policeman by dissident republicans
More galleries

- License/buy our content |
- Privacy policy |
- Terms & conditions |
- Advertising guide |
- Accessibility |
- A-Z index |
- Inside guardian.co.uk blog |
- About guardian.co.uk |
- Join our dating site today

- guardian.co.uk © Guardian News and Media Limited 2010

Go to: [guardian.co.uk V] [Go]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 6:07 PM
To: H
Subject: Jim

He cannot do 7.
Asking if you can do 8pm?

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/17/2025

RELEASE IN PART
B1,B5,1.4(D),B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 6:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Haiti

They are on board philosophically but don't know how much he would say vis-a-vis Raj

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Apr 17 16:28:12 2010
Subject: Re: Haiti

We have such a strong case. Can we try to get Sibelius and Vilsack on board?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Apr 17 15:48:25 2010
Subject: FW: Haiti

See his last point.

cdm

From: Goosby, Eric
Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 2:48 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: Haiti

Cheryl:

The National MSPP is just the Ministry of Health for Haiti at the National level (Minister Larsen's office). We spent a long time with him and [redacted] B5
B6

We plan to discuss the USG contributions next week and in the April 26th meeting with the MSPP. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

[redacted] In our TA strategy that ( attached in the original email), we outline the areas we can specifically support them in developing the capabilities needed to be a strong oversight National office of Health that can lead and support the Department ministries in carrying out the work.

Right now we have committed to talking further with the Cubans about reconstruction efforts and in further clarifying the role they would play with HUEH. There are many areas we could work together with the Cubans that would be beneficial to the Haitian medical system. You will still have the opportunity to call final package. We will make sure we are clear where our proposal overlaps with the final vision of the Haitians and other donors.

Whole of Government Approach:

[redacted]

Eric

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 2:10 PM
To: Goosby, Eric
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: Haiti

Eric

Thank you for this and for coming – I am very grateful.

I have always understood that while GOH appreciated Cuban doctors and training, [redacted] I understand that frame, and assuming they have physicians and managers, it makes complete sense. 1.4(D) B1

What I still feel like is a bit of a mystery to me, though I know once Dalberg has the proposed final strategy, they will do a careful implementation plan at the direction of you and Judith, is what exactly this means for USG specific activities.

For example:

[redacted] B5

Thanks.

cdm

From: Goosby, Eric
Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 12:15 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: Haiti

Cheryl:

I hope you completed your trip and returned safely. I got back yesterday. I just wanted to close the loop on the discussions I completed with the Ministry of Health Haiti (MSPP) and a brief update on the discussion with the Cubans.

Cuban Delegation:

1. We agreed to talk further about the specifics of the collaboration with the Cuban-Haitian Government, to meet on April 22-23rd to discuss specifics and then again after the April 26th meeting.

2. Agreed to develop a National MSPP focused Technical Assistance Strategy

[redacted] B5

After the Cuban discussion ended, we toured the HUEH hospital with Drs. Henry and Thimothe followed by a long dinner with Minister Larsen agreed to do the following:

[redacted] 1.4(D) B1

2. Meet with the Cuban Delegation as discussed April 22-23 and post Donor Meeting

[redacted] 1.4(D) B1

I hope to catch up with you soon, see you Monday. I am in the office most of the weekend if you want to talk.

Eric

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 9:07 PM
To: H
Subject: Gates/Iran

Have you seen this story? I look forward to discussing.

Gates Says U.S. Lacks Strategy to Curb Iran's Nuclear Drive

By DAVID E. SANGER and THOM SHANKER
Published: April 18, 2010

WASHINGTON - Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates has warned in a secret three-page memorandum to top White House officials that the United States does not have an effective long-range policy for dealing with Iran's steady progress toward nuclear capability, according to government officials familiar with the document.

Several officials said the highly classified analysis, written in January to President Obama's national security adviser, Gen. James L. Jones, touched off an intense effort inside the Pentagon, the White House and the intelligence agencies to develop new options for Mr. Obama. They include a revised set of military alternatives, still under development, to be considered should diplomacy and sanctions fail to force Iran to change course.

Officials familiar with the memo's contents would describe only portions dealing with strategy and policy, and not sections that apparently dealt with secret operations against Iran, or how to deal with Persian Gulf allies.

One senior official, who like others spoke on the condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of the memo, described the document as "a wake-up call." But White House officials dispute that view, insisting that for 15 months they had been conducting detailed planning for many possible outcomes regarding Iran's nuclear program.

In an interview on Friday, General Jones declined to speak about the memorandum. But he said: "On Iran, we are doing what we said we were going to do. The fact that we don't announce publicly our entire strategy for the world to see doesn't mean we don't have a strategy that anticipates the full range of contingencies - we do."

But in his memo, Mr. Gates wrote of a variety of concerns, including the absence of an effective strategy should Iran choose the course that many government and outside analysts consider likely: Iran could assemble all the major parts it needs for a nuclear weapon - fuel, designs and detonators - but stop just short of assembling a fully operational weapon.

In that case, Iran could remain a signatory of the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty while becoming what strategists call a "virtual" nuclear weapons state.

According to several officials, the memorandum also calls for new thinking about how the United States might contain Iran's power if it decided to produce a weapon, and how to deal with the possibility that fuel or weapons could be obtained by one of the terrorist groups Iran has supported, which officials said they considered to be a less-likely possibility.

Mr. Gates has never mentioned the memo in public. His spokesman, Geoff Morrell, declined comment on specifics in the document, but issued a statement on Saturday saying, "The secretary believes the president and his national security team have spent an extraordinary amount of time and effort considering and preparing for the full range of contingencies with respect to Iran."

Pressed on the administration's ambiguous phrases until now about how close the United States was willing to allow Iran's program to proceed, a senior administration official described last week in somewhat clearer terms that there was a line Iran would not be permitted to cross.

The official said that the United States would ensure that Iran would not "acquire a nuclear capability," a step Tehran could get to well before it developed a sophisticated weapon. "That includes the ability to have a breakout," he said, using the term nuclear specialists apply to a country that suddenly renounces the nonproliferation treaty and uses its technology to build a small arsenal.

Nearly two weeks ago, Mr. Obama, in an interview with The New York Times, was asked about whether he saw a difference between a nuclear-capable Iran and one that had a fully developed weapon. "I'm not going to parse that right now," he said. But he noted that North Korea was considered a nuclear-capable state until it threw out inspectors and, as he said, "became a self-professed nuclear state."

Mr. Gates has alluded to his concern that intelligence agencies might miss signals that Iran was taking the final steps toward producing a weapon. Last Sunday on the NBC News program "Meet the Press," he said: "If their policy is to go to the threshold but not assemble a nuclear weapon, how do you tell that they have not assembled? I don't actually know how you would verify that." But he cautioned that Iran had run into production difficulties, and he said, "It's going slow - slower than they anticipated, but they are moving in that direction."

Mr. Gates has taken a crucial role in formulating the administration's strategy, and he has been known over his career to issue stark warnings against the possibility of strategic surprise.

Some officials said his memo should be viewed in that light: as a warning to a relatively new president that the United States was not adequately prepared.

He wrote the memo after Iran had let pass a 2009 deadline set by Mr. Obama to respond to his offers of diplomatic engagement.

Both that process and efforts to bring new sanctions against Iran have struggled. Administration officials had hoped that the revelation by Mr. Obama in September that Iran was building a new uranium enrichment plant inside a mountain near Qum would galvanize other nations against Iran, but the reaction was muted. The next three months were spent in what proved to be fruitless diplomatic talks with Iran over a plan to swap much of its low-enriched uranium for fuel for a medical reactor in Tehran. By the time Mr. Gates wrote his memo, those negotiations had collapsed.

Mr. Gates's memo appears to reflect concerns in the upper echelons of the Pentagon and the military that the White House did not have a well-prepared series of alternatives in place in case all the diplomatic steps finally failed. In fact, just before Mr. Gates issued his warning, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. Mike Mullen, wrote an official "chairman's guidance" to his staff saying that while any military option would have "limited results" against Iran's nuclear facilities, preparations needed to be stepped up.

"Should the president call for military options, we must have them ready," the admiral wrote.

Administration officials testifying before a Senate committee last week made it clear that those preparations were under way. So did General Jones. "The president has made it clear from the beginning of this administration that we need to be prepared for every possible contingency," he said in the interview. "That is what we have done from day one, while successfully building a coalition of nations to isolate Iran and pressure it to live up to its obligations."

At the same hearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee, Lt. Gen. Ronald L. Burgess Jr., director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, and Gen. James E. Cartwright, the vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and one of the military's most experienced officers on nuclear matters, said that Iran could produce bomb-grade fuel for at least one nuclear weapon within a year, but that it would probably need two to five years to manufacture a workable atomic bomb.

The administration has been stepping up efforts to contain the influence of Iran and counter its missiles, including placing Patriot anti-missile batteries, mostly

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 18, 2010 4:55 AM
To: H
Subject: From the road

I wanted to give you some brief observations from my trip to Lithuania. First of all, their friendship with the US and respect for you was much in evidence on all levels. Most of the cabinet turned out for the reception that the amb hosted for me. The FM went out his way to tell me what it meant to get a call from you when he assumed his position (he's hoping to have a few mins with you in Tallin). As far as Lith has to go, it has achieved some remarkable achievements for Eastern Eur. They have a female president, Speaker, Finance minister and def. minister. I had a good meeting with the President and thanked her for Lith commitment to our collective efforts in afghanistan. They run the smallest PRT and, despite a tough economy, have done everything we've asked in terms of additional support since the surge. The meeting with the Speaker and top women members of the parl'nt was yet another reminder of your inspiration over many years. One of the women was at the Vienna VV conf and said she's in politics today because of you. Another read about safe birthing kits in your book and was inspired to send several thousand to Afghanistan. They are eager for more opportunities to work together.

I came primarily to launch the new working group on gender that we and Lith are co-chairing. There was much gratitude for our leadership with them in the Community of Democracies.
The meaning of democracy is so strong for people who had to stuggle for it more recently. They really feel this is an important time to renew the understanding of democ, particularly after the bruising it underwent over the last several years.
We had terrific turnout from other countries, many comments about you and references to Beijing and Iceland VV conf. (So many people told me the impact Vienna and Iceland had on them). We left our meeting with many commitments for future concrete projects that will be undertaken. There is great hope that you will be in Krakow in July for the CD ministerial. The Lith CD coordinator headed to Belgium the next day for an EU meeting. He told me he got a very positive response for our gender initiative and that Ashton was particularly excited about it. The EU is locating their new gender institute in Lithuania and they are ager for our help.
The Dutch minister who came said the outcome of their election in June will say much about the nature of their ongoing commitment in Afg.
Lastly, I arrived shortly after the Polish tragedy. There is a very close relationship between the 2 countries and their grief was palpable. Jolenta Kwasniewska and several other Poles came to the CD meeting. She told me that they lost so many of their top leaders across all sectors of society, incl several top women leaders. Jolenta' foundation has been very active in advancing women's progress in Poland as well as working in other countries.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, March 9, 2010 10:45 PM
To: H
Subject: H: FYI, a little collaboration in the spirit of postpartisanship. Sid http://www.huffingtonpost.com/joe-wilson/emcourage-and-consequence_b_492602.html?view=print

March 9, 2010
x

Joseph C. Wilson

Courage and Consequence: Less Memoir Than Hoax

Karl Rove's book Courage and Consequence is less memoir than hoax. The chapters that relate to the CIA leak scandal are yet another attempt to deflect attention from his central role in the betrayal of Valerie Plame Wilson's identity as a covert CIA officer.

His distortions and fabrications are consistent with his approach throughout this sordid and criminal affair. Wasting his opportunity to tell the truth, he offers absolutely nothing new, and his selective use of facts and quotes are a transparent effort to continue his long campaign to confuse people, unfortunately consistent with his past behavior.

His book is a pathetically weak defense of the disastrous policies pursued by the Bush administration, involving our country in a war of choice based on false intelligence and badly tarnishing the good name of the United States of America. Nothing in Karl Rove's book refutes those facts. His book, however, is illuminating in further exposing his political methods, especially his reliance on personal insults, not simply towards Valerie and myself, but also towards all those who opposed his unprincipled behavior.

If any additional proof to the irrefutable historical record were needed, Rove's book demonstrates once again the actions of a vindictive, angry and petty man. Karl Rove betrayed his nation; now he has betrayed history.

Most Popular on HuffingtonPost
ic8B%2FZr%2BTvJ%2FZm0UDCPhOfsL3fraNDZ7CImceztZ%2FwKnab1e6NLC8C%2Fc3vNRqWkrP1gCRQ179HsmBCFB36MIHQ%3D%3D
NkxiHotNvaMBvSlWd8FxHW6t54evrcfDEhUpq1kgmICuOGbdUFM0Vy6zrxRkzTtEQvX8tNvCK6VxiLLoSxJQqA%3D%3D
1 of 2

Palin Crossed Border For Canadian Health Care
11,161 Comments

Oscars Breast Dressed: Who Wore Cleavage Best? (PHOTOS)
385 Comments

Obama LIVE: Watch Video, Twitter Commentary
5,038 Comments

Alec Baldwin Thoughts on Hosting the 2010 Academy Awards
565 Comments

Rev. James Martin, S.J. Glenn Beck to Jesus: Drop...
1,281 Comments

Katy Hall 'Green Zone': The 'Bourne' Team Takes On...
220 Comments

Short Film Producer Elinor Burkett Hijacks Speech In Oscar...
1,095 Comments

Oscars 2010 WORST-DRESSED: See Who Bombed The Red Carpet...
245 Comments

The 7 Lamest Moments From This Year's Oscars
534 Comments

Don't Miss HuffPost Bloggers
1 of 5

Alec Baldwin
Thoughts on Hosting the 2010 Academy Awards

Madonna
Sharing an Inspiring Story on International Women's Day

Hot Trends
army col. kim jong-ryul harry markopolos jesse ventura karen salmansohn karl rove

Get Breaking News Alerts
[ ]

HuffPost Social News connects you with friends and the news

Follow Huffington Post

Get Email Alerts »

HUFFPOST'S BIG NEWS PAGES

Bank Of America Overdraft Fees Dropped: Bank Will End Fees By Summer 2010
Financial Crisis

Bob Barker Loves PETA, Donates $2.5 Million For New Offices
PETA

All The Most Ridiculous Parts Of The Eric Massa/Glenn Beck Interview In Under One Minute (VIDEO)
Glenn Beck

Mahmoud al-Mabhouh Assassination: The New York City Connection
Dubai

Gibbs Fires Back At Chief Justice Roberts Over Obama Criticism
Supreme Court

Obama Foreclosure-Prevention Plan Lagging, New Data Shows (EXCLUSIVE)
Timothy Geithner

Jihad Jane, Colleen LaRose, Recruited Terrorists And Plotted Murder, Prosecutors Say Ireland

Toyota Stuck Accelerator Tips: What To Do If Your Car Suddenly Accelerates Cars

Jessie Spano's Caffeine Intake (GRAPH)
Funny Pictures
more big news pages »

- Copyright © 2010 HuffingtonPost.com, Inc. |
- Archive |
- User Agreement |
- Privacy |

- Comment Policy |
- About Us |
- Powered by Movable Type

HuffPost Lightbox

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 18, 2010 11:18 AM
To: H
Subject: Tony blair says he's free to talk anytime today. He's in middle east so is 8 hours ahead.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, March 9, 2010 11:03 PM
To: H
Subject: H: You are at top of NI story. Sid

<SCRIPT language='JavaScript1.1' SRC="http://ad-emea.doubleclick.net/adj/N6010.133705.0666409185621/B4336495;abr=!ie;sz=468x60;click=http://ads.guardian.co.uk/event.ng/Type=click&FlightID=143552&AdID=165203&TargetID=42700&Values=3263&Redirect=;ord=bNzdIpy,bfzocfybnvaqg?"></SCRIPT> <NOSCRIPT> <A HREF="http://ads.guardian.co.uk/event.ng/Type=click&FlightID=143552&AdID=165203&TargetID=42700&Values=3263&Redirect=http://ad-emea.doubleclick.net/jump/N6010.133705.0666409185621/B4336495;abr=!ie4;abr=!ie5;sz=468x60;ord=bNzdIpy,bfzocfybnvaqg?"> <IMG SRC="http://ad-emea.doubleclick.net/ad/N6010.133705.0666409185621/B4336495;abr=!ie4;abr=!ie5;sz=468x60;ord=bNzdIpy,bfzocfybnvaqg" BORDER=0 WIDTH=468 HEIGHT=60></A> </NOSCRIPT>

[redacted]
Search [guardian.co.uk V] [Search]

Stormont votes to take over Northern Ireland policing powers

- Power-sharing finalised as assembly agrees to first justice minister since Troubles
- Ulster Unionists oppose measure but Hillary Clinton welcomes assembly's yes vote

A 15-year search for a political settlement in Northern Ireland cleared its final hurdle today when unionists and nationalists voted to transfer policing and criminal justice powers to Belfast, creating the province's first justice minister since the Troubles erupted four decades ago.

Sinn Féin and the Democratic Unionist party (DUP), who were barely on speaking terms a few years ago, joined forces with the nationalist SDLP in the Northern Ireland assembly to endorse a deal on policing, hammered out last month.

The justice minister will be appointed on 12 April and is likely to be David Ford, the leader of the centrist Alliance party.

The breakthrough was marred by a row when the Ulster Unionist party (UUP), which governed Northern Ireland for five decades until the imposition of direct rule in 1972, voted against the deal.

Sir Reg Empey, the UUP leader, who recently formed an electoral pact with the Conservatives, said he had voted no because his party did not believe that the four-party power-sharing executive was functioning properly. Empey, the minister for employment and learning, said: "We exercise our rights, refusing to bow to the blackmail and bullying to which we have been subjected in recent weeks."

The UUP hit out after facing intense pressure from London and the US to fall in behind David Cameron, who has backed devolution of the criminal justice system. Gordon Brown phoned Empey shortly before today's vote, while former US president George Bush pleaded with Cameron last week to persuade the UUP to support the deal.

Empey's unionist rivals, the DUP, who have overtaken the UUP in recent years, focused on what could happen after the vote. The DUP leader, Peter Robinson, who managed to persuade all but one of his 36 assembly members to back the devolution deal, said: "The move is about completing and maintaining devolution, it is about whether we move forward together as a society."

The vote secures an extra £800m for policing and justice that Brown promised the assembly if they backed the transfer. It also adds an extra 1,200 police officers. The prime minister praised the main parties for reaching the deal on an issue that almost broke the power-sharing government.

He said: "Today the politics of progress have finally replaced the politics of division in Northern Ireland. The completion of devolution, supported by all sections of the community in Northern Ireland, is the final end to decades of strife. It sends the most powerful message to those who would return to violence: that democracy and tolerance will prevail. The courage and leadership of the parties who voted to complete devolution at Stormont will be noted around the world."

The vote was also praised tonight by Hillary Clinton, the US secretary of state. She said: "I commend the Northern Ireland Assembly for its affirmation of the Hillsborough Agreement and its endorsement of the devolution of policing and justice, an important step in ensuring a peaceful and prosperous future for all of the people of Northern Ireland for generations to come."

Irish president Mary McAleese also hailed the move. "Today's vote in the Northern Ireland assembly represents an eloquent statement of confidence in the political institutions established under the Good Friday Agreement," she said.

Matt Baggott, chief constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland, welcomed the vote as a step forward. "Devolution will strengthen our service. It will help to ensure communities receive the policing service that not only they deserve, but that we are committed to delivering.

"The financial package is also welcomed ... it will help us deal with those who are living in the darkness of the past and who have tried to disrupt this process and the lives of our community."

But there was discord inside Stormont after the UUP and their 17-strong assembly team voted against the move.

Martin McGuinness, Sinn Féin's deputy first minister, denounced the UUP stance, claiming they were doing it to embarrass the DUP. "The UUP declared last night [Monday] that they will not support this resolution," McGuinness told the assembly. "That saddens and disappoints me. They are opposed in my view to the transfer for cynical party political reasons." He stressed that no single party could control the justice department.

The UUP no-vote will put pressure on the Tories, who will campaign with their allies in the general election, having taken opposing sides on the biggest vote since the DUP and Sinn Féin started sharing power in 2007.

Cameron insisted that the Tories had played a constructive role, saying he would maintain his alliance with the UUP. "We want to move Northern Ireland politics forward – to focus on the issues that affect people in their everyday lives – rather than remaining stuck in the past. That is why we remain totally committed to bringing national, mainstream UK politics to Northern Ireland and to ending its semi-detached political status."

Cameron's remarks were designed, in part, to reassure the White House, which fears a UUP no-vote could harden unionist opinion against power-sharing.

Hardline Unionists turned on the DUP tonight. Jim Allister, the former DUP MEP, who now leads the breakaway Traditional Unionist Voice, claimed his former party had "rolled over in triple somersaults for Sinn Féin". He also suggested the new justice minister would be a "pointless puppet keeping the seat warm for Sinn Féin". Prior to the vote the widow of the first Police Service of Northern Ireland officer to be murdered by dissident republicans urged all parties to back the devolution of policing and justice powers. Kate Carroll, whose husband, Stephen, was killed by a Continuity IRA sniper, said in an appeal to the UUP: "It is heartbreaking that I have to get on this morning to please ask the politicians to get on with their job."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 18, 2010 12:08 PM
To: H
Subject: Jake wants to talk to u when u r free

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 9:55 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: NYT Somalia article on p1

FYI – I'm sure you saw.

cdm

---

From: Russo, Robert V
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 8:22 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: RE: You should read NYT Somalia article on p1

Here is the link: http://www.nytimes.com/2010/03/10/world/africa/10somalia.html?ref=world

Text below, also printed in your "Read" folder:

March 9, 2010

Somalia Food Aid Bypasses Needy, U.N. Study Says

By JEFFREY GETTLEMAN and NEIL MacFARQUHAR

As much as half the food aid sent to Somalia is diverted from needy people to a web of corrupt contractors, radical Islamist militants and local United Nations staff members, according to a new Security Council report.

The report, which has not yet been made public but was shown to The New York Times by diplomats, outlines a host of problems so grave that it recommends that Secretary General Ban Ki-moon open an independent investigation into the World Food Program's Somalia operations. It suggests that the program rebuild the food distribution system — which serves at least 2.5 million people and whose aid was worth about $485 million in 2009 — from scratch to break what it describes as a corrupt cartel of Somali distributors.

In addition to the diversion of food aid, regional Somali authorities are collaborating with pirates who hijack ships along the lawless coast, the report says, and Somali government ministers have auctioned off diplomatic visas for trips to Europe to the highest bidders, some of whom may have been pirates or insurgents.

Somali officials denied that the visa problem was widespread, and officials for the World Food Program said they had not yet seen the report but would investigate its conclusions once it was presented to the Security Council next Tuesday.

The report comes as Somalia's transitional government is preparing for a major military offensive to retake the capital, Mogadishu, and combat an Islamist insurgency with connections to Al Qaeda.

The United States is providing military aid, as the United Nations tries to roll back two decades of anarchy in the country.

But it may be an uphill battle. According to the report, Somalia's security forces "remain ineffective, disorganized and corrupt — a composite of independent militias loyal to senior government officials and military officers who profit from the business of war."

One American official recently conceded that Somalia's "best hope" was the government's new military chief, a 60-year-old former artillery officer who, until a few months ago, was assistant manager at a McDonald's in Germany.

The report's investigators, part of the Monitoring Group on Somalia, were originally asked to track violations of the United Nations arms embargo on Somalia, but the mandate was expanded.

Several of the report's authors have received death threats, and the United Nations recently relocated them from Kenya to New York for safety reasons.

Possible aid obstructions have been a nettlesome topic for Somalia over the past year and have contributed to delays in aid shipments by the American government and recent suspensions of food programs in some areas by United Nations officials.

The report singles out the World Food Program, the largest aid agency in the crisis-racked country, as particularly flawed.

"Some humanitarian resources, notably food aid, have been diverted to military uses," the report said. "A handful of Somali contractors for aid agencies have formed a cartel and become important power brokers — some of whom channel their profits, or the aid itself, directly to armed opposition groups."

These allegations of food aid diversions first surfaced last year. The World Food Program has consistently denied finding any proof of malfeasance and said that its own recent internal audit found no widespread abuse.

"We have not yet seen the U.N. Somalia Monitoring Group report," the World Food Program's deputy executive director, Amir Abdulla, said Tuesday. "But we will investigate all of the allegations, as we have always done in the past if questions have been raised about our operations."

The current report's investigators question how independent that past audit was, and called for a new outside investigation of the United Nations agency.

"We have to tell these folks that you cannot go on like this — we know what you are doing, you can't fool us anymore, so you better stop," said President Ali Bongo Ondimba of Gabon, who was at the United Nations, where his country holds the presidency of the Security Council this month.

The report also charges that Somali officials are selling spots on trips to Europe and that many of the people who are presented as part of an official government entourage are actually pirates or members of militant groups.

The report says that Somali officials use their connections to foreign governments to get visas and travel documents for people who would not otherwise be able to travel abroad and that many of these people then disappear into Europe and do not come back.

"Somali ministers, members of Parliament, diplomats and 'freelance brokers' have transformed access to foreign visas into a growth industry, matched possibly only by piracy," selling visas for $10,000 to $15,000 each, the report said.

The report's authors estimate that dozens, if not hundreds of Somalis have gained access to Europe or beyond through this under-the-table visa business.

Mohamed Osman Aden, a Somali diplomat in Kenya, said: "Maybe there's been one or two cases that have happened over the years. But these are just rumors. These allegations have been going around for years."

The report also takes aim at some of Somalia's richest, most influential businessmen, Somalia's so-called money lords. One, Abdulkadir M. Nur, known as Eno, is married to a woman who plays a prominent role in a local aid agency that is supposed to verify whether food aid is actually delivered. That "potential loophole" could "offer considerable potential of large-scale diversion," the report said.

The report accuses Mr. Nur of staging the hijacking of his own trucks and later selling the food.

In an e-mail message, Mr. Nur said he had sent the investigators many documents that "showed very clearly that the gossip and rumors they are investigating are untrue," including the alleged hijacking or any link to insurgents. He said that his wife merely sat on the board of the local aid agency and that only "a tiny fraction" of the food he transported was designated for that aid agency.

In September, Somalia's president, Sheik Sharif Sheik Ahmed, wrote a letter to Secretary General Ban, defending Mr. Nur as a "very conscientious, diligent and hard-working person" and saying that if it were not for the contractors, "many Somalis would have perished."

The report questions why the World Food Program would steer 80 percent of its transportation contracts for Somalia, worth about $200 million, to three Somali businessmen, especially when they are suspected of connections to Islamist insurgents.

The report says that fraud is pervasive, with about 30 percent of aid skimmed by local partners and local World Food Program personnel, 10 percent by the ground transporters and 5 to 10 percent by the armed group in control of the area. That means as much as half of the food never makes it to the people who desperately need it.

In January, the United States halted tens of millions of dollars of aid shipments to southern Somalia because of fears of such diversions, and American officials believe that some American aid may have fallen into the hands of Al Shabab, the most militant of Somalia's insurgent groups.

The report also said that the president of Puntland, a semiautonomous region in northern Somalia, had extensive ties to pirates in the area, who then funneled some of the money they made from hijacking ships to authorities.

Puntland authorities could not be reached on Tuesday, but Mr. Aden, the Somali diplomat, dismissed the allegations, saying that the Puntland government had jailed more than 150 pirates and that it had not "received a penny from them."

"It's unfortunate that this monitoring group thinks they can stick everything on the Somalis," he said.

Jeffrey Gettleman reported from Gisenyi, Rwanda, and Neil MacFarquhar from New York.

RELEASE IN PART
B1,1.4(D)

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 7:08 AM
To: H; Steinberg, James B; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Macmanus, Joseph E
Subject: FW: BBC poll on global attitutudes-favorable views of USA
Attachments: plugin-BBC_2010 Country Influence Poll_Long Version.pdf

FYI. Mostly good news. I am already focusing on Turkey. Met with my Turkish counter-part last week and have a trip planned for early June. [redacted] 1.4(D) B1

[redacted]

I'll keep you posted as things move forward. Will also send you an email on the high side about my SSCI hearing last week.

jm

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/19/2020

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 8:08 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: AIPAC

Roger.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Mar 22 08:02:04 2010
Subject: Re: AIPAC

Pls add to the acknowledgements: Howard Friedman, Ester Kurz and Richard Fishman.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Mar 22 07:10:55 2010
Subject: Fw: AIPAC

See below. [redacted] How would you like to proceed? B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Mar 22 07:07:38 2010
Subject: Fw: AIPAC

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Knopf, Payton L
To: Schwerin, Daniel B; Prince, Jonathan M; Djerassi, Alexander M
Cc: Rudman, Mara; Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
Sent: Mon Mar 22 06:57:39 2010
Subject: AIPAC

[redacted]

We are boarding a plane from Amman to DC shortly but can be reached via the Operations Center if there are questions.

Thanks.

Payton

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 8:14 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Official: Kyrgyz president leaves Kazakhstan

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Mon Apr 19 08:10:32 2010
Subject: (AP) Official: Kyrgyz president leaves Kazakhstan

BISHKEK (AP) - Kazakh Foreign Ministry spokesman Ilyas Omarov said the deposed president of Kyrgyzstan left their country for an unknown destination, where he had sought refuge in the wake of the bloody uprising in his nation.

Ezra Casteel
S/ES-O Operations Specialist
202.647.1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 10:18 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Secretary's Video Speech

FYI

---

From: John, Eric G
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 4:29 AM
To: Campbell, Kurt M; Marciel, Scot A; Smith, Demian
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Secretary's Video Speech

Kurt:

You'll be happy to know that the Secretary's video message was the subject of a great op-ed in today's Thai Rath, the leading newspaper in Thailand. They took exactly the line that we hoped they would – seeing her message not as the U.S. intervening in politics, but, rather, as a very personal message from someone who cares deeply about Thailand. The writer even referred to the Secretary's autobiography.

Thai Rath (leading Thai language daily), a commentary on Thai politics, April 16, referenced Secretary Clinton's video statement calling for a peaceful solution to Thailand's political crisis: "I would like to thank U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton for making a request herself and on behalf of President Obama for the two opposing parties to return to the negotiating table so as to end their conflict. The short video message in which she mentioned Thailand was full of sincerity. She started by saying that she was making this request as "a long-standing friend of the Thai people" She referred to the Songkran festival which is the Thai New Year and said the opposing parties should consider this an opportunity for a new round of talks. She emphasized that violence cannot bring happiness and peace and that the opposing parties should talk in order to solve the problem. I believe Mrs. Clinton said this with sincerity. I have read a book in which she wrote about her brief visit to Thailand as First Lady several years ago and showed her goodwill toward the Thai people and Thailand in the book. During her most recent visit to Thailand last year, Mrs. Clinton gave an interview and expressed her opinion about Thai politics in the most amicable way. Normally, I do not quite approve of the U.S. because I think it often meddles with other countries' affairs. But I wholeheartedly agree with Secretary Clinton's request and would like to sincerely thank her for it." (To see the video, click here. To read the original article in Thai, click here.)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 2:41 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: choice quotes from the testimony

FYI.

---

From: Hyde, Dana
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 2:35 PM
To: Lew, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: choice quotes from the testimony

REALLY good stuff from the GHI hearing this morning with Gates and Clinton. ☺

We should make sure the Secretary knows what an instrumental role Ann Gavaghan has played at all levels of this. - D

---

From: Gavaghan, Ann
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 2:20 PM
To: Hyde, Dana; Batson, Amie (GH/AA)
Subject: FW: choice quotes from the testimony

Stories are starting to roll in...

---

From: Peterson, Jennifer L
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 2:02 PM
To: Gavaghan, Ann; Knight, M Chantal; Walsh, Thomas J
Cc: Thaivalappil, Maureen E; Ballard, Erica L; Murphy, Ruth L
Subject: RE: choice quotes from the testimony

I was just chatting with Maureen about highlighting today's testimony. She can send out some of the quotes below via PEPFAR's Twitter feed, and will give State a heads up about the tweets in case they want to push them out too. She is also posting the video of the hearing on our Facebook page.

We could consider doing a Dipnote blog from EG when he testifies, and we could quote today's testimony.

Here are some articles out:

Clinton: Improving foreign health is good policy
CNN International - March 10, 2010
Washington (CNN) -- Aside from a moral obligation, improving the health of people in other nations is smart foreign policy, former President Clinton said Wednesday. "We live in an interdependent world in which we have learned the hard way that no matter how brilliantly our forces perform, we can not kill, jail or occupy all of our adversaries," he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in discussing why the issue of global health should be important to the United States.

Clinton, Gates Say US Help Abroad Improves Image
Associated Press – March 10, 2010
Bill Clinton and Bill Gates have told a Senate panel that U.S. investments in fighting AIDS, malaria and other diseases in underdeveloped nations play a vital role in improving America's image abroad. Clinton said Wednesday that helping the world's poorest tackle their health problems is "intrinsically good for America's foreign policy." The former president said the work shouldn't be politicized.

Double Bill-ing on the Hill
Politico – March 10, 2010
Bill Clinton and Bill Gates urged senators to devote more resources to global health today – and said that there are limits to what their own fame and wealth can accomplish. "My goal is to go to places where my being there won't cause problems for foreign policy," Clinton said. ... Gates and Clinton agreed broadly that the United States should continue and intensify its efforts to combat infectious diseases. On other global development issues, they sometimes clarified each other's remarks.

---

From: Gavaghan, Ann
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 12:58 PM
To: Peterson, Jennifer L; Knight, M Chantal
Subject: choice quotes from the testimony

Senator John Kerry: "The Global Health Initiative has rightly identified several core principles that should guide our thinking.... I hope they will provide the underpinnings for strong bipartisan support going forward for advancing global health and strengthening the fight against HIV/AIDS."

Bill Gates:
"I believe GHI is an important next step – indeed a natural progression – in U.S. efforts to address health challenges around the world."

"I am pleased that the GHI will include an increased emphasis on family health and the myriad of interventions that, when taken together and integrated in both approach and execution, make families healthier and societies more productive."

"...the GHI aims for greater resources and a fresh approach to deploying resources in order to maximize health outcomes in as short a time as possible. It seeks to concentrate resources in order to better achieve scale in selected countries. And it utilizes targeted funding increases on diseases and conditions that have a devastating health and economic impact on countries yet are entirely preventable or treatable. These are laudable goals."

"I'm pleased that the Global Health Initiative aims to build off of and improve successful American platforms such as PEPFAR and PMI, and that it will enable a more integrated approach to health both here in Washington, D.C., and on the ground – where we lose patients if we can't address their needs comprehensively."

"Yet 9 million children dying unnecessarily each year is still 9 million too many. I believe that a combination of interventions, as suggested by the approach of the Global Health Initiative, can cut this figure in half again in well under 15 years."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 9:40 AM
To: H
Subject: Statement for sign off

Joint Statement by Former President Clinton and Secretary of State Clinton on the Passing of Dr. Dorothy Height We are deeply saddened to learn of the passing of Dr. Dorothy Height, an icon of America's long march toward equality and a personal inspiration to us both. As the only woman among the "Big Six" civil rights leaders, Dr. Height helped galvanize a movement that changed our country forever. She organized the "Wednesdays in Mississippi" meetings that brought black and white women together to find common ground and break down barriers. She never stopped fighting for what she knew was right. And through it all, she was always the best dressed woman in the room. We were blessed to know Dr. Height, to benefit from her grace, passion and wisdom, and to call her our friend. For decades, starting with the early days at the Children's Defense Fund, we worked with her, learned from her, and drew inspiration from her example. From the Presidential Medal of Freedom, to the Congressional Gold Medal, to the unveiling of a long-sought-after bust of Sojourner Truth in the United States Capitol, we had the privilege of helping honor Dr. Height and her accomplishments. Born before women had the right to vote, denied access to the college of her choice because of the color of her skin, and witness to nation divided, Dr. Height dedicated her life to the proposition that all Americans should have the opportunity to live up to their full God-given potential. Our nation is poorer for her loss but infinitely richer for the life she led, the progress she achieved, and the people she touched. Our thoughts and prayers are with Dr. Height's family today, and with her many loving friends and colleagues. She would be the first to tell us that the best way to honor her memory is to carry forward the work she started and the causes she championed, to open wide the freedom gates. May we all find the strength and the wisdom to live up to her legacy.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 9:44 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Lukashenko: Deposed Kyrgyz leader in Belarus

From: Roberts, Kristin
To: NEWS-SCA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Tue Apr 20 08:54:52 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Lukashenko: Deposed Kyrgyz leader in Belarus

MINSK (Reuters) - Belarussian leader Alexander Lukashenko said that Kyrgyzstan's former president, Kurmanbek Bakiyev, was in the Belarussian capital, Minsk. Bakiyev fled Kyrgyzstan last week after an uprising against his five-year rule.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 10:08 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Volcanic Ash Travel Disruption Spot Report No. 1

Basically if they can get their teams in from brussels tomorrow morning (a day before nato starts), its moving forward. We should know approx 6am our time. However, if we need to be wheels up at 8am, that's too short notice. I just told ivo we need to lean on them to make a decision sooner. Will keep u posted but we are def getting the sense they want to move forward.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Apr 20 09:24:30 2010
Subject: Re: Volcanic Ash Travel Disruption Spot Report No. 1

So, what's the latest? It sounds contradictory and when does AF have to decide? Shall we take the 1 or 2 shuttle?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Apr 20 08:31:55 2010
Subject: Fw: Volcanic Ash Travel Disruption Spot Report No. 1

Update on airport openings. Looks like estonia is partially open. They think most ministers will fly private so they seem to want to try and move forward.

---

From: OpsAlert
Sent: Tue Apr 20 06:37:21 2010
Subject: Volcanic Ash Travel Disruption Spot Report No. 1

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

SPOT REPORT No. 1

VOLCANIC ASH TRAVEL DISRUPTION

Tuesday, April 20, 2010

0630 EDT

SOME EUROPEAN AIRLINES RESUME OPERATIONS

· (SBU) The European Organization for the Safety of Air Navigation (EuroControl) expects close to 60 percent of the scheduled 27,500 flights in European airspace to fly April 20. There were approximately 8700 flights on April 19, roughly 30 percent of regularly scheduled flights. (www.eurocontrol.int <http://www.eurocontrol.int/> )

· (SBU) EU transportation ministers agreed on a phased opening of larger airports, subject to changing conditions. Per www.eurocontrol.int <http://www.eurocontrol.int/> , current European airport operations include:

o Normal Operations: Austria, Bosnia, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Montenegro, Netherlands, Romania, Russia, Serbia, Switzerland, Turkey, Ukraine

o Partial Operations (includes airports fully operational for limited hours): Belgium, Britain, Estonia, France, Germany, Ireland, Luxembourg, Norway, Slovakia, Spain, Sweden

o Closed (in some cases the airspace remains open for transit flights): Denmark, Finland, Lithuania, Poland, Slovenia

· (SBU) For additional information, please go to the New York Times airport cancellation tracker: www.nytimes.com/interactive/2010/04/15/world/europe/airport-closings-graphic.html?src=me&ref=world <http://www.nytimes.com/interactive/2010/04/15/world/europe/airport-closings-graphic.html?src=me&ref=world>

STATE DEPARTMENT RESPONSE

· (SBU) The United States is not evacuating American citizens at this time. Commercial travel is expected to resume before U.S. Government-facilitated arrangements could be made. (travel.state.gov <http://www.travel.state.gov/> )

· (SBU) Consular Affairs (CA) updated the travel.state.gov <http://www.state.gov/> website, as well as websites for U.S. Embassies throughout Europe, in order to provide additional details, including low-cost hotels, medical services, and the process to refill U.S. prescriptions. CA urges travelers to monitor local news and check in with airlines frequently. As applicable, the websites also detail procedures for those who have exceeded the duration of their visas due to the delays. (travel.state.gov <http://www.travel.state.gov/> )

Please see our classified website at http://ses.state.sgov.gov <http://ses.state.sgov.gov/> .

Drafted: KMZurcher

Approved: HCThompson

Dist: State (all bureaus), NSS, OSD, NMCC, JCS, CIA, OSC, NCTC, DHS

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 9:13 AM
To: H
Subject: WHA posts

For this year:

Chile is going to Alex Wolfe
Columbia to Mike McKinley
Venezuela to Larry Palmer.

Next year, few big posts are up. Indeed the only posts are:

Cuba, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, panama, paraguay

RELEASE
IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 7:19 PM
To: H; Lew, Jacob J
Subject: Kucinich Resolution on Afghanistan Troop Withdrawl

65 for and 356 against

(60 Dems and 5 Republicans voting for)

This is an increase of 9 votes since the last votes cast against the war (2009 war supp funding).

RELEASE IN PART B4,B5

From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 3:59 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Corning

Thnx for talking to Wendell. Will do. Spoke to Tim already via email and he getting me paper and then we can discuss.

Also told him to have Wendell go to the Expo opening. Altho delayed could also have an impact.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Mon Apr 19 15:56:09 2010
Subject: Corning

| | |
|---|---|
| | B4B5 |

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 10:01 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: IDB/Haiti Debt

---

From: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 9:56 AM
To: Siemer, Marguerite E; Mills, Cheryl D; DeMarcellus, Roland F
Cc: Kelly, Craig A; Valenzuela, Arturo A Subject: IDB/Haiti Debt

IDB Approves $70 Billion Capital Increase, Forgives Haitian Debt

The governors of the Inter-American Development Bank early Monday approved a $70 billion capital increase for the multilateral lender and also agreed to forgive $479 million of Haitian debt, Reuters reported. Colombian Finance Minister Óscar Zuluaga announced the move at the close of an IDB governors meeting in Cancún. Last week, Moody's Investor Services affirmed the bank's long-standing Aaa credit rating, the IDB said.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 4:20 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Sanctions and Transitions

Fyi traffic

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 4:20 PM
To: Einhorn, Robert J
Subject: RE: Sanctions and Transitions

Terrific – we are.

Thanks.

cmd

---

From: Einhorn, Robert J
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 3:56 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Sanctions and Transitions

Cheryl,

See Bill's response below. If he, you, the Secretary, and others are comfortable, I certainly am comfortable proceeding.

Bob

---

From: Burns, William J
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 3:03 PM
To: Einhorn, Robert J
Subject: Re: Sanctions and Transitions

Bob,

I appreciate the concern, [redacted] B5
[redacted] Let's talk when I get back. All best, Bill

---

From: Einhorn, Robert J
To: Burns, William J
Sent: Mon Apr 19 14:02:47 2010
Subject: FW: Sanctions and Transitions

Bill, please see below. Bob

---

From: Einhorn, Robert J
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 2:01 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Steinberg, James B

Cc: Goldberg, Philip S; Mull, Stephen D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: Sanctions and Transitions

Cheryl,

I have one additional thought since we spoke, which I am mentioning to the other addressees. [redacted] B5

[redacted] I'd welcome Bill's reaction on that, as well as that of the other addressees.

Bob

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 1:41 PM
To: Steinberg, James B
Cc: Einhorn, Robert J; Goldberg, Philip S; Mull, Stephen D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Sanctions and Transitions

Jim:

Bob and I spoke today and he has graciously agreed to assume the sanctions portfolios for NK and Iran, in addition to his existing responsibilities.

I know we all want to ensure a smooth transition – I think it might make sense for you Bob to meet with both Phil and then with Steve and determine a timeline and process and then to brief you and me on that transition.

If that makes sense, I would encourage Bob to meet with Phil and with Steve. We then can determine once there is a recommendation for how to proceed how to make that information public.

Best.

cdm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 10:15 AM
To: H
Subject: Brava!

The way you did the ending was pitch perfect. The headlines may about the Iran language, but you laid a powerful predicate for moving forward. AM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 9:06 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Administration should include education assistance in supplemental funding request for Haiti, Lugar says
Attachments: haiti education funding 3-10-10.doc

FYI

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 6:34 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Warnholz, Jean-Louis
Subject: FW: Administration should include education assistance in supplemental funding request for Haiti, Lugar says

Not good. The Hills is trying to tie our hands all over the place.

---

From: Bulgrin, Julie K
Sent: Wednesday, March 10, 2010 6:30 PM
To: Curtis, Meghann A; Reynoso, Julissa; Brigety, Reuben; De Pirro, Velia M; Chartrand, Jennifer; Rademacher, Paul R; Stout, Jennifer P
Cc: Rayburn, Dorothy J; Gonzalez, Juan S; Pressfield, Justin C
Subject: FW: Administration should include education assistance in supplemental funding request for Haiti, Lugar says

Dick Lugar

U.S. Senator for Indiana

Date: 3/10/2010 • http://lugar.senate.gov
Andy Fisher • 202-224-2079 • andy_fisher@lugar.senate.gov

---

Administration should include education assistance in supplemental funding request for Haiti, Lugar says

Getting Haitian children back in classrooms should be a priority in U.S. assistance to Haiti, U.S. Sen. Dick Lugar said today after attending the White House Rose Garden ceremony with President Barack Obama hosting Haitian President René Préval. Earlier in the day, former President Bill Clinton also told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that this should be a priority.

"As the Administration prepares to present its supplemental appropriations request for Haiti, a top priority for recovery and long term reconstruction efforts in Haiti should include significant assistance to get Haitian children quickly back into the classroom," Lugar said. "Assistance for infrastructure, technical assistance for instruction and curriculum development especially should be included. Only with a strong education initiative will Haiti have a chance at a better future."

Lugar directed two staff members to accompany a Congressional Delegation to Haiti on Friday, March 5. During the visit, staff saw firsthand the devastation experienced by Haitians and reported to Lugar that thousands of schools in and around Port au Prince could remain closed for months or never reopen. As a result, Haitian children could be left languishing in refugee camps. Before the January 12 earthquake approximately one-half of Haiti's school-age children were enrolled in classes. Children make up about 45 percent of Haiti's population.

"The relationship between the United States and the Haitian government should be a consensual, cooperative arrangement that preserves Haitian participation in decisions, while ensuring that the resources and expertise of the United States Government and international community are brought to bear on the daily problems of Haiti. Education of the Haiti's youth is an appropriate starting point," Lugar said.

###

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 4:40 PM
To: H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Gen. Shalikashvili returned the call

[redacted]h

B6

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 18, 2010 6:11 PM
To: H
Subject: Tomorrow

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 18, 2010 6:21 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

latest is that nato will make decision tomorrow morning, they don't want to cancel unless they have to and unless we have other dates to offer. We talked about around poland in july for the alternative.
Phil and I are connecting early tomorrow.
My guess is it will be moved.

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Apr 18 18:13:15 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

What's the latest for our trip to Finland?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Apr 18 18:10:32 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768547 Date: 08/31/2015

Dick Lugar

U.S. Senator for Indiana

Date: 3/10/2010 • http://lugar.senate.gov
Andy Fisher • 202-224-2079 • andy_fisher@lugar.senate.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

Administration should include education assistance in supplemental funding request for Haiti, Lugar says

Getting Haitian children back in classrooms should be a priority in U.S. assistance to Haiti, U.S. Sen. Dick Lugar said today after attending the White House Rose Garden ceremony with President Barack Obama hosting Haitian President René Préval. Earlier in the day, former President Bill Clinton also told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that this should be a priority.

"As the Administration prepares to present its supplemental appropriations request for Haiti, a top priority for recovery and long term reconstruction efforts in Haiti should include significant assistance to get Haitian children quickly back into the classroom," Lugar said. "Assistance for infrastructure, technical assistance for instruction and curriculum development especially should be included. Only with a strong education initiative will Haiti have a chance at a better future."

Lugar directed two staff members to accompany a Congressional Delegation to Haiti on Friday, March 5. During the visit, staff saw firsthand the devastation experienced by Haitians and reported to Lugar that thousands of schools in and around Port au Prince could remain closed for months or never reopen. As a result, Haitian children could be left languishing in refugee camps. Before the January 12 earthquake approximately one-half of Haiti's school-age children were enrolled in classes. Children make up about 45 percent of Haiti's population.

"The relationship between the United States and the Haitian government should be a consensual, cooperative arrangement that preserves Haitian participation in decisions, while ensuring that the resources and expertise of the United States Government and international community are brought to bear on the daily problems of Haiti. Education of the Haiti's youth is an appropriate starting point," Lugar said.

###

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768547 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 6:40 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Brainard Nom.

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Abedin, Huma; Verma, Richard R
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Mon Apr 19 18:03:07 2010
Subject: Brainard Nom.

S was asking about this nomination earlier today.

Cloture was invoked on Lael Brainard's nomination this evening, 84-10.

Miguel E. Rodríguez

Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs

Bureau of Legislative Affairs

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-2645

rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E <RodriguezME@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 5:59 PM
To: H
Subject: Brainard Vote

Cloture was invoked on Lael Brainard's nomination this afternoon, 84-10.

Miguel E. Rodríguez

Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs

Bureau of Legislative Affairs

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-2645

rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 4:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: UNAMA mandate renewal

Fyi. This resolves - in some respects - the UN mandate issue Lavrov raised.

---

From: Barks-Ruggles, Erica J
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Mar 22 16:10:52 2010
Subject: UNAMA mandate renewal

Jake –

I am not sure if this answers the question, but the issue is OBE as the mandate was adopted today. B5

B5 – Erica

**********

UNAMA MANDATE RENEWAL & RUSSIAN DISCUSSION

On March 22 the Security Council renewed the UNAMA mandate by unanimous consent, but not without a short delay at the request of Russian PermRep Churkin, who called for last-minute consultations prior to the adoption of the mandate. Churkin took the floor in closed consultations to "begin an interactive dialogue" highlighting the drug problem caused by Afghanistan's unabated poppy cultivation, noting it fuels domestic corruption and finances the Taliban. Churkin's "dialogue" was triggered by a front-page Sunday New York Times article titled, "U.S. Turns a Blind Eye to Opium in Afghan Town."

Following the adoption of the UMAMA mandate, the Russian PermRep took the floor in the chamber and noted Russian support for the new UNAMA mandate which has "satisfactory language in all regards." Churkin emphasized that the Afghan-led policy of national reconciliation can not contradict past Council resolutions, including the sanctions regime, and reminded that all who join the reconciliation program must lay down arms, pledge to uphold the Afghan constitution and break ties with terrorist organizations. Churkin reminded Members that drugs represent a "direct threat to international peace and security" and noted that "recent media reports" state that ISAF has "given up" on eradication. He called for ISAF to be "active and robust" in combating drugs.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 18, 2010 8:25 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Yes sorry.
Here is what he said:

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Apr 18 19:06:58 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Did you ever ask what else I can take? Should I call him directly?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Apr 18 18:21:10 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

latest is that nato will make decision tomorrow morning, they don't want to cancel unless they have to and unless we have other dates to offer. We talked about around poland in july for the alternative.
Phil and I are connecting early tomorrow.
My guess is it will be moved.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Apr 18 18:13:15 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

What's the latest for our trip to Finland?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Apr 18 18:10:32 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 8:30 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Decision on NATO Ministerial not expected until this evening

This is the latest, believe it or not.

---

From: Thompson, Hillary C
To: SES_DutyDeputies; EUR-FO-DL; IO Front Office users-DL; S
Cc: SES-O
Sent: Tue Apr 20 07:10:38 2010
Subject: Decision on NATO Ministerial not expected until this evening

Colleagues, please see a further update below on deliberations regarding the NATO Ministerial.

---

From: Zurcher, Kenneth M
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 7:04 AM
To: SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_Shift-II
Subject: Decision on NATO Ministerial not expected until this evening

Good morning,

Per Brian Greaney, USNATO, NATO will attempt to send an estimated 20-30 staff members to Tallinn this evening. Should the group, likely including interpreters, security personnel and technicians, be unable to complete the trip, the Ministerial likely will be cancelled. USNATO will continue to monitor and report to Ops as they learn more.

Thanks,

Ken Zurcher
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center, S/ES-O
(202) 647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 8:32 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Volcanic Ash Travel Disruption Spot Report No. 1

Update on airport openings. Looks like estonia is partially open. They think most ministers will fly private so they seem to want to try and move forward.

---

From: OpsAlert
Sent: Tue Apr 20 06:37:21 2010
Subject: Volcanic Ash Travel Disruption Spot Report No. 1

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

SPOT REPORT No. 1

VOLCANIC ASH TRAVEL DISRUPTION

Tuesday, April 20, 2010
0630 EDT

SOME EUROPEAN AIRLINES RESUME OPERATIONS

- (SBU) The European Organization for the Safety of Air Navigation (EuroControl) expects close to 60 percent of the scheduled 27,500 flights in European airspace to fly April 20. There were approximately 8700 flights on April 19, roughly 30 percent of regularly scheduled flights. (www.eurocontrol.int)
- (SBU) EU transportation ministers agreed on a phased opening of larger airports, subject to changing conditions. Per www.eurocontrol.int, current European airport operations include:
  - Normal Operations: Austria, Bosnia, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Montenegro, Netherlands, Romania, Russia, Serbia, Switzerland, Turkey, Ukraine
  - Partial Operations (includes airports fully operational for limited hours): Belgium, Britain, Estonia, France, Germany, Ireland, Luxembourg, Norway, Slovakia, Spain, Sweden
  - Closed (in some cases the airspace remains open for transit flights): Denmark, Finland, Lithuania, Poland, Slovenia
- (SBU) For additional information, please go to the New York Times airport cancellation tracker: www.nytimes.com/interactive/2010/04/15/world/europe/airport-closings-graphic.html?src=me&ref=world

STATE DEPARTMENT RESPONSE

- (SBU) The United States is not evacuating American citizens at this time. Commercial travel is expected to resume before U.S. Government-facilitated arrangements could be made. (travel.state.gov)

- (SBU) Consular Affairs (CA) updated the travel.state.gov website, as well as websites for U.S. Embassies throughout Europe, in order to provide additional details, including low-cost hotels, medical services, and the process to refill U.S. prescriptions. CA urges travelers to monitor local news and check in with airlines frequently. As applicable, the websites also detail procedures for those who have exceeded the duration of their visas due to the delays. (travel.state.gov)

Please see our classified website at http://ses.state.sgov.gov.

Drafted: KMZurcher Approved: HCThompson

Dist: State (all bureaus), NSS, OSD, NMCC, JCS, CIA, OSC, NCTC, DHS

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 9:29 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Dorothy Height

Yes, joint w/WJC, Huma should have for your review

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Dorothy Height
Sent: Apr 20, 2010 9:25 AM

Have we prepared a statement--w Bill or solo?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mikulski, BAM (Mikulski) <BAM@Mikulski.senate.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 8:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Nuns. Health. Care

Whew once again u are in the thick of thing--- but didn't it make your heart feel good about the passage of. Health. Care----and. The. Nuns pushed it over the finish line----as usual in the fcore front of. Social. Justice and a daring willingness. To break with the. Boys------ if you need a tonic. Go to the. Nuns exhibit @ the. Smithsonian--- Ripley. Center. Gives the 250 year history of. Nuns in. Usa. And their role in shaping. Our country and producing 1000s of women leaders with names like. Pelosi. Mikulski. Ferrar0. Sebilius. ------- takes less than a hour. You are doing great

---

Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 12:36 PM
To: H

Lael was confirmed....79 to 19.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E <RodriguezME@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 12:44 PM
To: H
Subject: Brainard Confirmed

Lael Brainard was confirmed 78-19 this afternoon.

Miguel E. Rodríguez

Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs

Bureau of Legislative Affairs

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-2645

rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 1:10 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Tony blair says he's free to talk anytime today. He's in middle east so is 8 hours ahead.

Scheduled for 3:00 PM.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 11:39 AM
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Re: Tony blair says he's free to talk anytime today. He's in middle east so is 8 hours ahead.

Pls schedule so I can get this done.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Apr 18 11:18:10 2010
Subject: Tony blair says he's free to talk anytime today. He's in middle east so is 8 hours ahead.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 2:36 PM
To: H
Subject: Mrs Mubarak

I had a good visit with her. She very much wants you to come to Egypt for the major anti-trafficking event she is doing in December and sends you her regards.
Egypt is making good progress on women's issues: prosecuting child marriage cases, combating FGM and they're close to passing a tough anti-trafficking law. Mrs M is the guiding force.
She and the President appreciated your call after his surgery. The most difficult part of our conversation was [redacted] B6

[redacted]

We also announced our partnership with egypt for the training of. Afghan midwives at the suzanne mubarek health center in Alexandria.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 11, 2010 10:12 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject:

B5

B5

AMS

Anne-Marie Slaughter
Director of Policy Planning
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Rooney, Megan <RooneyM@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 11, 2010 12:34 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: UN speech

Great! Will do.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, March 11, 2010 12:33 PM
To: Rooney, Megan; Sullivan, Jacob J; Huma Abedin; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: UN speech

I like the draft. I have a few comments and ideas for the end. Pls talk to Lona about coming to see me later.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 7:56 AM
To: H
Subject: Doug coe

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:05 AM
To: Crowley, Philip J
Cc: Schwartz, Larry; Singh, Vikram J; Pauli, Rosemarie; Bommer, Ashley F; Holbrooke, Richard C; Patterson, Anne W
Subject: FW: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination
Attachments: 04-21-2010 Correction For The Record False Statements Concerning The Assassination Of Former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto .pdf

PJ

As you will note from Larry's message below, we are dealing with a another "situation' in Islamabad. I have asked Larry to work with his team to be sure our response gets as broad coverage as possible in Pakistan and on-line so our reaction is picked up by googlers. As you know, although our immediate reaction may be to just blow this stuff off we ignore it at our peril since it seems there are large segments of the population who actually believe this stuff. I also want to be sure we get it out to the diaspora community here and elsewhere. Thoughts ?

jm

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 7:32 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Under Secretary McHale:

This week we have seen the most extraordinary series of public attacks on the United States by Lt Gen (ret) Hamid Gul, a noted anti-American crackpot who derives his role as an "expert analyst" by being the only former Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI) Chief who ever appears on TV. Gul was briefly ISI chief during PM Bhutto's first term in office almost 20 years ago. Appearing on several TV stations this week, Gul has repeated allegations that the U.S. is implicated in the Bhutto Assassination – the subject is current this week because of the release of the U.N. report on the assassination, which is itself a remarkable document.

One ironic element of the UN report on the assassination is the report that on October 16, 2007 former PM Bhutto wrote to General Musharraf that the very same Hamid Gul was one of three people she considered a threat to her security. (see excerpt below) This fact came up in none of the programs.

Our view is that the television journalists and executives now must begin taking responsibility for putting inciting and unsubstantiated claims on the air. We have released the attached "Correction," which will be seen by news editors across the country.

Larry

Excerpt from the UN report on the Bhutto assassination:

179. On 16 October 2007, Ms Bhutto writing from Dubai to General Musharraf, identified three people she considered a threat to her security: (i) Brigadier (ret) Ejaz Shah, Director General of the IB at the time of the assassination, (ii) General (ret) Hamid Gul, a former Director General of the ISI, and (iii) Mr Chaudhry Pervaiz Elahi, Chief Minister of Punjab until 22 November 2007.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Larry Schwartz
Minister Counselor for Public Affairs
Embassy of the United States of America
Islamabad - PAKISTAN
Tel: (92)(51) 208-2040
Mobile: [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:19 AM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Example of our hitting back in action ---- it works.

jm

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:15 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Already running as a crawl on Express, one of the offending networks, within an hour of sending our correction.

---

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 4:47 PM
To: Schwartz, Larry
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Thanks. Need to be sure this gets picked up by print and/or broadcast outlets as well as some major online enterprise in ALL critical languages (URDU, PASHTO. Etc) so that it pops up when this topic is googled. Have Richard send me his plan for getting this picked up. Do you have a copy of the release in Urdu that I can forward to WH and Hill ?

jm

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 7:32 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Under Secretary McHale:

This week we have seen the most extraordinary series of public attacks on the United States by Lt Gen (ret) Hamid Gul, a noted anti-American crackpot who derives his role as an "expert analyst" by being the only former Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI) Chief who ever appears on TV. Gul was briefly ISI chief during PM Bhutto's first term in office almost 20 years ago. Appearing on several TV stations this week, Gul has repeated allegations that the U.S. is implicated in the Bhutto Assassination – the subject is current this week because of the release of the U.N. report on the assassination, which is itself a remarkable document.

One ironic element of the UN report on the assassination is the report that on October 16, 2007 former PM Bhutto wrote to General Musharraf that the very same Hamid Gul was one of three people she considered a threat to her security. (see excerpt below) This fact came up in none of the programs.

Our view is that the television journalists and executives now must begin taking responsibility for putting inciting and unsubstantiated claims on the air. We have released the attached "Correction," which will be seen by news editors across the country.

Larry

Excerpt from the UN report on the Bhutto assassination:

179. On 16 October 2007, Ms Bhutto writing from Dubai to General Musharraf, identified three people she considered a threat to her security: (i) Brigadier (ret) Ejaz Shah, Director General of the IB at the time of the assassination, (ii) General (ret) Hamid Gul, a former Director General of the ISI, and (iii) Mr Chaudhry Pervaiz Elahi, Chief Minister of Punjab until 22 November 2007.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Larry Schwartz
Minister Counselor for Public Affairs
Embassy of the United States of America
Islamabad - PAKISTAN
Tel: (92)(51) 208-2040
Mobile: [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:19 AM
To: McHale, Judith A; H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

great

---

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:19 AM
To: 'H'; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Example of our hitting back in action ---- it works.

jm

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:15 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Already running as a crawl on Express, one of the offending networks, within an hour of sending our correction.

---

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 4:47 PM
To: Schwartz, Larry
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Thanks. Need to be sure this gets picked up by print and/or broadcast outlets as well as some major online enterprise in ALL critical languages (URDU; PASHTO. Etc) so that it pops up when this topic is googled. Have Richard send me his plan for getting this picked up. Do you have a copy of the release in Urdu that I can forward to WH and Hill ?

jm

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 7:32 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Under Secretary McHale:

This week we have seen the most extraordinary series of public attacks on the United States by Lt Gen (ret) Hamid Gul, a noted anti-American crackpot who derives his role as an "expert analyst" by being the only former Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI) Chief who ever appears on TV. Gul was briefly ISI chief during PM Bhutto's first term in office almost 20 years ago. Appearing on several TV stations this week, Gul has repeated allegations that the U.S. is implicated in the Bhutto Assassination – the subject is current this week because of the release of the U.N. report on the assassination, which is itself a remarkable document.

One ironic element of the UN report on the assassination is the report that on October 16, 2007 former PM Bhutto wrote to General Musharraf that the very same Hamid Gul was one of three people she considered a threat to her security. (see excerpt below) This fact came up in none of the programs.

Our view is that the television journalists and executives now must begin taking responsibility for putting inciting and unsubstantiated claims on the air. We have released the attached "Correction," which will be seen by news editors across the country.

Larry

Excerpt from the UN report on the Bhutto assassination:

179. On 16 October 2007, Ms Bhutto writing from Dubai to General Musharraf, identified three people she considered a threat to her security: (i) Brigadier (ret) Ejaz Shah, Director General of the IB at the time of the assassination, (ii) General (ret) Hamid Gul, a former Director General of the ISI, and (iii) Mr Chaudhry Pervaiz Elahi, Chief Minister of Punjab until 22 November 2007.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Larry Schwartz
Minister Counselor for Public Affairs
Embassy of the United States of America
Islamabad - PAKISTAN
Tel: (92)(51) 208-2040
Mobile: [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:30 AM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

I have sent PJ an email about this and will let you know what he thinks. I'm want to be sure we hit the Pakistani disapora here and elsewhere.

jm

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:23 AM
To: McHale, Judith A; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Good work. [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Apr 21 08:18:44 2010
Subject: FW: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Example of our hitting back in action ---- it works.

jm

From: Schwartz, Larry
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 8:15 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Already running as a crawl on Express, one of the offending networks, within an hour of sending our correction.

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 4:47 PM
To: Schwartz, Larry
Subject: RE: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Thanks. Need to be sure this gets picked up by print and/or broadcast outlets as well as some major online enterprise in ALL critical languages (URDU, PASHTO. Etc) so that it pops up when this topic is googled. Have Richard send me his plan for getting this picked up. Do you have a copy of the release in Urdu that I can forward to WH and Hill ?

jm

From: Schwartz, Larry
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 7:32 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Mission Corrections: Bhutto Assassination

Under Secretary McHale:

This week we have seen the most extraordinary series of public attacks on the United States by Lt Gen (ret) Hamid Gul, a noted anti-American crackpot who derives his role as an "expert analyst" by being the only former Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI) Chief who ever appears on TV. Gul was briefly ISI chief during PM Bhutto's first term in office almost 20 years ago. Appearing on several TV stations this week, Gul has repeated allegations that the U.S. is implicated in the Bhutto Assassination – the subject is current this week because of the release of the U.N. report on the assassination, which is itself a remarkable document.

One ironic element of the UN report on the assassination is the report that on October 16, 2007 former PM Bhutto wrote to General Musharraf that the very same Hamid Gul was one of three people she considered a threat to her security. (see excerpt below) This fact came up in none of the programs.

Our view is that the television journalists and executives now must begin taking responsibility for putting inciting and unsubstantiated claims on the air. We have released the attached "Correction," which will be seen by news editors across the country.

Larry

Excerpt from the UN report on the Bhutto assassination:

179. On 16 October 2007, Ms Bhutto writing from Dubai to General Musharraf, identified three people she considered a threat to her security: (i) Brigadier (ret) Ejaz Shah, Director General of the IB at the time of the assassination, (ii) General (ret) Hamid Gul, a former Director General of the ISI, and (iii) Mr Chaudhry Pervaiz Elahi, Chief Minister of Punjab until 22 November 2007.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Larry Schwartz

Minister Counselor for Public Affairs

Embassy of the United States of America

Islamabad - PAKISTAN

Tel: (92)(51) 208-2040

Mobile: [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 11:12 AM
To: H
Subject: H: UK election. Sid

Setup for foreign policy TV debate on Thursday. Obviously, this is a popular position. Clegg is now at the height of his popularity and playing to public opinion. Clegg is pushing off both Brown (still suffering from Obama's dismissive slights, unpopularity of Afghanistan, and, deepest factor, Bush poisoning of the well) and Cameron (making him an old Thatcherite, pro-US, anti-EU). Clegg is an ardent Europeanist, not so much Americanist.

http://itn.co.uk/b0929495306b2635ca77854b1db33626.html

Clegg: special relationship with US is over

Tue Apr 20 2010 20:38:43
The "special relationship" between Britain and the United States is over, Nick Clegg has said.

The Liberal Democrat leader said Barack Obama's administration "understood the world had changed" and the UK's leaders needed to end their "slavish" devotion to Washington.

Mr Clegg also warned against "sabre-rattling" over Iran's nuclear ambitions and repeated his pledge to offer a referendum on the UK's continued membership of the European Union when the issue next arose.

The Lib Dems have ruled out replacing Trident with a like-for-like system and Mr Clegg said the UK should consider "not having a continuous at sea deterrent".

In a speech to the Foreign Press Association in London, Mr Clegg said it was time to challenge the "conventional wisdom" that had lasted since the Suez crisis about the UK's relationship with the US.

He said: "I think it's sometimes rather embarrassing the way Conservative and Labour politicians talk in this kind of slavish way about the special relationship. If you speak to hard-nosed folk in Washington they think 'it's a good relationship but it's not the special relationship'."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 3:59 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton
Attachments: Scan001.PDF

fyi

---

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 2:42 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton

Dear Cheryl –
It's our understanding that the review of the terrorist list undertaken at the beginning of the year is reaching completion, imminently. Jim asked me to shoot you a note that this continues to be a very important issue for him and Bill Delahunt. The list needs to be purged of political manipulation – and quite frankly, the current status quo with Cuba needs to be broken, not further reinforced – for the sake of Alan Gross, those on the island needing space to voice their views, and indeed, all of us outside who know change is coming.
It's time to do something bold and constructive – and in our very best interests –
Let us know if there's anything we can do to help –
Cindy

---

From: Buhl, Cindy
Sent: Thursday, January 07, 2010 1:15 PM
To: 'Mills, Cheryl D'
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton

Dear Cheryl --

Attached please find a letter regarding the review of terrorist lists currently taking place within the Obama Administration. The letter cites Cuba as a nation that should be purged from such lists, including the State Sponsors of Terrorism list, as an example for the need of a thorough, robust and judicious review and updating of these lists.

Can you please ensure that the Secretary and other relevant State Department officials are made aware of this letter?

Very best regards --

Cindy

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768601 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

JAMES P. McGOVERN
3rd District, Massachusetts

VICE CHAIRMAN
COMMITTEE ON RULES

COMMITTEE ON BUDGET

Congress of the United States
House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515–2103

http://www.jimcgovern.house.gov

January 7, 2010

438 Cannon House Office Building
Washington, DC 20515-2103
(202) 225-6101

District Office:
34 Mechanic Street
Worcester, MA 01608
(508) 831-7356

Attleboro Office:
9 North Main Street, Room 300
Attleboro, MA 02703
(508) 431-8325

Fall River Office
371 Main Street, #102
Fall River, MA 02721
(508) 677-0140

Marlborough Office:
255 Main Street, Room 104
Marlborough, MA 01752
(508) 460-9207

President Barack Obama
The White House

Janet Napolitano
Secretary of Homeland Security
Department of Homeland Security

Hillary Rodham Clinton
Secretary of State
Department of State

Dear President Obama and Secretaries Napolitano and Clinton:

I write to express my recognition, appreciation and concern for the difficult task you have to identify and ensure that states that sponsor and harbor terrorist networks and organizations are unable to do grave harm to our nation and people. The urgency of this matter, as demonstrated by the attempt on Christmas Day to destroy a U.S. passenger airliner, requires you to take quick decisions in the immediate term to protect U.S. citizens. Over the coming days and weeks, however, I encourage a more detailed and robust review of information and intelligence so that individuals, organizations and nations that have been placed on "watch" lists for political or reasons unrelated to terrorism – or whose circumstances have changed over time – are removed from such lists. This cleansing and updating of information is critical so that U.S. attention, resources and energy are focused on where threats genuinely reside, rather than squandered where there is no documented threat.

One such State, for example, that should be removed from the State Sponsors of Terrorism list and other similar "watch" lists is Cuba. The Pentagon, U.S. intelligence agencies or the State Department's Office on Counter-Terrorism have not identified Cuba as a threat to U.S. security. It is not engaged in nuclear proliferation or the production of biological or chemical weapons. Shopworn arguments regarding relationships with terrorist groups, such as the ETA, FARC or ELN, run contrary to fact. The individual ETA members who reside in Cuba are there as a result of a 1984 agreement between Spain and Cuba to keep them on the island. As Spain now assumes the presidency of the European Union, it is actively encouraging EU members to ease restrictions and open up expanded relations with Cuba – hardly the action of a country concerned about a terrorist attack being launched from Cuba. The Cuban government engaged the Colombian guerrilla group, the ELN, in negotiations at the request of and with the full and active engagement of Colombian President Uribe and his government. Cuba also made the same offer to the FARC, at the request of the Uribe Administration, even though the FARC

THIS STATIONERY PRINTED ON PAPER MADE OF RECYCLED FIBERS

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768601 Date: 08/31/2015

and Cuba are long-time ideological antagonists. In 2009, President Uribe re-established full relations with Cuba, opening an embassy and sending an ambassador to serve on the island. Further, there has never been any accusation, not even by U.S. authorities, that Colombian guerrilla organizations have ever used Cuba as a site for terrorist or insurgent activities.

There are several individuals living in Cuba who are wanted for crimes, including murder, in the United States. However, these are criminal activities, unrelated to terrorism. Due to more than five decades of diplomatic isolation, the U.S. has no extradition treaty or any other law enforcement or judicial mechanism set up with Cuba that would allow for their transfer back to the United States to face trial. As you are aware, many of our closest friends and allies in Latin America and elsewhere will not extradite or return individuals indicted for crimes in the United States, in general because of objections to the U.S. death penalty, so this is not a justification for a nation to appear on the terrorism list.

The United States has many long-standing political and diplomatic problems with Cuba, but none of them relate to terrorism. In fact, engaging, collaborating and enlisting Cuba in the fight against international terrorism would be to the advantage of U.S. national security.

As noted, this is but one example of a country that should be removed from the list of State Sponsors of Terrorism; no doubt, there are other individuals and organizations that appear on other lists that also merit serious review and possible removal. I encourage you to carry out a thorough and judicious review of such lists, purge from them nations and organizations that appear due to political and policy reasons unrelated to the threat of terrorism, and restore integrity to these watch lists so that our own precautionary measures and our coordination with international intelligence and law enforcement agencies may be used to maximum effect and the enhanced protection of our nation and citizens.

Thank you for your serious attention to these recommendations. Please know that I would welcome any opportunity to discuss these matters in more detail with you.

Sincerely,

James P. McGovern
Member of Congress

JPM:cmb

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 9:33 PM
To: H
Subject: Summary of PSD/QDDR DC
Attachments: Summary of DC on PSD and QDDR4.20.10.docx

I know that Jack gave you a verbal summary, but here is the blow by blow. Not a wonderful meeting. To me the biggest issue concerns the role of the NSC versus State/USAID in coordinating development policy. I will send some thoughts on a possible strategy tomorrow. Jake, Cheryl and Jack have all seen this summary and Jack has approved it. AM

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
To: Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Campbell, Piper; Hyde, Dana
Sent: Tue Apr 20 19:33:19 2010
Subject: Summary of DC -- pse review and edit so I can send to S asap

---

From: Anne-Marie Slaughter [redacted] B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Tue Apr 20 19:26:57 2010
Subject: Summary of DC

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768606 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

PRELIMINARY AGENDA August 12, 2014

The 34th Annual COLP Conference
May 20 and 21, 2010

United States Interests in Prompt Adherence to the Law of the Sea Convention

The National Press Club
529 14th Street, NW, 13th Floor
Washington, D.C. 20045

Thursday 20 May

0800-0830 Registration and Continental Breakfast

0830-0900 Welcome: John Norton Moore

Comments and Introduction of Statements on the Record from President Barack Obama

0900-1030 Panel I: The Stakes for America

Moderator and Commentator: Ambassador Mary Beth West Former Deputy Assistant Secretary for Oceans and Fisheries

Panelists: Ambassador David A. Balton
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Oceans and Fisheries
U.S. Department of State

Admiral Paul A. Yost, Jr.
Former Commandant, United States Coast Guard &
President, James Madison Memorial Fellowship Foundation

Andrew Keller
Legal Counsel, Majority Staff
Senate Foreign Relations Committee

Michael J. Mattler
Chief Counsel, Minority Staff
Senate Foreign Relations Committee

Discussion

1030-1045 Break

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768606 Date: 08/31/2015

1045-1215 Panel II: Energy and Economic Development

Moderator and Commentator: Paul L. Kelly, Esquire
Senior Vice President, Rowan Companies, Inc. (ret.) &
Member, U.S. Commission on Ocean Policy

Panelists: Admiral James D. Watkins, U.S. Navy (Ret.)
Co-Chair, Joint Ocean Commission Initiative &
Chairman, U.S. Commission on Ocean Policy &
Former Secretary of Energy

R. Bruce Josten
Executive Vice President
Government Affairs
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Randall Luthi
President
National Ocean Industries Association

Brian T. Petty
Executive Vice President
Government Affairs
International Association of Drilling Contractors

Discussion

1215-1415 Luncheon Speaker: Admiral Gary Roughead
Chief of Naval Operations
U.S. Navy

1430-1615 Panel III: Submarine Cables: Critical Infrastructure

Moderator and Commentator: Douglas R. Burnett Partner, Squire, Sanders and Dempsey & International Law Advisor,
Int'l Cable Protection Committee

Panelists: Stephen R. Malphrus
Staff Director for Management
U.S. Federal Reserve Board

Robert Wargo
President, North American Submarine Cable Association &
Vice-Chairman, International Cable Protection Committee &
Marine Liaison Manager, AT&T Undersea Cable Systems

Dr. Ronald J. Rapp
Director of Cable Engineering and Technology
Tyco Electronics Subsea Communications LLC

Discussion

1830-1900 Reception

1900- 2130 Gala Dinner

Introduction of Speaker: John Norton Moore

Keynote Dinner Speaker: Vice President Joe Biden*

Friday 21 May

0830-0900 Registration and Continental Breakfast

0900-0930 Introduction: John Norton Moore

Film Presentation: "The Oceans"
Courtesy of the Council on Foreign Relations

0930-1130 Panel IV: Protecting and Enhancing U.S. National Security

Moderator and Commentator: The Honorable Edwin D. Williamson
Former Legal Adviser
U.S. Department of State

Panelists: Vice Admiral Bruce W. Clingan
Deputy Chief of Naval Operations
Operations, Plans and Strategy
U.S. Navy

Vice Admiral James W. Houck
Judge Advocate General's Corps
U.S. Navy Judge Advocate General

Rear Admiral William Schachte
Former Department of Defense Representative
Ocean Policy Affairs &
Former Acting Judge Advocate General of the Navy

Discussion

1130-1200 Break

1200-1330 Luncheon Keynote Speaker: The Honorable Lisa Murkowski
Senator (R- Alaska)

1330-1500 Panel V: Debate: The Senate Should Give Prompt Advice and Consent to the Law of the Sea Convention

Moderator: The Honorable Thomas R. Pickering
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations &
Former Under Secretary for Political Affairs
U.S. Department of State

Pro: Ambassador John Norton Moore
Director
Center for Oceans Law and Policy
University of Virginia School of Law &
Former Deputy Special Representative of the President for the Law of the Sea Conference

Con: Steven Groves
Bernard and Barbara Lomas Fellow
The Heritage Foundation

1600 Adjournment

* Designates not yet accepted.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 6:24 AM
To: H
Subject: Bosnia

Permit me an unsolicited observation on the Bosnia issue. B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 11, 2010 5:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Reid's Wife and Daughter Hospitalized After Car Accident

From: Lewis, Jessica (Reid) <Jessica_Lewis@reid.senate.gov>
To: [redacted] (SES) OSD LA' [redacted] Verma, Richard R B6
Cc: Ross, Tommy (Reid) <Tommy_Ross@reid.senate.gov>
Sent: Thu Mar 11 17:22:09 2010
Subject: Reid's Wife and Daughter Hospitalized After Car Accident

Reid's Wife and Daughter Hospitalized After Car Accident

By John Stanton
Roll Call Staff
March 11, 2010, 5:15 p.m.
<SCRIPT language="JavaScript1.1"
SRC="http://ad.doubleclick.net/adj/rollcall/news;abr=!ie;sz=100x75;tile=2;ord=16225718;;category=news?"> </SCRIPT>

Print
E-Mail
Reprints
Text Size

Latest News

- Reid's Wife and Daughter Hospitalized After Car Accident
- Judge: Prosecutors Should Lose Access to Renzi Wiretap Information
- Senate Democrats Told to Keep Quiet on Health Bill Concerns
- Flake Will Revise Resolution on Ethics Committee's PMA Probe
- Pappaioanou: Veterinary Crisis Has Implications for Human Health

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid's (D-Nev.) wife and daughter were in a car accident Thursday and taken to a Washington-area hospital.

"Today Sen. Reid's wife, Landra, and daughter, Lana, were involved in an accident in which their vehicle was rear-ended. They are both being treated at a Washington-area hospital," Reid's office said in a statement released to CNN.

Additional details were not yet known.

Jessica Lewis
National Security Advisor
Majority Leader
Senator Harry Reid

The Capitol, S.221
Washington, DC 20510
(202) 224-2158 (phone)
(202) 224-7362 (fax)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 6:54 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Armenia coalition halts ratification of Turkey deal

From: Rajadurai, Merin
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Thu Apr 22 06:52:39 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Armenia coalition halts ratification of Turkey deal

YEREVAN (Reuters) – Armenia's ruling coalition said it had decided to freeze the ratification in parliament of accords with Turkey aimed at normalizing ties between the historic foes.

"Considering the Turkish side's refusal to fulfill the requirement to ratify the accord without preconditions in a reasonable time, making the continuation of the ratification process in the national parliament pointless, we consider it necessary to suspend this process," the statement said.

Merin Rajadurai
U.S. Department of State
Executive Secretariat - Operations

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 11, 2010 6:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Mrs Reid and Lana update

More.

---

From: Lewis, Jessica (Reid) <Jessica_Lewis@reid.senate.gov>
To: Verma, Richard R; '[redacted] B6
Sent: Thu Mar 11 17:57:51 2010
Subject: Fw: Mrs Reid and Lana update

---
Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

---

From: McCallum, David (Reid)
To: dpc-staff@dpc.senate.gov <dpc-staff@dpc.senate.gov>; Garcia, Yolanda (Reid); Rodriguez, Jamie (Reid); Araujo, Nelson (Reid); Barrett, Danielle (Reid); Durgin, Sandie (Reid); Elliott, Robert (Reid); Foger, Charvez (Reid); Gaines, Ida (Reid); Hernandez, Mariela (Reid); Martinez, Christina (Reid); Miller, Janice (Reid); Moyer, Christopher (Reid); Pinkerton, Aga (Reid); Raborn, Shannon (Reid); Sharp, Bob (Reid); Van Hoove, Marge (Reid); Vannozzi, Michael (Reid); Conelly, Mary (Reid); Esposito, Mike (Reid); Lisagor, Susan (Reid); Mercado, Victor (Reid); Thomsen, Jessica (Reid); Trzynadlowski, Nicole (Reid); Tuma, Matthew (Reid); Brede, Tom (Reid); Carscaden, Kara (Reid); Castellano, Mike (Reid); Daneshforouz, Danica (Reid); Devalk, Randy (Reid); Gluck, Carolyn (Reid); Greenawalt, Bob (Reid); Hanson, Joshua (Reid); Hoy, Serena (Reid); Juris, Krysta (Reid); King, Bruce (Reid); Kornze, Neil (Reid); Krone, David (Reid); Krupin, Stephen (Reid); Lachapelle, Regan (Reid); Leone, Kate (Reid); Lewis, Jessica (Reid); MacKenzie, Meredith (Reid); Manley, Jim (Reid); McCain, Robin (Reid); McGrath, Christopher (Reid); Mollineau, Rodell (Reid); Moore, Lisa (Reid); Myrick, Gary (Reid); Orthman, Kristen (Reid); Parke, Gavin (Reid); Parra, Jose (Reid); Payne, Joel (Reid); Pope, Amy (Reid); Rideout, P. Dominique (Reid); Ross, Tommy (Reid); Savage, Darcell (Reid); Shelton, Janice (Reid); Sonti, Srinu (Reid); Summers, Jon (Reid); Thompson, Darrel (Reid); Tingey, Jessica (Reid); Unger, Jason (Reid); Urbina, Maria (Reid); Wetjen, Mark (Reid); Arboleda, Angela (Reid); Badger, Sabrina (Reid); Bateman, Lauren (Reid); Bray, Vaughn (Reid); Cain, Mary (Reid); Call, Neysa (Reid); Campbell, Joshua (Reid); Cristinzio, Dayle (Reid); Cruz, Adelle (Reid); Daneshforouz, Devlin (Reid); Deese, Ileanexis (Reid); Doherty, Griffin (Reid); Dove, Carrie (Reid); Eckard, Vickie (Reid); Gillette, Kasey (Reid); Grandberry, Ralleigh (Reid); Guynes, Natasha (Reid); Helgemo, Wendy (Indian Affairs); Herbert, Robert (Reid); Holman, George (Reid); Lainez, Julio (Reid); McCallum, David (Reid); McDonough, Alexander (Reid); Miller, Chris (Reid); Miller, Sara (Reid); Ramsey, Ryan (Reid); Reffett, Trey (Reid); Rodman, Scott (Reid); Rozner, Kathleen (Reid); Rushforth, Tyler (EPW); Sargent, Simon (Reid); Street, Caren (Reid); Tebbutt, Karlee (Reid); Todd, Nicole (Reid); Utley, Cedric (Reid); Vlach, Rosalie (Reid); Wilcox-Fogel, Nathaniel (Reid); Zastrow, Jan (Reid)
Sent: Thu Mar 11 17:56:43 2010
Subject: Mrs Reid and Lana update

Senator Reid's wife, Landra, and daughter, Lana, were involved in an accident earlier today. They are being treated at a Washington-area hospital. While driving on a Washington, DC, highway, their vehicle was rear-ended by a semi-truck.

[redacted] B6

Senator Reid has been to the hospital and appreciates the support he and his family are receiving from Nevadans and his colleagues in the Senate. We will keep you posted

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 7:52 AM
To: H
Subject: Update on Head Speechwriter

Lissa and I met at the end of last week.

She had worked through a number of candidates.

She had narrowed to 3: [redacted] (but see below); [redacted]; and [redacted] She was continuing her outreach. B6

Her email below is the latest update.

She has agreed not to depart even on 1 June if we have not yet settled and brought someone on board but I think we are on track to do interviews the next two weeks and then give sample writings and opportunities to decide in sufficient time.

Her update below is fyi to you.

---

From: Muscatine, Lissa
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 7:46 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: good news, bad news

Cheryl,

Bad news: [redacted]. He was disappointed. On the other hand, that opens the way for me to talk to [redacted] and is very good (also was on [redacted] has written a book; and was an editor at [redacted] is in late 30s or early 40s, will find out more). He happens to be [redacted]

The good news is that [redacted] is potentially seriously interested. I have talked to him for several hours on the phone and we have communicated by email. I think he could be a superb fit based on his experience at [redacted] and before. In any case, he is deciding whether to pursue this (which involves moving to DC from [redacted]) and will let me know in the next day or two. I will try to get him here so we can all meet him in person and he can see the landscape and decide whether it might be a good fit for him.

I'm also reaching out to [redacted] during our years), but I doubt he'll do it (Derek and Vinca know him well but think he will want to stay put at [redacted], where he is now managing editor). We'll see.

No answer yet from [redacted] I emailed them at their AOL address a couple of days ago.

Any word from Pat on [redacted]? If not, I would like to hire [redacted] [redacted] and get that process rolling.

Lissa

Lissa Muscatine
Senior Advisor and Director of Speechwriting
Department of State
(w) 202-647-9841
(bb) [redacted]

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 8:39 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; H
Subject: speech theme idea

Hillary and Cheryl,
I'm feeling very good about our recent efforts to connect our speeches thematically. We've done it with development, human rights, and Internet freedom; and most recently with AIPAC, Ctr for Middle East Peace, and next the AJC. Here's what I want to suggest: The three most basic elements of human existence are food, water, and health. We have now done major speeches on food and water. I'd like us to consider a major speech on global health – the third in a trilogy. Linking these three issues thematically, we can explain how and why foreign policy challenges and solutions must be seen through a prism of human survival and why the conditions of people's lives influence everything from economic development to political stability and more. This trilogy of speeches (with the right PR) could further underscore our elevation of development AND our comprehensive, smart power approach to foreign policy. After all, food, water, and health are the sine qua non of human progress. And this is a Hillary Clinton signature idea, at least to me. Thoughts?
LM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 9:02 AM
To: H
Subject: betsey griffith

Sheepishly inquired as to whether you might be willing to speak at Madeira's commencement on June 4th in the morning. It's her last time officiating as head of the school. It's a couple of days before the Lat Am trip. Thoughts?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 9:11 AM
To: Muscatine, Lissa; H
Subject: RE: speech theme idea

I like this idea.

I like even better that we have a nutrition speech coming up which bridges GHI and GHFSI and we could use it as a venue not only to check the box re: FS, but health.

cdm

From: Muscatine, Lissa
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 8:39 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'H'
Subject: speech theme idea

Hillary and Cheryl,
I'm feeling very good about our recent efforts to connect our speeches thematically. We've done it with development, human rights, and Internet freedom; and most recently with AIPAC, Ctr for Middle East Peace, and next the AJC. Here's what I want to suggest: The three most basic elements of human existence are food, water, and health. We have now done major speeches on food and water. I'd like us to consider a major speech on global health – the third in a trilogy. Linking these three issues thematically, we can explain how and why foreign policy challenges and solutions must be seen through a prism of human survival and why the conditions of people's lives influence everything from economic development to political stability and more. This trilogy of speeches (with the right PR) could further underscore our elevation of development AND our comprehensive, smart power approach to foreign policy. After all, food, water, and health are the sine qua non of human progress. And this is a Hillary Clinton signature idea, at least to me. Thoughts?
LM

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 9:22 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Summary of PSD/QDDR DC

You are the world's best boss! B6
AM

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thu Apr 22 09:16:55 2010
Subject: Re: Summary of PSD/QDDR DC

I look forward to talking w you about this, B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Apr 21 21:33:22 2010
Subject: Summary of PSD/QDDR DC

I know that Jack gave you a verbal summary, but here is the blow by blow. Not a wonderful meeting. To me the biggest issue concerns the role of the NSC versus State/USAID in coordinating development policy. I will send some thoughts on a possible strategy tomorrow. Jake, Cheryl and Jack have all seen this summary and Jack has approved it. AM

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
To: Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Campbell, Piper; Hyde, Dana
Sent: Tue Apr 20 19:33:19 2010
Subject: Summary of DC -- pse review and edit so I can send to S asap

---

From: Anne-Marie Slaughter B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Tue Apr 20 19:26:57 2010
Subject: Summary of DC

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 9:49 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: betsey griffith

[redacted] I'll find out about the date and whether they could move it. B6

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 9:20 AM
To: Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: Re: betsey griffith

[redacted] Any chance the date could B6 be changed?

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Apr 22 09:01:37 2010
Subject: betsey griffith

Sheepishly inquired as to whether you might be willing to speak at Madeira's commencement on June 4th in the morning. It's her last time officiating as head of the school. It's a couple of days before the Lat Am trip. Thoughts?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 9:54 AM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: speech theme idea

Great! We will start working on how to connect these issues thematically, beginning with CARE speech. Maybe can weave water in there as well to underscore our point.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 9:16 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: Re: speech theme idea

I agree that this is a great idea and want to pursue. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>; H
Sent: Thu Apr 22 09:11:17 2010
Subject: RE: speech theme idea

I like this idea.

I like even better that we have a nutrition speech coming up which bridges GHI and GHFSI and we could use it as a venue not only to check the box re: FS, but health.

cdm

From: Muscatine, Lissa
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 8:39 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'H'
Subject: speech theme idea

Hillary and Cheryl,

I'm feeling very good about our recent efforts to connect our speeches thematically. We've done it with development, human rights, and Internet freedom; and most recently with AIPAC, Ctr for Middle East Peace, and next the AJC. Here's what I want to suggest: The three most basic elements of human existence are food, water, and health. We have now done major speeches on food and water. I'd like us to consider a major speech on global health – the third in a trilogy. Linking these three issues thematically, we can explain how and why foreign policy challenges and solutions must be seen through a prism of human survival and why the conditions of people's lives influence everything from economic development to political stability and more. This trilogy of speeches (with the right PR) could further underscore our elevation of development AND our comprehensive, smart power approach to foreign policy. After all, food, water, and health are the sine qua non of human progress. And this is a Hillary Clinton signature idea, at least to me. Thoughts?

LM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 10:18 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: Obama Backs Down on Sudan

FYI

Kristof's OpEd From Today's NY Times.

---

April 22, 2010
Op-Ed Columnist
Obama Backs Down on Sudan
By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF
JUBA, Sudan

Until he reached the White House, Barack Obama repeatedly insisted that the United States apply more pressure on Sudan so as to avoid a humanitarian catastrophe in Darfur and elsewhere.

Yet, as president, Mr. Obama and his aides have caved, leaving Sudan gloating at American weakness. Western monitors, Sudanese journalists and local civil society groups have all found this month's Sudanese elections to be deeply flawed - yet Mr. Obama's special envoy for Sudan, Maj. Gen. Scott Gration, pre-emptively defended the elections, saying they would be "as free and as fair as possible." The White House showed only a hint more backbone with a hurried reference this week to "an essential step" with "serious irregularities."

President Omar Hassan al-Bashir of Sudan - the man wanted by the International Criminal Court for crimes against humanity in Darfur - has been celebrating. His regime calls itself the National Congress Party, or N.C.P., and he was quoted in Sudan as telling a rally in the Blue Nile region: "Even America is becoming an N.C.P. member. No one is against our will."

Memo to Mr. Obama: When a man who has been charged with crimes against humanity tells the world that America is in his pocket, it's time to review your policy.

Perhaps the Obama administration caved because it considers a flawed election better than no election. That's a reasonable view, one I share. It's conceivable that Mr. Bashir could have won a quasi-fair election - oil revenues have manifestly raised the standard of living in parts of Sudan - and the campaigning did create space for sharp criticism of the government.

It's also true that Sudan has been behaving better in some respects.
The death toll in Darfur is hugely reduced, and the government is negotiating with rebel groups there. The Sudanese government gave me a visa and travel permits to Darfur, allowing me to travel legally and freely.

The real game isn't, in fact, Darfur or the elections but the maneuvering for a possible new civil war. The last north-south civil war in Sudan ended with a fragile peace in 2005, after some two million deaths. The peace agreement provided for a referendum, scheduled to take place in January, in which southern Sudanese will decide whether to secede. They are expected to vote overwhelmingly to form a separate country.

Then the question becomes: will the north allow South Sudan to separate? The south holds the great majority of the country's oil, and it's difficult to see President Bashir allowing oil fields to walk away.

"If the result of the referendum is independence, there is going to be war - complete war," predicts Mudawi Ibrahim Adam, one of Sudan's most outspoken human rights advocates. He cautions that America's willingness to turn a blind eye to election-rigging here increases the risk that Mr. Bashir will feel that he can get away with war.

"They're very naïve in Washington," Mr. Mudawi said. "They don't understand what is going on."

On the other hand, a senior Sudanese government official, Ghazi Salahuddin, told me unequivocally in Khartoum, the nation's capital, that Sudan will honor the referendum results. And it's certainly plausible that north and south will muddle through and avoid war, for both sides are exhausted by years of fighting.

Here in Juba, the South Sudan capital, I met Winnie Wol, 26, who fled the civil war in 1994 after a militia from the north attacked her village to kill, loot, rape and burn. Her father and many relatives were killed, but she escaped and made her way to Kenya - and eventually resettled as a refugee in California. She now lives in Olathe, Kan., and she had returned for the first time to Sudan to visit a mother and sisters she had last seen when she was a little girl.

Ms. Wol, every bit the well-dressed American, let me tag along for her journey back to her village of Nyamlell, 400 miles northwest of Juba.
The trip ended by a thatch-roof hut that belonged to her mother, who didn't know she was coming - so no one was home. Ms. Wol was crushed.

Then there was a scream and a woman came running. It was Ms. Wol's mother, somehow recognizing her, and they flew into each other's arms.
To me, it felt like a peace dividend.

Yet that peace is fragile, and Ms. Wol knows that the northern forces may come back to pillage again. "I don't want war," she said, "but I don't think they will allow us to separate."

My own hunch is that the north hasn't entirely decided what to do, and that strong international pressure can reduce the risk of another savage war. If President Obama is ever going to find his voice on Sudan, it had better be soon.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 2:49 PM
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: H
Subject: FW: Day in May
Attachments: Cover Letter and HRC Answer to Lozada Complaint.pdf

Pls print for HRC to read this weekend.

She can sign here on Monday and we can scan to them.

Happy to discuss with her.

cdm

From: Turner, Katherine [mailto: B6
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 1:28 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Kendall, David
Subject: RE: Day in May

Cheryl:

I am working with David Kendall on the Lozada matter. Attached please find B5
These materials have also been couriered to your office. If you have any questions, please let me know. Thank you very much for your assistance with this.

Katherine M. Turner
Associate
Williams & Connolly LLP
725 12th Street NW
Washington, DC 20005
Tel:
Fax: 202.434.5029
B6

From: Kendall, David
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 11:39 AM
To: 'MillsCD@state.gov'
Cc: Turner, Katherine
Subject: Re: Day in May

Thanks, Cheryl.

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: Kendall, David; Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Apr 21 11:20:06 2010
Subject: Day in May

David:

Lona is going to send you dates for the third week in May shortly.

Best.

cdm

---

NOTICE:

This message is intended for the use of the individual or entity
to which it is addressed and may contain information that is privileged, confidential and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If the reader of this message is not the intended recipient or the employee or agent responsible for delivering this message to the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution or copying of this communication is strictly prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify us immediately by reply or by telephone (call us collect at (202) 434-5000) and immediately delete this message and all its attachments.

==========

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 9:44 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Nita Lowey and AJC

fyi

---

From: Lew, Jacob J
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 5:08 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Nita Lowey and AJC

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 9:47 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw:

FYI. Israelis spinning up a storm, starting with plane briefing on the way over.

----- Original Message -----
From: Kim Ghattas <kim.ghattas@bbc.co.uk>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Mar 22 20:06:06 2010
Subject: Re:

Oh sorry slightly cryptic message I realise now. Just got read-out from meeting from Israeli side. And PM plane brieifing on way here. Sounding a bit cocky.

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

-----Original Message-----
From: "Sullivan, Jacob J" <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Date: Mon, 22 Mar 2010 19:42:12
To: <kim.ghattas@bbc.co.uk>
Subject: RE:

Sorry?

-----Original Message-----
From: Kim Ghattas [mailto:kim.ghattas@bbc.co.uk]
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 6:20 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject:

This isn't going anywhere is it?
Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

http://www.bbc.co.uk/
This e-mail (and any attachments) is confidential and may contain personal views which are not the views of the BBC unless specifically stated.
If you have received it in error, please delete it from your system.
Do not use, copy or disclose the information in any way nor act in reliance on it and notify the sender immediately.
Please note that the BBC monitors e-mails sent or received.
Further communication will signify your consent to this.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 2:51 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: H
Subject: Re: Day in May

Ok

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: 'H' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Apr 22 14:49:11 2010
Subject: FW: Day in May

Pls print for HRC to read this weekend.

She can sign here on Monday and we can scan to them.

Happy to discuss with her.

cdm

---

From: Turner, Katherine [mailto: B6
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 1:28 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Kendall, David
Subject: RE: Day in May

Cheryl:

I am working with David Kendall on the Lozada matter. Attached please find S B5

These materials have also been couriered to your office. If you have any questions, please let me know. Thank you very much for your assistance with this.

Katherine M. Turner
Associate
Williams & Connolly LLP
725 12th Street NW
Washington, DC 20005
Tel: B6
Fax: 202.434.5029

---

From: Kendall, David
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 11:39 AM
To: 'MillsCD@state.gov'

Cc: Turner, Katherine
Subject: Re: Day in May

Thanks, Cheryl.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: Kendall, David; Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Apr 21 11:20:06 2010
Subject: Day in May

David:

Lona is going to send you dates for the third week in May shortly.

Best.

cdm

NOTICE:

This message is intended for the use of the individual or entity
to which it is addressed and may contain information that is privileged, confidential and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If the reader of this message is not the intended recipient or the employee or agent responsible for delivering this message to the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution or copying of this communication is strictly prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify us immediately by reply or by telephone (call us collect at (202) 434-5000) and immediately delete this message and all its attachments.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 9:04 AM
To: H
Subject: H: New polls on US Jewish opinion, etc. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo new polls 032310.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

March 23, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: US Jewish and Israeli public opinion

Three new polls released: from Avaaz (all US), J Street (US Jews), and Ha'aretz (Israelis). I've sent Lauren the whole J Street poll to print out for you; its internals are the most detailed, relevant and suggestive. My reading of that poll is that the administration is in a pretty good spot with US Jewish opinion and that the drag (about 10 points, I think) has less to do with the Middle East and Israel than with the economy. Jewish opinion is far more solidly supportive of the administration generally than the general population (except minorities). Those adamantly opposed to the administration stance on Israel are preconceived to be against; they are predictable, a minority of the US Jewish community and have reached their natural limits. The institutional US Jewish position backing Bibi and against the administration does not have majority support among Jews.

Avaaz.org (a left international environmental activist group involved with Al Gore on climate change) commissioned a YouGov poll (more info here: http://bit.ly/9T4heq) of the general American public that found:

- 62% of those polled said the growth of Israeli settlements in occupied Palestinian territory will only lead to greater hostilities.
- 52% of respondents support, and 31% oppose, the Obama administration's demand that Israel stop all settlement-building.
- The poll showed broad support for President Obama's overall approach to the region. 61% of respondents supported the administration's plan to lead negotiations to broker a peace deal between Israel and the Palestinians during the coming months, with only 25% opposing that approach.

J Street found:

- American Jews by a four-to-one margin, 82-18 percent, support the United States playing an active role in helping the parties to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict, with 73 percent of American Jews supporting this active role even if it means that the United States were to publicly state its disagreements with both the Israelis and the Arabs.

- And by a 71-29 percent margin, American Jews support the United States "exerting pressure" on both the Israelis and the Arabs to make the necessary compromises to achieve peace. An earlier J Street poll last March found a similar level of support.

A Ha'aretz-backed poll in Israel found 69% of Israelis think Obama is "fair" (51%) or "friendly" (18%) to Israel, against 21% who say he's hostile. 41% of Israeli public think that Israel should stop building in East Jerusalem until the end of peace negotiations with the Palestinian, and 48% think it shouldn't--despite a general (US) perception of an Israeli consensus supporting the settlements in Jerusalem.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768642 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

March 23, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: US Jewish and Israeli public opinion

Three new polls released: from Avaaz (all US), J Street (US Jews), and Ha'aretz (Israelis). I've sent Lauren the whole J Street poll to print out for you; its internals are the most detailed, relevant and suggestive. My reading of that poll is that the administration is in a pretty good spot with US Jewish opinion and that the drag (about 10 points, I think) has less to do with the Middle East and Israel than with the economy. Jewish opinion is far more solidly supportive of the administration generally than the general population (except minorities). Those adamantly opposed to the administration stance on Israel are preconceived to be against; they are predictable, a minority of the US Jewish community and have reached their natural limits. The institutional US Jewish position backing Bibi and against the administration does not have majority support among Jews.

Avaaz.org (a left international environmental activist group involved with Al Gore on climate change) commissioned a YouGov poll (more info here: http://bit.ly/9T4heq) of the general American public that found:

- 62% of those polled said the growth of Israeli settlements in occupied Palestinian territory will only lead to greater hostilities.
- 52% of respondents support, and 31% oppose, the Obama administration's demand that Israel stop all settlement-building.
- The poll showed broad support for President Obama's overall approach to the region. 61% of respondents supported the administration's plan to lead negotiations to broker a peace deal between Israel and the Palestinians during the coming months, with only 25% opposing that approach.

J Street found:

- American Jews by a four-to-one margin, 82-18 percent, support the United States playing an active role in helping the parties to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict, with 73 percent of American Jews supporting this active role even if it means that the United States were to publicly state its disagreements with both the Israelis and the Arabs.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768642 Date: 08/31/2015

- And by a 71-29 percent margin, American Jews support the United States "exerting pressure" on both the Israelis and the Arabs to make the necessary compromises to achieve peace. An earlier J Street poll last March found a similar level of support.

A Ha'aretz-backed poll in Israel found 69% of Israelis think Obama is "fair" (51%) or "friendly" (18%) to Israel, against 21% who say he's hostile. 41% of Israeli public think that Israel should stop building in East Jerusalem until the end of peace negotiations with the Palestinian, and 48% think it shouldn't--despite a general (US) perception of an Israeli consensus supporting the settlements in Jerusalem.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 9:36 AM
To: H
Cc: PVerveer B6
Subject: fyi, drug violence, cuidad juarez and women. Sid

FYI, a lot of the violence in Cuidad Juarez has historically been targeted against women. In 2002, Max wrote this report from Juarez, the first report by an American from the scene, winning the Annenberg Online Journalism Award, the equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize.

<script language="JavaScript" type="text/javascript"> document.write('<img src="http://view.atdmt.com/CNT/view/197071989/direct;wi.728;hi.90/01/"/>'); </script><noscript><img border="0" src="http://view.atdmt.com/CNT/view/197071989/direct;wi.728;hi.90/01/" /></noscript>

http://www.salon.com/news/feature/2002/12/04/juarez/print.html

Day of the dead

More than 325 women have been murdered in the free-trade boomtown of Ciudad Juarez in the past decade. Faced with government incompetence and corruption, people are rebelling.
By Max Blumenthal
Dec 4, 2002 | The body of another murdered woman was found late last month in the Mexican industrial hub of Ciudad Juarez, dumped behind some shrubs in the squalor of the Anapra neighborhood, a ramshackle hodgepodge of corrugated tin and cardboard shacks on the sludge-washed banks of the Rio Grande. Her hands had been tied, and the evidence suggested she had been raped. The body was so badly decomposed that investigators calculated that she'd been dead for seven months.
However horrific the details, they were numbing in their familiarity. The body of a woman who had died in similar circumstances was found in the same dusty lot a couple of months earlier. The bodies of eight women were found in a lot not far away a little more than a year ago. So many women have been murdered here in the past 10 years that there is no reliable count. Most experts place it close to 325, an average of 32 a year, nearly three every month. At least 90 of the deaths are believed to be the work of one or more serial killers. Hundreds more women have simply vanished.
Like so many of the others, the woman whose body was found in late October had probably come to Juarez from the poverty of southern Mexico to work for about $10 a day in one of the many foreign-owned assembly plants known as maquiladoras that sprouted up in Juarez after the North American Free Trade Agreement was signed in 1994. And like them, too, her body was unclaimed in death and buried alone and anonymous.
Such death has become a way of life here. So, too, with the fear and paranoia that rise in such a climate. Nobody knows who is doing the killings, and the mystery only seems to deepen. Arrests made by local authorities have produced allegations of torture, witness tampering and frame-ups -- but no convictions. Most here believe that the killer or killers must have enormous clout. Perhaps, some say, the killers are narcotrafficantes disposing of witnesses. Perhaps they are the sons of the wealthy and powerful indulging in sick sex. Perhaps they are cultists whose members come from the highest levels of government and finance. The theories differ, but a common assumption is that arrests made thus far are only a smokescreen for an historically opaque and corrupt government that will protect its dark secrets at any cost.
One thing seems clear: The murders arise from a social landscape that has been transformed by global economic forces. Where Ciudad Juarez was once a small, sleepy desert outpost just across the border from El Paso, Texas, the population in the past decade has exploded to 1.2 million people, many of them drawn by the lure of the maquiladoras. The tides of people have overwhelmed the ability of the city to absorb them, overwhelmed health services, social services and law enforcement. Free-trade advocates once promised that NAFTA would transform Juarez into the City of the Future -- and they have been proven right in a way they never could have imagined. Today, Juarez still has the feel of the lawless Old West, but with a grim 21st century edge.

Despite promises of swift justice from Mexican President Vicente Fox and Chihuahua Gov. Patricio Martinez, they have yet to take up offers of assistance from the FBI; bureau agents in Texas have suggested that official corruption is hindering efforts to stop the murders. Chihuahua state investigators have seemingly adopted a "don't ask, don't tell" policy towards Juarez's homicides, fostering an atmosphere of impunity and pervasive fear. Foreign corporations operating in Juarez that have employed many of the murdered women largely deny that such an atmosphere exists.

But in this postmodern urban culture, where the very concept of community has broken down, many bereaved family members and local activists have begun to take matters into their own hands, investigating the murders and speaking out even if it means threats and other reprisals.

Evangeline Arce's daughter, Silvia, a street vendor, disappeared on Nov. 3, 1998. Since that day, she said, the authorities have done little to investigate. "Two days after my daughter disappeared, I went to the police and filed a report," the mother says in Spanish, her face flaring with anger. "They promised me prompt action but when I checked back a week later, the missing persons report was never filed and the investigation had not even begun. When they finally got witnesses together, none of them would talk because they were too afraid."

Even as Mexico continues to make strides toward becoming an open and democratic society, the epidemic of rape and murder here has exposed the heavy residue of its corrupt and authoritarian political legacy as well as the contradictions of its efforts at economic expansion.

To understand the magnitude of the breakdown, think of the sniper rampage in the Washington area this fall that left 10 people dead and three wounded. Imagine that Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Moose held a press conference and asked local citizens to catch the sniper themselves because local police were not up to the task and the federal government was not being helpful; imagine that the federal government charged that local officials in Montgomery County were complicit in the killings and impeding the investigation. Chaos would ensue, certainly. But then, multiply the number of victims by 30, by 40, by 50, or more.

That's Juarez today.

The jumbled, exhaust-choked commercial core of this city has grown wildly in the wake of NAFTA, adding modern shopping malls, condominiums and expansive boulevards. The population is growing at twice the rate of the national average; it is expected to nearly double by 2010, to 2 million people. Many of them directly or indirectly rely on the 300 or so maquiladoras for their livelihoods.

To accommodate the new army of workers, the city has given birth to entirely new sectors. The Campestre Juarez is a luxurious conglomerate of gated communities, with a main gate that's a life-size replica of Paris' Arc de Triomphe. Nearby, many of the maquiladoras are situated along the Avenida de la Industria. Though the assembly-line workers sometimes can be glimpsed behind a plate glass window in aqua-blue uniforms, there usually is little sign of any activity behind the maquiladoras' featureless walls.

Most of the new residents are poor, or on the brink of poverty, and they live in Anapra or another of the grim, violent colonias populares on the outskirts of town. In those colonias, residents usually live without sanitation, running water, electricity or paved roads.

Avenida Manuel Gomez Morin is the pothole-riddled six-lane avenue that ties these varied worlds together. Sitio Colosio Valle, a medium-sized strip mall, stands on a corner of the avenue at the gateway to the industrial sector. It is fronted by a vast parking lot and inside are various clothing outlets and boutiques. By day, the lot bustles as customers scurry back and forth, hauling their purchases to their cars -- a sight similar to any mall in the suburban United States. By night, however, traffic tapers off, stores lock up and the mall's lot becomes dark and desolate. Sitio Colosio Valle was where many of the slain and missing women were last seen.

In the mall's parking lot, Braulio Rosas, a 40-year-old security guard, leans against the door of a giant Nike outlet. Inside the store, under bright fluorescent lights, employees frantically check inventory and scramble to close up.

"A lot of girls were picked up here," Rosas says in a voice of calm resignation. "But really, it's the girls' fault. It's because even though they weren't putas, [prostitutes] you know, they were more like faciles [easy women]. They didn't have to get into those cars if they didn't want to."

Rosas sounds cynical, but blaming the victims is by no means an aberration in Juarez. Similar notions have been offered by officials like Suly Ponce, the former Chihuahua special prosecutor in charge of the murdered women's cases.

"Sometimes there are cases that a girl meets some person, he strikes up a relationship with her, they drink ... and it ends violently," she told the Washington Post in 2000, before she was promoted to a job in the governor's office. "It's difficult to know."

A handful of the women found murdered since 1993 were indeed confirmed as prostitutes. But the truth is that a large majority of the missing or murdered women were hardworking, young, poor and for the most part socially conservative. Most had migrated to Juarez from Mexico's depressed south to work in the maquiladoras , sometimes arriving alone and with little means of contacting their families back home.

The maquiladoras , run by companies like Delphi and RCA Thomson, prefer to hire young women for assembly-line jobs. An entry-level assembly-line worker makes minimum wage, about $2 an hour. With experience, pay can rise to as much as $2.50 an hour -- and compared to wages in Guerrero or Chiapas, that's good money. But in Juarez, the women are caught in an economic trap: Since the cost of living here is only slighter lower than in El Paso, the wages that seem so high to new maquiladora workers actually ensure poverty. The workers can be hired and fired on the spot, with little pretext and no legal protection. And union activities are prohibited.

Even for those who accept the conditions, security is elusive. More often now, the global companies that own maquiladoras are closing up shop and transferring operations to China to take advantage of lower taxes, investment subsidies and outrageously cheap labor. On June 29, Royal Philips Electronics announced it was moving its P.C. monitor manufacturing operations, at a cost of 900 jobs. On July 1, Scientific Atlanta fired 1,300 workers after shutting its plant down. According to the Nov. 5 New York Times, this trend has cost Juarez 287,000 jobs in the maquiladoras since their peak in October 2000.

Not only does this slash and burn the economic base. There are brutal social reverberations, too. The city's health system, Instituto Mexicano del Seguro Social, has reported 200,000 people falling from its list of insured after losing their company policies, according to a July article in La Prensa. Esther Chavez Cano, director of Juarez's only battered-women's shelter, Casa Amiga, said in a speech this summer that domestic violence cases had risen by 50 percent in July alone.

The combination of poverty and a lack of social connections renders women on the assembly line powerless and virtually invisible. And that has made them easy prey. According to the El Paso Times, about a third of the approximately 325 slain women were employed by maquiladoras at the time of their murder.

Given that few of the maquiladoras provide shuttle service to and from the colonias, the female workers often are preyed upon while walking through perilous places like Sitio Colosio Valle in the darkness of the early morning. At such an hour, the only nearby activity is that of bars and nightclubs closing up as male patrons filter into the street after a long night of drinking.

Besides China's attractive economic climate, an intangible cause of maquiladora flight is Juarez's chronic violence. The effect is difficult to measure. Two companies in the city's industrial sector -- including TDK, the audio tape maker -- have posted banners on their factories reading: "STOP THE VIOLENCE. To Better Our City, Let's Unite." But most foreign companies are purely economic organisms governed entirely, it seems, by the dictates of efficiency. They have maintained a stunning silence even as their female workers are slaughtered.

Consider the case of 17-year-old Claudia Ivette Gonzalez. Her body was found in November 2001 along with seven others in an overgrown cotton field on Avenida Technologico, just blocks from Sitio Colosio Valle mall and across the street from the offices of the Association of Maquiladoras. She had worked on the assembly line for the Lear Corp., a Detroit-based auto-interior supplier. Lear has declined to publicly address Gonzalez's murder.

Greg Bloom, editor of the Frontera Norte Sur -- an Internet news service that focuses on the U.S.-Mexico border -- recalled a conversation with Gonzalez's mother, Josefina, in which she recounted her daughter's last day. In the darkness of the early morning, Gonzalez told him, Claudia set out for her job at Lear. When she arrived at work a few minutes late after missing her bus, Claudia Ivette was promptly sent away under a policy barring tardy assembly-line workers from their shifts. A half-hour past when she usually would have returned home, her mother knew something was gravely wrong. Her worst fear -- the same nagging fear shared by so many Juarez mothers -- would soon be realized.

Andrea Puchalsky, Lear's director of communications, acknowledged that the company has not made any public statements regarding Gonzalez's murder, nor has it enacted any proactive measures to protect employees from another wave of violence. "Adding security is not a question that relates to Lear," she said. "[Gonzalez's murder] did not happen on Lear property."

When questioned about the murder and Lear policies, Puchalsky mentioned that a company memo was prepared for her with responses to possible questions. As to Lear's worker-lockout policy, which apparently put Gonzalez in a precarious situation the day of her abduction, Puchalsky declined to comment on whether Gonzalez was locked out or sent home from Lear's plant on her last day.

"We have a policy for tardiness and she was tardy many times," Puchalsky said. "When she had arrived late to work her shift, she was not there in time to work her shift."

When asked whether Lear's offices in the U.S. have a similar policy in which late employees are barred from working their shifts, Puchalsky reversed her earlier statement, vehemently denying that such a policy existed anywhere within Lear's operations. "There is not a policy to send a worker home after X number of tardy arrivals," she said. "Typically what we do is if there is someone arriving late on kind of a warning system, there might be a notification that 'the next time you arrive late, you have to take a day off ...' It's not a policy, though. There is no written policy like that throughout Lear Corp."

The body of 17-year-old Lilia Alejandra Garcia was found mutilated just 300 feet from her maquiladora in February 2001, and since then her case has come to embody the incompetence and corruption of police and prosecutors from Ciudad Juarez to the state capital in Chihuahua City and south all the way to Mexico City.

Garcia, the mother of a 5-month-old baby and a 2-year-old child, apparently was kidnapped just after she left work. She was held in captivity for a week, repeatedly beaten and raped, and then strangled. Then-prosecutor Suly Ponce told the Juarez newspaper El Diario that Garcia was the first woman of the year to be murdered and raped in this area of the city -- even though two days before, the body of an unidentified woman was found naked just blocks away.

When an FBI leak revealed witness testimony linking Lilia Garcia's killers to drug dealers, Suly Ponce dismissed it, calling it erroneous. She instead blamed workers in a circus across the street from the strip mall where Garcia was last seen. When circus managers claimed that Ponce offered them money to blame co-workers, she dropped the investigation.

According to a July article in the El Paso Times, former Chihuahua state forensic chief Oscar Maynez Grijalva said Garcia was killed in a similar manner as three of the eight women found in the cotton field with Claudia Ivette Gonzalez in November 2001. Curiously, local authorities behaved just as evasively in that investigation as in Garcia's.

When Gonzalez and the seven other women's bodies were found in November 2001, ex-Chihuahua Attorney General Arturo Gonzalez Rascon immediately fingered two local bus drivers as the culprits. Yet doubts about their guilt arose, especially after Grijalva -- who was Rascon's evidence expert at the time -- resigned from his post, citing pressure to fabricate evidence against them. And the head of a local prison was forced from office when he documented signs of torture on the accused men after they had returned from Rascon's office.

Four months later, in February 2002, a search-and-rescue team combing the cotton field found Claudia Ivette Gonzalez's overalls in a plastic bag, along with strands of hair and other crucial pieces of evidence that Rascon's investigators had failed to discover. In response, Rascon offered his opinion to the El Paso Times: "The state police have done a thoroughly professional job. I have no doubt about that." But on Oct. 28, DNA results revealed that Rascon's investigators had properly identified only one of the eight dead women -- Gonzalez.

Stuck with a far more dubious task than catching one madman or replacing one feeble leader, Juarez's fractured civil society has been paralyzed. A cynical mood is palpable just by speaking to citizens on the street, who unanimously express fear and distrust of law-enforcement and government officials. Some local cops are just as cynical.

"We can't just sit around in deserted places waiting for someone to drive up and dump bodies off," said one municipal police officer seated in an idling paddy wagon who refused to give his name for security reasons. "There are too few of us and the city's too big ... We don't get much support from the federal government. Judicially, we are not protected like cops in the U.S. Plus, the arms they give us are weak and the bulletproof vests don't really stop bullets. It's not just that, though. I have a young woman in my home so I can put myself in the place of the parents who have lost their daughters. But it's a question of society. We need their support and they need them to be more conscious if it is going to get any better here."

The scope of the crime is so enormous, and there has been so little success in stopping it, that suspicion breeds on itself. The litany of theories as to who the killers are and what their motive might be suggests that Juarez has become a breeding ground for every imaginable predator. And yet, nobody knows. Nothing is certain. And that feeds the climate of paranoia.

Garcia and Gonzalez's murders are rumored to be the work of a serial killer with possible ties to drug dealers. Yet Garcia was found with marks on her wrists that, according to local forensics experts, were identical to those made by police handcuffs. And upon the discovery of her daughter's overalls, Josefina Gonzalez told the El Paso Times that someone powerful was undoubtedly responsible for the murder.

Many in Mexico's law enforcement community agree that a ring of rich men are behind some of the killings, but they have no evidence to support the theory. Some suggest that some young men from the local aristocracy are responsible, but are being protected by their parents. A persistent theory holds that the murders -- or a significant subset of them -- are linked to powerful narcotraficantes who have co-opted segments of the local ruling class.

And the cynicism has been exacerbated by the fact that of the 17 men and one woman accused as serial killer masterminds of the murders, only one has been convicted, Abdel Latif Sharif Sharif, an Egyptian chemist and resident of Texas at the time of his extradition to Mexico in 1995. Currently, Sharif is awaiting sentencing for allegedly paying a drug trafficker named Victor Manuel Rivera Moreno to carry out about a dozen murders. However, evidence against Sharif is suspect and charges against him have been changed repeatedly. Once he was even charged with killing a woman, Elizabeth Ontiveros, who showed up later at police offices to prove she was alive.

In 1996, Sharif was accused of paying the gang Los Rebeldes to kill 17 women. Then, in 1999, he was charged with hiring five bus drivers and an El Paso man from his jail cell to kill seven women. Officials claimed Sharif hired the killers to deflect blame from himself. By 1999, judges had cleared him of all charges, citing an absence of concrete evidence and the possibility of witness intimidation by prosecutors.

Suly Ponce, who supervised the case, has yet to make a compelling case against him. In a 1999 radio interview, rather than presenting hard evidence, she claimed Sharif was aggressively hostile toward women because of his Egyptian background. Now she says that the case against Sharif hinges on Moreno's declaration that Sharif paid him to carry out the killings with money he earned from 13 patents he developed for Benchmark Research and Technology. But according to an article in the El Paso Times, Benchmark has never paid employees for patent development. In a telephone interview last week with Salon, Ponce said she hadn't known this. Angela Palaveras, the current special prosecutor, declined to discuss Sharif's case or any aspect of the investigations.

Many local residents scoff at the notion that the killers have been caught. "We don't believe that the guys they have arrested are the killers," says Miguel Angel Jaramillo, a mid-level manager for the Lear Corp. "It's obvious that they're just scapegoats."

Yet Ponce remains ardent in her belief that Sharif is at the center of the murders. "Today the killings continue because there are many imitators," she told Salon last week. "But after Sharif was caught, there were almost no homicides for a year." But according to the Juarez daily El Diario, the year immediately after Sharif was jailed -- a period spanning from October 1995 to October 1996 -- 28 young women were found murdered.

Meanwhile, the theories flourish and become more and more paranoid, reflecting a breakdown in public trust. By one popular theory, the women are being murdered at blood rituals for a cabal of wealthy, powerful men. Another theory posits a financial motive for murder. "We're finding a lot of girls that are mutilated in the same way," says a young municipal police officer who declined to give his name. "Someone's probably killing them to take their organs to sell them for a lot of money in the U.S." When asked if there was any evidence to support the theory, the officer replied that it was only a hunch.

Such a climate sends a message to the killers every day: You can get away with anything, even a crime on this scale. But where such a climate breeds cynicism and hopelessness among people who live and work here, it has also provoked an incipient revolt.

On her radio show "Grueso Calibre" ("Large Caliber"), popular host Samira Izaguirre frequently aired the views of guests who were critical of how authorities handled the murders. When Attorney General Rascon accused the two bus drivers of the cotton field murders in November 2001, Izaguirre hosted the drivers' wives on her show. After that interview, advertisements began appearing in local newspapers smearing Izaguirre with claims that she frequented strip clubs and was romantically involved with one of the bus drivers. News media on both sides of the border have reported that the receipt for the ad was signed by government officials who paid for it.

Then, in February, when Izaguirre started organizing a vigil and announced a hunger strike on her show on Radio Canon, she was fired. Fearing for her safety, she moved across the border to El Paso.

Others, too, have discovered that pressing the complaint too forcefully brings reprisal. Marisela Ortiz, co-director of Nuestras Hijas Regreso a Casa (Our Daughters Back Home), a legal support group for victims' parents, was a frequent guest on "Grueso Calibre." Like Izaguirre, Ortiz has focused her resources on drawing attention to government and police incompetence in the slain women's cases. And she says that, like Izaguirre, she has faced ever-increasing danger.

In Nuestras Hijas' office in central Juarez, located inside a small one-story row house with a "For Rent" sign out front, Ortiz described the shadow of terror that has stalked her since she began pressuring the authorities.

She claims she was threatened by ex-Chihuahua District Attorney Arturo Gonzalez Rascon. "Rascon came all the way to Juarez [from Chihuahua City] to tell me not to involve myself in all the cases," she tells Salon. "Then I got a message on my phone saying: 'You have daughters that are alive. Take care of them.'" Rascon, in an earlier story by the Associated Press, denied the allegation.

Last May, Ortiz says, she was pursued by men in a black pickup truck who tried to kidnap her. She believes the attempt was orchestrated by Rascon's office since it occurred only a day before she had planned to travel to El Paso for a meeting with the FBI and Texas state Sen. Eliot Shapleigh, D-El Paso, who is calling for a bi-national investigation into the murders.

Victims' parents who came to Nuestras Hijas for help in finding their missing daughters also say they have been threatened. Mario Lee Lopez and his wife, Soledad Aguilar, lost their daughter, Cecilia Covarrubias. She was kidnapped in 1995 along with their granddaughter, who was two months old. By now their granddaughter would be 7, and Lopez and Aguilar's own investigation has led them to believe that she is alive and living in the custody of a well-connected local family.

To an outsider it is a desperate story, all but impossible to prove. Lopez accuses Ponce of coordinating the coverup of the kidnappings and murder; again, Ponce denies the charge. And she was adamant that government officials have harassed no one. "I didn't have any knowledge of threats against anybody," she said. "On the contrary, we support the families and they are encouraged to be intimately involved in the investigations."

Lopez recalls an incident in which he had gone to Juarez's judicial building to press his granddaughter's case and did not exactly find the kind of support Ponce mentioned. While leaving the court, Lopez says, he was confronted by a high-ranking minister who warned that if he didn't drop the investigation, he would be tortured with electric shock devices. "But it's too late to stop now," Lopez adds with a wistful smile.

Despite the campaign against Izaguirre, or perhaps because of it, the vigil took place as scheduled in March. It was an unprecedented show of solidarity, with thousands of people gathered in the cotton field where Gonzalez and the seven others were found in an irrigation ditch. There are still tatters of yellow police tape there, and candleholders left from the vigil are strewn over the site. Eight red crosses mark the spot where the bodies were found.

However, city officials have no plans to memorialize the site as Juarez's residents have. In fact, according to a Sept. 4 article in El Diario, the site is now being used as a dumping ground for Juarez's Department of Parks and Gardens.

Near downtown Juarez there is a monument to Abraham Lincoln, honoring him for "establishing North American industries, today the most important in the world." Not far away is a simple gallery where the Collectiva Antigona [Antigone Collective], a group of local artists, has organized a series of public performances, installations and conferences focused on Juarez's crisis of violence.

Each week, the artists gather to collaborate and discuss strategy. At a table with 12 other artists and writers, in an expansive room filled with cubist-inspired paintings, Antonio Munoz Ortega, a 51-year-old writer, describes the Collectiva's goals and the problems confronting the group. "Our government is authoritarian, and authoritarian governments are principally concerned with the manipulation of life," he says. "The victims' families feel manipulated by the authorities' insensitivity and this has manifested a greater and greater cynicism here that's really dangerous. The struggle, then, is for reparation and simply regaining our daily lives."

Ortega says he was moved to action by Samira Izaguirre's candlelight vigil in March. He describes the building of an impromptu church in front of the Association of Maquiladoras office as an effort to "communicate through a different language, one that's symbolic." This decision, he says, helped lead to the formation of the Collectiva.

The rallying cry for Collectiva Antigona, as evidenced by the name, has been Sophocles' Greek tragedy, "Antigone," which tells the tale of a girl's persecution at the hands of a cruel dictator for burying her brother. The Collectiva has organized readings of the play around the state of Chihuahua and plans a public performance in the future.

The Collectiva also has begun to establish a visual presence around central Juarez, most noticeably by painting a wall spanning an entire block with poetry written by participants in a recent writer's conference on violence against women. On Nov. 1 and 2, the Mexican holiday Dia de los Muertos, the collective filled a room with traditional altars honoring the victims along with a giant cross in the center of the room covered with masks, intended to symbolize the anonymity of the victims. An estimated 1,500 people viewed the exhibit. A week later, working with Nuestras Hijas, the collective placed a coffin and flowers and had a bonfire in the cotton field ditch where Claudia Ivette Gonzalez and seven others were found.

"It is absolutely necessary to affect civil society with the intention of shaking the indolence and to provoke some sort of reaction from the people," says Mariela Paniagua, a 41-year-old painter. "People are no longer affected by what is happening in this city. They have lost the capacity for outrage in the face of these acts."

While Collectiva Antigona meets, another group gathers a few miles away to combat Juarez's violence by drastically different means. Past the seemingly endless rows of cardboard hovels in the desperately poor Colonia Morelos, beyond the municipal dump, on a rocky desert mesa in the shadow of Mount Indio, members of a search-and-rescue group called Banda Civil spread out through the hills to search for more murder victims.

Luz Elena Guerrero Guerra, a strong-looking woman in her late 50s with an intense gaze, serves as president of one of Banda Civil's six divisions. Guerra tells of how it began as a search-and-rescue group in 1985 to assist during a massive earthquake in Mexico City and evolved to respond to Juarez's crisis. She herself found the first slain women's bodies in 1989, before investigators had even identified the deadly trend. Today, Banda Civil's members still lend their help during natural disasters but the bulk of their work comes in the search for bodies, monitoring of schools and a citywide crime-awareness campaign.

Ever-present terror, coupled with the impotence of Juarez's authorities, forced Banda Civil's transformation, Guerra says. "I've narrowly escaped violence many times," she explains. "Sometimes it is just pure luck that a bus or a taxi happens to come by in time when someone is chasing me ... All of us, we're uncertain of what the authorities are telling us. That's our indignation. If they [the authorities] aren't interested in helping, we'll pressure them."

Because the group is required by law to cooperate with police, some view it with suspicion. Yet they have had success where most other activist groups have failed. It was Banda Civil members who made the crucial discovery of Claudia Ivette Gonzalez's overalls in February, humiliating Attorney General Rascon and breathing new life into the investigation. And Banda Civil has continued to find more evidence during their weekly searches of Juarez's human dumping grounds.

Besides its role as a search-and-rescue/quasi-vigilante group, Banda Civil has the feel of a support group, providing members with an outlet from the daily fear that comes with life in Juarez. According to Guerra, over 300 people have accompanied the group on searches and many of them are family members of missing women. And indeed, the searches are a family activity.

On one recent Saturday, the search was joined by about 60 participants of all ages and from all sectors of Juarez society, including a middle manager from the Lear Corp. There were no terrible discoveries that day, and yet afterward, as people stood around talked and listened to norteño music blaring from a car stereo, it was evident just how deeply the murders are ingrained into life here -- and how some people are fighting back with whatever tools they have at hand. Perhaps the quiet optimism is derived frorn the age-old Mexican axiom that death brings about rebirth.

"Instead of spending our time criticizing the authorities, we're trying to find some solutions," says Santos. "We all have sisters and daughters here and we all feel the same. My daughter is in danger. I can't let her live like this."

-- By Max Blumenthal

Copyright © 2010 Salon Media Group, Inc. Reproduction of material from any Salon pages without written permission is strictly prohibited. SALON® is registered in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office as a trademark of Salon Media Group Inc.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 6:09 PM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton

Craig and I have discussed the state sponsor of terror issue a couple of times [redacted] B5
[redacted] Let me follow up with him.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Apr 22 17:55:38 2010
Subject: Re: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Apr 21 15:59:02 2010
Subject: FW: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton

fyi

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, April 21, 2010 2:42 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton

Dear Cheryl –

It's our understanding that the review of the terrorist list undertaken at the beginning of the year is reaching completion, imminently. Jim asked me to shoot you a note that this continues to be a very important issue for him and Bill Delahunt. The list needs to be purged of political manipulation – and quite frankly, the current status quo with Cuba needs to be broken, not further reinforced – for the sake of Alan Gross, those on the island needing space to voice their views, and indeed, all of us outside who know change is coming.

It's time to do something bold and constructive – and in our very best interests –

Let us know if there's anything we can do to help –

Cindy

From: Buhl, Cindy
Sent: Thursday, January 07, 2010 1:15 PM
To: 'Mills, Cheryl D'
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: To Cheryl Mills: Rep. McGovern Letter to President Obama, DHS Secretary Napolitano and Secretary of State Clinton

Dear Cheryl --

Attached please find a letter regarding the review of terrorist lists currently taking place within the Obama Administration. The letter cites Cuba as a nation that should be purged from such lists, including the State Sponsors of Terrorism list, as an example for the need of a thorough, robust and judicious review and updating of these lists.

Can you please ensure that the Secretary and other relevant State Department officials are made aware of this letter?

Very best regards --

Cindy

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 1, 2010 12:05 PM
To: H
Subject: Update from ops

Subject: (SBU) Amcit detained for explosives threat on flight from Taipei to Shanghai · During China Airlines flight 501, Amcit [redacted] told cabin crew his luggage contained explosives. · The plane was diverted to Hangzhou, where [redacted] was detained by Chinese authorities. Authorities found no explosives on the flight, and the plane continued to Shanghai. · According to the Taiwan National Immigration Agency, [redacted] attempted to board with U.S. passport number [redacted] However, because he did not have a valid Chinese visa, [redacted] flew on his Taiwanese passport.

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 6:54 PM
To: H
Subject: FW:

B6

fyi

---

From: Shah, Rajiv (AID/A) [mailto:
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 6:48 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE:

Raj

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 12:05 PM
To: Shah, Rajiv (AID/A)
Subject:

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 1:28 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: per your request - Brussels Forum

Fyi

---

From: Bommer, Ashley F
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Pauli, Rosemarie
Sent: Tue Mar 23 13:19:08 2010
Subject: per your request - Brussels Forum

Ambassador Holbrooke is scheduled to attend the Brussels Forum, March 26 - 27. The Forum is similar to the Munich Security Conference: a collection of high-profile leaders, journalists and policy-makers from the U.S., Europe and Asia. The Forum is sponsored by the German Marshall Fund (Ron Asmus), and Ambassador Holbrooke has attended every year. His presence this year consists of two things: 1) bilat meetings including those with EU High Rep Catherine Ashton, Codel Casey, Nato Sec Gen Rasmussen, Ambassador Daalder, and Ambassador Kennard (some with Mullen); and 2) an internationally televised BBC discussion on Afghanistan and Pakistan with Admiral Mullen. The panel will be shown live and broadcast on BBC World four times over the course of the weekend - a great communications opportunity. Fawzia Koofi, who is the Deputy Speaker of the Afghan parliament and Former Dutch Development Minister Bert Koenders are also on the panel. Nik Gowing from the BBC will moderate. The panel and Holbrooke/Mullen's attendance at the forum have been announced to the media.

Ashley Bommer
Special Advisor to the Special Representative to Afghanistan & Pakistan
U.S. Department of State
Tel: 202 647 4128
Fax: 202 647 4142

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 22, 2010 7:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Mrs Mubarak

I think it's Dec 10 at the Winter Palace in Luxor where you previously staved. I'll get exact date. [redacted] B6
[redacted] The. Assembly passed a good anti-trafficking law a day ago because of her leadership. I think it's a first for the region.
I saw the FM today. He said, "Tell dear Hillary that I send hugs."
I'm heading home finally. Its been intensive but very good. They love you here.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Sent: Thu Apr 22 18:05:55 2010
Subject: Re: Mrs Mubarak

What is the date of her event in December?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Apr 20 14:36:21 2010
Subject: Mrs Mubarak

I had a good visit with her. She very much wants you to come to Egypt for the major anti-trafficking event she is doing in December and sends you her regards.
Egypt is making good progress on women's issues: prosecuting child marriage cases, combating FGM and they're close to passing a tough anti-trafficking law. Mrs M is the guiding force.
She and the President appreciated your call after his surgery. The most difficult part of our conversation was [redacted]
[redacted]
We also announced our partnership with egypt for the training of. Afghan midwives at the suzanne mubarek health center in Alexandria.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 1:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: White Smoke!!

Fyi. Good news!

----- Original Message -----
From: Tauscher, Ellen O
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Mar 23 13:37:24 2010
Subject: White Smoke!!

Jake,
We have one Working Group that will complete their work in 30 minutes or so. No material issues, just proofing language. Russians will return to their Mission and by pre-agreement from earlier Anatoly will call tonight and confirm that Protocol is agreed.
We have forwarded Ad Ref Treaty to DC this afternoon. Will forward Ad Ref Protocol tomorrow. Conformed version later this week. Please let S know. Coming back to DC Thursday.
Ellen

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 10:06 AM
To: H
Subject: h: just a line. S

Next time you feel like stepping all over your story by saying you are tired, use the line of the black woman in the Montgomery bus boycott who walked to work: "My feet is tired, but my soul is rested."

On UK: Clegg held his own in the second debate last night. Gordon hit him as "anti-American." This feels like it's moving to a hung parliament. Cameron can't break through. Two-thirds of the voters simply hate the Tories. No matter how well Clegg does the system doesn't allow for any gain in seats to match his personal poll numbers. UK stunned by its first series of debates and the whole campaign has atrophied in wonderment, little happening between the debates. Final one next week, but guaranteed not to be conclusive, just a repetition, confirming the earlier two.

Sid

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 5:01 PM
To: H; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: RE: Nita Lowey and AJC

Great - I have to brief her tomorrow on Haiti - I will tell her we are re-looking at it.

cdm

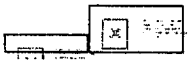
-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 12:36 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Nita Lowey and AJC

I think we should reconsider this invite.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Mar 22 21:44:02 2010
Subject: FW: Nita Lowey and AJC

fyi

From: Lew, Jacob J
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 5:08 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Nita Lowey and AJC



B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 10:11 AM
To: H
Subject: FYI Kornblum... Sid

In light of Clegg's rising popularity partly based on his anti-Americanism and Germany's growing hegemony in Europe while becoming more insular, John Kornblum has written this op-ed with reference in last graphs to US policy.

April 23, 2010
I.H.T. Op-Ed Contributor

Germany in Need of a Dream

By JOHN KORNBLUM

Has Germany abandoned Europe? Do Angela Merkel's tough conditions for aid to Greece mean that Germany is no longer the motor of European integration? Has Frau Merkel in fact morphed from the Miss Europa of 2007 to the Fräulein Germania of 2010, as Germany's own former foreign minister Joschka Fischer has suggested?

As a former American ambassador who has lived and worked the better part of four decades around Germany, my Blackberry often glows red hot with messages from persons asking these questions. My response is always the same: Germany has changed very little, but Europe and the world have changed a lot. Therein lies the dilemma.

Germany has worked hard to dig its way out of the disaster of 1945, but trauma remains a defining issue for German society. Sixty five years later, Germany is still focused on the three essentials of its recovery: stability, respectability and peace. Keep this triangle in mind and lots of things quickly come into focus.

From the first days of the Federal Republic, Germany's leaders emphasized the importance of defining interests solely within a common European and Atlantic vocation. But they also understood that renouncing national ambitions did not remove the responsibility to pursue specific German goals through the common institutions.

Many important postwar accomplishments were conceived and pushed by Germany, sometimes over the opposition of others — including the United States. Ostpolitik was controversial for years, as was NATO enlargement. Germany pushed them with determination.

Helmut Kohl did not consult before promulgating his 10 points on reunification. He agreed to French desires for a common currency, but only if it could be a mirror of the Deutsche mark, for decades the European monetary standard. The euro stability pact, now the object of so much controversy with Greece, was the result. After 1990, the E.U.'s eastward expansion was Germany's way of firming up its Eastern flank.

Slowly and without fanfare, Germany has been remaking the European Union in its image. At each step of the way, Germany made its wishes more palatable by paying more than its share. Part of today's misunderstanding is caused by Germany's success in using its contributions to build an image of selflessness. Germany has been as single-minded in pursuit of its goals as Charles de Gaulle ever was for his, but it almost always left leadership to others.

A new consciousness grew after the costs of reunification began to mount. "Europe" in the institutional sense has become increasingly unpopular. German courts have begun to define German European issues in the context of the German Constitution rather than on the basis of E.U. law. At least some of Ms. Merkel's refusal to allow immediate assistance to Greece was based on her fears that it would fan anti-E.U. sentiment at home. Are these the first signs of a German Tea Party?

Here we find the source of most of the hand wringing about Germany's role as the "motor of Europe." Ms. Merkel's unwillingness to sweeten the financial pot echoed throughout Brussels. To many, it signified the decline of German willingness to "salute the French flag three times before raising the German flag," as Konrad Adenauer used to put it. Germans are not alone in objecting to throwing more money into the E.U. pot, but they happen to be the only ones who can do something about it. Many fear that without German complaisance, the E.U. will stutter to a stop. But such self-denial could never offer a viable foundation for a new Europe. Neither could the inefficiency and even corruption that characterizes many E.U. programs.

Most maddening for most thinking Europeans is the knowledge that the Germans are right. But to them, the question is whether Germany is remaking the E.U. in a fashion palatable to the majority of other member states. They are not so sure that its focus on stability and accountability is the right way to help such a diverse collection of peoples adjust to a globalized world.

And so when Angela Merkel raps Greek knuckles, she is sending a message most Europeans don't want to hear. Not that Germany is dangerous; even worse, that it is unrelenting. The Neue Züricher Zeitung probably spoke for many others when it once accused Germany of wanting Europe to become a large Switzerland.

The growing gap between Germany's aspirations and the perceived needs of other members of the E.U. is beginning to burden both sides. Most Europeans are simply not ready to live up to German standards. Without a more flexible sense of common purpose, the project to build a democratic Europe could stop dead in the water. But as Germans will themselves often tell you: They have forgotten how to dream.

Younger Germans feel this lack of inspiration as well. Dreams were what 200,000 of them were waiting to hear when they rallied to hear Barack Obama in Berlin two summers ago. They wanted more than to "Dare to Hope," which is the characteristically timid German translation of the title of the president's best seller. And they are still waiting. America seems busy elsewhere.

The main conclusion I draw from the debate about Germany is that it is not about Germany at all. The task of building a democratic Europe is far from complete. Most of the foundations have been laid and now the residents are starting to haggle over the design. Weaving today's 27 states into a true trans-Atlantic partnership is a task that is too big for Germany or even Europe to accomplish alone. They desperately need some skilled architectural assistance.

Uniting Europe and North America is the most audacious project ever conceived. If it works, the United States will be joined by nearly 500 million Europeans to form a democratic space, within which modern democratic values will harness more energy than in any single nation on earth. Democracy's future as the operating system for a globalized world will be assured.

European fecklessness seems to worry Washington officials these days. But if Germany has forgotten how to dream and the United States is too busy to try, we will both be guilty of perpetuating the aimlessness we so criticize. To hold up its side of the bargain, Europe needs exactly what Barack Obama originally promised — the audacity of hope.

John Kornblum, senior counselor with the international law firm Noerr LLP in Berlin, served as the U.S. ambassador to Germany from 1997 to 2001.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 11:22 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: WP Gration item, in case you missed it

From: Vietor, Tommy [mailto B6
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 9:47 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; McDonough, Denis R.; Rhodes, Benjamin J.; Gavin, Michelle D.; Etim, Linda
Subject: WP Gration item, in case you missed it

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/04/22/AR2010042205756_2.html

Ambassador for life

Career Foreign Service ambassadors almost never serve much longer than their traditional three-year terms overseas. There have been a few exceptions, most famously former ambassador to Israel Sam Lewis, who was in Tel Aviv for eight years until 1985. But the rule generally applies.

This summer, however, Ambassador to Kenya Michael E. Ranneberger, a veteran Africa hand, apparently will begin his fifth year on the job in Nairobi, and there's no nominee in sight to replace him.

That sparked speculation that the administration might want to extend Ranneberger in order to hold the job open for Sudan special envoy J. Scott Gration, should Gration work out the Sudan mess. Gration, Loop Fans recall, grew up in Africa and became tight with President Obama when he escorted the then-senator as he toured his ancestral homeland -- or birthplace, as some folks say.

Gration, a retired Air Force general, early on had been looked at for a top administration job and perhaps as a replacement for Ranneberger. But we're told that's not happening anytime soon because the White House is not about to pull him off the full-time Sudan portfolio, despite some criticism that he's too soft on the war criminals. "The ball's not even rolling in that direction," one source said.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 1, 2010 2:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Prox talks

Arabs gave green light. More later.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 11:46 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Burns, William J
Subject: FW: Americans held in Iran

-----Original Message-----
From: Aaron Judzewitsch [mailto
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 11:25 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Americans held in Iran

B6

Ms. Mills,

I am pleading for the US to push harder to release the Americans held in Iran. We were able to get Americans out of North Korea. Please do what you can to get these young Americans out of Iran.

Thanks,

PS: Please pass on to Secretary Clinton
Sent from my Verizon Wireless BlackBerry

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 1:30 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Schumer on HRC, PJ & Israel

fyi

---

From: Schwerin, Daniel B
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 12:52 PM
To: Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J; Shapiro, Andrew J
Subject: Schumer on HRC, PJ & Israel

From Ben Smith today:

Schumer: Obama's 'counter-productive' Israel policy 'has to stop'

New York Senator Chuck Schumer harshly criticized the Obama Administration's attempts to exert pressure on Israel today, making him the highest-ranking Democrat to object to Obama's policies in such blunt terms.

Schumer, along with a majority of members of the House and Senate, signed on to letters politely suggesting the U.S. keep its disagreements with Israel private, a tacit objection to the administration's very public rebuke of the Jewish State over construction in Jerusalem last month.

But Schumer dramatically sharpened his tone on the politically conservative Jewish Nachum Segal Show today, calling the White House stance to date "counter-productive" and describing his own threat to "blast" the Administration had the State Department not backed down from its "terrible" tough talk toward Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Schumer, a hawkish ally of Israel since his days as a Brooklyn Congressman, described "a battle going on inside the administration" over Middle East policy.

"This has to stop," he said of the administration's policy of publicly pressuring Israel to end construction in Jerusalem.

"I told the President, I told Rahm Emanuel and others in the administration that I thought the policy they took to try to bring about negotiations is counter-productive, because when you give the Palestinians hope that the United States will do its negotiating for them, they are not going to sit down and talk," Schumer told Segal. "Palestinians don't really believe in a state of Israel. They, unlike a majority of Israelis, who have come to the conclusion that they can live with a two-state solution to be determined by the parties, the majority of Palestinians are still very reluctant, and they need to be pushed to get there.

"If the U.S. says certain things and takes certain stands the Palestinians say, 'Why should we negotiate?'" Schumer said.

Schumer described the recent confrontation over construction in Jerusalem as a "kerfuffle."

"Israel apologized and when Biden left, and Biden is the best friend of Israel in the administration [and] everything was fine," Schumer said. "But then what happened is the next day Hillary Clinton called up Netanyahu and talked very tough to him, and worse they made it public through this spokesperson, a guy named Crowley. And Crowley said something I have never heard before, which is, the relationship of Israel and the United States depends on the pace of the negotiations."

Schumer was referring to State Department spokesman PJ Crowley's description of Clinton's conversation with Netanyahu, in which he said that Clinton "made clear that the Israeli government needed to demonstrate not just through words but through specific actions that they are committed to this relationship and to the peace process."

"That is terrible," Schumer said today. "That is the dagger because the relationship is much deeper than the disagreements on negotiations, and most Americans—Democrat, Republican, Jew, non-Jew--would feel that. So I called up Rahm Emanuel and I called up the White House and I said, 'If you don't retract that statement you are going to hear me publicly blast you on this,'" Schumer said.

Schumer said the White House had backed off that statement, but that now "many of us are pushing back, some of the Jewish members will be meeting with the President next week or the week after, and we are saying that this has to stop."

"You have to show Israel that it's not going to be forced to do things it doesn't want to do and can't do. At the same time you have to show the Palestinians that they are not going to get their way by just sitting back and not giving in, and not recognizing that there is a state of Israel," Schumer said. "And right now there is a battle going on inside the administration, one side agrees with us, one side doesn't, and we're pushing hard to make sure the right side wins and if not we'll have to take it to the next step."

The full transcript of Segal's interview with Schumer is after the jump.

Chuck Schumer Interview with Nachum Segal 4/22/10

Nachum Segal: Straight to what has become one of the most concerning issues in the Jewish Community certainly, and for anybody in the United States, and anywhere in the world who cares somewhat, or more, about Israel. There is a perception that the White House and Jerusalem are not enjoying the same type of relationship that the White House and Jerusalem have enjoyed in the past. Need we be concerned?

SCHUMER: Well of course we should be concerned, and the thing we should most be concerned about, of course, the threat to Israel...I mean it always changes but it's always there it seems to be the fate if Israel and it seems to be the fate of the Jewish people. Right now what are the threats? I would rank them in this order: Greatest threat- Nuclear Iran, obviously as Netanyahu has said that's an existential threat. Second greatest threat- SCUDs in Syria these are rockets that can go four or five hundred miles and carry a bigger payload and could be launched by Hezbollah and hit any part of Israel far more damaging and devastating than the katyusha rockets. And third actually is what everyone is focused on, which is the disagreements between the United States and Israel, very real, on how to sit down and negotiate with the Palestinians. The irony is Nachum, on the first two, if you talk to the Prime Minister if you talk to the Israeli military, US-Israeli cooperation continues strong and hand in glove. Both the US and Israel greatly fear a nuclear Iran, and there are very serious discussions going on as to how to deal with it. We in the Congress Senator Lieberman and myself, Senator Bayh, are working up our sanctions bill, which even if the UN sanctions are weak we could have unilateral sanctions by the United States, for instance, if you cut of gasoline. Iranians do not produce their own gasoline, and by the way the Iranian people are ready to rebel and overthrow this regime, and if we would squeeze them economically that could happen.

SEGAL: If in fact all this is true, and let's assume there is no reason not to believe that it's true, that in fact Israel and the United States continue the same cooperation level they have had in the past, and we know that when it comes to serious matters, especially military matters, it's been great cooperation, Why wouldn't the President of the U.S. want that perception to be out there? Why would he want to alienate so many who care about Israel.

SCHUMER: Nachum this is the question I talked to Rahm Emanuel about, and the President about this week. I told the President, I told Rahm Emanuel and others in the administration that I thought the policy they took to try to bring about negotiations is counter-productive, because when you give the Palestinians hope that the United States will do its negotiating for them, they are not going to sit down and talk. Palestinians don't really believe in a state of Israel, they, unlike a majority of Israelis, who have come to the conclusion that they can live with a 2-state solution to be determined by the parties, the majority of Palestinians are still very reluctant, and they need to be pushed to get there. If the U.S. says certain things and takes certain stands the Palestinians say, "Why should we negotiate?" So that's bad and that should change and we are working on changing it. But the other two are very good, according to both the Israeli government and the Israeli military and the U.S. government. But we should make that known, why don't they? I asked them to do just that, I said we should make it public because it will, at least, give people, who are supportive of Israel, Jew and non-Jew alike, a little bit of solace.

SEGAL: That I agree with. But then you see the Gates memo which has become its own sort of entity out there, and you wonder about what type of support the United States could give Israel if, god-forbid, they were attacked by Iran.

SCHUMER: I do think that this administration, like previous ones, realizes a nuclear Iran is devastating and is a very bad thing. By the way, not just for Israel but for the whole Middle-East and for world peace and I think they're working strenuously to avoid it. They are having more success in this area than the previous administration, they are trying to get some of the Europeans, and even the Russians and Chinese to impose sanctions, but we are moving in the Senate and the house to achieve any unilateral action that the U.S. can take. If we tell any major oil company that if they sell gasoline to Iran, directly or indirectly, they can't sell any oil product in the U.S., then they will stop selling gasoline to Iran and the Iranian economy will have real problems. This will, at the very minimum, divert the leadership from their nuclear strategy and could bring down the regime. This is important and good. Let's talk about the bad. Let's talk about, what I'm sure your listeners are most aggravated about, is what's happened in the last while in Israel. Let me say this: things were going pretty well, until a couple of months ago, for this reason—the Netanyahu administration, with money from the U.S., had gotten the PA on the west bank to have their own police force and have them come down on the terrorists , for their own self interest not to protect the Jewish people. It has worked, not only are there fewer killings of Jews on the Israeli side of the fence, but there are many fewer in the other side because there is a Palestinian police force and they have put those terrorists in line. As a result Israel has been able to take down 27 of the checkpoints and as a result of that there is some economic growth in the west bank. Its growing at 7-8%, Netanyahu brags that -- when he came here I spent a lot of time with him – That there are multiplex theatres in places like Ramallah and Janeen. At the same time that is happening, there is prosperity with the more moderate Palestinian Authority in the west bank, and Hamas in Gaza is being squeezed and people there are doing very badly. Not only because Israel has blocked off the border and not let anything into Gaza, and I support Israel in doing that, and it may be tough on the Palestinian people, but when they vote for Hamas they are going to have to suffer the consequences. But also because Egypt is preventing all the tunnels from going under the Gaza-Egyptian border, not so much because they want to help Israel but they don't want the terrorists infiltrating from Gaza into Egypt. So the Palestinians were beginning to see those who talked about living in coexistence with Israel, and not terrorism, and not wiping it out, such as the PA on the west bank would do better, and those who talked about destroying Israel, and shooting rockets into it were doing horrible.

SEGAL. I don't think the checkpoint and open highway point is one we are going to agree on Senator. But I want to move to another hot point which is Syria, it seems, and I'm not sure how many people would consider these confirmed reports or not and I'm sure you know more about this than I do, but Syria is making sure that Hezbollah, north of Israel is being armed with SCUD missiles at this point. And you know that Washington is making efforts to try and strengthen the diplomatic relationship with Syria. Do you think that's outrageous?

SCHUMER: I do, and think that's stopped. They are working very hard to put pressure on the Syrians both diplomatic and then maybe economic, to stop this and it's intolerable and that has to change. Let me just finish this dialogue about Israel for a minute. All we have to do is leave things alone, and you might get the Palestinians more willing to sit down and actually discuss peace because they would see the contrast. When Biden was in Israel and there was this kerfuffle over settlements which is in Israeli Jerusalem 5 minutes from downtown and should never have been an issue to begin with, but they probably shouldn't have made the announcement when Biden was there. But Israel apologized and when Biden left, and Biden is the best friend of Israel in the administration everything was fine. But then what happened is the next day Hillary Clinton called up Netanyahu and talked very tough to him, and worse they made it pubic through this spokesperson, a guy named Crowley.
And Crowley said something I have never heard before, which is, the relationship of Israel and the United States depends on the pace of the negotiations. That is terrible. That is the dagger because the relationship is much deeper than the disagreements on negotiations, and most Americans—Democrat, Republican, Jew, non-Jew--would feel that. So I called up Rahm Emanuel and I called up the White House and I said, "If you don't retract that statement you are going to hear me publicly blast you on this."
Of course they did retract it. Now what's happened, and many of us are pushing back, some of the Jewish members will be meeting with the President next week or the week after, and we are saying that this has to stop. You have to have, in terms of the negotiations, you have to show Israel that it's not going to be forced to do things it doesn't want to do and can't do. At the same time you have to show the Palestinians that they are not going to get their way by just sitting back and not giving in, and not recognizing that there is a state of Israel. And right now there is a battle going on inside the administration, one side agrees with us, one side doesn't, and we're pushing hard to make sure the right side wins and if not we'll have to take it to the next step.

SEGAL: You know Senator Schumer, the perception among New York state residents, and I'm one of them as you know, is there likely is no one closer in the Senate to the President than you.

SCHUMER: That's not quite true, but I have an ear and frankly I spent time on the phone just yesterday talking to him about this, and telling him that I didn't quite understand the United States policy, because even if the goal is to bring about talks of peace, it was counter-productive because it's encouraging the Palestinians not to sit down.

SEGAL: More than ¾ of the Senate, including a lot of democrats, signed the letter to Sec. of State Clinton rebuking the administration for these confrontational stances toward Israel. Were you surprised that names like Kerry, Dodd, Durbin, Leahy and Reid were not included in that letter?

SCHUMER: well I think Senator Reid signed the letter, some didn't sign but the majority of both parties signed. And we'll have other letters and other meetings to keep pushing that. I think you can say there are a handful of people who are not sympathetic to Israel in the Senate of each party, but 90% of the Senate is overwhelmingly in support of Israel. And one of my jobs, as you know is to rally those forces to do strong poll work for this year (couldn't hear this part perfectly). Believe me I think the policy has to change, and I'm working hard to make it change and I think it will. Every administration at the beginning has this view even Ronald Reagan, the best friend Israel ever had, do you remember his first 2 years?
When George Schultz wanted to sell AWACs to Saudi Arabia? Every administration has this idea to talk tough to Israel and make nice to the Arabs and the Palestinians and that's the way to bring about peace. It's counter-productive, it's actually the opposite. The only way the Palestinians will sit down and talk is if they know Israel and the United States are as close as could be. And each administration learns it. Schultz had to learn it and Reagan had to learn it. Clinton did it in the early years and later became a very good friend of Israel. George Bush the first did it and never got over it, (SEGAL laughing muffles SCHUMER). We are at a crucial moment here and I am hopeful that administration will see the right way to go. I am working on it. I don't believe that have made any definitive decision, and as I have said on both Iran on Syria there is close cooperation, you can check with your Israeli contacts Nachum and they will confirm that. So we just have to get this third part right and I'm working hard to do it and I'm optimistic that that can happen.

SEGAL: Good to hear that. Finally Senator, just for our own curiosity, just like the most recent justice appointed to the Supreme Court, will the next one also be a New Yorker?

SCHUMER: I don't know. I would like it to be, I recommended the first one. I have 3 criteria for Supreme Court Justices: they should be legally excellent, they should be moderate as is typical of my politics I don't want too far right or far left, and diversity, which means different ethnic groups and everything else. Luckily in terms of Jewish people we have good representation in terms of the Supreme Court. That will continue. One thing I want to assure your listeners
Nachum, my name as you know comes from a Hebrew word. It comes from the word shomer, which mean guardian. My ancestors were guardians of the ghetto wall in Chortkov and I believe Hashem, actually, gave me name as one of my roles that is very important in the United States Senate to be a shomer to be A. a shomer for Israel and I will continue to be that with every bone in my body for of the other is against me.

SEGAL: can I ask you one other favor Senator? To be a shomer against the value-add tax?

SCHUMER: I am against it. I'm not sure it's needed but I will be a shomer against it.

SEGAL: always a pleasure Senator, thanks so much for joining us.

SCHUMER: Nachum, nice to see you and I hope you readership continues to go in peace and prosperity.

Posted by Ben Smith 08:24 PM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 5:13 PM
To: H
Subject: Hikers

Can we put out the below?

Draft S Statement on the Hikers

I was pleased to learn of the consular visit yesterday by the Swiss Ambassador in Iran to the three detained American hikers, Shane Bauer, Josh Fattal, and Sarah Shourd. But we are disturbed by the families' reports of their children's physical and emotional health. These three Americans -- innocent tourists in Iraq's Kurdistan region when they were detained on July 31, 2009 -- have been unjustly held for almost nine months without formal charges or access to legal representation. We ask the Islamic Republic of Iran to release these three Americans and allow them to go home and be reunited with their families.

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 23, 2010 8:49 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Hikers

We did. I sent this to you at Goose Bay.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Apr 23 20:45:43 2010
Subject: Re: Hikers

I thought we did already.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Apr 23 17:12:47 2010
Subject: Hikers

Can we put out the below?

Draft S Statement on the Hikers

I was pleased to learn of the consular visit yesterday by the Swiss Ambassador in Iran to the three detained American hikers, Shane Bauer, Josh Fattal, and Sarah Shourd. But we are disturbed by the families' reports of their children's physical and emotional health. These three Americans -- innocent tourists in Iraq's Kurdistan region when they were detained on July 31, 2009 -- have been unjustly held for almost nine months without formal charges or access to legal representation. We ask the Islamic Republic of Iran to release these three Americans and allow them to go home and be reunited with their families.

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 1, 2010 2:48 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Arab nations back indirect peace talks with Israel

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sat May 01 14:40:15 2010
Subject: (AP) Arab nations back indirect peace talks with Israel

CAIRO (AP) - Arab nations have given the Palestinians the green light to enter indirect peace talks with Israel for a preliminary four-month period. The decision from Arab foreign ministers likely opens the way for the start of long-stalled US-brokered negotiations. Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas signaled this week that he would be willing to resume negotiations. Secretary Clinton said April 30 the talks would start next week.

---

Ezra Casteel
S/ES-O Operations Specialist
202.647.1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 9:53 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: Harry Reid

Sure thing. Will prepare a call sheet for you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Verma, Richard R
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Apr 24 09:31:14 2010
Subject: Harry Reid

Rich, Given his recent letter to me, I need to call him soon. Can you provide suggested points for Iran and Israel? Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 1, 2010 5:20 PM
To: H
Subject: WSJ article

Below is the article I mentioned:

U.S. Revises Tack on Mideast Arms
Washington, Egypt Discuss Plan to Rid Region of Nuclear Weapons, in Effort to Steal Iran's Thunder at U.N. Conference

By JONATHAN WEISMAN, JAY SOLOMON and JOE LAURIA

The U.S. is negotiating with Egypt a proposal to make the Middle East a region free of nuclear weapons, as the U.S. seeks to prevent Iran from derailing a monthlong U.N. conference on nuclear nonproliferation that begins Monday.

U.S. officials familiar with the move call it an important step in assuring countries that Washington—criticized by some for its silence about Israel's undeclared nuclear arsenal—will equitably address weapons proliferation across the region, as Iran seeks to shift focus away from its own nuclear program.

Washington also reassured Israel it won't foist a nuclear-free zone on the region until all parties agree to it and significant progress has been made on Mideast peace.

The U.N. conference on the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, which is held every five years, is expected to begin with a bang Monday with an address by Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, who has condemned the West for its refusal to disarm and for tacitly accepting Israel's nuclear capability.

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton will follow the Iranian leader in the afternoon.

The U.N. talks come at a time when Iran is believed to be heading toward a nuclear capability and the U.S. and allies have been pressing for new, tough Security Council sanctions to curb Tehran's program.

"The Iranians are clearly intending to spoil the party," said a senior U.S. official involved in the nuclear diplomacy. The official highlighted the importance of raising Mideast nuclear-free zone issues.

The designation of the region as a zone free of weapons of mass destruction was a nonbinding agreement that emerged from a 1995 U.N. review of the Non-Proliferation Treaty, a 1970 pact to limit the spread of nuclear weapons. That 1995 agreement was pivotal because it won the indefinite extension of the treaty, but no action on the zone has been taken since.

Senior Obama administration officials said Friday the White House is willing to significantly advance a Mideast nuclear weapons-free zone, and would support a conference on the subject at a future date. U.S. officials said talks with Egypt would resume in New York in the coming month. Such a zone is envisaged to include Israel, the Arab states, Iran and Turkey.

"We've made a proposal to them [Egypt] that goes beyond what the U.S. has been willing to do before," said the senior U.S. official involved in the nuclear diplomacy.

U.S. officials stressed, however, that they didn't believe that would happen without first achieving major advances in Arab-Israeli peace talks.

"We are concerned that the conditions are not right unless all members of the region participate, which would be unlikely unless there is a comprehensive peace plan which is accepted," said Ellen Tauscher, undersecretary of state for arms control and international security. She said the U.S. has also discussed the zone with the Arab League and other members of the Nonaligned Movement.

The diplomacy could raise new tensions between President Barack Obama and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu if Washington is seen backing away from its commitment to Israel. Israel has voiced concerns that the U.N. conference could turn into an international forum to corner Israel. Mr. Netanyahu backed out of a nuclear-security conference in Washington in March due to such concerns.

An Israeli official said Friday that his government supports a Middle East freeze of WMD and nuclear weapons, but that "it should be the culmination of a process that begins with bilateral and individual peace agreements between all the countries in the region."

The U.S. and Israel have been locked in a monthslong spat over Mr. Obama's calls for a complete freeze in building new Jewish housing in the West Bank and East Jerusalem. U.S. officials have grown increasingly confident in recent days that ties between the U.S. and Israel have stabilized. Mrs. Clinton said Friday that the Mideast peace process will get on track next week, though not the U.S.-brokered direct talks involving Israeli and Palestinians that the Obama administration wants to see.

Egypt's latest proposal calls for Israel's disarmament "as soon as possible." It also called for Israel's nuclear program to be placed under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the U.N.'s atomic watchdog. That proposal won't be accepted, U.S. officials said.

The Egyptian working paper demands NPT signatory states release "all information available to them on the nature and scope of Israeli nuclear facilities and activities, including information pertaining to previous nuclear transfers to Israel." U.S. officials indicated no such demands could be made on Israel.

Arms-control analysts familiar with the talks say the U.S. is likely to propose creating a U.N. envoy given the task of calling a conference of Middle East nations to press forward on the nuclear weapon-free zone.

"They are desperate to buy off Egyptian objections," said Henry Sokolski, executive director of the Non-Proliferation Education Center and a critic of the Obama administration's arms-control approach.

Daryl Kimball, executive director of the Arms Control Association, an advocacy group, said the U.S. acceptance of a special envoy is a significant shift. A U.S. official refused to say whether the envoy proposal, first floated by Russia, was part of the U.S. offer.

The last NPT conference in 2005 ended in collapse. But U.S. officials said they have been laying the groundwork for this conference for nearly a year.

The White House wants rules to ensure that a country that withdraws from the treaty doesn't escape inspections and sanctions. They also want more power for U.N. inspectors and more backing for multinational facilities that could help nations develop peaceful nuclear power.

Write to Jonathan Weisman at jonathan.weisman@wsj.com, Jay Solomon at jay.solomon@wsj.com and Joe Lauria at newseditor@wsj.com

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 1:12 PM
To: H; Oscar Flores
Subject: Bosnia

This call will be after indonesia. Oscar can u print for her?
Points for President Silajdzic call:

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 5:17 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: names and names

Remind me to discuss this traffic w/ you.

Cdm

From: Macmanus, Joseph E
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Mar 23 18:11:29 2010
Subject: Re: names and names

[redacted] B6

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Macmanus, Joseph E
Sent: Tue Mar 23 17:17:42 2010
Subject: RE: names and names

Who did you propose?

---

From: Macmanus, Joseph E
Sent: Tuesday, March 23, 2010 11:25 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: names and names

Cheryl:

[redacted] I will keep trying. I appreciate your confidence in me in this job, and will gladly remain in it. My conviction is that [redacted] should go to ECA with a PDAS in place, and believe that even an Acting PDAS is necessary now to help prepare for her first days and weeks. I have some names to offer. Above all else, my first responsibility is to the Secretary and you and this office. I have one of the best jobs in town, and about everything I am always optimistic.
Joe

B5
B6

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 1:16 PM
To: H; Oscar Flores
Subject: Bosnia

Formal eur points on bosnia:
Proposed Points Follow:

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 3:19 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Harry Reid

We prepared a call sheet that is in clearance now. Will send to you ASAP.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 9:31 AM
To: Verma, Richard R
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Harry Reid

Rich, Given his recent letter to me, I need to call him soon. Can you provide suggested points for Iran and Israel? Thx.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 1, 2010 6:00 PM
To: H
Subject: START

We've got a plan [redacted] B5
[redacted] Ellen will pass on details early next week.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 4:28 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: VMI

We can def ask.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Apr 24 16:18:30 2010
Subject: VMI

What about asking VMI to move to another day--is that out of the question?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Blake, Robert O <BlakeR2@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 4:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Important new memo on Kyrg. Sid

I will be out of the office on official travel through Tuesday May 4. Please send any urgent action items to the SCA Staff Assistants or SCA PDAS Pat Moon. Thanks, Bob

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 4:36 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: VMI

I don't think it is, honestly -- but we should probably offer a date option to them when/if we call them to postpone.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Sat Apr 24 16:18:30 2010
Subject: VMI

What about asking VMI to move to another day--is that out of the question?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 4:36 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: h: just a line. S

The UK election, I think, reflects lingering fixation on Tony. They just can't get over him. The British public feels like the wife he abandoned for George W. Bush, wants vengeance, yet still pines for him. Clegg is a Tony stand-in love object, Cameron a pretender. Alas, poor Gordon, Heathcliffe, unloved, unlovable, suffering.

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Sat, Apr 24, 2010 4:20 pm
Subject: Re: h: just a line. S

Good advice.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted] B6

To: H

Sent: Fri Apr 23 10:05:50 2010

Subject: h: just a line. S

Next time you feel like stepping all over your story by saying you are tired, use the line of the black woman in the Montgomery bus boycott who walked to work: "My feet is tired, but my soul is rested."

On UK: Clegg held his own in the second debate last night. Gordon hit him as "anti-American." This feels like it's moving to a hung parliament. Cameron can't break through. Two-thirds of the voters simply hate the Tories. No matter how well Clegg does the system doesn't allow for any gain in seats to match his personal poll numbers. UK stunned by its first series of debates and the whole campaign has atrophied in wonderment, little happening between the debates. Final one next week, but guaranteed not to be conclusive, just a repetition, confirming the earlier two.

Sid

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 1, 2010 6:30 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: START

Agreed. That's being worked too.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, May 01, 2010 6:23 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: START

We also need to brief Rice.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat May 01 18:00:12 2010
Subject: START

We've got a plan [redacted] B5
[redacted] Ellen will pass on details early next week.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 4:37 PM
To: H
Cc: Lew, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: NSS/PSD Strategy Going Forward
Attachments: PSD Strategy Going Forward4.22.10.docx

I hope that you can read this (3 pages) before your meeting with Secretary Gates on pooled funding on Monday. I have spent a lot of time thinking about these issues in the context of the QDDR, but I think if we're going to push the position I suggest, it has to be now. If you agree, there are a number of ways we can make this quite attractive to other agencies as well as DoD. AM

---

From: Anne-Marie Slaughter [redacted] B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Sat Apr 24 16:33:30 2010
Subject: NSS/PSD Strategy Going Forward

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 7:12 AM
To: H
Subject: Am up if you are

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

SUMMARY OF QUALIFICATIONS

EXPERIENCE

B6

EXPERIENCE (CONT'D)

PUBLIC INTEREST

MILITARY

EDUCATION

B6

MEMBERSHIPS/PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATIONS

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D), B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 5:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Can you be available for call from PDT Preval this p.m.?

For you eyes only

B1
1.4(D)

----- Original Message -----
From:
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Mills Cheryl
Sent: Sat Apr 24 16:00:09 2010
Subject: Can you be available for call from PDT Preval this p.m.?

B6

CDM:
At behest of PDT, I tried to call you just minutes ago to ask about your availability for phone call from him this afternoon.
- First choice: 5:00 p.m. (your time)
- Alternative: 7:00 p.m.
- If neither works for you, then propose time and we'll accomodate.
Two options to suggest:
1. With our individual cell phones, it is difficult to involve third person - to wit, me. Could you arrange for a confe[illegible]ce type number and code to which PD and I could call separately?
2. Or as alternative, do you have capacity to call us separately to turn it into a conference call?
Either option would not only make for a smoother conversation, but would also allow me to not have to be in same location as PDT.

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

so best that call be today.
Regards.

Sent from my BlackBerry® device from Digicel

B1
1.4(D)

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/23/2035

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 6:40 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: FYI Kornblum... Sid

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Sat Apr 24 18:26:17 2010
Subject: Fw: FYI Kornblum... Sid

Pls print and have delivered to my house.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Apr 23 10:10:42 2010
Subject: FYI Kornblum... Sid

In light of Clegg's rising popularity partly based on his anti-Americanism and Germany's growing hegemony in Europe while becoming more insular, John Kornblum has written this op-ed with reference in last graphs to US policy.

The New York Times <http://www.nytimes.com/> <http://graphics8.nytimes.com/ads/spacer.gif> Printer Friendly Format Sponsored By <http://www.nytimes.com/adx/bin/adx_click.html?type=goto&opzn&page=www.nytimes.com/printer-friendly&pos=Position1&sn2=336c557e/4f3dd5d2&sn1=1c82efea/a8348c0e&camp=foxsearch2010_emailtools_1225557e_nyt5&ad=Cyrus_120x60_e_01.25&goto=http://www.foxsearchlight.com/cyrus>

---

April 23, 2010
I.H.T. Op-Ed Contributor

Germany in Need of a Dream

By JOHN KORNBLUM
Has Germany abandoned Europe? Do Angela Merkel's tough conditions for aid to Greece mean that Germany is no longer the motor of European integration? Has Frau Merkel in fact morphed from the Miss Europa of 2007 to the Fräulein Germania of 2010, as Germany's own former foreign minister Joschka Fischer has suggested?
As a former American ambassador who has lived and worked the better part of four decades around Germany, my Blackberry often glows red hot with messages from persons asking these questions. My response is always the same: Germany has changed very little, but Europe and the world have changed a lot. Therein lies the dilemma.

Germany has worked hard to dig its way out of the disaster of 1945, but trauma remains a defining issue for German society. Sixty five years later, Germany is still focused on the three essentials of its recovery: stability, respectability and peace. Keep this triangle in mind and lots of things quickly come into focus.

From the first days of the Federal Republic, Germany's leaders emphasized the importance of defining interests solely within a common European and Atlantic vocation. But they also understood that renouncing national ambitions did not remove the responsibility to pursue specific German goals through the common institutions.

Many important postwar accomplishments were conceived and pushed by Germany, sometimes over the opposition of others — including the United States. Ostpolitik was controversial for years, as was NATO enlargement. Germany pushed them with determination.

Helmut Kohl did not consult before promulgating his 10 points on reunification. He agreed to French desires for a common currency, but only if it could be a mirror of the Deutsche mark, for decades the European monetary standard. The euro stability pact, now the object of so much controversy with Greece, was the result. After 1990, the E.U.'s eastward expansion was Germany's way of firming up its Eastern flank.

Slowly and without fanfare, Germany has been remaking the European Union in its image. At each step of the way, Germany made its wishes more palatable by paying more than its share. Part of today's misunderstanding is caused by Germany's success in using its contributions to build an image of selflessness. Germany has been as single-minded in pursuit of its goals as Charles de Gaulle ever was for his, but it almost always left leadership to others.

A new consciousness grew after the costs of reunification began to mount. "Europe" in the institutional sense has become increasingly unpopular. German courts have begun to define German European issues in the context of the German Constitution rather than on the basis of E.U. law. At least some of Ms. Merkel's refusal to allow immediate assistance to Greece was based on her fears that it would fan anti-E.U. sentiment at home. Are these the first signs of a German Tea Party?

Here we find the source of most of the hand wringing about Germany's role as the "motor of Europe." Ms. Merkel's unwillingness to sweeten the financial pot echoed throughout Brussels. To many, it signified the decline of German willingness to "salute the French flag three times before raising the German flag," as Konrad Adenauer used to put it. Germans are not alone in objecting to throwing more money into the E.U. pot, but they happen to be the only ones who can do something about it. Many fear that without German complaisance, the E.U. will stutter to a stop. But such self-denial could never offer a viable foundation for a new Europe. Neither could the inefficiency and even corruption that characterizes many E.U. programs.

Most maddening for most thinking Europeans is the knowledge that the Germans are right. But to them, the question is whether Germany is remaking the E.U. in a fashion palatable to the majority of other member states. They are not so sure that its focus on stability and accountability is the right way to help such a diverse collection of peoples adjust to a globalized world.

And so when Angela Merkel raps Greek knuckles, she is sending a message most Europeans don't want to hear. Not that Germany is dangerous; even worse, that it is unrelenting. The Neue Züricher Zeitung probably spoke for many others when it once accused Germany of wanting Europe to become a large Switzerland.

The growing gap between Germany's aspirations and the perceived needs of other members of the E.U. is beginning to burden both sides. Most Europeans are simply not ready to live up to German standards. Without a more flexible sense of common purpose, the project to build a democratic Europe could stop dead in the water. But as Germans will themselves often tell you: They have forgotten how to dream.

Younger Germans feel this lack of inspiration as well. Dreams were what 200,000 of them were waiting to hear when they rallied to hear Barack Obama in Berlin two summers ago. They wanted more than to "Dare to Hope," which is the characteristically timid German translation of the title of the president's best seller. And they are still waiting. America seems busy elsewhere.

The main conclusion I draw from the debate about Germany is that it is not about Germany at all. The task of building a democratic Europe is far from complete. Most of the foundations have been laid and now the residents are starting to haggle over the design. Weaving today's 27 states into a true trans-Atlantic partnership is a task that is too big for Germany or even Europe to accomplish alone. They desperately need some skilled architectural assistance.

Uniting Europe and North America is the most audacious project ever conceived. If it works, the United States will be joined by nearly 500 million Europeans to form a democratic space, within which modern democratic values will harness more energy than in any single nation on earth. Democracy's future as the operating system for a globalized world will be assured.

European fecklessness seems to worry Washington officials these days. But if Germany has forgotten how to dream and the United States is too busy to try, we will both be guilty of perpetuating the aimlessness we so criticize. To hold up its side of the bargain, Europe needs exactly what Barack Obama originally promised — the audacity of hope.

John Kornblum, senior counselor with the international law firm Noerr LLP in Berlin, served as the U.S. ambassador to Germany from 1997 to 2001.

<http://up.nytimes.com/?d=0/9/&t=&s=1&ui=1384214&r=http%3a%2f%2fwww%2enytimes%2ecom%2f2010%2f04%2f23%2fopinion%2f23iht%2dedkornblum%2ehtml%3femc%3deta1&u=www%2enytimes%2ecom%2f2010%2f04%2f23%2fopinion%2f23iht%2dedkornblum%2ehtml%3femc%3deta1%26pagewanted%3dprint>

DCSIMG

<http://wt.o.nytimes.com/dcsym57yw10000s1s8g0boozt_9t1x/njs.gif?dcsuri=/nojavascript&WT.js=No&WT.tv=1.0.7>

<http://www.nytimes.com/adx/bin/clientside/2c7bce84Q2FRbLQ51TT4Q23TLwQ51Q51Q5BQ25TQ2ATQ22Q22Q2AbQ23Q22Q51>

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

GOVERNMENT EXPERIENCE

B6

CORPORATE EXPERIENCE

B6

ACADEMIC EXPERIENCE

POLITICAL EXPERIENCE

B6

EDUCATION

B6

HONORS AND MEMBERSHIPS

B6

PUBLICATIONS

B6

PERSONAL

B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

SUMMARY OF EXPERIENCE:

EMPLOYMENT:

B6

EMPLOYMENT (continued):

B6

EDUCATION:

B6

OTHER EDUCATIONAL TRAINING:

B6

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B1 1.4(B) 1.4(D), B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 7:22 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Amano [redacted] B1 1.4(D)

Fyi

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/23/2035

---

From: Mull, Stephen D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Ashraf, Madeeha S; Waser, Tamir G; Burns, William J; Waller, Robert P; Wells, Alice G
Sent: Sat Apr 24 17:50:47 2010
Subject: FW: Amano [redacted] B1 1.4(D)

FYI, excellent readout from Ambassador Davies' meeting with IAEA DG Amano [redacted]

---

From: Davies, Glyn T
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 1:24 PM
To: Mull, Stephen D; Einhorn, Robert J; Timbie, James P; Cook, Nerissa J; [redacted] Scheland, Mark DL; Burk, Susan F B6
Cc: 'Poneman, Daniel'; Pyatt, Geoffrey R; Hall, Andrea G; [redacted] Hoh, Christopher J; Pappas, Demitra M; Yu, Alan K; Nephew, Richard M
Subject: Amano [redacted] B1 1.4(B) 1.4(D)

Good chat with the DG, just a half-hour after he landed from his Tokyo flight.

[redacted]

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

- G

RELEASE IN PART
B1 1.4(B)1.4(D),B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 7:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Amano [redacted] B1 1.4(D)

Yep -- they've been distributed.

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/23/2035

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Apr 24 19:30:18 2010
Subject: Re: Amano [redacted]

I assume Steve et al got the readouts [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Apr 24 19:21:32 2010
Subject: Fw: Amano [redacted]

Fyi

---

From: Mull, Stephen D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Ashraf, Madeeha S; Waser, Tamir G; Burns, William J; Waller, Robert P; Wells, Alice G
Sent: Sat Apr 24 17:50:47 2010
Subject: FW: Amano [redacted]

FYI, excellent readout from Ambassador Davies' meeting with IAEA DG Amano [redacted]

From: Davies, Glyn T
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 1:24 PM
To: Mull, Stephen D; Einhorn, Robert J; Timbie, James P; Cook, Nerissa J; [redacted] Scheland, Mark DL; Burk, Susan F B6
Cc: 'Poneman, Daniel'; Pyatt, Geoffrey R; Hall, Andrea G; [redacted] Hoh, Christopher J; Pappas, Demitra M; Yu, Alan K; Nephew, Richard M
Subject: Amano [redacted] 1.4(D) B1

Good chat with the DG, just a half-hour after he landed from his Tokyo flight.

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

G

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 8:07 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Reid Call Sheet 4-24-10
Attachments: Reid Call Sheet 4-24-10.docx

The Secretary's Call Sheet for Majority Leader Harry Reid

Saturday, April 24, 2010

BACKGROUND: Yesterday (Friday, April 23, 2010), Majority Leader Reid sent you a letter in which he asked you to work with Congress to "quickly complete action on the Iran sanctions legislation." Additionally, he encouraged you "to support direct [peace] negotiations between the Israelis and Palestinians."

Iran Sanctions

B5

B5

Israeli-Palestinian Peace Negotiations

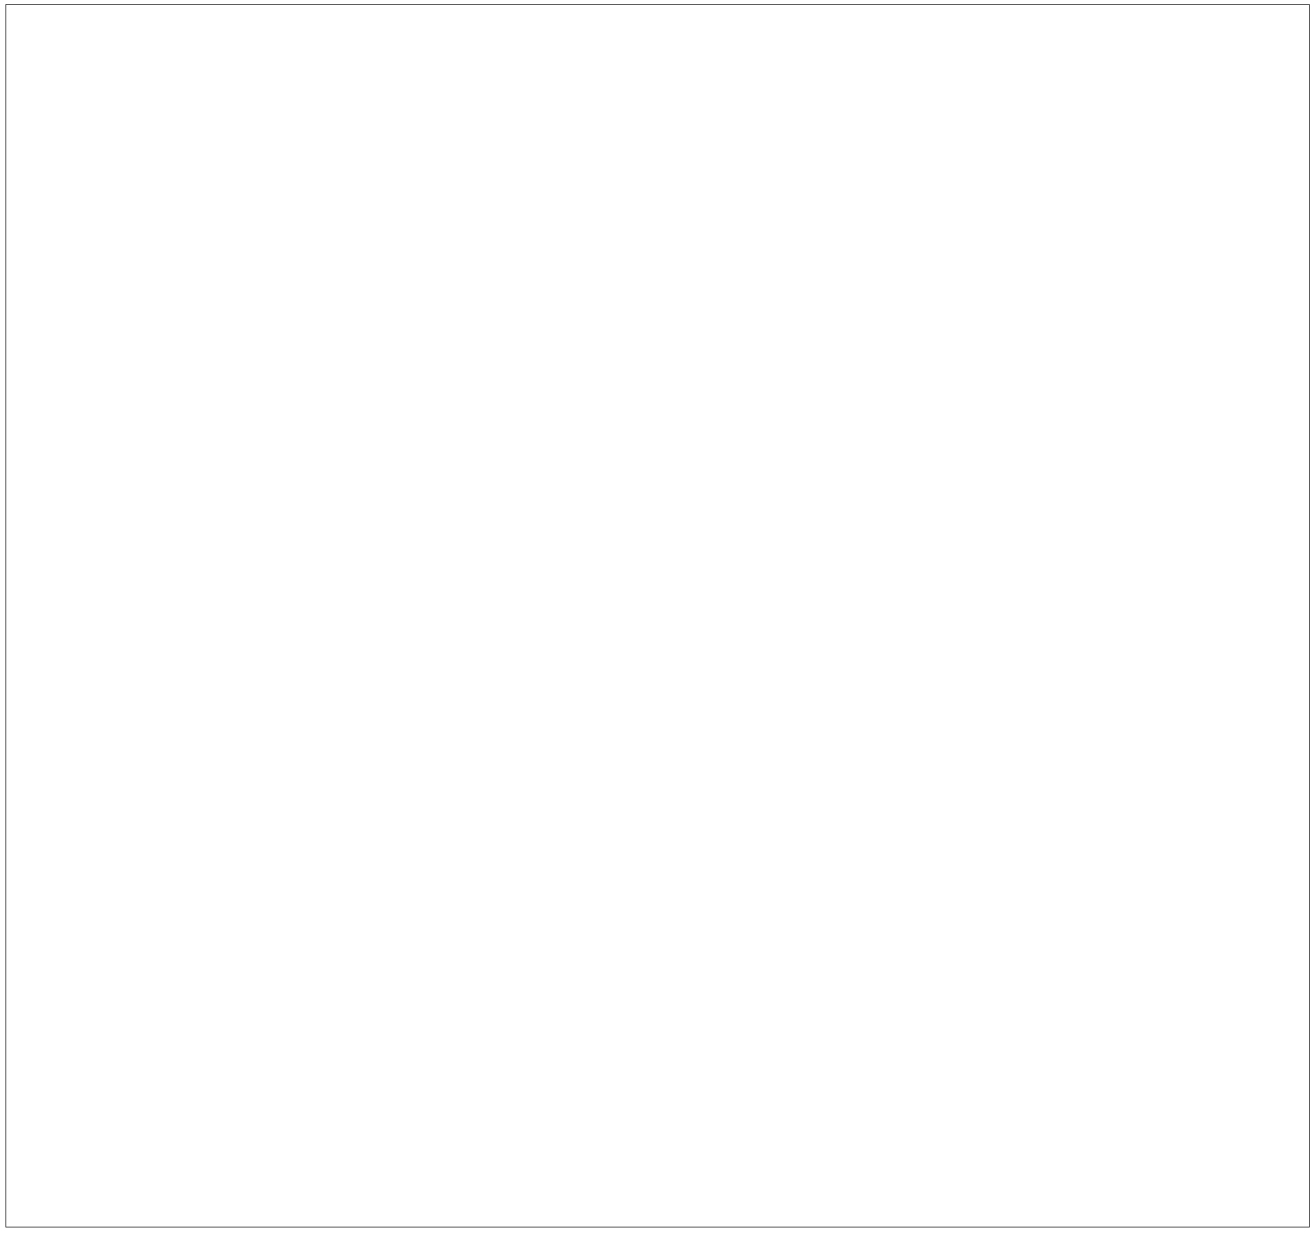
B5

B5

Call Notes:

<<Reid Call Sheet 4-24-10.docx>>

RELEASE IN PART
B5



UNCLASSIFIED

The Secretary's Call Sheet for Majority Leader Harry Reid
Saturday, April 24, 2010

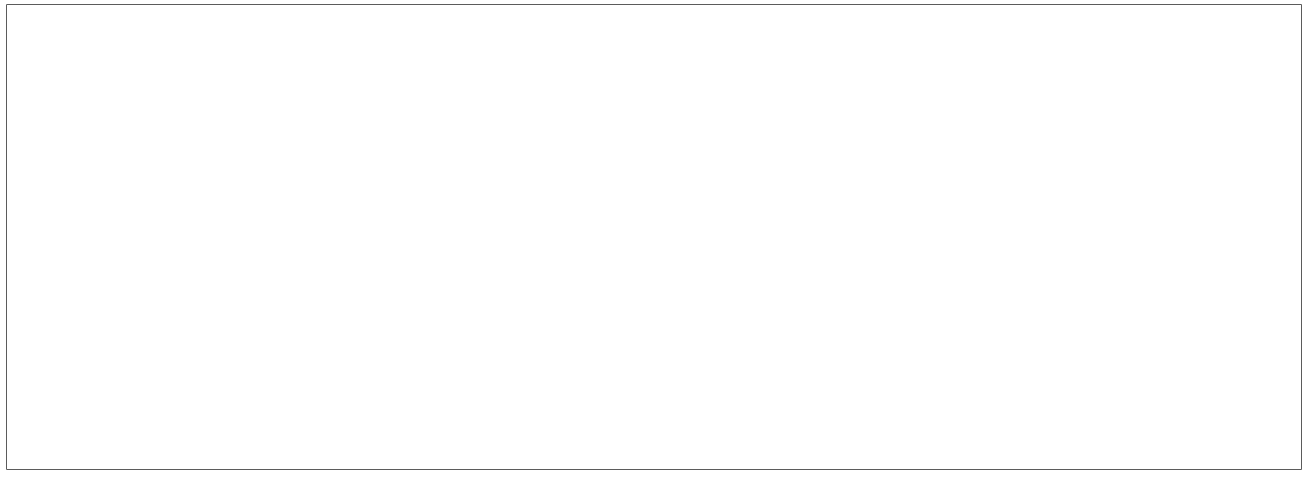
BACKGROUND: Yesterday (Friday, April 23, 2010), Majority Leader Reid sent you a letter in which he asked you to work with Congress to "quickly complete action on the Iran sanctions legislation." Additionally, he encouraged you "to support direct [peace] negotiations between the Israelis and Palestinians."

Iran Sanctions

B5



UNCLASSIFIED

B5

Israeli-Palestinian Peace Negotiations

B5

UNCLASSIFIED

B5

Call Notes:

UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 7:28 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Am up if you are Going running at 8am

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun May 02 07:11:54 2010
Subject: Am up if you are

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 6:38 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 3/24/10 Wednesday

NOTE: NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC WILL BE TAPING B-ROLL FOOTAGE

THROUGHOUT THE DAY.

7:50 am DEPART Private Residence *En route State Department

8:00 am ARRIVE State Department

8:00 am OPENING SESSION OF US-PAKISTAN STRATEGIC DIALOGUE

9:15 am Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor *Open press for first 30 minutes

9:15 am OFFICE TIME

9:35 am Secretary's Office

9:40 am MCC BOARD PREP

9:55 am Secretary's Office

10:00 am CHAIR MILLENNIUM CHALLENGE CORPORATION

12:00 pm (MCC) BOARD MEETING Principals Conference Room 7516

12:00 pm OFFICE TIME

1:00 pm Secretary's Office

1:00 pm VIDEOS (2)

1:05 pm John Jay Room, 7th Floor

1:10 pm CONFERENCE CALL w/SENATORS SHAHEEN AND VOINOVICH

1:25 pm Secretary's Office

1:30 pm PRE-BRIEF MEETING

1:45 pm Secretary's Office

1:45 pm PREP CALL w/DEFENSE SECRETARY GATES

2:15 pm Secretary's Office

2:30 pm BILATERAL w/PAKISTANI F.M. MAKHDOOM SHAH MEHMOOD

3:00 pm QURESHI Secretary's Conference Room *Official photo in East Hall preceding.

3:00 pm PRESS PRE-BRIEF

3:05 pm Secretary's Office

3:05 pm JOINT PRESS CONFERENCE w/PAKISTANI FM QURESHI

3:25 pm Treaty Room, 7th Floor

3:45 pm HEARING PREP w/RICH VERMA AND TEAM

4:30 pm Secretary's Office

4:30 pm DROP-BY AT THE RECEPTION FOR THE US-PAKISTAN

4:45 pm STRATEGIC DIALOGUE Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor *Aprox. 270

ppl. expected.

4:55 pm DEPART State Department *En route Admiral Mullen's Residence

5:00 pm ARRIVE Mullen Residence

5:00 pm US-PAKISTAN SMALL GROUP DISCUSSION

7:00 pm Admiral Mullen's Residence, Quarters AA

7:00 pm US-PAKISTAN WORKING DINNER

9:00 pm Admiral Mullen's Residence, Quarters AA

9:05 pm (t) DEPART Mullen's Residence *En route Private Residence

9:15 pm (t) ARRIVE Private Residence

FYI:

7:30 am US-PAKISTAN STRATEGIC DIALOGUE BREAKFAST

8:00 am Thomas Jefferson Room, 8th Floor

12:30 pm US-PAKISTAN STRATEGIC DIALOGUE LUNCH

2:00 pm Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor

1:30 pm US-PAKISTAN STRATEGIC DIALOGUE MEETING

3:30 pm Henry Clay Room, 8th Floor

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 8:09 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Harry Reid

Just sent to you in a separate email.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 7:43 PM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re: Harry Reid

I still have not received the call sheet.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Apr 24 15:19:19 2010
Subject: RE: Harry Reid

We prepared a call sheet that is in clearance now. Will send to you ASAP.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 9:31 AM
To: Verma, Richard R
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Harry Reid

Rich, Given his recent letter to me, I need to call him soon. Can you provide suggested points for Iran and Israel? Thx.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 6:47 AM
To: H
Subject: Personnel

Yes

B5
B6

For discussion:

1. INL

[redacted]

cdm

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 6:37 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: INL Resumes

Let's discuss.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Mar 24 05:44:46 2010
Subject: Fw: INL Resumes

[redacted]

As fyi - INL does more policing/security/ law enf than mil.

Cdm

Cdm

---

From: Gelber, Ethan M
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Laszczych, Joanne; Toiv, Nora F; Carpenter, Margaret V.W.; Diminuco, Steven L
Sent: Tue Mar 23 16:43:45 2010
Subject: INL Resumes

Cheryl,

As requested, please find the resumes attached for the candidates interviewed thus far for INL – [redacted] B6

Thanks,

Ethan

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 10:04 AM
To: H; Jake Sullivan; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Newsweek

Really good stuff. Especially fantastic opening page

Getting very very good feedback

I can't even remember now what if anything in it bugged me yesterday. Nothing in it has anyone making a double take to flesh out so far.

Its overall frame of the partnership paints you in exactly the way I think people respect you most, and I think Hirsh might actually have come up with a theme that will stick.

Have only seen the cover photo online, I want to see the hardcopy since we all know it's the pictures that really matter. Text on the cover is great

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
To: Huma Abedin
Subject: Newsweek
Sent: Apr 25, 2010 9:55 AM

So what's the verdict on the article?

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 6:49 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: Personnel

Correct -

[redacted] B5 B6

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 6:49 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Personnel

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Mar 24 06:47:15 2010
Subject: Personnel

Yes

For discussion:

1. INL

[redacted]

cdm

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 6:37 AM

To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: INL Resumes

Let's discuss.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Mar 24 05:44:46 2010
Subject: Fw: INL Resumes

[redacted] B5 B6

As fyi - INL does more policing/security/ law enf than mil.

Cdm

Cdm

---

From: Gelber, Ethan M
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Laszczych, Joanne; Toiv, Nora F; Carpenter, Margaret V.W.; Diminuco, Steven L
Sent: Tue Mar 23 16:43:45 2010
Subject: INL Resumes

Cheryl,

As requested, please find the resumes attached for the candidates interviewed thus far for INL – [redacted] B6

[redacted]

Thanks,

Ethan

RELEASE IN PART
B1 1.4(B) 1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 10:44 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Note for the Secretary from Bill Burns: Nigeria and Cape Verde, April 24-25

Fyi

From: Burns, William J
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Rice, Susan E (USUN); Carson, Johnnie; Wolff, Alex D (USUN)
Cc: Wells, Alice G; Mull, Stephen D
Sent: Sun Apr 25 09:25:43 2010
Subject: Note for the Secretary from Bill Burns: Nigeria and Cape Verde, April 24-25

April 25
Cape Verde

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Madam Secretary,

Just a short note in this system; more details when I get back.

Back in DC late tonight.

Best regards,

Bill

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/24/2035

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 1:28 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Scheduling

My update from this list:
Sandy Levin will be this week, working on the other Hill appointments and will get Walter I. in as soon as possible.

Staff retreat -- I don't believe we could use Blair House on the 14th but Huma will remember better than me. The 28th is the Friday before Memorial Day weekend, not sure if people have plans that would interfere?

I will follow up on Vietnam symposium and I did call Reyes' office but never heard back so will try again tomorrow.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin [redacted]
Sent: Sun May 02 13:22:24 2010
Subject: Scheduling

Here are a few odds and ends:

Since I'm going to the Bahrain Manama Conf in December, I want to decide where else I might go. The. climate conf in Mexico will be held Nov 29-Dec 10. There is also a Dec 10 conf on trafficking in Luxor sponsored by Mrs. Mubarak that Melanne hopes I could attend.

Add to list of meetings the following--

Ron Kirk
Hilda Solis
Walter Isaacson--high priority
Sandy Levin
Loretta Sanchez
Max Baucus
Eliot Engel

Ben Cardin wants me to come give a speech about the 35th anniversary of the Helsinki Accords on the Hill so I thought If I'm going back to Helsinki for a speech about the Helinski Accords in July maybe I should do the Hill speech around that time.

Also, Cheryl wants a staff retreat/meeting so what about May 14 or 28?

Did you get info about the Vietnam symposium the State historian, Carland, invited me to open on 9/29?

I want to plan to go to the Arctic Council in Greenland next April.

Did you find out when Cong Reyes's conf on border security was in August?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <preines [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 10:25 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Newsweek

You're very welcome. We've got a pretty good process in place handling the projects, and as always, we have a great product to sell.

And as a non-Methodist list maker, this project now comes off mine, and Caroline will be crossing it off our white board tomorrow, a very satisfying ritual. Esquire's should hit soon and will hopefully be as positive. Then it's just 60 left, and I feel good about that too.

I would say that the one thing that's going to continue to be annoying is people pressing you on how long you'll serve. When Tavis got you to say you probably won't for 8 years, that was especially stupid newsmaking on his part. Hirsh tried it with four, and I think others will.

Might just be easiest to say, I've learned not to predict the future - including my own - but I intend to and hope to. We have a lot to do, so much that we've started, and I want to see it through.

Or just a simple I hope to

If you don't you don't nobody's going to call you on saying you 'intended to' a year earlier. Again, the 8 years was especially dumb speculation

But these questions are really code for are you happy, are you being treated well, do you have enough juice? And no point to let people interpret the answer to their nefarious use.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Re: Newsweek
Sent: Apr 25, 2010 10:18 AM

Thx for all your help especially since I know it's hard helping Methodists!

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR [redacted] B6
To: H; Jake Sullivan <sullivanjj@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Apr 25 10:03:32 2010
Subject: Re: Newsweek

Really good stuff. Especially fantastic opening page

Getting very very good feedback

I can't even remember now what if anything in it bugged me yesterday. Nothing in it has anyone making a double take to flesh out so far.

Its overall frame of the partnership paints you in exactly the way I think people respect you most, and I think Hirsh might actually have come up with a theme that will stick.

Have only seen the cover photo online, I want to see the hardcopy since we all know it's the pictures that really matter. Text on the cover is great

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
To: Huma Abedin
Subject: Newsweek
Sent: Apr 25, 2010 9:55 AM

So what's the verdict on the article?

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 10:36 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Newsweek

[redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 6:56 AM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Chollet, Derek H
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

I checked last friday and was told it went up to you -- am checking again now. AM

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Mar 24 06:53:05 2010
Subject: Pak-India-Bangl

Remember the comparison I asked for? Is that ready--I'd like it today.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 10:50 AM
To: preines( H; Huma Abedin B6
Subject: Re: Newsweek

I second Philippe's assessment. In a funny way, having the few negative quotes (which basically posit the standard critiques) works in our favor, because the rest of the piece undermines/marginalizes them very effectively.

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines B6
To: Evergreen <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Sullivan, Jacob J; Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Apr 25 10:03:32 2010
Subject: Re: Newsweek

Really good stuff. Especially fantastic opening page

Getting very very good feedback

I can't even remember now what if anything in it bugged me yesterday. Nothing in it has anyone making a double take to flesh out so far.

Its overall frame of the partnership paints you in exactly the way I think people respect you most, and I think Hirsh might actually have come up with a theme that will stick.

Have only seen the cover photo online, I want to see the hardcopy since we all know it's the pictures that really matter. Text on the cover is great

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
To: Huma Abedin
Subject: Newsweek
Sent: Apr 25, 2010 9:55 AM

So what's the verdict on the article?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 11:00 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Anything to report?

The word from Ramallah is quite positive. IF there are no announcements this week, we anticipate that the Arab League Follow-up Committee will give its blessing on May 1 and Sen Mitchell can return to the region to start talking substance. Given the Israelis' warning, this is a real If.

Karl/Frank will go in today to walk Karzai through the particulars of the visit - the only thorny part is that it has dropped from 4 to 3 days. But it has all the same elements, plus a dinner with Biden.

Did you see reports that Iran has dropped out of the running for the UNSC? Trying to confirm.

Andrew S. will be sending you a long memo that responds to DOD's pooling proposals - it conveys a desire to work together with DOD on this and offers some alternative ideas. He also canvassed the building on other topics and will send a list up for your book tonight. He and I agreed that the list should just be for reference and that your approach of having informal conversation on the big topics is the right one.

You saw CDM's email about the Sudan ad. Ben emailed yesterday to say he wants to talk Sudan comms strategy going forward. Hopefully I'll reach him today. I know CDM is talking to Denis.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Apr 25 10:26:24 2010
Subject: Anything to report?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 11, 2010 6:23 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: fyi

FYI

http://thecable.foreignpolicy.com/posts/2010/03/10/lugar_no_more_money_for_development_banks_until_reform
Lugar: No more money for development banks until reform
Posted By Josh Rogin Wednesday, March 10, 2010

In the wake of the global financial crisis, a slew of multinational development banks are asking for large amounts of new capital to both replenish and in some cases expand their resource pools, and much of the burden will fall on the United States.

This creates a unique opportunity for the Obama administration to press these organizations to implement long-awaited reforms, according to the Senate's top Republican on foreign relations, who has a big say in whether and how the Congress doles out the funds.

"As the world struggles to emerge from the worst economic crisis since World War II, it is an appropriate time to ask whether the [International Financial Institutions] are performing optimally and doing the jobs they should be doing," reads a newly released report by the staff of Sen. Richard Lugar, R-IN, "The crisis should not be used as an excuse to win increases that could not otherwise be justified. As the requests for capital are negotiated with the international donor community, there is a window of opportunity for significant reform."

The report, which is the culmination of six years of research, including half a dozen hearings when Lugar was committee chairman, outlines several dozen recommendations for what the Obama administration, Congress, and the banks can do to update their relevance.

"Does the world really need the IMF, World Bank, African Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and Inter-American Development Bank today? Can they be changed to better address our needs? How should we re-design them?" the report asks.

"Such questions are particularly timely because nearly all the IFIs have sought, or will soon seek, major new infusions of money from their donors, including the taxpayers of the United States."

The Asian Development Bank has already asked the Obama administration for new funds, and the administration has requested in its new budget $533 million in direct money and $12.8 billion in borrowing authority for the ADB.

A committee staffer told The Cable that Lugar wants to see progress on reform before he would support authorizing the money.

"We want to make sure that before the American taxpayer puts more money in there that things are fixed," the staffer said. "It's not possible for them to do everything, but they could certainly make progress."

The reforms the administration could press for in the short term include pressing the banks to focus more on development goals rather than the structure and size of loans and "work with the other donor countries to step back and slow down the process," the staffer said.

Congress is also concerned that the Obama administration might not be interested in pressing for these reforms, considering that Obama issued a signing statement in June indicating he did not feel bound to follow congressional direction on such international negotiations.

Negotiations between several banks and the Treasury Department are ongoing. The U.S. side is led by Scott Morris, deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury's Office of International Development Finance and Debt.

The issue will next surface at the end of March when the Inter-American Development Bank convenes its annual meeting in Cancun.

Michael H. Fuchs
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-1709

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mikulski, BAM (Mikulski) <BAM@Mikulski.senate.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 12:13 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Good luck on a good start!

Wow What a nice suprise. Thanks 4 words of support and enthusiasm----- alas my gain has given omaaley his nemisis. The erlichs r running 4 gov. Both husband/wife were looking @ senate. But. Dem. Md. Will be like NATO. An. Attack on one an attack on all----- am zipping around the. State and. Tweeting. Can u believe it. Along way from our perogi tours. NY. ---- your are the best.

---

Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mikulski, BAM (Mikulski)
Sent: Sun Apr 25 11:12:28 2010
Subject: Good luck on a good start!

Barb--

I loved your comments at your re-election kickoff and hope you've scared off all the would-be opponents.

How's our friend, Martin, doing? I know he has a rematch when he should be reelected by acclamation for steering the ship of state so well. Pls give him my best wishes.

And go get 'em! Your friend and booster, Hillary

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 1:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Expo Update

I have asked Jose to get you a more detailed report but I must tell you the opening of the USA Pavilion has been a great success so far - at least among the expo-goers. A few vignettes.

- while we don't want to brag to our Chinese hosts, our Pavilion has become the most popular. During the trial runs last week, the Chinese expo-goers rushed directly from the gates to the USAP (and even broke some of our turn-styles). Needless to say, the Chinese have improved security. On EACH of the first two days, 30,000 pple visited. Lines are long and pple are loving the show. We are also getting many foreign officials to visit.

- the 100 US college student ambassadors (who act as guides and speak Mandarin) are the biggest hits of the pavilion. Fair-goers stand in line to have their photo's taken w them. They explain the show and send a great message.

- the story line that we thght was simplistic is quite popular (the overture where Americans try to say hello in mandarin is met w howls of laughter and Act II called the Garden is doing well). During the thunderstorm scene a mist comes from the ceiling and some pple put up their umbrellas. Act I is a bit too commercial but the audience claps and take photo's when you and President come on the screen.

- we are selling tons of USA merchandise - the two most popular items - mini-basketballs with the USAP seal on it and the bison stuffed animals - who knew?

Anyway, thght u'd enjoy the quick report. I cannot imagine us not being here! We will keep you posted.

Smart power works!

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Apr 25 18:14:14 2010
Subject: Re: Followup

Thnx on GPF. A lot of ideas out there.

Kurt and Hormats were looking into it. Will bug them in the am.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Apr 25 17:07:54 2010
Subject: Followup

I heard you did a great job at the Global Philanthropy Forum. Thx.

Also, where are we w Corning? Can you consult w EAP and E to find out what we can do?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 3:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Iran

You'll get from Derek and me tonight a short agenda with framing questions for the Iran meeting tomorrow. Derek is on call to act as a sort of conductor and move the conversation along, if need be.

RELEASE IN PART B5, B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 5:08 PM
To: H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: VMI update ...

I had a very good chat with VMI [redacted] B5

[redacted]

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 2:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Call list

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Sun May 02 13:22:07 2010
Subject: Call list

Pls add:

Alan Bersin over at DHS.
John Kerry and note subjects--Asad, Karzai,

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 5:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Expo Update

In the process of doing that.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun May 02 17:16:13 2010
Subject: Re: Expo Update

Yeah!! Can we get some good statistics and anecdotes to share w our sponsors, the press and the administration to tell the story?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun May 02 13:55:52 2010
Subject: Re: Expo Update

I have asked Jose to get you a more detailed report but I must tell you the opening of the USA Pavilion has been a great success so far - at least among the expo-goers. A few vignettes.

- while we don't want to brag to our Chinese hosts, our Pavilion has become the most popular. During the trial runs last week, the Chinese expo-goers rushed directly from the gates to the USAP (and even broke some of our turn-styles). Needless to say, the Chinese have improved security. On EACH of the first two days, 30,000 pple visited. Lines are long and pple are loving the show. We are also getting many foreign officials to visit.

- the 100 US college student ambassadors (who act as guides and speak Mandarin) are the biggest hits of the pavilion. Fair-goers stand in line to have their photo's taken w them. They explain the show and send a great message.

- the story line that we thght was simplistic is quite popular (the overture where Americans try to say hello in mandarin is met w howls of laughter and Act II called the Garden is doing well). During the thunderstorm scene a mist comes from the ceiling and some pple put up their umbrellas. Act I is a bit too commercial but the audience claps and take photo's when you and President come on the screen.

- we are selling tons of USA merchandise - the two most popular items - mini-basketballs with the USAP seal on it and the bison stuffed animals - who knew?

Anyway, thght u'd enjoy the quick report. I cannot imagine us not being here! We will keep you posted.

Smart power works!

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Apr 25 18:14:14 2010

Subject: Re: Followup

Thnx on GPF. A lot of ideas out there.

Kurt and Hormats were looking into it. Will bug them in the am.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Apr 25 17:07:54 2010
Subject: Followup

I heard you did a great job at the Global Philanthropy Forum. Thx.

Also, where are we w Corning? Can you consult w EAP and E to find out what we can do?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 6:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Followup

Thnx on GPF. A lot of ideas out there.

Kurt and Hormats were looking into it. Will bug them in the am.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Apr 25 17:07:54 2010
Subject: Followup

I heard you did a great job at the Global Philanthropy Forum. Thx.

Also, where are we w Corning? Can you consult w EAP and E to find out what we can do?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Cheryl Mills [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 8:17 PM
To: H; millscd@state.gov
Subject: RE: Can you talk tonight?

yes – I can talk now – does now work for you?

---

From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 7:11 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'; 'cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Subject: Can you talk tonight?

RELEASE
IN PART B6

From: Rooney, Megan <RooneyM@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 7:44 AM
To: H; pverveer [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Speech

No -- I will add.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Rooney, Megan; 'pverveer [redacted] B6
Sent: Fri Mar 12 07:42:48 2010
Subject: Speech

Is there a reason I don't mention the need for the UN to have more women at higher levels?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: pverveer
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 7:58 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Speech

B6

Also is the gender entity in there -- the new women's agency Look at my UN remarks last week I have several parags on it

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'rooneym@state.gov'
To: 'pverveer
Sent: Mar 12, 2010 7:42 AM
Subject: Speech

B6

Is there a reason I don't mention the need for the UN to have more women at higher levels?

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, April 25, 2010 9:05 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Harry Reid

Did you get what you need? Is there anything else that might be helpful to you?

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, April 24, 2010 9:31 AM
To: Verma, Richard R
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Harry Reid

Rich, Given his recent letter to me, I need to call him soon. Can you provide suggested points for Iran and Israel? Thx.

RELEASE
IN PART B6

From: pverveer [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 8:00 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Speech

No, should be there
------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'rooneym@state.gov'
To: 'pverveer [redacted] B6
Sent: Mar 12, 2010 7:42 AM
Subject: Speech

Is there a reason I don't mention the need for the UN to have more women at higher levels?

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

RELEASE IN PART
B1,1.4(B),1.4(D), B5

From: Campbell, Kurt M <CampbellKM@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 6:33 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Futenma

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Thanks Madame Secretary in HK on the way to Tokyo. [redacted] B5

Will know more in Tokyo tomorrow and will report to you directly. [redacted] Best Kurt

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Campbell, Kurt M
Cc: Steinberg, James B
Sent: Sun Apr 25 16:12:39 2010
Subject: Futenma

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

What is the state of play? I read the reports about [redacted] And what do we do now?

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/25/2035

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 7:12 AM
To: H; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

It should be ready for you. We'll get it on your desk.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Mar 24 07:02:56 2010
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

I haven't seen it yet and it's not in my materials for today.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Cc: Chollet, Derek H <CholletDH@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Mar 24 06:56:05 2010
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

I checked last friday and was told it went up to you -- am checking again now. AM

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Mar 24 06:53:05 2010
Subject: Pak-India-Bangl

Remember the comparison I asked for? Is that ready--I'd like it today.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 7:03 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Iraqi panel invalidates votes for 52 candidates

From: Packer, Adam D
To: NEWS-Iraq; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Mon Apr 26 06:49:23 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Iraqi panel invalidates votes for 52 candidates

BAGHDAD (Reuters) - An Iraqi review panel invalidated the votes of 52 candidates of the March election, officials said, possibly wiping out the slim lead of a Sunni-backed alliance. It was not immediately clear how many of the candidates barred for alleged ties to Saddam Hussein's banned Baath party had won seats in the March 7 ballot. If the result changed, the decision could spark anger among Sunnis just as the sectarian violence unleashed after the 2003 U.S.-led invasion recedes. The panel's ruling was confirmed by Ali al-Lami, a senior member of a commission that sought to bar candidates with Baath party links, Tariq Harp, a lawyer for Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki's State of Law coalition, and Mustafa al-Hiti, a senior member of the winning Iraqiya alliance that was heavily backed by Sunnis.

Adam Packer
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center
(202) 647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 7:14 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; H
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

I just confirmed that we sent it up on Friday and it definitely went into the line.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Wed Mar 24 07:12:20 2010
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

It should be ready for you. We'll get it on your desk.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Mar 24 07:02:56 2010
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

I haven't seen it yet and it's not in my materials for today.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Cc: Chollet, Derek H <CholletDH@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Mar 24 06:56:05 2010
Subject: Re: Pak-India-Bangl

I checked last friday and was told it went up to you -- am checking again now. AM

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Mar 24 06:53:05 2010
Subject: Pak-India-Bangl

Remember the comparison I asked for? Is that ready--I'd like it today.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 10:21 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: RE: Call list

I'll check on Durmer and take care of the rest.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 10:15 AM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Call list

Pls send Gen. Shalikashvili's numbers to Bill's staff because he asked me to have Bill call him.

Send all of Ron Dellums' numbers also to Bill.

Did I write Kris Durmer? If so, pls remove.

Pls add to list:
Susan Berger
Mark Weiner
Pls take off:
Albright
Lavrov
Spindelegger
Clark (ask Amb. Morningstar to call him to discuss oil shale in Europe) Saudabayev Holbrooke

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 10:35 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: RE: Call list

You signed as letter to Durmer on April 6th. I sent the numbers to WJC, and asked Morningstar to call Clark. He will let me know once they've spoken.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 10:15 AM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Call list

Pls send Gen. Shalikashvili's numbers to Bill's staff because he asked me to have Bill call him.

Send all of Ron Dellums' numbers also to Bill.

Did I write Kris Durmer? If so, pls remove.

Pls add to list:
Susan Berger
Mark Weiner
Pls take off:
Albright
Lavrov
Spindelegger
Clark (ask Amb. Morningstar to call him to discuss oil shale in Europe) Saudabayev Holbrooke

RELEASE
IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 5:25 PM
To: H
Subject: Call

Sandy levin returned your call

[redacted]

B6

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 10:42 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: dorothy height and madeira

Do you want notes/background material or a script for your remarks at the memorial? Also, Madeira [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 11:57 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Confidential -- [redacted] B6

---

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 11:55 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Confidential -- [redacted]

Thought you would like to know. Will let you know if I hear anything.

jm

---

From: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 11:52 AM
To: McHale, Judith A; DiMartino, Kitty
Subject: [redacted]

Judith and Kitty

[redacted]

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/25/2035

RELEASE IN PART B1,1.4(D),B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 3:09 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; DiMartino, Kitty; Douglas, Walter T; Macmanus, Joseph E
Subject: FW: Update on your trip to Doha

FYI, I will be going to Doha this weekend to meet with Al Jazeera. Also plan to meet with CENTCOM and then onto Kabul for two days of meetings. Back next Thursday.

jm

---

From: Somerset, Ann D
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 3:04 PM
To: McHale, Judith A
Cc: Douglas, Walter T; DiMartino, Kitty; Davidson, Mark J; Mellott, Joseph; Sreebny, Daniel
Subject: Update on your trip to Doha

Judith,

Below is a rough outline of your trip to Doha, as it currently stands.

LOGISTICS:

You are currently scheduled to arrive in Doha on May 1 at 6:30 and depart May 2 at 7 pm. Traveling with you will be Kitty DiMartino, Joe Mellott, Mark Davidson, and GSEC's LTC Eric Schoennauer. Dana Smith will fly in from the Media Hub in Dubai to meet you in Doha.

KEY EVENTS:

Dinner with Al Jazeera (AJ) staff: AJ Director General Wadah Khanfar will host a dinner on May 1 with senior AJ staff, including AJ English Managing Director Tony Burman. We expect 7 people on the AJ side and 6 on ours. (The dinner is schedule for 8pm in a private room in the Four Seasons; post is making reservations for the party to stay in the same hotel.)

Meeting with AJ Board Members at AJ Headquarters: This will give you an opportunity to engage the Qatari leadership of the network. Discussions topics should include the mid-May Washington visit by some AJ Board representatives. We expect Wadah Khanfar to also participate in this meeting.

(TBC) Meeting with Prime Minister Hamad bin Jasim bin Jabir al-Thani (HBJ): As PM, HBJ is the ultimate Qatari authority on AJ. The meeting will also allow you to raise bi-lateral engagement issues as necessary. We expect to know in a few days if HBJ will be available.

Meetings with CENTCOM: You will meet with CENTCOM staff at Al Udeid airbase just outside of Doha. They will brief you on their [redacted] within their AOR, but with particular focus on activities in [redacted]. B1 1.4(D)

MEDIA:

Feature on AJ Arabic: 15 minute "feature" piece filmed at AJ Studios on the Administration's commitment to engagement with Muslim communities worldwide. This will be a good opportunity to highlight the Entrepreneurship Summit. We can expect you to also get questions on PD programs in Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Iraq. You will be interviewed by one of AJ's "top" journalists; exactly who is still to be determined. The interview will be in English with simultaneous interpretation into Arabic. It will likely air a number of times on AJ.

Feature on AJ English: This would be a second 15 minute "feature" piece similar to the one for AJ Arabic. If we are pressed for time we can consider just doing the AJ Arabic feature.

Roundtable with local Qatari media: This will include journalists from a number of local Qatari media outlets. This is another opportunity to talk about the Administration's commitment to engagement, but with a more targeted focus on bilateral engagement and exchange programs.

Note – Wadah Khanfar has been closely engaged on, if not driving, the portions of your program that deal with AJ. Post reports that he is very pleased to have this opportunity for you to engage with AJ leadership in Doha.

Best,
Ann

Ann Somerset
Special Assistant
Office of the Under Secretary of State for Public Diplomacy and Public Affairs (R)
U.S. Department of State
2201 C St, NW Rm 5932
W: 202.647.9130 | ✉: SomersetAD@state.gov

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 6:40 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Ahmadinejad to speak at RevCon

Interesting.

---

From: Einhorn, Robert J
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 5:33 PM
To: Burns, William J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Tauscher, Ellen O; 'Ryu, Rexon Y.'; Samore, Gary S.; Magsamen, Kelly E.; Crowley, Philip J; Steinberg, James B; Mills, Cheryl D; Chollet, Derek H; Mull, Stephen D
Subject: Ahmadinejad to speak at RevCon

UN Secretariat informed us a few minutes ago that Iran says Ahmadinejad will give Iran's speech at the RevCon on Monday. Because of seniority, he may speak first.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 8:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Ahmadinejad to speak at RevCon

Absolutely. Already working on it.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Apr 26 20:14:23 2010
Subject: Re: Ahmadinejad to speak at RevCon

Very. [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Apr 26 18:40:29 2010
Subject: FW: Ahmadinejad to speak at RevCon

Interesting.

From: Einhorn, Robert J
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 5:33 PM
To: Burns, William J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Tauscher, Ellen O; 'Ryu, Rexon Y.'; Samore, Gary S.; Magsamen, Kelly E.; Crowley, Philip J; Steinberg, James B; Mills, Cheryl D; Chollet, Derek H; Mull, Stephen D
Subject: Ahmadinejad to speak at RevCon

UN Secretariat informed us a few minutes ago that Iran says Ahmadinejad will give Iran's speech at the RevCon on Monday. Because of seniority, he may speak first.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 10:29 AM
To: H
Subject: remind me re matters

1. Colorado
2. June 2011
3. Policy plan

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, April 26, 2010 9:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Nice picture!

Today's to do list read:

1) Remove all copies of Post from 7th floor

2) Prevent item from appearing in clips

3) Avoid HRC at all costs, provide no opportunity for ribbing

As you can see I went 0 for 3

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Nice picture!
Sent: Apr 26, 2010 8:41 PM

Just saw the WaPo article w your photo and wondered whether that was on your list?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 27, 2010 6:45 AM
To: H

FYI – today the SFRC will take up at its business meeting the State Dept authorization bill. We have been working with them for months on this package, and they have taken virtually all of our provisions in tact. There are a few problems (minor) that we will continue to work on those, but all in all it is a good package. Unfortunately, it will never become enacted, so it is largely a symbolic gesture, but it is helpful nonetheless. Thought Kerry or Lugar might mention it to you, and our general posture has been to thank them for their efforts.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 5:32 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Pakistani Taliban claim failed New York bomb attack

From: Pearce, Jennifer
To: SES-O_Shift-II
Cc: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-SCT; DS Command Center
Sent: Sun May 02 13:27:13 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Pakistani Taliban claim failed New York bomb attack

DUBAI - The Pakistani Taliban claimed responsibility for the attempted car bomb attack in New York's Times square, a statement on an Islamist website said on Sunday.

The statement said it was to avenge the killing of two Islamists and "Muslim martyrs".

"The Pakistani Taliban announced its responsibility for the New York attack in revenge for the two leaders al-Baghdadi and al-Mahajer and Muslim martyrs," said a statement on a website commonly used by Islamists.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, April 27, 2010 9:14 AM
To: H
Subject: H: Arizona's foreign policy. Sid

You might consider making a statement on the deleterious international effects of Arizona's unwise and precipitous law violating traditional American values of liberty, especially in light of Mexican President Calderon's condemnation. Seems like a complete freebie. Sid

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 7:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Bibi

Have readout at your convenience.

RELEASE IN PART
B1, 1.4 (B), 1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 9:21 PM
To: H
Subject: AU/Iran

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

From Johnnie,

Regards, Johnnie

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class:
CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 05/02/2020

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, April 27, 2010 4:06 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Ears ringing?

Nice.

---

From: iansolomor[redacted] [mailto[redacted]] B6
Sent: Tuesday, April 27, 2010 4:05 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Marline Alexis
Subject: Ears ringing?

Hey Cheryl,
Was at a lunch with[redacted] when he sang praises for your leadership on Haiti recovery. I was so pleased by his confidence and optimism and by what appears to be good bilateral and multilateral coordination.[redacted]

Best,
Ian

RELEASE IN PART B5, B6

From: Lissa Muscatine [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, April 27, 2010 8:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Dorothy Height

I refined my earlier draft and worked in [redacted] see what you think. The new draft (LM3) is in your book for tonight. B5

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 05/02/2020

RELEASE IN PART B1,1.4(B),1.4(D), B5, B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 10:34 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: AU/Iran

[redacted] B5

On the speech, it might be 15 but not much more. Dan K-P has taken over drafting [redacted] B6
He has been incorporating fine-tuning edits today. I will email you a draft shortly, which will be tweaked in the am. [redacted] Unfortunately, there is no teleprompter at the UN. B5

On your book, I understand that Huma will bring it out in the morning.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun May 02 22:26:00 2010
Subject: Re: AU/Iran

[redacted] 1.4(D) B1

Also, I just saw on the schedule I was expected to speak for only 12 minutes. I think the speech as written is longer but I haven't seen the final draft. Is there a teleprompter?

I also don't yet have any briefing materials. Will I get them tonight or tomorrow morning?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun May 02 21:21:08 2010
Subject: AU/Iran

1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

From Johnnie, [redacted]

[redacted]

Regards, Johnnie

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, April 27, 2010 11:25 PM
To: H
Cc: cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Subject: H: Memo. Greek eco crisis; transatlantic consequences. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo greek crisis.europe 042710.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

April 27, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Greek economic crisis; transatlantic consequences
CC: Cheryl

A potential second major phase of the economic crisis, at least in Europe, likely with repercussions in the US, is being triggered with the designation of Greece to junk band status, on the edge of default, with Portugal, Spain, and perhaps even Ireland at tipping points. This is more than a further unfolding of the economic crisis, threatening recovery; fissures within the transatlantic relationship will now be under intensifying strain. More than statements from Treasury should be forthcoming in the days ahead. This is about the future of the transatlantic relationship. Reassuring words about our enduring commitment will matter.

I've been having conversations with John Kornblum and those discussions prompted this email from him a couple of days ago, before the latest Greek event:

-- the economic crisis is starting to have a negative effect on dynamics among EU members. Tensions over deficits, Greece etc are uncovering major gaps among the major players.

-- Germany has emerged stronger than others. German voters believe (correctly) that they have sacrificed to maintain stability and are increasingly angry over signs of obvious mismanagement by Greece and others. The strains of Afghanistan are being felt by everyone and while the President is very popular in Europe, EU leaders miss the regular stroking by the US which for decades has been an essential aspect of their self-confidence.

- Germany's harsh reaction to Greece has shaken everyone, perhaps the French most of all. They now see that Germany has been remaking the EU behind the scenes without their noticing it. Commonality on major issues is declining.

-- Continuation of this trend would be very damaging to US interests. Global markets could be weakened significantly if the budgetary crises continue. Cooperation on issues such as Afghanistan and Iran could be undermined. In the worst case, the President could be confronted with a major crisis of confidence among members of the EU. He would be blamed for inattention to the negative trends.

-- Things are not in crisis, but the trends are worrying enough to warrant a senior effort to focus the dialogue, especially with the Germans and the French. Assuming the Conservatives win in the UK, there will be a need to guide them successfully into office. Others such as the Poles and the Turks cannot be ignored.

-- In other words, we cannot treat our partnership with Europe as just another point on a multipolar map. Maintaining consensus within Europe and between the US and Europe is essential to maintaining a foundation for our global efforts.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 9:42 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Deputy Secretary Lew's Schedule, Monday, March 15, 2010

Remind me to discuss when we talk

---

From: Dubose, Mary L
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 5:37 PM
To: D(L)_LewDailySchedule
Subject: Deputy Secretary Lew's Schedule, Monday, March 15, 2010

Deputy Secretary Lew will be out of the office on Monday, March 15. He will return to the office on Tuesday, March 16.

---

Mary L. Dubose • Personal Assistant to Deputy Secretary Lew • Office of the Deputy Secretary of State • U.S. Department of State - 2201 C St, NW Rm 7240, Washington, DC 20520 ☎(202.647.5073-w: 🖷 202.647.5108-Fax)✉ DuboseML@state.gov

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, May 2, 2010 10:44 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: current speech
Attachments: NPT Revcon TT DKP v8 5 2 10.docx

The speech is attached. Let me know if you need me to send it elsewhere to be printed.

---

From: Daniel Kurtz-Phelan [redacted] B6
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun May 02 22:39:45 2010
Subject: current speech

Here you go.

RELEASE
IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 12:54 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Bloomberg) Kissinger hospitalized in Seoul

---

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Sat Mar 13 00:51:15 2010
Subject: (Bloomberg) Kissinger hospitalized in Seoul

SEOUL (Bloomberg) Former Secretary of State Kissinger is in stable condition in a Seoul hospital after being taken there with abdominal pains at about 10 a.m. March 13. Kissinger was examined by doctors and is recovering according to a spokesman at Yonsei University's Severance Hospital in western Seoul. Results of the examination are not yet available, though the 86-year-old Kissinger is in no danger, the spokesman said. Kissinger came to Seoul to deliver a special lecture at a forum on North Korea's nuclear issue March 11 in Seoul. He also visited Cheong Wa Dae March 12 and discussed North Korea and East Asia's security order with South Korean President Lee Myung-bak.

---

Ezra Casteel
S/ES-O Operations Specialist
202.647.1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 7:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Deputy Secretary Lew's Schedule, Monday, March 15, 2010

Yes - will call at 930am - have calls starting now

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Mar 12 23:08:16 2010
Subject: Re: Deputy Secretary Lew's Schedule, Monday, March 15, 2010

Can you talk tomorrow before 10:30 am?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Mar 12 21:41:39 2010
Subject: FW: Deputy Secretary Lew's Schedule, Monday, March 15, 2010

Remind me to discuss when we talk

From: Dubose, Mary L
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 5:37 PM
To: D(L)_LewDailySchedule
Subject: Deputy Secretary Lew's Schedule, Monday, March 15, 2010

Deputy Secretary Lew will be out of the office on Monday, March 15. He will return to the office on Tuesday, March 16.

---

Mary L. Dubose • Personal Assistant to Deputy Secretary Lew • Office of the Deputy Secretary of State • U.S. Department of State - 2201 C St, NW Rm 7240, Washington, DC 20520 '(202.647.5073-w: 7 202.647.5108-Fax)*
DuboseML@state.gov <mailto:DuboseML@state.gov>

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 9:08 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: reception invitation
Attachments: Reception Invitation.pdf

fyi

From: Lomellin, Carmen
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 7:02 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: reception invitation

Hi Cheryl – hope you're holding up ok with all of the Haiti work.

I'm having a little reception on 3/22 6pm over at the OAS to celebrate my swearing-in. I'd love it if you could come by for a glass of champagne and a little jazz music!

I'd love to invite the Secretary. Is that even proper protocol? Although she probably couldn't attend, I'd like to share it with her. Your thoughts?

Ambassador Carmen Lomellin
U.S. Permanent Representative to the OAS
2201 C. St, NW #5914
Washington, DC 20520

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 8:51 AM
To: H; 'JilotyLC@state.gov'; 'russorv@state.gov'
Subject: Re: The bride

Not yet.
She said she would send it but haven't got info yet.
Ill check in

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov' <JilotyLC@state.gov>; 'Russorv@state.gov' <Russorv@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sat Mar 13 01:33:04 2010
Subject: Fw: The bride

Have you received info from Elaine yet for letter?

----- Original Message -----
From: Elaine Weiss [redacted] B6
To: H
Cc: betsyebeling1050[redacted]; HAbedin@hillaryclinton.com
<HAbedin@hillaryclinton.com>
Sent: Fri Mar 12 00:06:08 2010
Subject: Re: The bride

[redacted]

Sent from my iPhone

On Mar 9, 2010, at 5:55 AM, "H" <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:

[redacted]

>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: betsyebeling1050[redacted]
> To: H; Elaine Weiss[redacted]; Huma Abedin
> <HAbedin@hillaryclinton.com
> >
> Sent: Mon Mar 08 10:35:28 2010
> Subject: The bride
>

[redacted]

[redacted]

B6

[redacted]Hope all is well with you. B Sent from my Verizon Wireless > BlackBerry
>

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 10:41 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: confidential re this morning's conversation

Well well

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 1:52 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: confidential re this morning's conversation

I may have been way off base w/ Jim – he just sent me an email saying he's in Texas… so discount at will.

Anne-Marie Slaughter
Director of Policy Planning
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 9:50 AM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: RE: Zach and Radha's Film, The Western Front - Screening at the Tribeca Film Festival you are going to be in estoniaand as you know we talked about israel for this trip as well potentially (although maybe we are never going there....).

ii told zach becfore they scheduled to do it earlier in the week if they really wanted you to be able to come.
he said they couldnt and you and i discussed getting the dvd for you.
i did tell cvc as well that moving party from the april 10th date to the 24th would make it difficult for you to go. unless you want us to make the schedule work somehow.

---

From: H
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 9:49 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Fw: Zach and Radha's Film, The Western Front - Screening at the Tribeca Film Festival

Can I do this? Also the next day I want to go to Philly for the party.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jill Iscol [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Mar 12 19:01:21 2010
Subject: Zach and Radha's Film, The Western Front - Screening at the Tribeca Film Festival

Dear Hillary,

Zach and Radha's film, The Western Front, has been selected for screening by the Tribeca Film Festival. The first screening for family and friends will be on Friday, April 23rd at 7:30 pm on the Intrepid. Below is a link to the press release and a trailer will be online in the coming weeks.

http://www.tribecafilm.com/festival/features/TFF_10_Special_Events.html
<http://www.tribecafilm.com/festival/features/TFF_10_Special_Events.html>

It would mean the world to Zach and, of course, Ken, Kiva and me if you would save the date and join us to celebrate this moment.

Please RSVP to Sara Spagnuolo at [redacted] or 917-923-1702 by April 1st as there is limited seating.

As always and with love,

Jill and Ken

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 10:07 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Mission Accomplished

[redacted] B5

From: Tauscher, Ellen O
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Burns, William J
Sent: Sat Mar 13 07:36:17 2010
Subject: Mission Accomplished

Bill and Jake,

[redacted] B5

Thanks,
Ellen

Ellen O. Tauscher
Under Secretary of State for Arms Control and International Security 202-647-1049

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

TT/DKP v 8
5/2 10 PM

SECRETARY OF STATE HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
REMARKS TO THE REVIEW CONFERENCE OF PARTIES TO THE TREATY ON THE NONPROLIFERATION OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS
THE UNITED NATIONS, NEW YORK, NY
MAY 3, 2010

B5

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768823 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

April 27, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Greek economic crisis; transatlantic consequences
CC: Cheryl

A potential second major phase of the economic crisis, at least in Europe, likely with repercussions in the US, is being triggered with the designation of Greece to junk band status, on the edge of default, with Portugal, Spain, and perhaps even Ireland at tipping points. This is more than a further unfolding of the economic crisis, threatening recovery; fissures within the transatlantic relationship will now be under intensifying strain. More than statements from Treasury should be forthcoming in the days ahead. This is about the future of the transatlantic relationship. Reassuring words about our enduring commitment will matter.

I've been having conversations with John Kornblum and those discussions prompted this email from him a couple of days ago, before the latest Greek event:

-- the economic crisis is starting to have a negative effect on dynamics among EU members. Tensions over deficits, Greece etc are uncovering major gaps among the major players.

-- Germany has emerged stronger than others. German voters believe (correctly) that they have sacrificed to maintain stability and are increasingly angry over signs of obvious mismanagement by Greece and others. The strains of Afghanistan are being felt by everyone and while the President is very popular in Europe, EU leaders miss the regular stroking by the US which for decades has been an essential aspect of their self-confidence.

- Germany's harsh reaction to Greece has shaken everyone, perhaps the French most of all. They now see that Germany has been remaking the EU behind the scenes without their noticing it. Commonality on major issues is declining.

-- Continuation of this trend would be very damaging to US interests. Global markets could be weakened significantly if the budgetary crises continue. Cooperation on issues such as Afghanistan and Iran could be undermined. In the worst case, the President could be confronted with a major crisis of confidence among members of the EU. He would be blamed for inattention to the negative trends.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05768823 Date: 08/31/2015

-- Things are not in crisis, but the trends are worrying enough to warrant a senior effort to focus the dialogue, especially with the Germans and the French. Assuming the Conservatives win in the UK, there will be a need to guide them successfully into office. Others such as the Poles and the Turks cannot be ignored.

-- In other words, we cannot treat our partnership with Europe as just another point on a multipolar map. Maintaining consensus within Europe and between the US and Europe is essential to maintaining a foundation for our global efforts.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, April 28, 2010 8:43 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 4/28/10 Wednesday

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:00 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:00 am BREAKFAST w/ WOMEN ENTREPRENEURSHIP SUMMIT
9:15 am ATTENDEES Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor

9:30 am BIWEEKLY MEETING w/MANAGEMENT TEAM
10:00 am Deputy Secretary's Conference Room

10:00 am WEEKLY MEETING w/UNDER SECRETARIES
10:45 am Secretary's Conference Room

11:15am PHONE CALL w/OAS SECRETARY GENERAL JOSE MIGUEL INSULZA
11:30am Secretary's Office

11:30 am OFFICE TIME
2:00 pm Secretary's Office

2:00 pm BILATERAL w/TUNISIAN FM KAMEL MORJANE
2:30 pm Secretary's Conference Room *Camera spray in Treaty Room preceding.

2:50 pm REMARKS TO THE ANNUAL IRAN WATCHERS CONFERENCE
3:00 pm Delegates Lounge, First Floor *Official photo.

3:15 pm MEETING w/FAMILIES OF IRAN HIKERS
3:30 pm Secretary's Office *Official photo.

4:00 pm BILAT w/HONDURAN SEC'Y OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS MARIO
4:30 pm CANAHUATI Secy's Conf. Room *Camera Spray in Treaty Room preceding.

4:30 pm OFFICE TIME
7:00 pm Secretary's Office

7:05 pm DEPART State Department *En route Shiloh Baptist Church

7:25 pm ARRIVE Shiloh Baptist Church

7:30 pm COMMUNITY CELEBRATION OF LIFE FOR DR. DOROTHY HEIGHT
8:00 pm (t) Shiloh Baptist Church, 1500 Ninth Street, NW

8:05 pm (t) DEPART Shiloh Baptist Church *En route Private Residence

8:20 pm (t) ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 6:46 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Number for cohns

I'm sorry I didn't see this last night. I don't know what that number is. The ones I have are:

[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Wed Apr 28 22:34:22 2010
Subject: Fw: Number for cohns

Is this the number you got?

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin
To: H
Sent: Mon Apr 26 18:47:26 2010
Subject: Number for cohns

[redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 7:09 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Man stabs 28 children at kindergarten in China

Fyi before u talk to dai.

---

From: Pearce, Jennifer
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Thu Apr 29 06:27:49 2010
Subject: FW: (AP) Man stabs 28 children at kindergarten in China

Of potential interest for the Secretary's 8AM call

BEIJING - (AP) A local official says a knife-wielding man has attacked 28 children at a kindergarten in eastern Jiangsu province, the second such attack in China in two days. Propaganda department official Zhu Guiming told The Associated Press the man wounded the students, two teachers and one security guard. Zhu said five people were in critical condition in hospital. He had no information on the suspect.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 7:05 AM
To: H
Subject: Lisa prefers tomorrow.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 7:13 AM
To: H
Subject: Another fyi before dai call

From ops:
CG Shanghai provided the update below on Chinese President Hu's visit to the U.S. pavilion at the Shanghai Expo. For your situational awareness:

SWO Chinese President Hu Jintao visited the USA Pavilion at the Shanghai Expo around 12:30 p.m. for 15-20 minutes Thursday, April 29 (Shanghai time). USA Pavilion Commissioner General Jose Villarreal and Consul General Beatrice Camp greeted President Hu, who was accompanied by Vice Premier Wang Qishan, Shanghai Expo Bureau officials, and a large contingent of Chinese media. Hu then walked through the pavilion's initial section (the "Overture") where Vice Premier Wang Qishan called attention to all the logos of the pavilion's sponsors. The Chinese president also viewed a film clip of President Obama welcoming visitors to the pavilion and shook hands with about 10 of the nearly 80 U.S. "student ambassadors" staffing the pavilion. Before departing, President Hu thanked Commissioner General Villarreal and wished the USA Pavilion great success.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 7:15 AM
To: H

BEIJING, April 29 (Reuters) - A knife-wielding man injured 28 children, two teachers and a security guard in a kindergarten in eastern China, state media reported on Thursday, the fourth such stabbing case in recent weeks. Xu Yuyuan, 47, an unemployed local man, broke into a classroom in Taixing city of eastern Jiangsu province on Thursday morning, attacking the children with a 20 cm long knife, the official Xinhua news agency said. The injured children were all about four years old, and five are in critical condition, it added. Xu has been jobless since he was fired from a local insurance company in 2001, and then took part in pyramid selling schemes, Xinhua added. The attack is the fourth reported school stabbing in China in recent weeks, and the rash of violence has prompted public calls for more measures to protect students in a country where many couples only have one child. A man stabbed 16 students and a teacher at a primary school in southern China on Wednesday, the same day that a former doctor was executed for stabbing to death eight school children last month. "More concrete measures should be taken to make school the safest place," a commentary in today's Beijing News said, calling for more serve punishment for these killers. Some Chinese people have taken to the Internet to discuss the root causes of the increasing number of school tragedies

RELEASE IN PART
B1 1.4(B) 1.4(D)

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 7:38 AM
To: H
Subject: From our embassy in china

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Please print the message below from Embassy Beijing which gives some further background

===

(From Embassy Beijing)
I was the notetaker AMB Huntsman asked me to give you a readout

AmEmbassy Beijing

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 04/28/2035

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 7:46 AM
To: H
Subject: Re:

We traded calls but I haven't heard back. [redacted] B6

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Thu Apr 29 07:35:33 2010
Subject: Re:

Thx. What did Mark Hyman tell you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Apr 29 07:14:45 2010
Subject:

BEIJING, April 29 (Reuters) - A knife-wielding man injured 28 children, two teachers and a security guard in a kindergarten in eastern China, state media reported on Thursday, the fourth such stabbing case in recent weeks. Xu Yuyuan, 47, an unemployed local man, broke into a classroom in Taixing city of eastern Jiangsu province on Thursday morning, attacking the children with a 20 cm long knife, the official Xinhua news agency said. The injured children were all about four years old, and five are in critical condition, it added. Xu has been jobless since he was fired from a local insurance company in 2001, and then took part in pyramid selling schemes, Xinhua added. The attack is the fourth reported school stabbing in China in recent weeks, and the rash of violence has prompted public calls for more measures to protect students in a country where many couples only have one child. A man stabbed 16 students and a teacher at a primary school in southern China on Wednesday, the same day that a former doctor was executed for stabbing to death eight school children last month. "More concrete measures should be taken to make school the safest place," a commentary in today's Beijing News said, calling for more serve punishment for these killers. Some Chinese people have taken to the Internet to discuss the root causes of the increasing number of school tragedies

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 8:59 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 4/29/10 Thursday

8:00 am PHONE CALL w/CHINESE STATE COUNCILOR DAI BINGGUO
Private Residence

9:25 am DEPART Private Residence *En route Washington National Cathedral
9:30 am ARRIVE Washington National Cathedral

10:00 am FUNERAL SERVICE FOR DR. DOROTHY HEIGHT
12:00 pm (t) Washington National Cathedral, 3101 Wisconsin Avenue, NW

12:05 pm (t) DEPART National Cathedral *En route State Department
12:15 pm (t) ARRIVE State Department

12:15 pm OFFICE TIME
1:15 pm Secretary's Office

1:15 pm MEETING w/JACK LEW AND RAJ SHAH
1:30 pm Secretary's Office

1:30 pm BILATERAL w/POLISH FM RADOSLAW SIKORSKI
2:00 pm Secretary's Conference Room *Official photo in East Hall preceding.

2:00 pm PRESS PRE-BRIEF
2:05 pm Secretary's Office

2:05 pm JOINT PRESS AVAILABILITY w/POLISH FM SIKORSKI
2:20 pm Treaty Room

2:30 pm OFFICE TIME
3:10 pm Secretary's Office

3:10pm MEETING w/MILDRED OTERO
3:20pm Secretary's Office

3:25 pm DEPART State Department *En route White House
3:30 pm ARRIVE White House

3:30 pm SMALL GROUP MEETING
4:15 pm White House Situation Room

4:30 pm WEEKLY MEETING w/POTUS
5:00 pm Oval Office

5:05 pm DEPART White House *En route State Department
5:10 pm ARRIVE State Department

5:30 pm HOST ANNUAL RECEPTION FOR THE DONORS TO THE
7:00 pm DIPLOMATIC RECEPTION ROOMS Adams/Franklin Rooms, 8th Floor

7:05 pm DEPART State Department *En route Grand Hyatt Hotel

7:15 pm ARRIVE Grand Hyatt Hotel

7:20 pm REMARKS AT THE AMERICAN JEWISH COMMITTEE GALA
7:40 pm ANNUAL DINNER Grand Hyatt Hotel, 1300 H Street, NW

7:40 pm DEPART Grand Hyatt Hotel *En route Private Residence

7:55 pm ARRIVE Private Residence ###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 3:09 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: FW: Putin Tags Polar Bear in Arctic

Pretty good stuff.

From: Russell, Daniel A
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 3:08 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Gordon, Philip H
Subject: Putin Tags Polar Bear in Arctic

Jake: This is the event to which Putin invited Bill Clinton during his meeting with HRC in Moscow.

Putin Tags Polar Bear in Russia's Arctic

Russian Prime Minister Helps Scientists Track Endangered Species, Calls for Removal of Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, right, fixes a radio beacon on a neck of a polar bear, which was anaesthetized, during a visit to a research institute at the Franz Josef Land archipelago in the Arctic Ocean on Thursday. (AP Photo/RIA Novosti, pool)

(AP) Updated at 1:29 p.m. ET

Prime Minister Vladimir Putin played the eco-warrior in Russia's Arctic on Thursday, helping scientists track endangered polar bears and calling for a cleanup of the region.

Putin traveled to Franz Josef Land, an archipelago in the Arctic Ocean off the northwest coast of Russia's mainland in his latest display of adventuring prowess to highlight the country's guardianship of the resource-rich region.

Wearing a bright red coat and cap, the 57-year-old premier kneeled at the head of a tranquilized polar bear to attach a satellite-tracking collar, then helped elevate the beast for weighing. The images were broadcast nationally.

Putin helped measure the bear and roll it onto its side.

On his departure, he shook its paw and uttered the words: "Be well."

"The paw is heavy. This is the master of the Arctic, you can feel that straight away," Putin said.

Of a total 25,000 polar bears remaining in the wild, about 6,000 are in Russia's Arctic territory, Russian news agencies quoted officials as saying.

Putin also called for "a general cleanup of the Arctic," ordering the removal of thousands of barrels of fuel buried in the snow that had been left unused by a Soviet-era military base.

He has been spearheading Russia's re-emergence as a regional power, including the country's claims over the Arctic's formidable natural resources. Some 90 billion barrels of oil and one-third of the world's undiscovered natural gas lie hidden in the Arctic region, the U.S. Geological Survey estimates.

"Geopolitically, Russia's deepest interests are linked to the Arctic," Putin said. "Here Russia's security and defense capabilities is provided for. Here there are vitally important transport communications."

Canada, the U.S., Russia and Denmark have competing claims before a United Nations commission regarding extend their undersea boundaries into areas previously blocked by Arctic ice.

Moscow dramatically staked its claim to the region by dropping a flag on the ocean floor at the North Pole in 2007.

Since then, all four countries have agreed to cool their rhetoric and allow scientists to finish their surveys.

Putin adores the media spotlight when it accentuates his macho side. He has been photographed fishing bare-chested in Russia's Altai region, and was shown on television diving into an icy river and swimming the butterfly stroke.

He has also tackled predators in the wild before, shooting a tiger with a tranquilizer gun and releasing leopards.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 7:28 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: NAM lunch

Huma said you were asking about the goals and purposes of the NAM lunch Monday. [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, April 29, 2010 10:24 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; H
Subject: Re: NAM lunch

Hrc - we are going to extend invites tomorrow morning if ok with you?

---

From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Thu Apr 29 19:28:10 2010
Subject: NAM lunch

Huma said you were asking about the goals and purposes of the NAM lunch Monday. B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 5:44 AM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: H
Subject: Fw: For the Secretary
Attachments: ir2110.vcf

Lauren - can u print for hrc?

----- Original Message -----
From: Irwin Redlener, M.D. [redacted] B6
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Apr 30 00:30:43 2010
Subject: For the Secretary

Hi,Huma,
Please share this with Hillary.
Thanks,
Irwin

---

Dear Hillary,
I am hoping we can pick up the threads of our previous conversations, including meeting again with Cheryl. I continue to believe that I can - and would very much like to - be able to contribute meaningfully to your work and the mission of the Department. Issues having to do with the status of children world-wide, health liaison to US AID and a variety of issues within the realm of disaster response and preparedness.

- I just today participated in and spoke at a major conference in DC on nuclear terrorism. Most of the speakers and participants were federal officials, including WH staff. One of the key points I made was the extraordinary disconnect between administration concerns with respect to the possibility of IND/nuclear terrorism and the degree to which this is essentially ignored in state and local disaster planning, including in the principal target cities. My discussions with officials in Great Britain and a couple of other countries reveal a similar inability to deal with nuclear preparedness. For many of these folks, here and abroad, images of apocalyptic destruction - as was the actual threat during the nuclear arms race with the Soviets - are just paralyzing.
However, a terrorist IND, is not an all-out nuclear war. Current, scientific modeling suggests that minimal planning for an IND could save hundreds of thousands of lives and create a much high level of resiliency than we currently have

I believe that an international consortium of disaster response and recovery planning officials should be considered as a means of increasing attention and resources focused on nuclear - and CBRNE in general - terrorism readiness. We have much that could be learned from one another in terms of advancing this work. My center at Columbia recently held a very successful and productive conference called "Day 3"
, focused on the regional conditions and projections 72 hours post IND detonation.

- Natural disasters also remain a major challenge and potentially increasingly so over the years to come. I feel that there is much to be gained by upgrading the level and quality of our international collaboration around disaster response planning - and particularly major disaster recovery, still one of the great unsolved challenges world-wide.

- As a member of the federally appointed National Commission on Children and Disasters, we just completed a field hearing of state and federal officials on the management of children brought from Haiti to Florida for medical care and humanitarian rescue. Some were American nationals, others not. But the reports from people involved in the process were overwhelmingly concerned about lack of coordination, dangerously inadequate information accompanying many of the kids who came over and lots of less than positive feedback about operations within Haiti. I believe that I could help in the organization of emergency response, overseeing some of the key functions in managing international disasters which end up involving the U.S.

- I had a chance and very interesting meeting with Ban Ki-Moon 2 weeks ago. I mentioned an idea I have been thinking about having to do with another world children's summit. The last one was in 1990, held at the U.N. and involving about 150 countries, including heads of state from about 45 - 50 nations. Conditions for children were outlined and goals set for future improvements - many of which were met, many not.. We are overdue for another world gathering focused on children. This would obviously by in Tony Lake's purview, and I was going to visit with him, bringing Jeff Sachs with me.

- We did discuss this a bit last year, but I am hoping that the U.S.
could continue to expand its involvement in global health diplomacy strategies as a part of U.S. smart power agenda. The global health program at Columbia - and a number of other academic centers - could provide resources, ideas, programs, expertise and relevant research to bolster such efforts.

If you think it would be worthwhile, I would look forward to continuing our conversations.

Warm regards,

Irwin

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 7:12 AM
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: H
Subject: Re: For the Secretary

Yep

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Fri Apr 30 05:43:46 2010
Subject: Fw: For the Secretary

Lauren - can u print for hrc?

----- Original Message -----
From: Irwin Redlener, M.D. [redacted] B6
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Apr 30 00:30:43 2010
Subject: For the Secretary

Hi,Huma,
Please share this with Hillary.
Thanks,
Irwin

---

Dear Hillary,
I am hoping we can pick up the threads of our previous conversations, including meeting again with Cheryl. I continue to believe that I can - and would very much like to - be able to contribute meaningfully to your work and the mission of the Department. Issues having to do with the status of children world-wide, health liaison to US AID and a variety of issues within the realm of disaster response and preparedness.

- I just today participated in and spoke at a major conference in DC on nuclear terrorism. Most of the speakers and participants were federal officials, including WH staff. One of the key points I made was the extraordinary disconnect between administration concerns with respect to the possibility of IND/nuclear terrorism and the degree to which this is essentially ignored in state and local disaster planning, including in the principal target cities. My discussions with officials in Great Britain and a couple of other countries reveal a similar inability to deal with nuclear preparedness. For many of these folks, here and abroad, images of apocalyptic destruction - as was the actual threat during the nuclear arms race with the Soviets - are just paralyzing.
However, a terrorist IND, is not an all-out nuclear war. Current, scientific modeling suggests that minimal planning for an IND could save hundreds of thousands of lives and create a much high level of resiliency than we currently have

I believe that an international consortium of disaster response and recovery planning officials should be considered as a means of increasing attention and resources focused on nuclear - and CBRNE in general - terrorism readiness. We have much that could be learned from one another in terms of advancing this work. My center at Columbia recently held a very successful and productive conference called "Day 3"

, focused on the regional conditions and projections 72 hours post IND detonation.

- Natural disasters also remain a major challenge and potentially increasingly so over the years to come. I feel that there is much to be gained by upgrading the level and quality of our international collaboration around disaster response planning - and particularly major disaster recovery, still one of the great unsolved challenges world-wide.

- As a member of the federally appointed National Commission on Children and Disasters, we just completed a field hearing of state and federal officials on the management of children brought from Haiti to Florida for medical care and humanitarian rescue. Some were American nationals, others not. But the reports from people involved in the process were overwhelmingly concerned about lack of coordination, dangerously inadequate information accompanying many of the kids who came over and lots of less than positive feedback about operations within Haiti. I believe that I could help in the organization of emergency response, overseeing some of the key functions in managing international disasters which end up involving the U.S.

- I had a chance and very interesting meeting with Ban Ki-Moon 2 weeks ago. I mentioned an idea I have been thinking about having to do with another world children's summit. The last one was in 1990, held at the U.N. and involving about 150 countries, including heads of state from about 45 - 50 nations. Conditions for children were outlined and goals set for future improvements - many of which were met, many not.. We are overdue for another world gathering focused on children. This would obviously by in Tony Lake's purview, and I was going to visit with him, bringing Jeff Sachs with me.

- We did discuss this a bit last year, but I am hoping that the U.S.
could continue to expand its involvement in global health diplomacy strategies as a part of U.S. smart power agenda. The global health program at Columbia - and a number of other academic centers - could provide resources, ideas, programs, expertise and relevant research to bolster such efforts.

If you think it would be worthwhile, I would look forward to continuing our conversations.

Warm regards,

Irwin

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 7:41 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 4/30/10 Friday

7:45 am PHONE CALL w/PHILIPPE *Private Residence

8:30 am DEPART Private Residence *En route NBC Studio

8:50 am ARRIVE NBC Studio

9:00 am TAPED INTERVIEW w/NBC MEET THE PRESS' DAVID GREGORY

9:20 am NBC Studio

9:25 am DEPART NBC Studio *En route State Department

9:40 am ARRIVE State Department

9:55 am RECEPTION TO CELEBRATE THE OPENING OF THE USA

10:20 am PAVILLION AT THE 2010 SHANGHAI WORLD EXPO

Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor

10:30 am BILATERAL w/KUWAITI DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER/FOREIGN

11:00 am MINISTER DR. MOHAMMAD SABAH AL-SALEM AL SABAH

Secretary's Conference Room *Official photo in East Hall preceding.

11:00 am PRESS PRE-BRIEF

11:05 am Secretary's Office

11:05 am JOINT PRESS AVAILABILITY w/QATARI PRIME MINISTER AND

11:20 am FM DR. MOHAMMAD al-SABAH al-SALEM AL SABAH Treaty Room

11:30 am OFFICE TIME

12:45 pm Secretary's Office

12:45 pm PRE-BRIEF MEETING

1:15 pm Secretary's Office

1:15 pm BILATERAL w/SPANISH FM MIGUEL ANGEL MORATINOS

1:45 pm Secretary's Conference Room *Camera Spray in Treaty Room preceding.

2:00 pm ONE-ON-ONE MEETING w/AFGHAN PRESIDENTIAL ADVISOR

2:30 pm ASHRAF GHANI Secretary's Office

2:50 pm VIDEOS (4)

3:05 pm George Marshall Room, 7th Floor

3:10 pm 152ND FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICER ORIENTATION CLASS

3:25 pm SWEARING-IN CEREMONY Dean Acheson Auditorium, First Floor

3:30 pm OFFICE TIME

4:15 pm Secretary's Office

4:20 pm DEPART State Department *En route Washington National Airport

4:40 pm ARRIVE Washington National Airport

5:00 pm DEPART Washington National Airport via US Airways Shuttle #2180

En route New York, NY

6:25 pm ARRIVE LaGuardia Airport

6:35 pm DEPART LaGuardia Airport *En route Private Residence ###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 8:58 AM
To: H; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Schedule request

Would be happy to

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Apr 30 08:51:35 2010
Subject: Schedule request

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 8:59 AM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; H
Subject: Re: Schedule request

Yes I will get the number from Lauren and call this morning.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Apr 30 08:58:05 2010
Subject: Re: Schedule request

Would be happy to

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Apr 30 08:51:35 2010
Subject: Schedule request

[redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 11:11 PM
To: H
Subject: h: FYI, Iran document Gary Sick sent me. Sid

From Gary Sick

Mojtaba Samareh Hashemi is a senior adviser to President Ahmadinejad and a devoted proponent of the Divine Right of Kings doctrine of ultra-conservative ayatollah Mesbah-Yazdi. Many regard him as an éminence grise of the Iranian regime and an important bridge between the Revolutionary Guards, the fanatic-fringe ayatollahs, and the presidency. So his words are worth listening to as clues to what is happening inside the closed circles of the Iranian leadership.

Today he was quoted by the Fars news agency (in Persian) on the troublesome issue of U.S.-Iran relations. Although the statement was translated into English, it needs more than a word-for-word translation in order to be understood. So I have added my own interpretation of what Mojtaba really meant to say.

* * * * *

"Obama not only did not manage to realize his slogan [of change], but has pursued the dark policies of Bush all over the world ever more energetically..."

[real meaning: Oh, how we miss George Bush! He was such an easy target. With him we were winning everywhere and America's credibility was falling to the point of disappearance even among its friends.]

"The Bush presidency is one of the darkest eras of the United States and the greatest hatred emerged internationally towards the United States..."

[Why can't Obama be more like Bush? In the good old days we didn't have to keep answering questions about why we would not accept an outstretched hand of friendship. It was all so much easier then.]

"Today we see that the United States rather than moving its military forces out of Iraq and Afghanistan has increased their number which has led to mass murder of the people and increased impoverishment in these countries. Obama had said that he wanted to oppose violation of human rights and wanted to close Guantanamo and secret prisons in Europe. Did this happen? Of course not..."

[The United States has announced its withdrawal from Iraq and actually seems to be on schedule; in the meantime, our favorite parties and politicians in Iraq have not done all that well in the Iraqi elections despite our support. The Shi'i religious leaders in Najaf openly dismiss the idea of an Islamic Republic and are increasingly competing with us, instead of following our lead. In Afghanistan, the Americans seem to be serious about announcing a date certain for withdrawal, and they even seem to be edging up to a Karzai reconciliation strategy with the Taliban. How can we attack them with a straight face when they behave this way!]

"There has also not been any correction of the dark policy of Bush towards Iran's nuclear program or [the United State's] opposition towards the Iranian nation..."

[Their willingness to meet with us and that dastardly offer of a uranium swap were hugely embarrassing. Now every time we sit down with a foreign leader we have to listen to tiresome suggestions that we should reconsider our position on the uranium swap – even from the Russians and Chinese. You can't trust anyone these days!]

"We do not want anything from the United States. The Iranian nation demands its rights to be recognized and respected..."

[All we want from the Americans is the return of George Bush! Even John McCain would be an improvement. I wonder if Sarah Palin has any chance? We'll keep our fingers crossed.]

"The Islamic Republic has not become isolated, rather, it is expanding [its foreign relations] ever more and is finding new friends...If they have claims, they must show it in their actions so the Iranian nation gradually trusts them..."

[We have never been so alone since the earliest years of the revolution. Even dictators and police states are privately expressing sympathy to us for the way our crackdown on the Green Movement attracted sympathetic attention all over the world. And it's all the fault of that &! Obama and the %$#! internet. The shah never had all these problems. Ah, for the good old days...]

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Jake Sullivan
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 11:51 AM
To: H
Subject: Iran lang

B6

These Review Conferences have been held every five years for the last four decades.

We know there are some countries who will choose not to be constructive.

B5

Page Denied

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 10:25 AM
To: H; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Schedule request

Lona has logged a message at her office

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Apr 30 08:51:35 2010
Subject: Schedule request

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 6:53 AM
To: H
Subject: Natalegawa is confirmed for 7:30am.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 3:58 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Netanyahu

Yes we figured that?

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:56:19 2010
Subject: Netanyahu

I'd like one-on-one time w him.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 11:16 AM
To: H
Subject: remind me to discuss

B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 3:36 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: May 12 - [redacted] invitation from [redacted]

B6

From: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 2:29 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Cheryl Mills
Subject: May 12 - [redacted] invitation from [redacted]

- If there's any chance the Secretary will be in town, we'd love to have her stop by!

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 3:58 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Espinosa

News to me
They want you to call the new ukrainian foreign minister but that's all I know.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:57:10 2010
Subject: Espinosa

Am I supposed to call her tomorrow?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Tillemann, Tomicah S <TillemannTS@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:01 PM
To: H; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: Water speech

The plan is to have a large screen off to your side so that it won't get in the way of a tight shot. We've worked with National Geographic on the photos -- some of which are quite stunning -- and they'll pace the presentation slowly with long transitions so it's not distracting. I've folded the images into the text I'm sending you, but you'll have a teleprompter on stage tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:55:50 2010
Subject: Re: Water speech

Thanks so much. As to visuals, will we have handouts or power point on screen?

----- Original Message -----
From: Tillemann, Tomicah S <TillemannTS@state.gov>
To: H; Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:54:45 2010
Subject: Re: Water speech

Yes -- I'm finalizing the visuals now and should have it for you in the next half hour.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:52:40 2010
Subject: Water speech

Will I get a draft later today?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 5:10 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Maternal health and abortion
Attachments: 2010-4-30 Maternal Health and Abortion (2).docx

Attached is a memo from Melanne, Jen, and Rachel on maternal health and abortion.

---

From: Klein, Jennifer L
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 4:04 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Vogelstein, Rachel; Verveer, Melanne S
Subject: Sorry, noticed a typo

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 9:20 AM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: H
Subject: FW: Call with Secretary Clinton

fyi

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 10:40 PM
To: 'Thomas F. McLarty'
Subject: RE: Call with Secretary Clinton

Dear Mack:

Thank you for following up on this matter. I know she appreciated your conversation and has been concerned about this matter.

I will flag for Lona – this week is relatively hectic so it may be a weekend or next week call but will flag now as this issue is ripe.

Best.

cdm

From: Thomas F. McLarty [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 10:24 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Call with Secretary Clinton

Dear Cheryl,

Good morning on a consequential and indeed historic week in the life of our country given the passage of health care reform. President Obama was courageous, persevering and skilled in his leadership and efforts. Having said that, in my humble opinion, he would not have been successful had it not been for President Clinton's, Hillary's and our efforts in 1994. That's my story and I'm sticking to it, and I believe it's true.

I know this has been a particularly demanding week in the life of the Secretary and in your life as well. Having Netanyahu, AIPAC and a major trip to Mexico to fight the narco-traffickers is a formidable task even for Hillary Clinton.

Cheryl, I would like to respectfully request a brief meeting or phone call with Secretary Clinton following up on the conversation she initiated with me at the Vital Voices event regarding the IDB. It's my sense and belief that this matter needs to be carefully handled for a number of reasons including the longstanding friendship that both the Secretary and President Clinton have with Luis Alberto Moreno. I also have another important and timely matter (personal not business) that I would like to discuss with Hillary in our time together.

As I think you know, I try to be very judicious about these types of requests. I think 15 minutes either in person or by phone will be adequate to cover both of these subjects. As always, I appreciate your consideration relating to my request. Thank you and I'll await your guidance and direction.

Personally,
Mack

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:09 PM
To: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: RE: Netanyahu

Any preference to front or back end? He is set for 2:45pm.

-----Original Message-----
From: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 3:58 PM
To: H; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Netanyahu

Yes we figured that?

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:56:19 2010
Subject: Netanyahu

I'd like one-on-one time w him.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 5:15 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Maternal health and abortion

yes

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 5:13 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: Maternal health and abortion

Can you fax it to my DC house?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Apr 30 17:10:19 2010
Subject: Maternal health and abortion

Attached is a memo from Melanne, Jen, and Rachel on maternal health and abortion.

From: Klein, Jennifer L
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 4:04 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Vogelstein, Rachel; Verveer, Melanne S
Subject: Sorry, noticed a typo

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 6:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Oil spill

I'm not
For a few reasons

First, calmness is not such a bad thing in these moments. Calm is not cavalier, which you weren't

Second, you're not the EPA administrator or Interior Secretary - nobody will see you as a front line cabinet officer on this

Third, if this is still out of control on Sunday, the administration has bigger problems

So I'm really not worried.
Here it is again which might allay your concerns

SECRETARY CLINTON: Well, David, I think that the President has ordered the departments that deal with this – Homeland Security, Interior, Environmental Protection, Defense – to all immediately not only do everything possible to mitigate the effects of this spill, but to try to come up with recommendations going forward. The first order of business, however, is to try to get this spill under control, which has been, as you know, very difficult, and to prevent further damage to the coastline along Louisiana to the fishing waters, to the wildlife. I think it does raise questions which the President has said have to be answered. He put forth a very comprehensive approach that included the potential of drilling off of our own shores. That is a national security concern because we have to do better to lessen our dependence on foreign oil. But it has to be done safely. It can't be done at the risk of having to spend billions of dollars cleaning up these spills. So as with so much in these difficult areas, it's going to require a balancing act.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Oil spill
Sent: Apr 30, 2010 6:04 PM

I'm worried that by Sunday my answer will seem too calm under the circumstances.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:11 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: [redacted] letter B5

There is a proposed letter that should be in your weekend reading materials. Adding Huma to see if she's seen it. [redacted] B5

[redacted] I will make sure it gets to you now.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 3:55 PM
To: Valenzuela, Arturo A
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: [redacted] letter B5

[redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 10:16 AM
To: H
Subject: H: Haaretz chief columnist on Bibi's visit. Sid http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/1158992.html

Aluf Benn / Netanyahu leaves U.S. disgraced, isolated and weaker

By Aluf Benn

Details emerging from Benjamin Netanyahu's visit to Washington remain incomplete, but the conclusion may nonetheless be drawn that the prime minister erred in choosing to fly to the United States this week. The visit - touted as a fence-mending effort, a bid to strengthen the tenuous ties between Netanyahu and U.S. President Barack Obama - only highlighted the deep rift between the American and Israeli administrations.

The prime minister leaves America disgraced, isolated, and altogether weaker than when he came.

Instead of setting the diplomatic agenda, Netanyahu surrendered control over it. Instead of leaving the Palestinian issue aside and focusing on Iran, as he would like, Netanyahu now finds himself fighting for the legitimacy of Israeli control over East Jerusalem.

Advertisement

The most sensitive and insoluble core issues - those which when raised a decade ago led to the dissolution of the peace process and explosion of the second intifada - are now being served as a mere appetizer.

At the start of his visit, Netanyahu was tempted to bask in the warm welcome he received at the AIPAC conference, at which he gave his emotional address on Jerusalem.

Taking a page from Menachem Begin, he spoke not on behalf of the State of Israel, but in the name of the Jewish people itself and its millennia of history.

His speech was not radical rightist rhetoric. Reading between the lines, one could spot a certain willingness to relinquish West Bank settlements as long as Israel maintains a security buffer in the Jordan Valley.

But at the White House, the prime minister's speech to thousands of pro-Israel activists and hundreds of cheering congressmen looked like an obvious attempt to raise political capital against the American president.

Knowing Netanyahu would be reenergized by his speech at the lobby, Obama and his staff set him a honey trap. Over the weekend they sought to quell the row that flared up during U.S. Vice President Joe Biden's trip here two weeks ago, and U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton described Netanyahu's response to the ultimatums Washington presented to him as "useful."

Special envoy George Mitchell made a televised visit to the prime minister's bureau Sunday to invite Netanyahu to the White House. Washington, it seemed, was trying to make nice.

Far from it. Just when Netanyahu thought he had resolved the crisis by apologizing to Biden, Clinton called him up for a dressing down.

This time as well, Netanyahu almost believed the crisis had passed, that he had survived by offering partial, noncommittal answers to the Americans' questions. Shortly before meeting with Obama, Netanyahu even warned the Palestinians that should they continue to demand a freeze on construction, he would postpone peace talks by a year.

His arrogant tone underscored the fact that Netanyahu believed that on the strength of his AIPAC speech, he could call the next few steps of the diplomatic dance.

But then calamity struck. At their White House meeting, Obama made clear to his guest that the letter Netanyahu had sent was insufficient and returned it for further corrections. Instead of a reception as a guest of honor, Netanyahu was treated as a problem child, an army private ordered to do laps around the base for slipping up at roll call.

The revolution in the Americans' behavior is clear to all. On Sunday morning Obama was still anxiously looking ahead to the House of Representatives vote on health care - the last thing he wanted was a last-minute disagreement with congressmen over ties with Israel.

The moment the bill was passed, however, a victorious Obama was free to deal with his unruly guest.

The Americans made every effort to downplay the visit. As during his last visit in November, Netanyahu was invited to the White House at a late hour, without media coverage or a press conference. If that were not enough, the White House spokesman challenged Netanyahu's observation at AIPAC that "Jerusalem is not a settlement."

The Americans didn't even wait for him to leave Washington to make their disagreement known. It was not the behavior Washington shows an ally, but the kind it shows an annoyance.

The approval of construction at the Shepherd Hotel in Sheikh Jarrah, announced before his meeting with Obama, again caught Netanyahu unawares. Apparently the special panel appointed after the Ramat Shlomo debacle to prevent such surprises failed its first test.

Netanyahu is having his most difficult week since returning to office, beginning with the unfortunate decision to relocate the planned emergency room at Ashkelon's Barzilai Medical Center and lasting through his humiliating jaunt through Washington.

Returning to Israel today, Netanyahu will need to work hard to rehabilitate his image, knowing full well that Obama will not relent, but instead demand that he stop zigzagging and decide, once and for all, whether he stands with America or with the settlers.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 7:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Shuttle

Of course.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Apr 30 19:18:22 2010
Subject: Shuttle

Lona---Pls cancel the 9 and I'll let you know about tomorrow. I may have to take a later shuttle or even wait until Sunday. Just not sure yet. Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 9:50 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Shuttle schedule

Well most of the weekend planes are the little planes. Calling mario now to see. .

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Apr 30 21:44:22 2010
Subject: Shuttle schedule

Pls cancel the 8am but what are the times later and are any of them the large planes instead of the new littler ones?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 10:15 PM
To: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: Re: Shuttle schedule

Mario will know for sure but the only larger plane from the website seems to be the 10am. There is an 8am, 10am, 12pm, 2pm and 4pm tomorrow.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(direct) B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
To: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Apr 30 21:50:08 2010
Subject: Re: Shuttle schedule

Well most of the weekend planes are the little planes. Calling mario now to see. .

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Apr 30 21:44:22 2010
Subject: Shuttle schedule

Pls cancel the 8am but what are the times later and are any of them the large planes instead of the new littler ones?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 12:25 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Mack McLarty

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Thu Mar 25 12:24:22 2010
Subject: Mack McLarty

Pls put him on my call list and call to ask how late tonight or early tomorrow I can call him.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, April 30, 2010 10:18 PM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; H
Subject: Re: Shuttle schedule

Haven't heard back from him
That's very possible. Could be a dc plane that need to ends up in ny for monday. Ill confirn.

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: Huma Abedin; H
Sent: Fri Apr 30 22:14:38 2010
Subject: Re: Shuttle schedule

Mario will know for sure but the only larger plane from the website seems to be the 10am. There is an 8am, 10am, 12pm, 2pm and 4pm tomorrow.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] direct)

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
To: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Apr 30 21:50:08 2010
Subject: Re: Shuttle schedule

Well most of the weekend planes are the little planes. Calling mario now to see. .

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Apr 30 21:44:22 2010
Subject: Shuttle schedule

Pls cancel the 8am but what are the times later and are any of them the large planes instead of the new littler ones?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 1:45 PM
To: H
Cc: Macmanus, Joseph E; DiMartino, Kitty; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: Updated Pakistan Plan
Attachments: Pak PD Plan Update for US McHale - 12MAR10.pptx

I have attached a copy of the status report for the Pakistan Communications Plan which was approved last September. You will note that we have made progress on many fronts. The Post has significantly increased its engagement with the media and responds immediately to rumors and inaccurate stories. There has also been a significant increase in the number of exchange participants. We are continuing to experience difficulty in filling critical positions and I am working with Nancy Powell to address this issue.

Please let me know if you have any questions or comments.

JM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Tillemann, Tomicah S <TillemannTS@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:15 PM
To: H; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: Water speech

I've sent the file to Ops. They'll fax over a black and white version momentarily, and send a color copy via courier.

----- Original Message -----
From: Tillemann, Tomicah S
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 16:00:53 2010
Subject: Re: Water speech

The plan is to have a large screen off to your side so that it won't get in the way of a tight shot. We've worked with National Geographic on the photos -- some of which are quite stunning -- and they'll pace the presentation slowly with long transitions so it's not distracting. I've folded the images into the text I'm sending you, but you'll have a teleprompter on stage tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:55:50 2010
Subject: Re: Water speech

Thanks so much. As to visuals, will we have handouts or power point on screen?

----- Original Message -----
From: Tillemann, Tomicah S <TillemannTS@state.gov>
To: H; Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:54:45 2010
Subject: Re: Water speech

Yes -- I'm finalizing the visuals now and should have it for you in the next half hour.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:52:40 2010
Subject: Water speech

Will I get a draft later today?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 1:45 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Mack McLarty

He is available until about 645 tonight. After that he catches a flight to london. I will add to your grid.

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Thu Mar 25 12:24:22 2010
Subject: Mack McLarty

Pls put him on my call list and call to ask how late tonight or early tomorrow I can call him.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 3:52 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: FW: Registered: 111 Member States plus the EU, Ministers from 22 countries (plus EU High Representative and 3 State Secretaries)

Importance: High

Haiti Donor Conference Update.

See below.

We have calls for you to call Qatar and UAE for funds (also on your call sheet was Saudis and Kuwait – have not seen them register yet nor have they told our embassies yet).

Also – am going to head to Haiti for day on the CoDEL and sit with GOH on the development authority – just had long convo with WJC.

cdm

---

From: DeMarcellus, Roland F
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 3:24 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A; Siemer, Marguerite E; Klevorick, Caitlin B; Laszczych, Joanne; Warnholz, Jean-Louis; Reynoso, Julissa; Williams, Stacy D
Subject: FW: Registered: 111 Member States plus the EU, Ministers from 22 countries (plus EU High Representative and 3 State Secretaries)
Importance: High

Cheryl,
Great turn out! 22 Ministers so far. Note the Cuban FM. Happy to see the Qatari PM/FM and UAE Minister of State. Hopefully that means some money. Best, Roland

---

From: Sudha Srivastava [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 2:26 PM
To: Jordan Ryan; DeMarcellus, Roland F; Phyllis Powers; Eva Busza; Alexandra Barahona Posada; Ion Botnaru
Subject: FW: Registered: 111 Member States plus the EU, Ministers from 22 countries (plus EU High Representative and 3 State Secretaries)
Importance: High

FYI

Sudha Srivastava
Chief
Programme and Operations Support Cluster
Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery

UNDP

One United Nations Plaza (Room DC1 -2064)
New York, NY 10017
Tel: (212) 906 – 5357; Fax: (212) 906- 6887
email:

skype:

B6

From: Harald Friedl
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 1:59 PM
To: Elisabeth Diaz
Cc: Sudha Srivastava; Bruno Lemarquis; Nancy Victorino; Imelda Panguito
Subject: Registered: 111 Member States plus the EU, Ministers from 22 countries (plus EU High Representative and 3 State Secretaries)
Importance: High

Dear team,
Here is the latest info: Thanks Nancy and Imelda for your valuable contributions!
Harald

---

Info regarding registrations:

Member States

- 111 Member States (including Palestine Authorities and Holy See; this does not include Haiti) and the EU (HR Ashton) have so far registered.
- We are now following up with Canada, Jamaica and Uruguay who have indicated presence at ministerial level but have not registered yet .

Ministers who have registered:

1. Argentina: Jorge Taiana, Ministro de Relaciones Exteriores
2. Belgium: Charles Michel, Minister for Development Cooperation
3. Bolivia: Nicolas Maduro Moros, Ministrer of People's Power for Foreign Affairs of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela
4. Brasil: Celso Amorim, Minister of External Relations
5. Colombia: Adriana Mejia Hernandez, Vice Minister of Multilateral Affairs
6. Cyprus: Marcos Kyprianou, Minister of Foreign Affairs
7. Dominican Republic: Carlos Morales Troncoso, Minister of Foreign Affairs
    - Temitocles Montas, Minister of Economy and Planning
    - Louis Bogaert, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs
8. Estonia: Urmas Paet, Foreign Minister
9. France: Bernard Kouchner, Ministre des Affaires Etrangeres
10. Haiti: President René Preval, Prime Minister Jean-Max Bellerive
11. Ireland: Peter Power, Minister for Overseas Development
12. Japan: Katsuya Okada, Minister for Foreign Affairs
13. Madagascar: Hyppolite Rarison Ramaroson, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs

14. Mexico: Patricia Espinosa, Foreign Relations Minister
15. Cuba: Bruno Rodriguez Parrilla, Ministro de Relaciones Exteriores
16. South Africa: Sue van der Merwe, Deputy Minister of International Relations and Cooperation
17. Spain: Maria Teresa Fernandez de la Vega, First Vice President of the Government
    - Soraya Rodriguez-Ramos, Secretary of State for International Cooperation for Development
18. Qatar: Hamad bin Jassim bin Jabr Al-Thani, Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs
19. Thailand: Kasit Piromya, Minister of Foreign Affairs
20. The Gambia: Ousman Jammeh, Minister of Foreign Affairs , International Cooperation and Gambians abroad
21. United Arab Emireates: Reem Al Hashimi, Minister of State of the UAE
22. USA: Hillary Clinton, Secretary of State
23. Canada, Jamaica and Uruguay (?) – no confirmation yet

Others

1. EU: Catherine Ashton, EU High Representative
2. Finland: Ritva Koukku-Ronde, Under-Secretary of State: Development Cooperation and Development Policy
3. Norway: Ingrid Fiskaa, State Secretary for International Development
4. Switzerland: Martin Dahinden, State Secretary

VIPs invited:

| | Organization | Status |
|---|---|---|
| Catherine Ashton | EU | Registered, attending |
| Robert Zoellick, President | Worldbank | Registered, attending |
| Mr. Dominique Strauss-Kahn Managing Director | IFM | Registered, attending |
| Mr. Samuel Worthington President & CEO | InterAction | Registered, attending |
| Mr. Tadateru Konoé, President, International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent | IFRC | Registered |
| Mr. Luis Alberto Moreno President | Inter-American Dev. Bank | His assistant will confirm participation later today |

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | | |
| Mr. Jose Miguel InsulzaSecretary-GeneralReplaced by:Mr. Albert RamdinAssistant Secretary-General | Organization of American States | attending |
| Mr. Edwin CarringtonSecretary-General | CARICOM | Not attending but will replaced by a representative |
| Dr. Compton BournePresident | Carribean Dev. Bank | Not attending but will register a representative |
| Jakob Kellenberger, President, International Committee of the Red Cross(Mr Fuellemann, Observer of ICRC to UN is registered) | ICRC | Open |

---

Harald Friedl
UNDP - Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery,
One United Nations Plaza DC1, 20th floor, room 2036
New York, NY, 10017, USA
Tel: 1-212-906-6955
www.undp.org/cpr

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Valenzuela, Arturo A <ValenzuelaAA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:16 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Gonzalez, Juan S
Subject: Re: [redacted] letter B5

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valenzuela, Arturo A
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:54:41 2010
Subject: [redacted] letter

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 5:05 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: A view from Iran

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B5

Bill Luers sent me this report yesterday

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 07/30/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 03/24/2035

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:30 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: [redacted] letter B5

[redacted]

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:14 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: [redacted] letter

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Mar 21 16:11:23 2010
Subject: RE: [redacted] letter

There is a proposed letter that should be in your weekend reading materials. Adding Huma to see if she's seen it. [redacted]

[redacted] I will make sure it gets to you now.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 3:55 PM
To: Valenzuela, Arturo A
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: [redacted] letter

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 6:05 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Mtg. w/Reyes

FYI.

---

From: Jacobson, Roberta S
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 5:55 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: Valenzuela, Arturo A; Verma, Richard R; Johnson, David T; Pascual, Carlos (Mexico City)
Subject: Mtg. w/Reyes

Jake, Huma: Could you let the Secretary know that I met with Chairman Reyes this afternoon at his request, to talk about Tuesday's trip to Mexico and the High Level Group. He indicated he might be speaking with the Secretary very soon on this. He was very pleased with the Secretary's leadership of such a high level delegation, the support for President Calderon's efforts, and the attention Mexico and the border is now getting, and had spoken yesterday with Secretary Napolitano. He stressed that he thinks we should be doing more for Mexico (he mentioned only wanting to get funding for Mexican improvements to ports of entry). I ran into [redacted] going in as I was leaving. [redacted] expressed some frustration at Mexican positions during yesterday's meeting, but was extremely grateful for the US participation and the Secretary's leadership. We agreed to get together very soon to review "action items" coming out of the meeting. B6

Many thanks, Roberta

Roberta S. Jacobson
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Bureau of Western Hemisphere Affairs
Department of State
(202)-647-8387

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:32 PM
To: H
Subject: China currency memo

You should have Bob's memo on China currency, which he worked through with Bill. See below his further elaboration:

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:40 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: China currency memo

Okay -- working on that.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:39 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: China currency memo

I don't have memo.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Mar 21 16:32:02 2010
Subject: China currency memo

You should have Bob's memo on China currency, which he worked through with Bill. See below his further elaboration:

B5

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:13 PM
To: H
Subject: Mexico

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:50 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Netanyahu

I believe so.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 4:11 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Netanyahu

At beginning. Will there be a camera spray?

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: Huma Abedin; H
Sent: Sun Mar 21 16:09:16 2010
Subject: RE: Netanyahu

Any preference to front or back end? He is set for 2:45pm.

-----Original Message-----
From: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 3:58 PM
To: H; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Netanyahu

Yes we figured that?

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Mar 21 15:56:19 2010
Subject: Netanyahu

I'd like one-on-one time w him.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 7:18 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Clinton intro

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Shapiro, Andrew J
To: Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J; 'Dan_Schwerin@clinton.senate.gov' <Dan_Schwerin@clinton.senate.gov>; Lew, Jacob J; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Burns, William J; Mills, Cheryl D; Prince, Jonathan M; Chollet, Derek H; Verma, Richard R; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Mar 21 18:53:29 2010
Subject: Fw: Clinton intro

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Ester Kurz
To: Shapiro, Andrew J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 18:47:33 2010
Subject: Clinton intro

B6

Andrew -

It's a good strong intro that not only mentions her great record in the Senate, but also highlights her record as Secretary of State - fighting against efforts to delegitimize Israel, defending Israel against Goldstone, supporting the increase in aid to Israel, and fighting to secure strong sanctions against Iran. Should set a strong, positive tone.

Have a safe trip,

Ester

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 8:32 PM
To: H
Subject: Dan...

...Is ready to come pick up the speech when you have it done. Just shoot him and email. I think it's really close. It's gone out to the team again for any serious flags or omissions, but they've been warned you're line editing.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 8:33 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Dan...

Also, you'll get Bibi points tonight, fresh from the road.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Mar 21 20:31:51 2010
Subject: Dan...

...Is ready to come pick up the speech when you have it done. Just shoot him and email. I think it's really close. It's gone out to the team again for any serious flags or omissions, but they've been warned you're line editing.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 8:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Dan...

Will do.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 20:50:32 2010
Subject: Re: Dan...

I just went over edits w Dan. Let me know if there are any serious changes from reviewers.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Mar 21 20:31:51 2010
Subject: Dan...

...Is ready to come pick up the speech when you have it done. Just shoot him and email. I think it's really close. It's gone out to the team again for any serious flags or omissions, but they've been warned you're line editing.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 8:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Dan...

Yep

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 21 20:50:49 2010
Subject: Re: Dan...

For the meeting?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Mar 21 20:32:47 2010
Subject: Re: Dan...

Also, you'll get Bibi points tonight, fresh from the road.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Mar 21 20:31:51 2010
Subject: Dan...

...Is ready to come pick up the speech when you have it done. Just shoot him and email. I think it's really close. It's gone out to the team again for any serious flags or omissions, but they've been warned you're line editing.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 7:44 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Update on text fundraising

FYI
----- Original Message -----
From: Dowd, Katie W
To: Crowley, Philip J; Chitre, Nanda S; Reines, Philippe I; Adler, Caroline E; DiMartino, Kitty; Schwerin, Daniel B
Sent: Tue Jan 19 07:02:24 2010
Subject: Update on fundraising

Just wanted to update all that we are now at $23.4 million raised which is donations made up over over 2 million people.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Huma Abedin [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 11:34 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: RE: Espinosa

checked in with carlos and he says it would be useful, but not critical for you to call espinosa will have points for you tomorrow in case you want to do _____

From: H
Sent: Sunday, March 21, 2010 3:57 PM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Espinosa

Am I supposed to call her tomorrow?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 12:12 AM
To: H

I just want to drop you a note congratulating you on the vote tonight on health care, that whatever its imperfections the establishment of the principle is a vindication. You might take a moment of personal privilege tomorrow to express gratitude to Nancy Pelosi, the House, and the President for finally achieving the work of years. Sid

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 7:11 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: AIPAC

See below. [redacted] How would you like to proceed? B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Mar 22 07:07:38 2010
Subject: Fw: AIPAC

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Knopf, Payton L
To: Schwerin, Daniel B; Prince, Jonathan M; Djerassi, Alexander M
Cc: Rudman, Mara; Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
Sent: Mon Mar 22 06:57:39 2010
Subject: AIPAC

[redacted] B5

[redacted] B5

We are boarding a plane from Amman to DC shortly but can be reached via the Operations Center if there are questions.

Thanks.

Payton

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 7:34 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Haiti recovery blueprint includes foreign donors

fyi

---

From: Nora Toiv [mailto:nora.toiv
Sent: Monday, March 22, 2010 7:29 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Haiti recovery blueprint includes foreign donors

B6

Posted on Sun, Mar. 21, 2010

Haiti recovery blueprint includes foreign donors

BY JACQUELINE CHARLES
jcharles@MiamiHerald.com

Call it the $100 million club.

That's the amount each donor nation will have to ante up for a say in Haiti's early recovery under a plan Haitian President René Préval plans to present at an international donors conference in New York at month's end.

While Haitian and foreign disaster experts were tallying the cost to rebuild after the Jan. 12, 7.0-magnitude earthquake -- $11.5 billion -- Préval and his advisors have been quietly negotiating the blueprint of the development plan that will shape Haiti's reconstruction over the next decade.

``It moves it in the right direction,'' Mark Schneider, senior vice president of the Washington D.C.-based International Crisis Group, said of the plan, which he has seen. ``I've said, the first phase of reconstruction is a decade. The real test is a generation and hopefully with partnerships both inside and outside of Haiti, it will continue for that time period.''

The plan includes creation of an Interim Haitian Recovery Commission that will -- for the first time -- seek to guide how and where aid is spent by giving both Haitians and foreigners a vote in reconstruction priorities and projects over the next 18 months. Haiti's president will retain veto power and there's a starring role for former U.S. President Bill Clinton if he wants it.

The blueprint is certain to come under plenty of scrutiny in Haiti, a country plagued and in-fighting among donors. Over the years, billions of dollars in aid -- often delivered after hurricanes or political coups -- has failed to produce any signs of lasting progress in a country that remains the poorest in the Western Hemisphere.

Clinton, who is to visit Haiti Monday along with former President George W. Bush, will be asked to help lead Haiti's reconstruction planning over the short-term as co-chair -- along with the Haitian prime minister -- of the commission, several sources confirmed to The Miami Herald.

Clinton, who is already in charge of the international relief effort for the United Nations, has not said whether he'll accept the job as Haiti's reconstruction czar but he has championed the strategy, saying the goal is to provide to Haitians the success that has long eluded them.He and Bush are visiting Haiti, where more than 200,000 people were killed in the quake, in their roles as co-chairs of the Clinton Bush Haiti Fund. The private U.S. fundraising effort, initiated by President Obama, has raised more than $36 million.

The commission's goal will be to plan and coordinate reconstruction priorities and projects over the next 18 months with recommendations from a 20-member board made up of Haitians and foreign donors. Eventually, the commission would morph into the Haiti Development Authority (HDA), a central planning agency tasked with approving all reconstruction projects in Haiti regardless of which country or aid agency is funding it.

The authority's executive director, like that of the commission, likely would be a well-respected Haitian.

``Haitians must have the chance to lead the rebuilding of Haiti,'' said U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's chief of staff Cheryl Mills, a key person in talks. ``Development authorities have helped other countries that have large donor communities to accomplish their visions -- we want no less for Haiti and its citizens.''

The original plan, first reported by The Herald last month, was modeled on the successful reconstruction authority created in Indonesia after the 2004 tsunami and presented by Mills to Préval and top Haitian officials last month. Other countries and multilateral institutions also presented plans to the Haitian government.

The U.S. plan has since undergone several revisions at Préval's urging.

Among them: offering a voting seat on the commission's board to each donor pledging $100 million or more over the next two years and donors who provide $200 million in debt cancellation. As a result, Venezuela is among the likely donors to help review and approve projects. Initially 16 members, the board was expanded to give a say-so to Haiti's private sector and labor unions and the 15-nation sub-regional Caribbean Community (CARCIOM). The plan also establishes a Multi-donor Trust Fund, administered by the World Bank, to possibly pool donors' dollars for reconstruction projects.

For decades, Haiti has been plagued by a lack of planning and coordination among donor nations and aid groups as they battled among each other in the poverty-stricken country.

Using the Indonesian model employed in Indonesia after the Asian tsunami, plan supporters say the reconstruction commission offers Haiti the best chance to lead its own redevelopment and to change the way donors do business, ending an era where aid groups spend budgets larger than Haitian ministries without any accountability to the Haitian people. But that can only be achieved in Haiti, say supporters, if donors and their projects are coordinated, and in line with Haiti's vision and post-disaster reconstruction needs, which will be presented at the March 31 New York conference and remains a work in progress while the government seeks input from various Haitian groups, including the Diaspora. Also Haiti's parliament must vote on the creation of the Interim Haitian Recovery Commission.

Still, the idea of putting Haiti's reconstruction into the hands of one central authority -- or having some donors channel their money into a trust fund -- is not without detractors. Some argue that the authority could render government ministries obsolete because projects would now bypass them, while others point out that a similar World Bank fund in the Sudan has been troubled by rules leaving schools and healthcare facilities undone as hundreds of millions of dollars remain unspent.

Meanwhile, Haitian government officials worry that donors may not want to change the way they do business with Haiti, rendering the reconstruction a failure before it gets started.

``The creation of the [trust fund] or the [Haiti Development Authority] are improvements to changing the paradigm if and only if everybody plays the game -- putting most of their money in the fund -- and access to the funds is more flexible than the usual process of disbursing from the international donors,'' Haitian Prime Minister Jean-Max Bellerive told The Herald.

In the past, donors have pledged hundreds of millions of dollars to assist Haiti but have fallen short in disbursing those dollars -- or at times spent the money on projects without consulting the Haitian government about whether the projects were needed.

Last week, as representatives of the Haitian government and others met to prepare for the New York conference, Bellerive warned that ``New York could be a failure if we don't reach an agreement on the structure for the coordination and the organization of the trust fund...(and) don't manage to establish together the priorities for immediate investments,'' to begin reconstructing the country.

© 2010 Miami Herald Media Company. All Rights Reserved.
http://www.miamiherald.com

Read more: http://www.miamiherald.com/2010/03/21/v-print/1540944/haiti-recovery-blueprint-includes.html#ixzz0iu6nDynD

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 10:46 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Call with Secretary Clinton

---

From: Thomas F. McLarty [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 10:24 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Call with Secretary Clinton

Dear Cheryl,

Thanks for your trademark prompt, clear and courteous response. As always, it and you are appreciated knowing the demands of your responsibilities.

I fully realize that the Secretary is engaged (understatement of the year), so I will wait on and anticipate her call as soon as she has a convenient window to do so. The matters I would like to discuss with Hillary are very timely and important but not urgent.

I will be available on my cell phone or through my assistant who will be traveling with me. Coordinates in London are as follows.

Claridge's: 020-7629-8860

Thank you.

Mack

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D [mailto:MillsCD@state.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 10:40 PM
To: Thomas F. McLarty
Subject: RE: Call with Secretary Clinton

Dear Mack:

Thank you for following up on this matter. I know she appreciated your conversation and has been concerned about this matter.

I will flag for Lona – this week is relatively hectic so it may be a weekend or next week call but will flag now as this issue is ripe.

Best.

cdm

---

From: Thomas F. McLarty [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2010 10:24 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Call with Secretary Clinton

Dear Cheryl,

Good morning on a consequential and indeed historic week in the life of our country given the passage of health care reform. President Obama was courageous, persevering and skilled in his leadership and efforts. Having said that, in my humble opinion, he would not have been successful had it not been for President Clinton's, Hillary's and our efforts in 1994. That's my story and I'm sticking to it, and I believe it's true.

I know this has been a particularly demanding week in the life of the Secretary and in your life as well. Having Netanyahu, AIPAC and a major trip to Mexico to fight the narco-traffickers is a formidable task even for Hillary Clinton.

Cheryl, I would like to respectfully request a brief meeting or phone call with Secretary Clinton following up on the conversation she initiated with me at the Vital Voices event regarding the IDB. It's my sense and belief that this matter needs to be carefully handled for a number of reasons including the longstanding friendship that both the Secretary and President Clinton have with Luis Alberto Moreno. I also have another important and timely matter (personal not business) that I would like to discuss with Hillary in our time together.

As I think you know, I try to be very judicious about these types of requests. I think 15 minutes either in person or by phone will be adequate to cover both of these subjects. As always, I appreciate your consideration relating to my request. Thank you and I'll await your guidance and direction.

Personally,
Mack

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Tauscher, Ellen O <TauscherEO@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 11:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Tomorrow

Thank you for your message. I am currently traveling on official business and can be reached on my Blackberry. If you need assistance with a scheduling matter please reach out to my Scheduler, Eric Woodard, at 202-647-1522.

For all other issues needing immediate attention please contact my Chief-of-Staff, Simon Limage, at 202-647-1749.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 10:46 AM
To: H
Subject: message from Jerry Hauer re Haiti coordindation

Jerry, as you may recall, was Guiliani's homeland security guy in NYC [redacted] and became one of the world's experts. He also worked for Clinton Admn and helped with disaster relief (including earthquakes) around the world. He called me today with some suggestions (some of which may be moot), so I asked him to put them into a memo. Here it is, for what it's worth: B6

I think the fundamental issue is that no one seems to be in charge and no one person has been tasked with trying to pull all of the pieces together into a short term and long term plan. Obviously in the short term, search and rescue and food and water are the main priorities. There seems to be little communication between the various areas where people have congregated and a central command post where agencies can call or radio for additional supplies including food, water and medical.

I don't recommend DoD be put in charge of this. They rarely have the kind of touch that brings together all the necessary agencies under one roof. I would set up a central command that has representatives from all federal agencies in one place. There is no reason things should be this disorganized. I would break the island into grids and assign one person to be the coordinator for each of the grids. That person will be responsible for all activities within their grid and will report activities to the island on-scene coordinator. We should get a radio company like Motorola to set up temporary towers and give the State Department several hundred radios so everyone involved in the response is able to communicate with the command post and with each other.

I think one of the most important roles for DoD is to provide security for the rescue teams and medical teams. They also should be responsible for the operation of the airport, for off loading planes and for scheduling all incoming flights so there is no lost time waiting for planes to land. I also think DoD should be responsible for airlifting supplies that are requested by each one of the grid coordinators. Additionally, the helicopters should be used to move critical patients to the hospital ship on the way and to the aircraft carrier currently on station. At least once a day, the coordinator assigned by the President and the Secretary of State should be responsible for getting situation reports from all agencies on site, particularly regarding food and water, security, medical and search and rescue.

The lack of command and control is allowing the situation to become more chaotic rather than more coordinated. I believe that if the Secretary were to talk to the other nations involved through the UN, they would be supportive of better coordination.

Bottom line is that there is no order to the operation and you need strong people in there who can speak on behalf of the President and the Secretary and get things under control quickly.

I hope this is helpful. If you or the Secretary have any questions please feel free to call me on my cell [redacted]. We leave for Tokyo at 7:15 am tomorrow and transfer to a United flight due back in DC at 2:30 pm tomorrow. B6

Please give the Secretary my best regards. I hope to see you soon.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 8:13 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: French Communique re: U.S. role in Haiti
Attachments: 01.19 Haiti.doc

FYI below on French statement on Haiti and U.S. support:

Paris, January 19, 2010

COMMUNIQUÉ

During their telephone conversation last week, the President of the Republic and President Obama expressed the resolute commitment of our two countries in Haiti, and decided to combine their efforts in order to deal with the urgent humanitarian situation and to respond, in the future, to the enormous reconstruction requirements.

The French authorities have, since then, been entirely satisfied with the cooperation between our two countries and, beyond that, the continuous coordination between the Crises Centers of the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs and the U.S. Department of State. They want to pay tribute to the United States' extraordinary mobilization efforts in support of Haiti and the vital role it is playing on the ground.

---

From: Gonzalez, Juan S
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 7:42 PM
To: TaskForce-1; Haiti DLC Distro
Subject: French Communique re: U.S. role in Haiti

Positive statement by the French.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: LECHEVALLIER Aurelien [mailto: [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:23 AM
To: Gonzalez, Juan S
Cc: Lorenz, Andrew R; Martin, Elizabeth K
Subject: TR: Haiti/US/France

Juan:

Please circulate the attached document as much as needed.

Could I give you a quick call regarding the longer term reconstruction Conference initiative?

Thanks,

aurélien

[redacted]

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 10:35 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: reception invitation

Will do.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Sat Mar 13 10:31:21 2010
Subject: Fw: reception invitation

Pls regret.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Mar 12 21:08:27 2010
Subject: FW: reception invitation

fyi

From: Lomellin, Carmen
Sent: Friday, March 12, 2010 7:02 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: reception invitation

Hi Cheryl – hope you're holding up ok with all of the Haiti work.

I'm having a little reception on 3/22 6pm over at the OAS to celebrate my swearing-in. I'd love it if you could come by for a glass of champagne and a little jazz music!

I'd love to invite the Secretary. Is that even proper protocol? Although she probably couldn't attend, I'd like to share it with her. Your thoughts?

Ambassador Carmen Lomellin

U.S. Permanent Representative to the OAS

2201 C. St, NW #5914

Washington, DC 20520

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 2:32 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: FT: Google to shut China search engine

FYI

---

From: Shear, David B
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 2:31 PM
To: Campbell, Kurt M; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: FT: Google to shut China search engine

Fyi

Google to shut China search engine

By Richard Waters in San Francisco and Kathrin Hille in Beijing

Published: March 12 2010 20:11 | Last updated: March 13 2010 02:16

Google has drawn up detailed plans for the closure of its Chinese search engine and is now "99.9 per cent" certain to go ahead as talks over censorship with the Chinese authorities have reached an apparent impasse, according to a person familiar with the company's thinking.

In a hardening of positions on both sides, the Chinese government also on Friday threw down a direct public challenge to the US search company, with a warning that it was not prepared to compromise on internet censorship to stop Google leaving.

The signs that Google was on the brink of closing Google.cn, its local search service in China, came two months after it promised to stop bowing to censorship there. But while a decision could be made very soon, the company is likely to take some time to follow through with the plan as it seeks an orderly closure and takes steps to protect local employees from retaliation by the authorities, the person familiar with its position said.

Google is also seeking ways to keep its other operations in China going, although some executives fear that a backlash from the Chinese authorities could make it almost impossible to keep a presence in the country.

When the search giant first promised to end censorship in response to what it claimed were a series of cyber-attacks mounted from inside China, many China-watchers warned that its public defiance of Beijing would provoke a stern response.

On Friday, Li Yizhong, minister for industry and information technology, said: "If [Google] takes steps that violate Chinese laws, that would be unfriendly, that would be irresponsible, and they would have to bear the consequences."

One person close to the search company, meanwhile, said that its senior executives remained "adamant" about ending the censorship. The company has also ruled out keeping the search service going by handing majority control, or even the entire business, to a local player, this person said.

Google's executives have made it clear that they still hope to stay in the country, whatever the fate of Google.cn. "It's very important to know we are not pulling out of China," Eric Schmidt, Google's chief executive, told the Financial Times at the time. "We have a good business in China. This is about the censorship rules, not anything else."

The company's other operations, which pre-date the launch of Google.cn four years ago, include its research centre in Beijing and a sales force that sells advertising on the Chinese-language Google.com search service, based outside China, to advertisers inside the country.

Mr Li encouraged Google to continue its operations in the country. "[Google] has taken 30 per cent of the Chinese search market.

"If you don't leave, China will welcome that, if you don't leave, it will be beneficial for the development of the internet in China."

--
**********
Evan S. Medeiros
Washington, DC 20010

B6

**********

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 9:00 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: (AP) Israel to investigate settlement announcement during Biden visit

fyi

---

From: O'Neill, Douglas S
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 6:07 PM
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Subject: (AP) Israel to investigate settlement announcement during Biden visit

JERUSALEM - (AP) Israel's premier has ordered an investigation into how government officials announced plans for a new Jewish housing project in east Jerusalem during a visit by Vice President Joe Biden. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's office said he ordered the probe late Saturday after he met with top Cabinet ministers. While Biden was visiting earlier this week, Israel's Interior Ministry said it approved plans to build 1,600 homes for Jews in disputed east Jerusalem. Biden condemned the announcement, which overshadowed his visit. Netanyahu has apologized for the poor timing of the announcement, but given no sign he will cancel the construction orders. The Palestinians claim east Jerusalem as their capital, and Israel's annexation of the area is not internationally recognized.

Doug O'Neill
Watch Officer
Operations Center
Department of State
(202) 647-1512

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 11:17 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RCH

B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 10:52 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: UPDATE: LES incident in Ciudad Juarez

From: Syed, Zia S
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 10:04 PM
To: Macmanus, Joseph E; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants
Subject: UPDATE: LES incident in Ciudad Juarez

Further to my e-mail below on the killing of an LES, her spouse, and another LES spouse from our Consulate in Ciudad Juarez, names have now been released and a few more details:

From: Macris, Gregory P
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 9:57 PM
Subject: RE: LES incident in Ciudad Juarez

Colleagues –

Passing on the latest information (received at 2150) from PO McGrath. The name of the deceased American Citizen Services LES is Lesley Enriquez. Her husband, killed in the same attack, was U.S. citizen Arthur Haycock Redelfs. The name of the surviving Fraud Prevention Unit LES is Hilda Antillon. The name of her deceased husband is Alberto Salcido Cisneros.

THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION IS REPRODUCED FROM THE CONSUL GENERAL'S EMAIL: RSO Greg Houston is seeking to make arrangements to return to post tomorrow. Post management will try to schedule a town hall meeting for all staff, the meeting to be held at the Consulate at the earliest feasible time tomorrow or Monday (a Mexican holiday).

We just held a town hall meeting yesterday afternoon to discuss the anticipated Mexican travel warning/authorized departure/compensation issues. We also briefed the staff on a Wardens Message we were making yesterday about trouble anticipated this weekend at what is believed to be a cartel-owned or –associated nightclub located very close to the Consulate General. There is concern within the Consulate community that the attacks today were a cartel response to the Wardens Message. At this time we have no indication that this linkage with the Wardens Message exists, and there is information that in the case of Ms. Enriquez and her husband the attack was a case of mistaken identity on the part of the cartel hit squad.

Our information on the Salcido/Antillon incident is still largely incomplete. Although the fact that both families had attended the same social event earlier in the afternoon suggests some kind of linkage between the two attacks, so far we have not been able to make a determination one way or the other as to whether such a linkage exists.

From: Syed, Zia S
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 9:55 PM
To: Macmanus, Joseph E; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants
Subject: FW: LES incident in Ciudad Juarez

See below for a developing story coming out of Ciudad Juarez -- one LES (locally engaged staff working for the consulate), her spouse, and another LES spouse were killed today, apparently by a drug cartel. The details we have are below, but more are coming.

---

From: Macris, Gregory P
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 9:47 PM
To: SES-O_SWO-Only; S_SpecialAssistants; D(L); D(S)_Officers; P; WHAStaffers; WHA-FO; CA-OCS-Duty-Principals; CA-Staffers Mailbox; M_SpecialAssistants; SES_DutyDeputies; DS Command Center
Subject: FW: LES incident in Ciudad Juarez

Colleagues,

Ciudad Juarez Principal Officer Ray McGrath called Ops at 2050 to report two killings involving LES employees.

Earlier on March 13, drug cartel hit teams fired upon two separate privately owned vehicles at two separate locations. The incidents happened between 1400 and 1700 local. In one vehicle, the husband of a LES was killed. In the second, the LES and her husband were killed. Both LES were at the same social event before the hit. The PO is working to find out if anyone else is at risk.

PO McGrath said colleagues in El Paso state there are some indications that the attack was a case of mistaken identity. A vehicle of similar make & model is being targeted by the cartels.

RSO Greg Houston is currently in Monterrey, but is working with his A/RSO to send a spot report. RSO Houston's is reachable in Monterrey at [redacted] B6

Both LES were State FSNs. Ops is attempting to obtain their names.

Gregory Macris
Senior Watch Officer

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 11:21 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; H
Subject: RE: RCH

agree

-----Original Message-----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 2010 11:17 PM
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com'
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RCH

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 12:17 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Please Pass to the Secretary

Per the earlier email

cdm

-----Original Message-----
From: Pascual, Carlos (Mexico City)
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 12:15 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J; Valenzuela, Arturo A
Subject: Please Pass to the Secretary

Madam Secretary -

One of our Mexican staff and the husbands of two Mexican employees were killed last night in Juarez.

In one case a Mexican employee and her husband were leaving a party hosted by another Mexican employee. They were in separate vehicles. He was stopped by a hit squad and killed before her.

In a second case a Mexican employee and her husband were killed leaving the same party. Their 3 month-old baby was left alive in the back seat.

We have activated all investigative and intelligence channels to learn all we can. The head of Mexico's intelligence service called to express President Calderon's condolences and to offer any support we need. Patricia Espinosa is aware. She may call you. We will let you know if there are any leads on why this tragedy occurred.

Carlos Pascual

---

This message has been sent via BlackBerry

---

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Huma Abedin
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 5:54 AM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tonight

Will ask.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Mar 26 05:49:52 2010
Subject: Tonight

Is it too late to get a plane for tonight? (I have too much stuff!) If it is, I may prefer to shuttle back Sunday and fly to Ottawa straight from DC on Monday in order to get better organized for next week.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 13, 2010 6:48 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: Question

Absolutely. That's what you have a think tank for! On a related note, while it may not be useful for Pakistan, I think we shd find ways to work qddr briefings/discussions into our strategic dialogues w/ india and china, to talk about how we are rethinking both diplomacy and development -- maybe also w/ South Africa. AM

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Mar 13 17:47:24 2010
Subject: Question

Can you have S/P prepare a comparison of India, Pakistan and Banghladesh over the last 20-30 years on as many factors reflecting their respective economic and social development as you can muster? I suspect it will prove useful in my meetings w Pak leaders in ten days.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 9:53 AM
To: H
Subject: Carlos

Did cheryl pass this message from carlos pascual to you? Wanted to make sure u saw

Madam Secretary -

One of our Mexican staff and the husbands of two Mexican employees were killed last night in Juarez.

In one case a Mexican employee and her husband were leaving a party hosted by another Mexican employee. They were in separate vehicles. He was stopped by a hit squad and killed before her.

In a second case a Mexican employee and her husband were killed leaving the same party. Their 3 month-old baby was left alive in the back seat.

We have activated all investigative and intelligence channels to learn all we can. The head of Mexico's intelligence service called to express President Calderon's condolences and to offer any support we need. Patricia Espinosa is aware. She may call you. We will let you know if there are any leads on why this tragedy occurred.

Carlos Pascual

RELEASE
IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 10:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: AIPAC speech

Will do.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 14 08:57:19 2010
Subject: AIPAC speech

B5

RELEASE
IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 10:35 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Carlos

Yes. Any specific window?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Mar 14 10:10:01 2010
Subject: Re: Carlos

Yes. And I'd like to talk w him today. Can you ask ops to set up?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Mar 14 09:52:50 2010
Subject: Carlos

Did cheryl pass this message from carlos pascual to you? Wanted to make sure u saw

Madam Secretary -

One of our Mexican staff and the husbands of two Mexican employees were killed last night in Juarez.

In one case a Mexican employee and her husband were leaving a party hosted by another Mexican employee. They were in separate vehicles. He was stopped by a hit squad and killed before her.

In a second case a Mexican employee and her husband were killed leaving the same party. Their 3 month-old baby was left alive in the back seat.

We have activated all investigative and intelligence channels to learn all we can. The head of Mexico's intelligence service called to express President Calderon's condolences and to offer any support we need. Patricia Espinosa is aware. She may call you. We will let you know if there are any leads on why this tragedy occurred.

Carlos Pascual

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 10:59 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Carlos

Ok calling you with carlos after u r done with rch.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Mar 14 10:39:16 2010
Subject: Re: Carlos

Next hour would be good.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Mar 14 10:35:04 2010
Subject: Re: Carlos

Yes. Any specific window?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Mar 14 10:10:01 2010
Subject: Re: Carlos

Yes. And I'd like to talk w him today. Can you ask ops to set up?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Mar 14 09:52:50 2010
Subject: Carlos

Did cheryl pass this message from carlos pascual to you? Wanted to make sure u saw

Madam Secretary -

One of our Mexican staff and the husbands of two Mexican employees were killed last night in Juarez.

In one case a Mexican employee and her husband were leaving a party hosted by another Mexican employee. They were in separate vehicles. He was stopped by a hit squad and killed before her.

In a second case a Mexican employee and her husband were killed leaving the same party. Their 3 month-old baby was left alive in the back seat.

We have activated all investigative and intelligence channels to learn all we can. The head of Mexico's intelligence service called to express President Calderon's condolences and to offer any support we need. Patricia Espinosa is aware. She may call you. We will let you know if there are any leads on why this tragedy occurred.

Carlos Pascual

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 7:33 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Kabul IG report

Yes. I will be finished going through it this morning before your meeting. Happy to discuss/report when you come in.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Mar 26 07:23:02 2010
Subject: Kabul IG report

Were you able to get a copy of it?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 7:38 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 3/26/10 Friday

7:30 am PHONE CALL w/LEBANESE PRIME MINISTER SAAD HARIRI
Private Residence

8:45 am DEPART Private Residence *En route White House

8:55 am ARRIVE White House

9:00 am WEEKLY MEETING w/POTUS
9:30 am Oval Office

9:35 am DEPART White House *En route State Department

9:40 am ARRIVE State Department

9:45 am OFFICE TIME
10:15 am Secretary's Office

10:20 am DEPART State Department *En route White House

10:25 am ARRIVE White House

10:30 am POTUS STATEMENT ON START TREATY AGREEMENT
11:15 am (t) Oval Office/White House Briefing Room

11:20 am (t) DEPART White House *En route State Department

11:25 am ARRIVE State Department

11:30 am MEETING w/SE SCOTT GRATION
12:00 pm Secretary's Office

12:00 pm BILATERAL w/CYPRIOT FM MARKOS KYPRIANOU
12:30 pm Secretary's Conference Room *Camera spray in Treary Room preceding.

12:00 pm OFFICE TIME
1:00 pm Secretary's Office

1:00 pm PHOTOS
1:10 pm Secretary's Office

1:15 pm INTERVIEW w/NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC
2:00 pm Monroe Room, 8th Floor

2:00 pm DROP BY w/KEN MILLER
2:20 pm Secretary's Office

2:20 pm DROP-BY w/LISSA
2:40 pm Secretary's Office

2:45 pm REMARKS TO STATE DEPARTMENT SPRING INTERNS,
3:15 pm STAY-IN-SCHOOL AND CO-OP STUDENTS, CIVIL SERVICE CAREER ENTRY PROFESSIONALS, AND PRESIDENTIAL MANAGEMENT FELLOWS Loy Henderson Conference Room

3:30 pm CONFERENCE CALL w/SENATORS MAX BAUCUS AND JON TESTER
3:45 pm Secretary's Office

3:45 pm OFFICE TIME
5:15 pm Secretary's Office

5:20 pm DEPART State Department *En route Washington National Airport

5:25 pm PHONE INTERVIEW w/JESSIE LICHTENSTEIN, NYT MAGAZINE

5:35 pm En route Washington National Airport

5:40 pm ARRIVE Washington National Airport

6:00 pm DEPART Washington National Airport via US Airways Shuttle #2182
En route New York, NY

7:24 pm ARRIVE New York, New York-LaGuardia Airport

7:30 pm DEPART New York-LaGuardia Airport
En route Private Residence

8:20 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN PART B6

---

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 7:39 AM
To: H
Subject: Cong. John Larsen

Has a call into to you. It's on your grid. His staff would not provide a subject matter. Rich is aware of this call.
202-225-2265 w Asst: Marvene
[redacted] c B6
**###

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 7:40 AM
To: H
Cc: d.cheng [redacted] B6
Subject: RE: Dara

Dennis, what is dara's last name?

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 5:43 AM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Fw: Dara

More info for Dara call.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dennis Cheng [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Mar 20 16:53:45 2010
Subject: Re: Dara

Just in case, her home # is [redacted]

On Mar 20, 2010, at 3:51 PM, H <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:

> What are her numbers so I can call [redacted]?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 7:43 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: Afghanistan & Pakistan Morning News Highlights March 26

FYI, early read out of Pakistan media reaction to strategic dialogue. Not bad overall at this point.

Pakistan Media:

Coverage of the final round of the U.S.-Pak Strategic Dialogue dominated the front pages of all newspapers and hourly bulletins of TV networks on Friday morning. Media highlighted reports that the U.S. and Pakistan sought "wide-ranging, long term and substantive partnership," and "established a policy steering group for further talks on strategic issues." The signing of a letter of intent between the U.S. and Pakistan to help reconstruction of priority roads in Malakand division also received prominent display. Secretary of Defense Gates' meeting with his Pakistani counterpart, and his comments that the "U.S. wants to increase the military funding of Pakistan" received coverage. Pak Army Chief General Kayani's remarks that the "military is willing to forgo its requests for hardware to ensure that Pakistan's energy and economic needs are met" were also reported. Reports that GOP and the opposition are not on same page regarding talks with the U.S. received front-page display. The civilian nuclear deal issue made news as "The News," reported that the "FO seeks to hide unease over nuclear snub" and "The Nation," reported on front-page that "U.S. affirms durable partnership but no civilian N-deal." However Foreign Office spokesman's remarks, that the "government is optimistic about a positive outcome" was also reported. Terming the U.S. commitment of $125 million for the power sector, as "crucial," "The News," noted in its editorial that "it needs to be translated into action urgently." Its sister mass-circulated Urdu daily, "Jang," however noted with a word of caution, that "we think that the present U.S. overtures to woo Pakistan are not completely altruistic. It remains to be seen what Washington wants from Islamabad." A prominent columnist, Ayesha Siddiqa noted in "Dawn," that "the U.S. might have realized that it will have to listen to Pakistan and feel concerned about its inherent insecurity vis-à-vis India's role in Afghanistan."

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: pverveer
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 12:29 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: How's the weekend gone?

On my way home. The conference was a big success. I met with Cherie Blair on the gender gap in cell phones - technology that may be even be more tramsformative than microcredit. Phil was with GSMA for the release of their study so we're going to figure out how we van get industry on board, etc. Cherie was involved in the GSMA study as well. We'll both be at CGI retreat later this week where we'll raise it as well. She sends her love.
The conference referenced you over and over. Dr Mukwege personally thanked you for your leadership. Some ofthe congolese women parliamentarians want to see if they can raise theirvoices to some good end the way the Liberians did. We will see what we can do to help them.
DVF had an incredible awards ceremony last night. Our Haitian activist got one of the 50K prizes. DVF went on and on about how your leadership was really responsible for the evening and what it represented.The awardees all mentioned you. I talked to last night. I think we can get. him to fund college scolarships for afghan women.
Another awardee was one of our afghan women who's bldg schools.
I can't thank you enuf for Friday. I thought your legacy was manifested in every way.
BTW, Paul Charron was there last night and sends his best. He's such a good guy.

I'm heading home exhausted but gratified by what we've been able to do.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'pverveer
Sent: Mar 14, 2010 11:15 AM
Subject: How's the weekend gone?

I thought Friday was fabulous and thank you, as always, for all you do and are. Kudos, my friend.

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 2:53 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Call list

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Sun Mar 14 14:17:57 2010
Subject: Call list

Take off:

Miliband
Carson
Netanyahu
Mubarak
Powell
Rice
Lautenberg--but ask Rob to do note
Pascual

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 5:11 PM
To: H
Subject: Statement

Does this work for you?

Statement by the Secretary

Murders in Ciudad Juárez, Mexico

Today the men and women of the Department of State are mourning the murder of three people connected to the United States Consulate General in Ciudad Juárez, Mexico. One American consulate employee was killed along with her husband, and the husband of a Mexican employee was also killed. I offer my deepest sympathies to the family, loved ones and colleagues of these victims. The safety and security of our personnel and their families in Mexico and at posts around the world is always our highest priority. I have spoken with our Ambassador in Mexico and we are working with the Government of Mexico to do everything necessary to protect our people and to ensure that the perpetrators of these horrendous acts are brought to justice.

These appalling assaults on members of our own State Department family are, sadly, part of a growing tragedy besetting many communities in Mexico. They underscore the imperative of our continued commitment to work closely with the Government of President Calderón to cripple the influence of trafficking organizations at work in Mexico. This is a responsibility we must shoulder together, particularly in border communities where strong bonds of history, culture, and common interest bind the Mexican and the American people closely together.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Rooney, Megan <RooneyM@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 8:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: UN speech

Thank you for the kind words! It meant so much to see you speak, and was wonderful to witness that room full of energetic women and men clapping and nodding--a microcosm of the global movement. I loved the additional stories you told, esp the women working in the fields and how they could shut down the economy on their own in one swoop.

I'm hard at work on Ireland -- feeling my nationalism stirring!

Thank you again for the email and the chance to join you in NY.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Rooney, Megan
Sent: Sun Mar 14 18:30:18 2010
Subject: UN speech

Thx for all you did to make it work. I thought it went very well and I was so pleased you could be there. Now, onto the Irish!

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 8:16 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Please Pass to the Secretary

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Mar 14 19:57:53 2010
Subject: Fw: Please Pass to the Secretary

Note also reference to travel

----- Original Message -----
From: Pascual, Carlos (Mexico City)
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Sullivan, Jacob J; Jacobson, Roberta S
Sent: Sun Mar 14 19:45:54 2010
Subject: Re: Please Pass to the Secretary

Madame Secretary,

Thank you again for your call this morning. Following our discussions, we've had a number of conference calls with our security teams in Mexico and Washington. We would like to take you up on your willingness to stay directly involved.

Our recommendation is that

B5

Thank you for guidance and support on this matter.

Carlos Pascual

---
This message has been sent via BlackBerry
---

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Pascual, Carlos (Mexico City); Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J; Valenzuela, Arturo A
Sent: Sat Mar 13 23:17:01 2010

Subject: RE: Please Pass to the Secretary

done

-----Original Message-----
From: Pascual, Carlos (Mexico City)
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 12:15 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J; Valenzuela, Arturo A
Subject: Please Pass to the Secretary

Madam Secretary -

One of our Mexican staff and the husbands of two Mexican employees were killed last night in Juarez.

In one case a Mexican employee and her husband were leaving a party hosted by another Mexican employee. They were in separate vehicles. He was stopped by a hit squad and killed before her.

In a second case a Mexican employee and her husband were killed leaving the same party. Their 3 month-old baby was left alive in the back seat.

We have activated all investigative and intelligence channels to learn all we can. The head of Mexico's intelligence service called to express President Calderon's condolences and to offer any support we need. Patricia Espinosa is aware. She may call you. We will let you know if there are any leads on why this tragedy occurred.

Carlos Pascual

---
This message has been sent via BlackBerry
---

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Sunday, March 14, 2010 11:52 PM
To: H
Subject: H; fyi. Sid

H: Assume you have seen the "Petraeus briefing story" or otherwise are familiar with its contents. In any case, here it is. It was blazoned atop the Foreign Policy website, the most widely read site on international affairs daily, owned and published by the Washington Post. Below the piece is a note by its writer about his sourcing that appeared on a small website elsewhere. Also, I've included an article by Max Blumenthal, who spends his time on this issue and plans to move to Israel for about 6-8 months to write a book. He tracks a lot of things that do not appear in the mainstream press. Sid http://mideast.foreignpolicy.com/posts/2010/03/14/the_petraeus_briefing_biden_s_embarrassment_is_not_the_whole_story

The Petraeus briefing: Biden's embarrassment is not the whole story

Posted By Mark Perry Saturday, March 13, 2010 -

On Jan. 16, two days after a killer earthquake hit Haiti, a team of senior military officers from the U.S. Central Command (responsible for overseeing American security interests in the Middle East), arrived at the Pentagon to brief Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Adm. Michael Mullen on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The team had been dispatched by CENTCOM commander Gen. David Petraeus to underline his growing worries at the lack of progress in resolving the issue. The 33-slide, 45-minute PowerPoint briefing stunned Mullen. The briefers reported that there was a growing perception among Arab leaders that the U.S. was incapable of standing up to Israel, that CENTCOM's mostly Arab constituency was losing faith in American promises, that Israeli intransigence on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict was jeopardizing U.S. standing in the region, and that Mitchell himself was (as a senior Pentagon officer later bluntly described it) "too old, too slow ... and too late."

The January Mullen briefing was unprecedented. No previous CENTCOM commander had ever expressed himself on what is essentially a political issue; which is why the briefers were careful to tell Mullen that their conclusions followed from a December 2009 tour of the region where, on Petraeus's instructions, they spoke to senior Arab leaders. "Everywhere they went, the message was pretty humbling," a Pentagon officer familiar with the briefing says. "America was not only viewed as weak, but its military posture in the region was eroding." But Petraeus wasn't finished: two days after the Mullen briefing, Petraeus sent a paper to the White House requesting that the West Bank and Gaza (which, with Israel, is a part of the European Command -- or EUCOM), be made a part of his area of operations. Petraeus's reason was straightforward: with U.S. troops deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan, the U.S. military had to be perceived by Arab leaders as engaged in the region's most troublesome conflict.

[UPDATE: A senior military officer denied Sunday that Petraeus sent a paper to the White House. "CENTCOM did have a team brief the CJCS on concerns revolving around the Palestinian issue, and CENTCOM did propose a UCP change, but to CJCS, not to the WH," the officer said via email. "GEN Petraeus was not certain what might have been conveyed to the WH (if anything) from that brief to CJCS."

(UCP means "unified combatant command," like CENTCOM; CJCS refers to Mullen; and WH is the White House.)]

The Mullen briefing and Petraeus's request hit the White House like a bombshell. While Petraeus's request that CENTCOM be expanded to include the Palestinians was denied ("it was dead on arrival," a Pentagon officer confirms), the Obama administration decided it would redouble its efforts -- pressing Israel once again on the settlements issue, sending Mitchell on a visit to a number of Arab capitals and dispatching Mullen for a carefully arranged meeting with the chief of the Israeli General Staff, Lt. General Gabi Ashkenazi. While the American press speculated that Mullen's trip focused on Iran, the JCS Chairman actually carried a blunt, and tough, message on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict: that Israel had to see its conflict with the Palestinians "in a larger, regional, context" -- as having a direct impact on America's status in the region. Certainly, it was thought, Israel would get the message.

Israel didn't. When Vice President Joe Biden was embarrassed by an Israeli announcement that the Netanyahu government was building 1,600 new homes in East Jerusalem, the administration reacted. But no one was more outraged than Biden who, according to the Israeli daily Yedioth Ahronoth, engaged in a private, and angry, exchange with the Israeli Prime Minister. Not surprisingly, what Biden told Netanyahu reflected the importance the administration attached to Petraeus's Mullen briefing: "This is starting to get dangerous for us," Biden reportedly told Netanyahu. "What you're doing here undermines the security of our troops who are fighting in Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan. That endangers us and it endangers regional peace." Yedioth Ahronoth went on to report: "The vice president told his Israeli hosts that since many people in the Muslim world perceived a connection between Israel's actions and US policy, any decision about construction that undermines Palestinian rights in East Jerusalem could have an impact on the personal safety of American troops fighting against Islamic terrorism." The message couldn't be plainer: Israel's intransigence could cost American lives.

There are important and powerful lobbies in America: the NRA, the American Medical Association, the lawyers -- and the Israeli lobby. But no lobby is as important, or as powerful, as the U.S. military. While commentators and pundits might reflect that Joe Biden's trip to Israel has forever shifted America's relationship with its erstwhile ally in the region, the real break came in January, when David Petraeus sent a briefing team to the Pentagon with a stark warning: America's relationship with Israel is important, but not as important as the lives of America's soldiers. Maybe Israel gets the message now.

Mark Perry's newest book is Talking To Terrorists

http://warincontext.org/2010/03/14/israel-is-putting-american-lives-at-risk/

My piece on the briefing of Admiral Mullen by CENTCOM senior officers has occasioned a great deal of comment, as well as some skepticism: how accurate is the account? Was it told to me by direct participants in the briefing? Is there any basis for imagining that Petraeus has any kind of hidden agenda, whether that is a desire to expand CENTCOM – or even hostility towards Israel.

I won't name my sources, even though it's clear to people in the Pentagon – and certainly to General Petraeus – who they are. Was I told of the briefing by the briefers themselves? I will only say that there were four people in the briefing – the two briefers, Admiral Mullen, and Admiral Mullen's primary adviser on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. I know two of the people involved in the briefing. Whether or not they are my sources is something for the reader to determine. The account is not only accurate, it's a precis of what actually happened. There is a lot more to it. The White House, State Department and Pentagon have not denied the account, and for good reason: it's true.

Is there any basis for imagining that Petraeus has any kind of hidden agenda in ordering the briefing?

I have been reporting on the American military for thirty years. My work on the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Four Stars, is the authoritative account on the subject. I have deeply rooted contacts in the military that go back thirty years. I have never met a senior military officer whom I do not admire. There is no greater insult than to believe that General Petraeus or any other senior American military officer would use the lives of American soldiers as a lever to enhance their own political future. My sense is that General Petraeus neither likes nor dislikes Israel: but he loves his country and he wants to protect our soldiers. The current crisis in American relations with Israel is not a litmus test of General Petraeus's loyalty to Israel, but of his, and our, concern for those Americans in uniform in the Middle East.

It is, perhaps, a sign of the depth of "the Biden crisis" that every controversy of this type seems to get translated into whether or not America and its leaders are committed to Israel's security. This isn't about Israel's security, it's about our security.

http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/03/pastor-hagee-and-netanyahus-lovefest-on-eve-of-bidens-arrival-in-israel/

Netanyahu and Pastor Hagee's Lovefest on Eve of Biden's Arrival in Israel

On 03.09.10, By Max
(Videos recorded by Rachel Tabachnick; more videos coming shortly.)
Vice President Joe Biden was greeted in Jerusalem with the announcement that the Israeli Interior Ministry approved the construction of 1600 new homes in Occupied East Jerusalem contrary to U.S. wishes and complicating Biden's mission to help jump start the peace process. But Biden should have known that Prime Minister Bibi Netanyahu intended to upset his plans by Netanyahu's appearance with John Hagee.
The day after a series of talks between US Special Envoy for the Middle East George Mitchell and Netanyahu, and a day before Biden's arrival, Netanyahu appeared onstage with Pastor John Hagee in Jerusalem. The occasion was Hagee's Night To Honor Israel, an event the far-right Texas-based preacher arranged to tout his ministry's millions in donations to Israeli organizations and to level bellicose rhetoric against Israel's perceived enemies.
At the gathering, Hagee called Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad "the Hitler of the Middle East" and denounced the Goldstone Report as "character assassination by an unbiased and uninformed committee."
Netanyahu welcomed the crowd of 1000 American evangelicals to Jerusalem, a city he described as "the undivided, eternal capitol of the Jewish people. Then, he told them, "I salute you! The Jewish people salute you!" He used the rest of his speech to call for "tough, biting sanctions" against Iran that "bite deep into its energy sector."
Hagee and Netanyahu appear together on stage:
×
In the audience were top-level members of the Israeli government, from Ambassador Michael Oren to Jerusalem Mayor Nir Barkat to Deputy Foreign Minister Danny Ayalon. Also present was Rabbi Shlomo Riskin, the chief rabbi of the illegal West Bank settlement of Efrat who gained notoriety for lobbying President Bill Clinton to pardon his friend, fugitive billionaire Marc Rich. Ayalon had stirred controversy days before when he refused to meet with a US congressional delegation brought to Israel by the progressive Jewish group J Street.
Part One of Hagee's speech:
×
Part Two:
×
Pastor Hagee in Jerusalem 3/8/10 (Part II) from Max J Blumenthal on Vimeo.
Hagee's ceremony featured a 15-minute film highlighting the recipients of donations from John Hagee Ministries that totaled $58 million since 2001. The recipients included Jewish settlements from the West Bank like Gush Etzion and Shomron, which was involved in promoting an "Obama Hilltop project" that promoted more settlement building and compared Obama to Pharoah. Hagee also announced funding for a pressure group run by the settlers evacuated from Gush Katif in Gaza in 2005. During Israel's assault on Gaza in 2009, a group of Gush Katif residents lobbied the Israel government to allow them to resettle the Palestinian coastal region.
Who is Hagee funding in Israel?
×
Who Is Hagee Funding In Israel? from Max Blumenthal on Vimeo.
The most notable of Hagee's funding recipients was an organization called Im Tirtzu. A student representative of this group appeared in the film to thank Hagee for "help[ing] us to ensure that students in Israel are on the right path, the path of Zionism, the love of Israel, the path of solidarity." Another student called for "the second revolution in Israel."
In February, Im Tirtzu funding a smear campaign against former Knesset member and New Israel Fund Director Naomi Chazan that included posters caricaturing her with a horn on her head. The group misleadingly accused the New Israel Fund of bankrolling 16 human rights organizations that contributed documentation to the Goldstone Report.
The smear campaign led to unsuccessful legislation in the Knesset designed to further cripple already marginalized Israeli human rights groups. Meanwhile, the Jerusalem Post fired Chazan as a columnist without explanation. Gideon Levy, a columnist for Ha'aretz, called Im Tirtzu "a McCarthyite movement" for its attacks on Chazan.
Although CUFI attempted to distance itself from Im Tirtzu's campaign, the organization's appearance during CUFI's Jerusalem ceremony suggested that Hagee would continue to provide it with funding well into the future.
Republican Senator John McCain repudiated the endorsement of Hagee during his 2008 presidential campaign after Hagee's statements describing the Holocaust as a fulfillment of divine prophecy came to light. Hagee has also said that he believed the anti-Christ was "partially Jewish, as was Adolph Hitler." However, none of Hagee's comments have deterred Israeli government officials from embracing him or accepting his millions in annual charity.

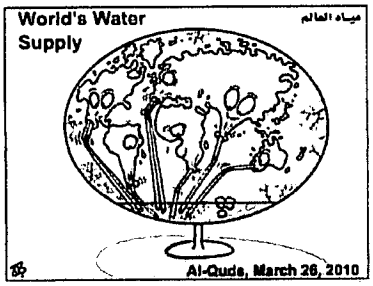
During Hagee's speech, he made no secret of his support for the illegal settlement enterprise that has been the source of difficulties between the US and Israel. "The settlements are not the problem," he boomed from the podium. "The problem is the refusal of Arab leaders to respect the right of Jewish people to live anywhere in the Middle East."



Hagee received a rousing ovation from the crowd and the Israeli government officials seated beside the podium when he proclaimed, "World leaders do not have the authority to tell Israel and the Jewish people what they can and cannot do in the city of Jerusalem. They don't have the authority to tell them what they can and cannot build, who can and and cannot live there."

The following day, on March 9, Vice President Joseph Biden arrived in Israel to meet with Netanyahu and officials from the Palestinian Authority. He told reporters after touching down that he saw "a moment of real opportunity."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 8:11 AM
To: Otero, Maria; Waxman, Sharon L; DiMartino, Kitty
Subject: FW: Pan Arab Press Cartoons for Friday, March 26, 2010 from the London-based Media Outreach Center
Attachments: Al-Quds, March 26, 2010.jpg

From Al Quds should be the front piece of all our presentations !

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Tauscher, Ellen O <TauscherEO@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 3:45 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Madam Secretary,
Thanks so much for the experience of a life time. It is my honor to work for you and learn from you.
See you this morning,
Best,
Ellen

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Tauscher, Ellen O
Cc: Huma Abedin [redacted] Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Thu Mar 25 22:59:25 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

B6

Ellen--I enjoyed our time together tonight and am looking forward to you and Jim T coming w me to the WH tomorrow. Come up to my office and we'll leave the State Dept around 10:15. See you then. Thx.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 1:56 PM
To: LGraham [redacted] Doug Band; jcooper [redacted] B6
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: IRHC Press release

I think coming out in next few hours so prepare WJC.

Cdm

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769040 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Paris, January 19, 2010

COMMUNIQUÉ

During their telephone conversation last week, the President of the Republic and President Obama expressed the resolute commitment of our two countries in Haiti, and decided to combine their efforts in order to deal with the urgent humanitarian situation and to respond, in the future, to the enormous reconstruction requirements.

The French authorities have, since then, been entirely satisfied with the cooperation between our two countries and, beyond that, the continuous coordination between the Crises Centers of the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs and the U.S. Department of State. They want to pay tribute to the United States' extraordinary mobilization efforts in support of Haiti and the vital role it is playing on the ground.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769040 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

---

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 8:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Year-end report

A draft of the year-end report is coming your way with Huma. It definitely needs your magic touch. I've done my best to craft something readable (and useful) in the midst of all the craziness.

Derek has read and commented. Cheryl will give her comments tomorrow. I'd be happy to circulate it to others who you would like to have weigh in.

Look forward to discussing tomorrow.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 8:58 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti
Attachments: 2010-01-19 Aid to Haiti.PDF

Importance: High

FYI – I think we should do

---

From: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 5:46 PM
To: Haiti DLC Distro; Merten, Kenneth H; Lindwall, David E; O'Neill, Maura (AID/A)
Subject: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti
Importance: High

Interesting offer to cooperate re Haiti by Cuban Govt. FYI. Julissa

---

From: Zuniga, Ricardo F
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 3:07 PM
To: TaskForce-1
Cc: 'Gray, Eugene'; Reynoso, Julissa; Kelly, Craig A; Webster, Christopher W; De Pirro, Velia M
Subject: FW: Haiti Note
Importance: High

Task Force – the attached diplomatic note was shared with PDAS Kelly by Cuban Interests Section Chief of Mission Jorge Bolaños today at 2:30 pm. It is an offer to cooperate in Haiti relief work, information regarding Cuban relief efforts in Haiti, and a request for info regarding USG relief operations on the ground in Haiti. WHA is following up on this matter, but pls convey this information to appropriate USAID and Task Force officials. We are prepared to offer medicine and other humanitarian supplies to Cuban relief personnel and have conveyed this to the Cuban government.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769047 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Cuba has publicly expressed its willingness to cooperate, without any exception, with all countries that are offering assistance to the Haitian people in the midst of the tragedy facing them.

We wish to know what kind of cooperation would be that which is being suggested by the US authorities.

At this moment we have more than 400 health cooperation workers in Haiti. This medical staff is made up by specialists in General Comprehensive Medicine (MGI), surgeons, orthopedic doctors, intensivists, anesthesiologists, pediatricians, clinicians, radiologists, nurses, and other health technicians. They are currently working in all ten Departments of the country. The number of health specialists will increase as new medical assistance centers are open.

Added to these, hundreds of Haitian doctors graduated in Cuba, residents and fifth-year medicine students who are being mobilized both in Haiti and in Cuba will immediately join the staff that is assisting the emergency cases and the population in general.

More than two hundred health cooperation workers are offering their services in four centers of Port-au-Prince: Peace Hospital (Delmas

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769047 Date: 08/31/2015

33); Renaissance Hospital, Ofatma Hospital, Leoganne Hospital. We have also an Itinerant Primary Health Care Brigade that is assisting the crowds gathered in the down-town area who have not been able to get to the medical assistance posts, as well as in some outskirts villages such as Arcahaie, Lagonave Island, Carrefour and Petit Goave, including other regions such as Les Cayes and Nippes.

Besides, emergency services are also offered in five Comprehensive Diagnostics Centers -hospitals equipped with adequate technology- located in Mirebalais, Aquin, Grand Goave, Anse-a-Veu and Raboteau.

At this moment, medical doctors and paramedics from Venezuela, Chile, Colombia, Mexico, Spain and Canada, as well as members of the religious orders "Daughters of Charity" and "Missionaries of the Risen Christ" are working together with the Cuban medical staff.

We are also cooperating with Namibia and Norway to convey assistance to Haiti.

Members of MINUSTAH have been taking care of security at the Peace Hospital (Delmas 33), and the Pan-American Health Organization (PAHO) has supplied our Medical Brigade with a number of medicines.

Our aid operations are being coordinated on the ground directly by our Ambassador to Haiti and the Head of the Cuban Medical Brigade.

Until January 18, the Cuban doctors had assisted 11 123 patients and performed 877 surgeries.

We need to know the location of the US hospitals or medical assistance centers installed in Port-au-Prince as well as their characteristics.

Cuba is concerned about the high number of persons affected who will require rehabilitation later on, and believes that this is one of the important aspects that need to be considered.

In the midst of the most tragic circumstances, there is a very dynamic process going on in Haiti. Cuba is trying to respond with utmost urgency to the additional needs and problems that are emerging. Any inaccuracy or change in data, which may result from the need to urgently respond to the situation created, will be rectified and notified.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 6:33 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Fw: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

[redacted] B5

From: Balderston, Kris M
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Mar 26 17:25:30 2010
Subject: FW: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

CM

[redacted] B5

Thghts

Kris

---

From: Haynie, Robert R
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 3:51 PM
To: Balderston, Kris M
Subject: FW: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

What do you think?

---

From: TJ Woodley [mailto[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 3:02 PM
To: Haynie, Robert R
Subject: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

Robert,

Are you sure that the USA Pavilion would not be in a sponsorship by Wynn Resorts (specifically Wynn Macau)? There CFO, Matt Maddox, has expressed strong interest.

The Wynn Macau well known brand in China and Steve Wynn is an extremely popular figure in China. In addition, he is well respected and well though of by the Chinese leadership and business leaders. A sponsorship by Wynn would be well received.

I should be able to get an answer by early next week, but don't want to look foolish if they would be rejected.

TJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:00 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Border Issues Update

fyi

---

From: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 5:40 PM
To: Haiti DLC Distro; Schwartz, Eric P; Robinson, David M; Powell, Catherine
Cc: De Pirro, Velia M
Subject: FW: Border Issues Update

Border still functional and migration apparently under control. Julissa

---

From: Norman, Alain G
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 4:47 PM
To: Reynoso, Julissa; De Pirro, Velia M; Smith, Willard T; Schadrack, Geoffrey F
Cc: Schimmel, Mike R; Lambert, Christopher A; Fitzgibbons, Timothy T
Subject: Border Issues Update

The latest regarding border issues:

a) Per EmbOff, border at Jimani remained disorganized but functional as in recent days.

b) The flow of persons across the border is constant, but no mass influx. However, official figures under-report the numbers of people crossing, as the data reflect only those being processed correctly. Some Haitians are sneaking across the border, per USG official. Haitian media also report "tens of thousands" leaving Port-au-Prince, some for the DR border. However, police officials say they have not seen increased illegal entry attempts in the mountains around the Jimani crossing.

c) A Haitian immigration official said that as of 1pm on 1/19 he had issued approximately 600 laissez-passes to travelers without documents. Dominican authorities at the other side of the border crossing are generally turning away travelers without a valid visa or official travel document. Medical emergency cases continue being allowed in.

d) The border crossing at Jimani was closed for 45 minutes after the Haitian colonel in charge of customs on the Haitian side began demanding "manifests" from vehicles trying to bring assistance across. GODR officials managed to talk the colonel into backing down, but plan to seek his removal. (Note: It is unclear whether this was an attempt at rent-seeking by the Haitian official, but some reporting implied that. End Note).

e) As the next Market Day in Jimani will be Thursday, efforts are already underway to see if market activities that day can be organized so as not to block/hamper through-put of assistance / evacuation vehicles.

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED based on the definitions provided in E.O.12958.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Border Issues Update

Not now - calling [redacted] then going to bed. B6

XO

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Jan 19 21:24:50 2010
Subject: Re: Border Issues Update

Ok. Anything else to discuss? Hope you get some sleep.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 19 21:00:00 2010
Subject: FW: Border Issues Update

fyi

From: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 5:40 PM
To: Haiti DLC Distro; Schwartz, Eric P; Robinson, David M; Powell, Catherine
Cc: De Pirro, Velia M
Subject: FW: Border Issues Update

Border still functional and migration apparently under control. Julissa

From: Norman, Alain G
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 4:47 PM
To: Reynoso, Julissa; De Pirro, Velia M; Smith, Willard T; Schadrack, Geoffrey F
Cc: Schimmel, Mike R; Lambert, Christopher A; Fitzgibbons, Timothy T
Subject: Border Issues Update

The latest regarding border issues:

a) Per EmbOff, border at Jimani remained disorganized but functional as in recent days.

b) The flow of persons across the border is constant, but no mass influx. However, official figures under-report the numbers of people crossing, as the data reflect only those being processed correctly. Some Haitians are sneaking across the border, per USG official. Haitian media also report "tens of thousands" leaving Port-au-Prince, some for the DR border. However, police officials say they have not seen increased illegal entry attempts in the mountains around the Jimani crossing.

c) A Haitian immigration official said that as of 1pm on 1/19 he had issued approximately 600 laissez-passes to travelers without documents. Dominican authorities at the other side of the border crossing are generally turning away travelers without a valid visa or official travel document. Medical emergency cases continue being allowed in.

d) The border crossing at Jimani was closed for 45 minutes after the Haitian colonel in charge of customs on the Haitian side began demanding "manifests" from vehicles trying to bring assistance across. GODR officials managed to talk the colonel into backing down, but plan to seek his removal. (Note: It is unclear whether this was an attempt at rent-seeking by the Haitian official, but some reporting implied that. End Note).

e) As the next Market Day in Jimani will be Thursday, efforts are already underway to see if market activities that day can be organized so as not to block/hamper through-put of assistance / evacuation vehicles.

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED based on the definitions provided in E.O.12958.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 7:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

I am traveling outside of the country, with intermittent access to my email. If you need to reach me urgently please contact Nora Toiv, Toivnf@state.gov, 202-647-8633 or Joanne Laszczych, laszczychj@state.gov, 202-647-5548.

Thank you

cdm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:45 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti

---

From: Kelly, Craig A
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Jan 19 21:38:15 2010
Subject: Re: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti

Hi Cheryl. We already are. This note is a response to our offer to help get supplies to Cuban doctors. We are following up on the ground. Note delivered by Cuban Interests Section chief to me today, and we have informed Cubans that we will reach out in PaP. It's a good way to ibcrease emergency med care to Haitians. Best, ck

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Reynoso, Julissa; Merten, Kenneth H; Lindwall, David E; Sullivan, Jacob J; Kelly, Craig A
Sent: Tue Jan 19 20:58:16 2010
Subject: RE: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti

I think we should consider doing

From: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 5:46 PM
To: Haiti DLC Distro; Merten, Kenneth H; Lindwall, David E; O'Neill, Maura (AID/A)
Subject: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti
Importance: High

Interesting offer to cooperate re Haiti by Cuban Govt. FYI. Julissa

---

From: Zuniga, Ricardo F
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 3:07 PM
To: TaskForce-1
Cc: 'Gray, Eugene'; Reynoso, Julissa; Kelly, Craig A; Webster, Christopher W; De Pirro, Velia M
Subject: FW: Haiti Note
Importance: High

Task Force – the attached diplomatic note was shared with PDAS Kelly by Cuban Interests Section Chief of Mission Jorge Bolaños today at 2:30 pm. It is an offer to cooperate in Haiti relief work, information regarding Cuban relief efforts in Haiti, and a request for info regarding USG relief operations on the ground in Haiti. WHA is following up on this matter, but pls convey this information to appropriate USAID and Task Force officials. We are prepared to offer medicine and other humanitarian supplies to Cuban relief personnel and have conveyed this to the Cuban government.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 7:58 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: NYT Mag

That was great, thank you for doing

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 6:24 AM
To: H
Subject: Are you up?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 7:01 AM
To: H
Subject: Calls confirmed

730 Afghan FM Rasoul
745 Maldivian President Nasheed

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 9:26 PM
To: H
Subject: On the ground in miami

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 7:20 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: It Never Rains.....

fyi

From: Merten, Kenneth H
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 10:53 PM
To: Smith, Daniel B; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A
Cc: 'Susan Merten'
Subject: It Never Rains.....

I just got called by the French Ambo. [redacted] has had a cerebral haemmorage and needs to be medivaced. We're working on getting [redacted] on a plane to Miami. [redacted] was medivaced today. Army doctors tell me they just did their 100th operation in our multi-purpose (aptly named) conference room -- including 4 amputations. They joked: "Sorry, but you're gonna need a new carpet sir." B6

Let's see what tomorrow brings....

Kenneth Merten
Ambassador
U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti
Tel: 509-2-229-8000

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 7:31 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

---

From: Kennedy, Patrick F
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 7:29 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

Cheryl

I have been telling them for the last several days that they need to do rotations

Glad to see t hat they have come to the same conclusion

My ExecAsst is already working with WHA Mgt Director to plan this out

Regards

pat

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 7:19 AM
To: Lindwall, David E; Merten, Kenneth H; Curtis, Meghann A
Cc: Kennedy, Patrick F
Subject: RE: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

Adding Pat so we start planning for this.

---

From: Lindwall, David E
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 10:39 PM
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

The regional psychiatrist is coming in tomorrow. I will meet with him as soon as he arrives and lay out the situation for him and ask for his advice. It is clear that we need to start rotating personnel out soon even if it is just for a couple of days. I will work on Consular and the Control Room team to start these rotations. We will need to see if our medevacuees will become permanent before looking for replacements.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Merten, Kenneth H
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 10:35 PM

To: Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A
Cc: Lindwall, David E
Subject: RE: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

In the end they only medivaced one today. The other two still under observation. We could probably use good replacements. David? KM

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:21 PM
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

What about us rotating some other folks down and letting them come home?

---

From: Merten, Kenneth H
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 11:19 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: FW: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

FYI. KM

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Merten, Kenneth H
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 11:16 AM
To: Yun, Thomas W; Penner, Gary D; David, Panakkal
Cc: Kennedy, Patrick F; Smith, Daniel B; Zareski, Karen B
Subject: Need Psychological Professional(s) Please

Gentlemen,

I believe we need a psychological specialist sent here as soon as possible. We're having to medivac two folks due to nerves and high blood pressure and another one is simply not able to function (psychevac). [redacted] I am worried about the Consular staff as well: very tired, stressed and overworked. I hope you could get someone down here tomorrow if possible. B6

We also need to get some people out of this building (my problem, I know). It's a real ant farm and a health disaster waiting to happen.

Thanks.

Kenneth Merten
Ambassador
U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti
Tel: 509-2-229-8000

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 10:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

K

Taking off

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Mar 26 19:26:55 2010
Subject: Re: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Mar 26 18:33:24 2010
Subject: Fw: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

[redacted]

---

From: Balderston, Kris M
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Mar 26 17:25:30 2010
Subject: FW: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

CM

[redacted]

Thghts

Kris

From: Haynie, Robert R
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 3:51 PM
To: Balderston, Kris M
Subject: FW: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

What do you think?

From: TJ Woodley [mailto] B6
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 3:02 PM
To: Haynie, Robert R
Subject: Wynn Resorts as Sponsor

Robert,

Are you sure that the USA Pavilion would not be in a sponsorship by Wynn Resorts (specifically Wynn Macau)? There CFO, Matt Maddox, has expressed strong interest.

The Wynn Macau well known brand in China and Steve Wynn is an extremely popular figure in China. In addition, he is well respected and well though of by the Chinese leadership and business leaders. A sponsorship by Wynn would be well received.

I should be able to get an answer by early next week, but don't want to look foolish if they would be rejected.

TJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Crowley, Philip J <CrowleyPJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 1:06 PM
To: H; McHale, Judith A
Subject: RE: US radio

Already doing so; will intensify.

PJ

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 12:19 PM
To: McHale, Judith A; Crowley, Philip J
Subject: US radio

Can you also put people on domestic radio, including talk shows getting out info and answering questions?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Jeffrey L Farrow [redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 3:17 PM
To: Jake Sullivan
Cc: Jake Sullivan
Subject: Lew call to Palau Pres. Today

Importance: High

Jake, Jack is to call Palau's president later today, presumably to unveil and push a new free association aid proposal. The proposal can succeed or fail depending upon how it is handled and flexibility in working out details.
The amount has been discussed as $250 million thru FY24 -- and I think that amount could be made to work -- but it is handicapped by a plan to take out of that up to $18.75 m for the other two freely associated states and count $13.3 m in already appropriated funding. Most important is a willingness to sit down and mutually work out terms.
As I've said, I think the Compact Review can succeed if there is real dialogue vs. 'This is it' proposals. It is also critical to understand Pres. Toribiong astutely set up a small team of key Palau leaders for the Review to ensure that a proposal can gain full approval in Palau and he and they are working in complete unison. Jeff

Jeff

Jeffrey L. Farrow
[redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 27, 2010 9:09 AM
To: H; cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Can you talk this am?

Will call after 1pm - on calls until 11am to get legislation

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'cheryl.mills [redacted] Mills, Cheryl D B6
Sent: Sat Mar 27 08:25:24 2010
Subject: Can you talk this am?

I'm free until 10:30 and after 1. Sorry I couldn't get back to you last night.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 4:08 PM
To: H
Subject: just one quick thought especially in light of recent events... Sid

Your speech tomorrow should be crystal clear, explicit and tough on China and spell out the economic consequences not just for the Chinese and their future but for the economic future of ordinary working people in the USA and their stake in successful diplomacy on the issue and why their future is the basis of our national interest. The future of the middle class is the future of the United States; the interests of the middle class are at the heart of the national interest, etc. Sid

RELEASE IN FULL

---

From: Crowley, Philip J <CrowleyPJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 27, 2010 10:51 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Dorothy Height

Madame Secretary, April Ryan asked me to pass along to you that Dorothy Height has taken a turn for the worse and is not expected to survive long.

PJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 27, 2010 11:41 AM
To: Crowley, Philip J; H; Reines, Philippe I
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Dorothy Height

Thx pj.
Adding philippe too cause a joint draft statement is in the works.

---

From: Crowley, Philip J
To: 'H' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Mar 27 10:51:11 2010
Subject: Dorothy Height

Madame Secretary, April Ryan asked me to pass along to you that Dorothy Height has taken a turn for the worse and is not expected to survive long.

PJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, March 27, 2010 2:23 PM
To: H
Subject: Fyi

Want to let you know about an ops alert we just got, will keep u updated:
Ahmed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, younger brother of UAE President Khalifa bin Zayed al Nahyan, is presumed dead following a glider crash in a Moroccan lake on Friday. Sources close to embassy report UAE authorities will make the formal announcement after the conclusion of a significant horse racing event in Dubai later on March 27.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 9:27 AM
To: H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Lavrov

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 9:58 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Lavrov

Yep.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 20 09:55:48 2010
Subject: Re: Lavrov

Can you run the traps [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jun 20 09:27:19 2010
Subject: Lavrov

[redacted]

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 10:54 AM
To: H
Subject: Follow up

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 11:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Follow up

B5

Bill and I discussed [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 20 10:58:55 2010
Subject: Re: Follow up

Ok but [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jun 20 10:54:07 2010
Subject: Follow up

[redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 1:07 PM
To: H
Subject: Statement

This is what we propose to put out, with Rs putting out similar:

Today, Secretary Clinton spoke by telephone with Russian Foreign Minister Lavrov. They discussed preparations for the upcoming June 24 summit between President Obama and President Medvedev. Secretary Clinton and Foreign Minister Lavrov reveiwed developments in Kyrgyzstan and stressed their shared concern over the recent violence and continuing interethnic tensions. The ministers agreed that the issue of the upcoming referendum us the sovereign decision of Kyrgyzstan to make and agreed to encourage the authorities of Kyrgyzstan to conduct it according to international standards with the monitoring support of OSCE and others. The ministers also discussed coordination of U.S. and Russian humanitarian assistance and other support to Kyrgyzstan to help its authorities restore security, stability, and reconciliation among all citizens of Kyrgyzstan.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 1:32 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Statement

Roger that.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 20 13:13:07 2010
Subject: Re: Statement

Ok but be sure it's proofread

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jun 20 13:07:04 2010
Subject: Statement

This is what we propose to put out, with Rs putting out similar:

Today, Secretary Clinton spoke by telephone with Russian Foreign Minister Lavrov. They discussed preparations for the upcoming June 24 summit between President Obama and President Medvedev. Secretary Clinton and Foreign Minister Lavrov reveiwed developments in Kyrgyzstan and stressed their shared concern over the recent violence and continuing interethnic tensions. The ministers agreed that the issue of the upcoming referendum us the sovereign decision of Kyrgyzstan to make and agreed to encourage the authorities of Kyrgyzstan to conduct it according to international standards with the monitoring support of OSCE and others. The ministers also discussed coordination of U.S. and Russian humanitarian assistance and other support to Kyrgyzstan to help its authorities restore security, stability, and reconciliation among all citizens of Kyrgyzstan.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 1:57 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Statement

Russian MFA plans to release a parallel press statement shortly and is faxing us the text.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 20 13:13:07 2010
Subject: Re: Statement

Ok but be sure it's proofread

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jun 20 13:07:04 2010
Subject: Statement

This is what we propose to put out, with Rs putting out similar:

Today, Secretary Clinton spoke by telephone with Russian Foreign Minister Lavrov. They discussed preparations for the upcoming June 24 summit between President Obama and President Medvedev. Secretary Clinton and Foreign Minister Lavrov reveiwed developments in Kyrgyzstan and stressed their shared concern over the recent violence and continuing interethnic tensions. The ministers agreed that the issue of the upcoming referendum us the sovereign decision of Kyrgyzstan to make and agreed to encourage the authorities of Kyrgyzstan to conduct it according to international standards with the monitoring support of OSCE and others. The ministers also discussed coordination of U.S. and Russian humanitarian assistance and other support to Kyrgyzstan to help its authorities restore security, stability, and reconciliation among all citizens of Kyrgyzstan.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 12:50 AM
To: H
Subject: H: FYI, Sid

- Close Window

- Print this page

From The Sunday Times
March 28, 2010

It's over: MPs say the special relationship with US is dead

Winston Churchill, Franklin D Roosevelt and Josef Stalin
Michael Smith

BRITAIN'S special relationship with the US — forged by Winston Churchill and Franklin Roosevelt in the second world war — no longer exists, says a committee of influential MPs.

Instead, America's relationship with Britain is no more special than with its other main allies, according to a report by the Commons foreign affairs committee published today.

The report also warns that the perception of the UK after the Iraq war as America's "subservient poodle" has been highly damaging to Britain's reputation and interests around the world. The MPs conclude that British prime ministers have to learn to be less deferential to US presidents and be "willing to say no" to America.

The report, entitled Global Security: UK-US Relations, says Britain's relationship with America is "extremely close and valuable" in a number of areas, particularly intelligence co-operation. However, it adds that the use of the phrase special relationship, in its historical sense, "is potentially misleading and we recommend that its use should be avoided".

It does not reflect the "ever-evolving" relationship between the two countries and raises unrealistic expectations, the MPs say.

"Over the longer term, the UK is unlikely to be able to influence the US to the extent it has in the past," the committee adds.

In an apparent rebuke to Tony Blair and his relationship with President George W Bush, the report says there are "many lessons" to be learnt from Britain's political approach towards the US over Iraq.

"The perception that the British government was a subservient poodle to the US administration is widespread both among the British public and overseas," the MPs say. "This perception, whatever its relation to reality, is deeply damaging to the reputation and interests of the UK."

While the relationship between the American president and the British prime minister was an important part of dealings between the two countries, the cabinet and parliament also had a role to play. "The UK needs to be less deferential and more willing to say no to the US on those issues where the two countries' interests and values diverge," the MPs say.

They are also critical of the US use of extraordinary rendition and torture. The report calls for a comprehensive review of the use by the CIA of British bases, such as that on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia, to carry out extraordinary rendition.

"The issues relating to rendition through Diego Garcia to which we have previously drawn attention raise disturbing questions about the uses to which US bases on British territory are put", the MPs say.
They express regret at "considerable restraints" on the ability of both the government and parliament to scrutinise US activities carried out on British territory.
"We recommend that the government should establish a comprehensive review of the current arrangements governing US military use of facilities within the UK and in British overseas territories." The review should "identify shortcomings in the current system of scrutiny and oversight ... and report to parliament on proposals to remedy these".
The report also demands a statement from the government on the implications of the Court of Appeal judgment regarding the alleged collusion of MI5 in the torture of Binyam Mohamed, a British resident.
Last month the court ordered the government to release evidence from American intelligence reports which showed that MI5 was aware of the torture.
Senior US officials subsequently suggested that releasing such evidence might prevent the US from sharing some intelligence with Britain.
Contact our advertising team for advertising and sponsorship in Times Online, The Times and The Sunday Times, or place your advertisement.

Times Online Services: Dating | Jobs | Property Search | Used Cars | Holidays | Births, Marriages, Deaths | Subscriptions | E-paper
News International associated websites: Milkround

Copyright 2010 Times Newspapers Ltd.
This service is provided on Times Newspapers' standard Terms and Conditions. Please read our Privacy Policy.To inquire about a licence to reproduce material from Times Online, The Times or The Sunday Times, click here.This website is published by a member of the News International Group. News International Limited, 1 Virginia St, London E98 1XY, is the holding company for the News International group and is registered in England No 81701. VAT number GB 243 8054 69.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 3:47 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Mo9rt Zuckerman

From haim.

From: Haim Saban [redacted] B6
To: Doug Band [redacted] Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Jun 20 13:23:55 2010
Subject: Mo9rt Zuckerman

This is a must read,,,,and your bosses too.

WOW!!!! What a hatchet job,,,this is the very strong "Coffeee party",,,,forget the tea party,,,, they're chicken sh,,,, compared to this.Just the tilte,,,,

Mort Zuckerman: World Sees Obama as Incompetent and Amateur
The president is well-intentioned but can't walk the walk on the world stage
By Mortimer B. Zuckerman
Posted June 18, 2010

President Obama came into office as the heir to a great foreign policy legacy enjoyed by every recent U.S. president. Why? Because the United States stands on top of the power ladder, not necessarily as the dominant power, but certainly as the leading one. As such we are the sole nation capable of exercising global leadership on a whole range of international issues from security, trade, and climate to counterterrorism. We also benefit from the fact that most countries distrust the United States far less than they distrust one another, so we uniquely have the power to build coalitions. As a result, most of the world still looks to Washington for help in their region and protection against potential regional threats.

Yet, the Iraq war lingers; Afghanistan continues to be immersed in an endless cycle of tribalism, corruption, and Islamist resurgence; Guantánamo remains open; Iran sees how North Korea toys with Obama and continues its programs to develop nuclear weapons and missiles; Cuba spurns America's offers of a greater opening; and the Palestinians and Israelis find that it is U.S. policy positions that defer serious negotiations, the direct opposite of what the Obama administration hoped for.

The reviews of Obama's performance have been disappointing. He has seemed uncomfortable in the role of leading other nations, and often seems to suggest there is nothing special about America's role in the world. The global community was puzzled over the pictures of Obama bowing to some of the world's leaders and surprised by his gratuitous criticisms of and apologies for America's foreign policy under the previous administration of George W. Bush. One Middle East authority, Fouad Ajami, pointed out that Obama seems unaware that it is bad form and even a great moral lapse to speak ill of one's own tribe while in the lands of others.

Even in Britain, for decades our closest ally, the talk in the press—supported by polls—is about the end of the "special relationship" with America. French President Nicolas Sarkozy openly criticized Obama for months, including a direct attack on his policies at the United Nations. Sarkozy cited the need to recognize the real world, not the virtual world, a clear reference to Obama's speech on nuclear weapons. When the French president is seen as tougher than the American president, you have to know that something is awry. Vladimir Putin of Russia has publicly scorned a number of Obama's visions. Relations with the Chinese leadership got off to a bad start with the president's poorly-organized visit to China, where his hosts treated him disdainfully and prevented him from speaking to a national television audience of the Chinese people. The Chinese behavior was unprecedented when compared to visits by other U.S. presidents.

Obama's policy on Afghanistan—supporting a surge in troops, but setting a date next year when they will begin to withdraw—not only gave a mixed signal, but provided an incentive for the Taliban just to wait us out. The withdrawal part of the policy was meant to satisfy a domestic constituency, but succeeded in upsetting all of our allies in the region. Further anxiety was provoked by Obama's severe public criticism of Afghan President Hamid Karzai and his coterie of family and friends for their lackluster leadership, followed by a reversal of sorts regarding the same leaders.

Obama clearly wishes to do good and means well. But he is one of those people who believe that the world was born with the word and exists by means of persuasion, such that there is no person or country that you cannot, by means of logical and moral argument, bring around to your side. He speaks as a teacher, as someone imparting values and generalities appropriate for a Sunday morning sermon, not as a tough-minded leader. He urges that things "must be done" and "should be done" and that "it is time" to do them. As the former president of the Council on Foreign Relations, Les Gelb, put it, there is "the impression that Obama might confuse speeches with policy." Another journalist put it differently when he described Obama as an "NPR [National Public Radio] president who gives wonderful speeches." In other words, he talks the talk but doesn't know how to walk the walk. The Obama presidency has so far been characterized by a well-intentioned but excessive belief in the power of rhetoric with too little appreciation of reality and loyalty.

In his Cairo speech about America and the Muslim world, Obama managed to sway Arab public opinion but was unable to budge any Arab leader. Even the king of Saudi Arabia, a country that depends on America for its survival, reacted with disappointment and dismay. Obama's meeting with the king was widely described as a disaster. This is but one example of an absence of the personal chemistry that characterized the relationships that Presidents Clinton and Bush had with world leaders. This is a serious matter because foreign policy entails an understanding of the personal and political circumstances of the leaders as well as the cultural and historical factors of the countries we deal with.

Les Gelb wrote of Obama, "He is so self-confident that he believes he can make decisions on the most complicated of issues after only hours of discussion." Strategic decisions go well beyond being smart, which Obama certainly is. They must be based on experience that discerns what works, what doesn't—and why. This requires experienced staffing, which Obama and his top appointees simply do not seem to have. Or as one Middle East commentator put it, "There are always two chess games going on. One is on the top of the table, the other is below the table. The latter is the one that counts, but the Americans don't know how to play that game."

Recent U.S. attempts to introduce more meaningful sanctions against Iran produced a U.N. resolution that is way less than the "crippling" sanctions the administration promised. The United States even failed to achieve the political benefit of a unanimous Security Council vote. Turkey, the Muslim anchor of NATO for almost 60 years, and Brazil, our largest ally in Latin America, voted against our resolution. Could it be that these long-standing U.S. allies, who gave cover to Mahmoud Ahmadinejad and Iran's nuclear ambitions, have decided that there is no cost in lining up with America's most serious enemies and no gain in lining up with this administration?

The end result is that a critical mass of influential people in world affairs who once held high hopes for the president have begun to wonder whether they misjudged the man. They are no longer dazzled by his rock star personality and there is a sense that there is something amateurish and even incompetent about how Obama is managing U.S. power. For example, Obama has asserted that America is not at war with the Muslim world. The problem is that parts of the Muslim world are at war with America and the West. Obama feels, fairly enough, that America must be contrite in its dealings with the Muslim world. But he has failed to address the religious intolerance, failing economies, tribalism, and gender apartheid that together contribute to jihadist extremism. This was startling and clear when he chose not to publicly support the Iranians who went to the streets in opposition to their oppressive government, based on a judgment that our support might be counterproductive. Yet, he reaches out instead to the likes of Bashar Assad of Syria, Iran's agent in the Arab world, sending our ambassador back to Syria even as it continues to rearm Hezbollah in Lebanon and expands its role in the Iran-Hezbollah-Hamas alliance.

The underlying issue is that the Arab world has different estimates on how to deal with an aggressive, expansionist Iran. The Arabs believe you do not deal with Iran with the open hand of a handshake but with the clenched fist of power. Arab leaders fear an Iran proceeding full steam with its nuclear weapons program on top of its programs to develop intermediate-range ballistic missiles. All the while centrifuges keep spinning in Iran, and Arab leaders ask whether Iran will be emboldened by what they interpret as American weakness and faltering willpower. They did not see Obama or his administration as understanding the region, where naiveté is interpreted as a weakness of character, as amateurism, and as proof of the absence of the tough stuff of which leaders are made. (That's why many Arab leaders were appalled at the decision to have a civilian trial of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed in New York. After 9/11, many of them had engaged in secret counterterrorism activities under the umbrella of an American promise that these activities would never be made public; now they feared that this would be the exact consequence of an open trial.)

America right now appears to be unreliable to traditional friends, compliant to rivals, and weak to enemies. One renowned Asian leader stated recently at a private dinner in the United States, "We in Asia are convinced that Obama is not strong enough to confront his opponents, but we fear that he is not strong enough to support his friends."

The United States for 60 years has met its responsibilities as the leader and the defender of the democracies of the free world. We have policed the sea lanes, protected the air and space domains, countered terrorism, responded to genocide, and been the bulwark against rogue states engaging in aggression. The world now senses, in the context of the erosion of America's economic power and the pressures of our budget deficits, that we will compress our commitments. But the world needs the vision, idealism, and strong leadership that America brings to international affairs. This can be done and must be done. But we are the only ones who can do it.

http://www.usnews.com/articles/opinion/2010/06/18/mort-zuckerman-world-sees-obama-as-incompetent-and-amateur.html

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 3:55 PM
To: H

MS -- As you may recall, [redacted] B6

[redacted] Do you think that would work?

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct)

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 5:18 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mitchell-Ashton

Below is a readout of Mitchell's meeting with Ashton. Recommendation is for you to [redacted] I've sent points to Huma.

David followed up with Russian envoy who hadn't heard from Lavrov, but David feels comfortable having you [redacted] B5

[redacted]

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 06/19/2035

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 11:03 AM
To: H
Subject: Davut

Here's where things stand, from Jeffrey:

Called Davut when efforts to get Sinir failed (on plane prob). Davut confirmed substance of Jake S's comments to me, said he Davut had one hour to get statement out to meet TU press cycle, and said Namik Tan would contact me asap with proposed text. That said Davut then described substance of what he thought should be in it (he also was not clear on whether it to be a joint statement, coordinated sep statements or just a TU statement that we'd OK and thus support once out). However he did say he wanted to put in statement [redacted] B5

[redacted] We went back and forth on that and both conluded Namik and I would work out. Will get back asap. Jim

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 20, 2010 10:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Am up and availabe until 1030pm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 7:21 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: (Gay) International News #843- 21 June 2010

FYI

==========

INTERNATIONAL NEWS #843
June 21, 2010
by Rex Wockner
==========

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Iceland legalizes same-sex marriage

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The Icelandic parliament, Alþingi, legalized same-sex marriage June 11. The vote was 49-0. Fourteen MPs skipped the vote.

Same-sex couples will be able to marry starting June 27.

The registered-partnership apparatus that gay couples used in the past will no longer be available.

The national LGBT association, Samtökin 78, said Iceland had removed the last obstacle to equal rights for all.

Iceland is the ninth nation where same-sex couples can marry nationwide and the 11th nation where same-sex marriage is possible.

Icelandic Prime Minister Jóhanna Sigurðardóttir is openly lesbian.

Gay marriage also is legal in Belgium, Canada, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Mexico City, Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Washington, D.C.

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 7:33 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Quartet statement

Below is the final text of the Quartet statement, which Lavrov, Ban, and Ashton have now agreed to release without a call. Sounds like your discussion with Lavrov did the trick:

The Quartet re-affirms that the current situation in Gaza, including the humanitarian and human rights situation of the civilian population, is unsustainable, unacceptable, and not in the interests of any of those concerned. The Quartet reiterates its call for a solution that addresses Israel's legitimate security concerns, including an end to weapons smuggling into Gaza; promotes Palestinian unity based on the Palestine Liberation Organization commitments and the reunification of Gaza and the West Bank under the legitimate Palestinian Authority; and ensures the unimpeded flow of humanitarian aid, commercial goods and persons to and from Gaza, consistent with United Nations Security Council resolution 1860 (2009). The Quartet declares its readiness to work closely with Israel, the Palestinian Government and international donors in order to achieve sustainable economic development on the basis of the full implementation of the Agreement on Access and Movement of 2005 and in the broader perspective of the two-state solution.

Consistent with these objectives, the Quartet and the Quartet Representative have worked with Israel, as well as consulting the Palestinian Authority, Egypt, and other concerned parties, to effect a fundamental change in policy in Gaza. The new policy towards Gaza just announced by the Government of Israel is a welcome development. The Quartet notes that the elaboration of further details and modalities of implementation will be important in ensuring the effectiveness of the new policy. Full and effective implementation will comprise a significant shift in strategy towards meeting the needs of Gaza's population for humanitarian and commercial goods, civilian reconstruction and infrastructure, and legitimate economic activity as well as the security needs of Israel. The Quartet will continue to work with Israel, the Palestinian Authority, and other concerned parties to ensure these arrangements are implemented as quickly as possible. The Quartet affirms that much work remains to achieve fully the solution stated above, and, in consultation with the concerned parties, it will monitor closely the implementation of the policy in all its aspects. It will actively explore additional ways to improve the situation in Gaza, encourage involvement of the PA at the crossings and promote greater commerce between the West Bank and Gaza.

The Quartet stresses the importance of United Nations and other international interventions, as well as the work of local non-governmental organizations, to be expanded in Gaza to meet urgent civilian needs, and calls on all parties to fully enable this work.

The Quartet recognizes that Israel has legitimate security concerns that must continue to be safeguarded, and believes efforts to maintain security while enabling movement and access for Palestinian people and goods are critical. The Quartet commits to work with Israel and the international community to prevent the illicit trafficking of arms and ammunition into Gaza. It urges all those wishing to deliver goods to do so through established channels so that their cargo can be inspected and transferred via land crossings into Gaza. The Quartet emphasizes that there is no need for unnecessary confrontations and calls on all parties to act responsibly in meeting the needs of the people of Gaza.

The Quartet also calls for an end to the deplorable detention of Gilad Shalit in advance of the fourth anniversary of his capture on June 25; it further condemns the violation of Hamas' international obligation to provide him access by the International Committee of the Red Cross and demands that Hamas immediately remedy the situation.

The Quartet also reiterates its support for proximity talks toward the resumption, without pre-conditions, of direct bilateral negotiations that resolve all final status issues as previously agreed by the parties. The Quartet believes these negotiations should lead to a settlement, negotiated between the parties within 24 months, that ends the occupation which began in 1967 and results in the emergence of an independent, democratic, and viable Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza, living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 12:38 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Obama's diplomacy, not fully engaged (for S)

Article from cdm

From: Toiv, Nora F
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Mon May 03 12:26:16 2010
Subject: Obama's diplomacy, not fully engaged (for S)

The Washington Post

Obama's diplomacy, not fully engaged

By Jackson Diehl
Monday, May 3, 2010; A15

Barack Obama's foreign policy has been defined so far by his attempts to "engage" with adversaries or rivals of the United States, such as Ayatollah Ali Khamenei of Iran and Dmitry Medvedev of Russia. The results have been mixed. But now the president's focus is visibly shifting. In the next 18 months, Obama's record abroad will be made or broken by his ability to do business with two nominal U.S. allies: Hamid Karzai and Binyamin Netanyahu.

Karzai has become the hardest problem in Obama's Afghanistan surge, one that might be summed up as "can't win with him, can't win without him." Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu holds the key to whether Israel will be prepared to accept a Palestinian state within the two-year time frame Obama has established -- and also, perhaps, whether Iran's pursuit of nuclear weapons will lead to war.

Both men are prickly and somewhat inscrutable. Both know their countries and their own careers depend on support from the United States, but both are also resistant to key elements of Obama's policies. Handling them well requires skillful and subtle diplomacy by the U.S. president and by those who carry out his policies.

And Obama has not done well. In fact, his treatment of the Israeli and Afghan leaders during one week in late March -- immediately after his victory on health care -- marked a low point of his performance as president.

First, Obama seized on an errant Israeli announcement about housing construction in East Jerusalem to reopen a pointless battle with Netanyahu. During a disastrous March 23 meeting at the White House, Obama demanded -- in vain -- that Israel stop all building in Jerusalem; and at one point he left Netanyahu and his delegation to stew in the Roosevelt room while he retired to the second-floor residence for dinner.

Five days later, Obama flew to Kabul for another cold meeting, this time with Karzai. In a briefing for reporters on the plane, national security adviser James Jones made it clear that Obama was displeased with Karzai's lack of progress since beginning a new term as president last fall. In case there was any doubt, Obama spelled out that dissatisfaction in a television interview a day after his return.

Was it hubris from health care that brought on this burst of presidential imperialism? Whatever the cause, the results were disastrous. Netanyahu retreated to Jerusalem, where, after a couple of weeks of sulking, he defiantly announced that settlement construction in Jerusalem would continue. Karzai summoned Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to Kabul, then delivered a tirade against Western interference that concluded with a threat to join the Taliban.

The administration has spent the past month cleaning up this mess. Obama abruptly changed his approach, sending a note to Karzai in early April thanking him for the Kabul visit and confirming his invitation to visit Washington in May -- a trip that, just days earlier, the White House had hinted at canceling. Meanwhile, the president and a good part of his Cabinet have been heaping love on Israel -- if not precisely Netanyahu -- by proclaiming their commitment to the relationship in speech after speech before pro-Israel groups.

The result is that the administration now has a detailed plan for working with Karzai over the next several months. Israeli-Palestinian peace talks, which have been delayed for two months by the flap over Jerusalem, might finally begin this week. Quiet diplomacy by the administration's special envoys in the Middle East and Afghanistan, George Mitchell and Richard Holbrooke, has achieved what presidential lectures did not.

The underlying problems, however, haven't changed. Karzai still has little appetite for attacking the corruption in his government or rallying support for U.S. military campaigns against the Taliban. Netanyahu remains wedded to a right-wing coalition that would not allow him to make significant concessions in peace negotiations, even if he wanted to.

Obama has to find a way to coax each of them toward a change of course. Public bullying won't do it. Assurances of U.S. support and stroking by special envoys go only so far. What's missing is personal chemistry and confidence, the construction of a bond between leaders that can persuade a U.S. ally to take a risk; in other words, presidential "engagement." Isn't that what Obama promised?

Nora Toiv
Office of the Secretary
202-647-8633

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 3:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Information about [redacted] of Little Rock B6

---

From: Carland, John M <CarlandJM@state.gov>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Mar 28 12:34:01 2010
Subject: RE: Information about [redacted] of Little Rock

I read Secretary Clinton's very nice 22 March statement about [redacted]. The Secretary's remarks were just right. I am certain that Cal and the children greatly appreciated them.

No need to respond. You guys are busy enough.

John

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D [mailto:MillsCD@state.gov]
Sent: Monday, March 15, 2010 5:04 PM
To: Carland, John M
Subject: Re: Information about [redacted] of Little Rock

John

Thank you for sharing this infor w/ me. I will share it w/ the secretary and president clinton.

From: Carland, John M <CarlandJM@state.gov>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Mon Mar 15 14:05:46 2010
Subject: Information about [redacted] of Little Rock

Dear Ms. Mills:

It may be inappropriate for me to do this and if so I apologize in advance but I thought Secretary Clinton might want to know, and probably didn't, about [redacted] terminal illness. My understanding is that the Clintons' and [redacted] paths crossed in Arkansas politics in the past and in a friendly way.

I know all of this because I am originally from Little Rock, and have been told of [redacted] turn for the worse by a friend who teaches at UALR and knows [redacted] Additionally, [redacted] who served in the state legislature for a decade or so, was my undergraduate advisor at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock in the 1960s. B6

I am emailing you in your capacity as the Secretary's chief of staff.

Again, my apologies if this is something I shouldn't have done.

Sincerely,

John M. Carland
Senior Historian
Office of the Historian
Department of State

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Crowley, Philip J <CrowleyPJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 12:49 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I; Tauscher, Ellen O
Subject: The Walk Out

We are characterizing it this way. Our only rep in the chair, a working-level officer, walked out with many other countries in solidarity over the first of a series of accusations in his speech. We are trying to keep our first response limited. Later we can add more specificity.

PJ

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 3:43 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Cathy Ashton

As I mentioned last week, I was on a panel at the Brussels forum with Lady Ashton (who insisted everyone call her Cathy), Estonian president Toomas Ilves, and Senator Voinovich. Ashton and I essentially reinforced each other at every turn and presented a very positive vision of US-EU partnership. She has scored some significant victories lately, most notably that development will be included in the European Action Service (EAS) rather than sitting at a separate desk (the formula we are seeking rather than the DFID formula). EU defense staff will also be included in the EAS. Indeed, Ashton chairs the European Council whenever the 27 foreign ministers, development ministers, or defense ministers meet -- the ultimate integrated frame. She also has control over a number of the smaller development and state-building budgets, though I gather the biggest development fund is still in dispute between her and the development commissioner. Apparently, however, the enlargement commissioner took his cues from her on strategy and policy and then presented his implementation plans to the Council, which is the role she wants. We should be able to build on the way the EU is organizing in pushing pushing our own integrated frame here.

B5

I hope everything goes well on Ottawa and NY. Bob Hormats and I will send a note on other aspects of Brussels forum, where US was well represented. AM

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: PVerveer
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 9:03 PM
To: H
Subject: Fwd: FW: Recruit Afghan women to sell war to Europeans: CIA report Interesting.

Recruit Afghan women to sell war to Europeans: CIA report

WASHINGTON, March 27, 2010 (AFP) - A CIA expert has called for recruiting Afghan women in a public relations bid to persuade skeptical Europeans to support the NATO-led war effort, according to a document leaked Friday.

"Afghan women could serve as ideal messengers in humanizing" the mission for European audiences, particularly in France, according to the CIA analysis, posted on WikiLeaks, a whistleblower website.

The views of Afghan women would carry special weight as they could express "their aspirations for the future, and their fears of a Taliban victory," it said.

The Central Intelligence Agency declined to confirm or deny if the document was genuine. But WikiLeaks has previously posted government and corporate documents that were later verified.

The report by a CIA expert on "strategic communications" and State Department analysts of public opinion warned that popular support for the war in Europe was weak and could easily collapse, citing the recent fall of the Dutch government over the issue.

"The tone of previous debate suggests that a spike in French or German casualties or in Afghan civilian casualties could become a tipping point in converting passive opposition into active calls for immediate withdrawal," it said.

The analysis, dated March 11, suggested public relations strategies to drum up support for the war in Germany and France, which maintain the third and fourth largest troop deployments in Afghanistan.

"Outreach initiatives that create media opportunities for Afghan women to share their stories with French, German, and other European women could help to overcome pervasive skepticism among women in Western Europe toward the ISAF (International Security Assistance Force) mission," it said.

Public relations efforts could "tap into acute French concern for civilians and refugees," the report said, suggesting highlighting polls that show most Afghans support the presence of coalition troops.

Such an approach could stress the potential dangers facing Afghan civilians if NATO-led troops were defeated and "leverage French (and other European) guilt for abandoning them."

"The prospect of the Taliban rolling back hard-won progress on girls' education could provoke French indignation, become a rallying point for France's largely secular public, and give voters a reason to support a good and necessary cause despite casualties."

For German audiences, marketing efforts should underline how Afghans are reportedly optimistic about the NATO mission and how an international retreat would damage Germany's interests.

"For example, messages that illustrate how a defeat in Afghanistan could heighten Germany's exposure to terrorism, opium, and refugees might help to make the war more salient to skeptics," it said.

The report also suggested taking advantage of President Barack Obama's popularity in France and Germany, arguing that appeals from the US president on the importance of the allied role in the war could have a positive effect.

The memorandum is titled: "Afghanistan: Sustaining West European Support for the NATO-led Mission -- Why Counting on Apathy Might Not Be Enough."

Media Analysis and Watch Center
USSTRATCOM Foreign Media Analysis Program
SOS International Ltd.
www.sosiltd.com

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Burns, William J <BurnsWJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 9:33 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Putin trip

Will do. I'll talk to Ryabkov in the morning. Bill

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 9:19 PM
To: Burns, William J; 'wburns66 [redacted] B6
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Putin trip

Bill--My husband cannot go w PM Putin in mid-April because of his schedule, but he would be very interested in doing such events w the PM in the future. Will you pls pass on to the Russians? Thx. HRC

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, March 28, 2010 9:35 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: NPR

Will follow up.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 28 21:26:42 2010
Subject: NPR

I've reviewed the memo from Bob and Derek and can agree w its comments but would like to know what Jim thinks.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 9:05 AM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Macmanus, Joseph E
Subject: FW: INR Russian Public Opinion in Perspective
Attachments: 6-21-10_Public_Opinion_in_Perspective_Russia.pdf

FYI. Good news on at least one front.

jm

---

From: Shema, Alexandra G
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 8:23 AM
To: Black, David(DCHA/DG); Abramson, David M; Andrew, Robert B (San Jose); Armstrong, John L; Balian, John O; 'Barry Keith'; Bartoletti, Marietta; Bennett, Kirk; Biedlingmaier, Mark J; Bistransky, Sheryl J; Bodoin, Suzanne L (Basrah); Boehme, Robert W; [redacted] (EUCOM)'; 'Brian'; 'Brocking, Elisabeth'; Bryza, Matthew J; 'Burghart, Daniel '; Cameron, Mark M; [redacted] (EUCOM)'; Chang, Charles; Cleary, Colin M; Cook, Nerissa J; Countryman, Mary E; Crowley, Philip J; Danies, Joel D; Davidson, Terry R; 'Davis, Toby'; de la Rambelje, Laura L (DRL); Denig, Paul; DiCarlo, Rosemary A (USUN); Dille, Benjamin B (Basrah); DiMartino, Kitty; Dorsey, Liane R; ECA_A_E_EUR ; ECA-Eurasia; 'Ellison, Janine'; EUR-RUS-DL; Faucher, Robert J; Feinberg, Susan R; Fitzgerald, Christopher; [redacted] (DNI) '; Flannigan, Matthew J; 'Frank, Jose'; Fried, Daniel; Friedt, Anita E; Furst, Colin P; Garber, Judith G; Goldberg, David B; Grauer, Kristen K (Baghdad); Greenberg, Allen S; Grutz, Rebecca; 'Hagen, Julia'; [redacted] ; Hays, Clayton P; Henick, Jonathan D; Hollister, Robert M; Hultman, Darren W; IIP_G_EUR Russian List; James, William A; 'Jenny Urizar (NSC)'; Johnson, Marquita L; Jones, Deborah A; Kanarek, Deborah J; 'Karen'; Kenna, Corley; Kilian, Janet M; 'Kivler, Kelly'; Klepp, Deborah E; Kolankiewicz, Anthony M; Kux, Sally; Land, James G; Larsen, Jon A; 'Lemarck, Grant'; Logsdon, Michelle; Logsdon, Michelle R; Lorenz, Andrew R; Lucas, William; McHale, Judith A; Mittnacht, Thomas; Moore, Jonathan M; Moscow PA Americans; Nash, Mary M; Nelson, Ellen Y; Nystrom, Dwight D; Patterson, Martha E; Pekala, Mark A; Perez, Lea; Peterson, Calvin "Pete" (EUR/SCE); Pilz Harbin, Mica L; [redacted] (EUCOM)'; 'Rie, Andrew'; Rieff, Jason B; Rofman, Amy J; [redacted] (EUCOM)'; Rood, Elizabeth H; Rosenblum, Daniel N; Russell, Daniel A; Russell, Melissa H ; Schaefer, Katherine T; Sears, Michael J; Sen, Priyadarshi (Asuncion); Sexton, Jeffrey R; Shinagel, Eva; Siefkin, David R; Sloan, Victoria; Stavropoulos, Daphne Z; Strassberger, William R; 'Susan'; Szpila, Kathleen S; [redacted] (EUCOM)'; Tuminaro, Kim V; Viguerie, Lesslie C; Warlick, Mary B (BELGRADE); Watson, Samuel R; 'Welch, Scott'; Wells, Alice G; Whiddon, David J; Witmer, Kami A; Witters, Joseph B; Wohlauer, Benjamin V; Wohlers, Paul; Youth, Marta C (Quito)
Subject: INR Russian Public Opinion in Perspective

B6

Dear Colleagues,

Attached please find a one page summary of Russian opinions of cooperation with the U.S. in the run up to President Medvedev's visit. This report focuses on Russian views of U.S.-Russian relations since the "reset," and their outlook on further cooperation in the future. If you have any specific questions or would like more information, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Thanks,

Alex

Alexandra Shema
Eurasia Analyst
Office of Opinion Research

Department of State
202-736-4289
Shemaag@state.gov

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 1:54 PM
To: H
Subject: Ajad speech

Here's a basic summary:

It focused on citing the illegitimacy of US nuclear and nonproliferation policy, and on highlighting that it is the nuclear weapons states which are to blame for both proliferation and global instability. The speech suggested that US nonproliferation efforts are a cynical attempt to divert attention from our aim to keep nuclear weapons for ourselves and that even things like the Nuclear Summit are nothing more than such a veil. The speech made several pointed attacks on the USG, from the USAF's security issue a few years ago to our use of nuclear weapons in WWII (making us "the most hated" in history) to allegations of support for terrorism (including that only states who have and have used nuclear weapons could support nuclear terrorism). The speech offered 11 "proposals", most of which were previewed in Tehran press today. These include legally binding NSAs, suspension of IAEA membership for those who threaten with nuclear weapons, disarming all US nuclear bases, support for a ME w/o nuclear weapons and restructure of the UNSC. The US del walked out -- with many partners -- in response to this speech.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769137 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Appendix

Table. West European Views of International Assistance for Haiti

Q. I'm going to read you a list of countries and organizations. For each one, please tell me whether you think they generally have done a very good job, a good job, a poor, or a very poor job in helping Haitians after the earthquake, or have you not heard enough to say?

(% Among those who have heard at least a fair amount about the Haiti earthquake)

Our country

| | Britain | France | Germany | Italy | Spain |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Very good | 20 | 20 | 20 | 19 | 20 |
| Good job | 50 | 66 | 52 | 64 | 54 |
| Good job overall | 70 | 86 | 72 | 83 | 74 |
| Poor job | 4 | 2 | 2 | 4 | 11 |
| Very poor job | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 1 |
| Poor job overall | 4 | 2 | 2 | 4 | 13 |
| Haven't heard enough to say | 19 | 12 | 23 | 9 | 11 |
| Don't know | 6 | 0 | 3 | 4 | 2 |
| Unsure | 25 | 12 | 26 | 13 | 13 |
| Total | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 |

The United States

| | Britain | France | Germany | Italy | Spain |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Very good | 23 | 18 | 21 | 19 | 14 |
| Good job | 42 | 62 | 42 | 56 | 39 |
| Good job overall | 64 | 80 | 63 | 75 | 53 |
| Poor job | 5 | 5 | 3 | 4 | 18 |
| Very poor job | 0 | 1 | 0 | 1 | 4 |
| Poor job overall | 6 | 5 | 3 | 5 | 22 |
| Haven't heard enough to say | 23 | 15 | 30 | 14 | 22 |
| Don't know | 6 | 0 | 3 | 5 | 3 |
| Unsure | 30 | 15 | 33 | 19 | 25 |
| Total | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 |

France

| | Britain | Germany | Italy | Spain |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Very good | 4 | 2 | 2 | 3 |
| Good job | 18 | 17 | 25 | 25 |
| Good job overall | 22 | 19 | 28 | 27 |
| Poor job | 6 | 2 | 4 | 17 |
| Very poor job | 1 | 0 | 1 | 2 |
| Poor job overall | 7 | 2 | 5 | 19 |
| Haven't heard enough to say | 60 | 73 | 51 | 49 |
| Don't know | 11 | 5 | 16 | 5 |
| Unsure | 71 | 78 | 67 | 53 |
| Total | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 |

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769137 Date: 08/31/2015

The Red Cross

| | Britain | France | Germany | Italy | Spain |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Very good | 34 | 29 | 25 | 25 | 29 |
| Good job | 35 | 50 | 50 | 54 | 53 |
| Good job overall | 69 | 79 | 74 | 78 | 81 |
| Poor job | 0 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 2 |
| Very poor job | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Poor job overall | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 3 |
| Haven't heard enough to say | 22 | 21 | 22 | 15 | 14 |
| Don't know | 7 | 0 | 3 | 5 | 3 |
| Unsure | 30 | 21 | 25 | 21 | 16 |
| Total | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 |

The United Nations

| | Britain | France | Germany | Italy | Spain |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Very good | 12 | 11 | 10 | 7 | 6 |
| Good job | 39 | 46 | 39 | 50 | 42 |
| Good job overall | 51 | 57 | 49 | 57 | 48 |
| Poor job | 6 | 3 | 4 | 3 | 16 |
| Very poor job | 1 | 0 | 1 | 1 | 3 |
| Poor job overall | 7 | 4 | 5 | 4 | 18 |
| Haven't heard enough to say | 32 | 39 | 41 | 28 | 29 |
| Don't know | 9 | 0 | 6 | 11 | 4 |
| Unsure | 42 | 39 | 46 | 39 | 34 |
| Total | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 | 100 |

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 8:30 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: NPR

Jim concurs in the memo recommendations.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Mar 28 21:26:42 2010
Subject: NPR

I've reviewed the memo from Bob and Derek and can agree w its comments but would like to know what Jim thinks.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 9:01 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: Call list

ok

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 8:48 AM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Call list

Pls put the following on the list:

Walter Pincus (move him up from 12/9/08) Derek Harvey (move him up) Mona Ackerman (move from 9/24/08)

And take off the following:

Belgian FM
Height
Turkish FM
Lowey
Cannon
Rosen
Goldberg
McLarty (the 1/4 entry
Frist
Foxman
Stern
Rhodeen
Osteen
Straley
Jacobs
Magee

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 9:32 AM
To: H
Subject: Statement

Bombings in Moscow

Our thoughts and prayers are with the victims of this morning's bombings in Moscow, their families, and all the people of Russia. This brutal assault on innocent civilians is another reminder that terrorism is a threat to peace-loving people everywhere and must be met with unwavering resolve. I will offer my personal condolences to Foreign Minister Lavrov later today in Ottawa. Together with our G8 partners, we will discuss how to improve international counterterrorism coordination and cooperation. I was in Moscow earlier this month, and I know the resilience and determination of the Russian people. The United States stands with them today and everyday in solidarity against violent extremism in all its forms.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 8:41 PM
To: H; Doug Band
Subject: FW: IHRC in Haitian Press

Finally.

For wjc

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto ] B6
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 8:28 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A; 'Steve Radelet'; 'Laura Graham'; 'Amitabh Desai'
Subject: IHRC in Haitian Press

Below a short clipping from Haiti's major radio news site. I also posted today's piece in the LA Times, which is broadly positive.

Monday, March 29, 2010 11:54 (PaP time)

Bill Clinton and Jean Max Bellerive to head the reconstruction committee

An Interim Committee for the Reconstruction of Haiti will be implemented in the coming days. It will be headed by former U.S. President Bill Clinton and the current Prime Minister of Haiti Jean Max Bellerive.

This committee could be composed of 16 members including 9 foreigners. It should have the flexibility to make important decisions in the context of rebuilding the country devastated by a powerful earthquake last January 12.

During 18 months, this new entity will manage the funds available to carry out all operations related with the reconstruction of Haiti.

Under a plan presented by the Haitian authorities at a technical meeting held last week in the Dominican Republic, 11.5 billion would be needed to rebuild Haiti.

http://www.metropolehaiti.com/metropole/full_une_fr.php?id=17350

\http://www.latimes.com/news/opinion/editorials/la-ed-haiti30-2010mar30,0,3336688.story

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 11:26 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: If you get a chance it wd be great to raise the integrated power issue re the PSD w/ Sec. Gates

He advances a powerful vision of integrated civilian power w/ State and USAID under you in his Foreign Affairs article. I don't think you need to get into the State/AID details w/ him, but it wd be great to give him a heads up that you think that the PSD as written moves toward 3 separate pillars of defense, development, and diplomacy rather than reinforcing the integrated power frame of the Nat. Security Strategy. AM

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 12:59 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Toiv, Nora F; Laszczych, Joanne; Smith, Jeannemarie E; Lew, Jacob J; Mull, Stephen D; Curtis, Meghann A; Warnholz, Jean-Louis; karamcdonald[redacted]Reynoso, Julissa; Merten, Kenneth H; Lindwall, David E B6
Subject: CDM Travel this Summer

This is just fyi for my out of office planning/scheduling purposes:

22 June (T): afternoon in NY

2Jul – 9Jul: annual leave

19Jul – 23Jul: travel with S

25Aug – 27 Aug/1 Sep – 3Sep (T): out of office

1 Sep: Haiti travel

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, March 30, 2010 12:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: S-Ashton Update

Fyi

---

From: Mull, Stephen D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Montgomery, Molly C; Baxter, Shawn; Lang, Alan; Waller, Robert P; P-NEA Duty; Waser, Tamir G
Sent: Tue Mar 30 12:45:10 2010
Subject: S-Ashton Update

Hi Jake,

You'll see that the Secretary's points for Ashton mention the idea of our sending an inter-agency expert team to Brussels for the next few months to improve US-EU coordination on Iran sanctions prep. EU officials had been receptive, but now the bureaucrats are saying this would be "counter-productive", and instead prefer more regular videoconferences. Which is probably OK. Anyway, I just wanted you to know the background, in case it comes up in the Ashton meeting.

Steve

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 05/03/2020

RELEASE IN PART B1,1.4(B),1.4(D), B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 2:23 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Summary of 5/3 0845 and 0915 meetings

---

From: Wohlers, Paul
Sent: Monday, May 03, 2010 1:56 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: Smith, Daniel B
Subject: Summary of 5/3 0845 and 0915 meetings

Summary of 8:45 meeting, May 3, 2010:

Cheryl Mills chaired, with D(S) Jim Steinberg, D(L) Jacob Lew, (P) Bill Burns, (M) Pat Kennedy, (H) Rich Verma, (L) Harold Koh, (PA) Gordon Duguid, (S/P) Ann-Marie Slaughter, and (S/ES)Paul Wohlers attending.

M, P, and S/P passed.

D(S):
-- Emilio Estefan would like to speak with the Secretary about possible people-to-people ideas for Cuba.

D(L):
-- DoD wants to move money (that is actually State money) to State accounts; checking to see what Hill appropriators will say.
-- From meeting with AIPAC, should not assume they will push for Ros-Lehtinen language in the Russia 123 agreement.
-- Rep. Norm Dicks wants to discuss civ-mil issues.

H:
-- A number of Senators have written to President Medvedev asking that adoptions to the US not be halted. It appears that adoptions already in the pipeline have not been halted; unclear about new adoptions.
-- Preparing for the Karzai visit next week; he will have a number of Hill meetings. Frank Ruggiero meets with SFRC this week; the Secretary will meet with Blue Dogs on the budget on Wednesday; the Secretary and Secretaries Gates and Chu will do an All-Members briefing on START on Thursday afternoon; discussions continue on Iran sanctions legislation, with the Secretary and Susan Rice calling some senators and discussing who else should be called.

PA:
-- No briefing today.

L:

B5

-- L will be meeting with PA to discuss points to use on International Criminal Court policy.

Summary of 9:15 A/S Meeting, May 3, 2010:

Deputy Secretary Steinberg chaired.

D(L):
-- Budget process going into high gear in May/June. Will change process from last year; Senior Review process was not that useful. Will start with conversations with A/Ss; also trying to include more inter-agency aspects. Will be more steps this year but better product. Should be done by end of summer.
-- Evaluation process underway; OPM will use State process as model for civil service reform.

OES (A/S Jones):
-- Discussed the Gulf oil spill, noting 12 foreign offers of assistance so far; US has not accepted any yet. Ops Center is maintaining a matrix of international offers. There will be daily DCs this week. Jim Steinberg noted the need to monitor developments that could affect Mexico, especially as the Calderon visit approaches.

NEA (A/S Feltman):
-- Baghdad recount going well so far. Kurds dropped recount request in Kirkuk; Allawi dropped request for southern Iraq. Bus in Mosul carrying Christians was bombed this morning, several dead.

USUN/W: (Barks-Ruggles)
-- Ahmadinejad speaking this morning at NPT Revcon at UN; the Secretary speaks this afternoon.

SCA: (DAS Krol)
-- In Nepal, Maoist street demonstrations brought tens of thousands out, no violence so far. Embassy closed today but doesn't think situation will deteriorate greatly. Maoist goal is to maintain pressure until PM Nepal resigns.

AF: (A/S Carson)
-- Weekend attack on Somali mosque believed work of ASJ – group is Ethiopia-supported and affiliated with TFG. Targeted senior al-Shabab leaders, at least one killed.
-- VP Biden going to Egypt, Kenya, and South Africa first week of June; will be at opening US match in soccer World Cup.

-- From DROC, reports of new LRA massacre in Feb in eastern Congo; details just now coming out, appears over 100 killed.
-- Scott Gration in Khartoum today.

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

PM: (A/S Shapiro)
-- Sending Note to S about Saudi request for arms sales by US. Don't want publicity now; need to develop Hill strategy.

INL:
-- A/S Johnson is in Iraq this week.

S/SRMC:
-- Farah Pandith thanked all at State involved in last week's Entrepreneurship Summit; said was well done and can be used to encourage young Muslim populations around the world.

S/CT: (Coordinator Benjamin)
-- Times Square bomb incident being classified as possible international incident due to al-Qaida video claiming responsibility.

EUR: (A/S Gordon)
-- Greece came up with improved austerity package; PM Papandreou gave good speech to the country; Germans coming up with support funds; markets mixed today.

pw

Paul D. Wohlers
Deputy Executive Secretary
S/ES-S, Rm. 7224
202-647-5302

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, March 30, 2010 5:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Trieste

Below is the Iran section of the chair's statement from Trieste. There is strong language on human rights; is that what Miliband was referring to? The language on the nuclear issue reflects where we were last summer -- still on the first track.

Iran
We are concerned about the aftermath of Iranian Presidential elections. We fully respect the sovereignty of Iran. At the same time, we deplore post-electoral violence, which led to the loss of lives of Iranian civilians. We express our solidarity with those who have suffered repression while peacefully demonstrating and urge Iran to respect fundamental human rights, including freedom of expression, as ensured by the international treaties it has ratified. The crisis should be settled soon through democratic dialogue and peaceful means on the basis of the rule of law. We call on the Iranian government to guarantee that the will of the Iranian people is reflected in the electoral process.

We remain committed to finding a diplomatic solution to the issue of Iran's nuclear program and support renewed efforts to that effect, such as the readiness of the U.S. to enter into direct talks and the invitation from China, France, Germany, Russia, the United Kingdom and the United States to Iran to restart negotiations, as well as the constructive involvement of other G8 partners in the process. We stress the need for unity of action on the basis of agreed policy. We sincerely hope that Iran will seize this opportunity to give diplomacy a chance to find a negotiated solution to the nuclear issue. At the same time we remain deeply concerned over proliferation risks posed by Iran's nuclear programme. We recognise that Iran has the right to a civilian nuclear programme, but that comes with the responsibility to restore confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of its nuclear activities. We strongly urge Iran to cooperate fully with the IAEA and to comply with the relevant UNSC Resolutions.

Our meeting on the margin of the United Nations General Assembly opening week next September, will be an occasion for the G8 to take stock of the situation.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, March 30, 2010 7:02 PM
To: H
Cc: Jake Sullivan
Subject: Re: Canada

Just the stuff from yesterday. Maybe one of the cable nets or talking heads made a to do about it.

But I'm surprised because it didn't seem anyone here cared, was all Canada

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Jake Sullivan
To: PIR
Subject: Canada
Sent: Mar 30, 2010 6:59 PM

A friend just emailed me telling me she was so sorry I had such a tough day in Canada. What's the news that suggests that back here?

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Tuesday, March 30, 2010 7:06 PM
To: preines H
Subject: Re: Canada

I haven't seen anything real in our press.

------Original Message------
From: PIR
To: Evergreen
Cc: Jake Sullivan
ReplyTo: preines
Subject: Re: Canada
Sent: Mar 30, 2010 7:01 PM

Just the stuff from yesterday. Maybe one of the cable nets or talking heads made a to do about it.

But I'm surprised because it didn't seem anyone here cared, was all Canada

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Jake Sullivan
To: PIR
Subject: Canada
Sent: Mar 30, 2010 6:59 PM

A friend just emailed me telling me she was so sorry I had such a tough day in Canada. What's the news that suggests that back here?

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 3:05 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Obama's diplomacy, not fully engaged (for S)

fyi

---

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Monday, May 03, 2010 12:26 PM
To: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Obama's diplomacy, not fully engaged (for S)

The Washington Post

Obama's diplomacy, not fully engaged

By Jackson Diehl
Monday, May 3, 2010; A15

Barack Obama's foreign policy has been defined so far by his attempts to "engage" with adversaries or rivals of the United States, such as Ayatollah Ali Khamenei of Iran and Dmitry Medvedev of Russia. The results have been mixed. But now the president's focus is visibly shifting. In the next 18 months, Obama's record abroad will be made or broken by his ability to do business with two nominal U.S. allies: Hamid Karzai and Binyamin Netanyahu.

Karzai has become the hardest problem in Obama's Afghanistan surge, one that might be summed up as "can't win with him, can't win without him." Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu holds the key to whether Israel will be prepared to accept a Palestinian state within the two-year time frame Obama has established -- and also, perhaps, whether Iran's pursuit of nuclear weapons will lead to war.

Both men are prickly and somewhat inscrutable. Both know their countries and their own careers depend on support from the United States, but both are also resistant to key elements of Obama's policies. Handling them well requires skillful and subtle diplomacy by the U.S. president and by those who carry out his policies.

And Obama has not done well. In fact, his treatment of the Israeli and Afghan leaders during one week in late March -- immediately after his victory on health care -- marked a low point of his performance as president.

First, Obama seized on an errant Israeli announcement about housing construction in East Jerusalem to reopen a pointless battle with Netanyahu. During a disastrous March 23 meeting at the White House, Obama demanded -- in vain -- that Israel stop all building in Jerusalem; and at one point he left Netanyahu and his delegation to stew in the Roosevelt room while he retired to the second-floor residence for dinner.

Five days later, Obama flew to Kabul for another cold meeting, this time with Karzai. In a briefing for reporters on the plane, national security adviser James Jones made it clear that Obama was displeased with Karzai's lack of progress since beginning a new term as president last fall. In case there was any doubt, Obama spelled out that dissatisfaction in a television interview a day after his return.

Was it hubris from health care that brought on this burst of presidential imperialism? Whatever the cause, the results were disastrous. Netanyahu retreated to Jerusalem, where, after a couple of weeks of sulking, he defiantly announced that settlement construction in Jerusalem would continue. Karzai summoned Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to Kabul, then delivered a tirade against Western interference that concluded with a threat to join the Taliban.

The administration has spent the past month cleaning up this mess. Obama abruptly changed his approach, sending a note to Karzai in early April thanking him for the Kabul visit and confirming his invitation to visit Washington in May -- a trip that, just days earlier, the White House had hinted at canceling. Meanwhile, the president and a good part of his Cabinet have been heaping love on Israel -- if not precisely Netanyahu -- by proclaiming their commitment to the relationship in speech after speech before pro-Israel groups.

The result is that the administration now has a detailed plan for working with Karzai over the next several months. Israeli-Palestinian peace talks, which have been delayed for two months by the flap over Jerusalem, might finally begin this week. Quiet diplomacy by the administration's special envoys in the Middle East and Afghanistan, George Mitchell and Richard Holbrooke, has achieved what presidential lectures did not.

The underlying problems, however, haven't changed. Karzai still has little appetite for attacking the corruption in his government or rallying support for U.S. military campaigns against the Taliban. Netanyahu remains wedded to a right-wing coalition that would not allow him to make significant concessions in peace negotiations, even if he wanted to.

Obama has to find a way to coax each of them toward a change of course. Public bullying won't do it. Assurances of U.S. support and stroking by special envoys go only so far. What's missing is personal chemistry and confidence, the construction of a bond between leaders that can persuade a U.S. ally to take a risk; in other words, presidential "engagement." Isn't that what Obama promised?

Nora Toiv
Office of the Secretary
202-647-8633

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 8:28 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Morales

Morales blasted the U.S. efforts in Haiti today. See below. Craig Kelly and I agree that you should consider a call to Morales. Perhaps we could discuss tomorrow.

From: Rocha, Barbara
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 1:26 PM
To: Roberts, Asel K
Subject: FW: Garcia Linera on Haiti

Rough translation of the points below:

- Evo Morales announced today that his government will ask for an emergency meeting at the UN to "reject the U.S. military occupation" in Haiti, according to Spanish news agency EFE.
- "It is not possible that the U.S. is using a natural disaster to invade and occupy Haiti," said Morales, who qualified as "inhumane, savage, and opportunist" the deployment of troops in the Caribbean island.
- "We'll ask the UN, via our Foreign Ministry, for an emergency meeting to reject this military occupation of the U.S. in Haiti," announced Morales.
- Morales recalled that President Obama has guaranteed in international fora that he wants partners and respectful diplomatic relations with other countries. "You don't achieve this (partners, diplomatic relations) with military occupation, or troops, or bases," he said and expects "a pronouncement by the peoples of the world and social forces rejecting this intervention and military occupation in Haiti."
- Morales also asked "how much money, food and water" will be destined to the 12,000 soldiers the U.S. sent to Haiti and noted that this money "should be spend on the victims."
- He trusted that the American people will reject "the abusive use" of their economic resources for what he insisted on qualifying as "military intervention."
- "The times of empire have ended: these are times of the people."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Rocha, Barbara
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 1:09 PM
To: Roberts, Asel K
Subject: FW: Garcia Linera on Haiti

Following up on this, President Morales has now said he will call for an emergency meeting at the UN to "reject the U.S. military occupation of Haiti." I've alerted IO. I'll reach out to Labor and G staff to offer a briefing, will keep you looped in.

EVO MORALES PIDE REUNION DE EMERGENCIA PARA REPUDIAR Y RECHAZAR A EEUU EN HAITI, INFORMA EFE

- Evo Morales anunció hoy que su Gobierno pedirá a Naciones Unidas una reunión de emergencia para "repudiar y rechazar la ocupación militar de Estados Unidos" en Haití, informa la agencia española EFE.
- "No es posible que Estados Unidos use una desgracia natural para invadir y ocupar militarmente Haití", dijo Morales, quien calificó de "inhumano, salvaje y oportunista" el despliegue de las fuerzas armadas estadounidenses en la isla caribeña.
- "Vamos a pedir mediante la cancillería a las Naciones Unidas una reunión de emergencia para repudiar y rechazar esta ocupación militar de Estados Unidos hacia Haití", anunció Morales.
- Morales recordó que el mandatario de Estados Unidos, Barack Obama, ha garantizado en foros internacionales que desea tener socios y relaciones diplomáticas de respeto mutuo con el resto de países. "Ser socios o tener relaciones diplomáticas no se hace con ocupación militar, ni con tropas militares, ni con bases militares", dijo y espera "un pronunciamiento de todos los pueblos del mundo y de las fuerzas sociales rechazando esta intervención y ocupación militar en Haití".
- Morales se preguntó también "cuánta plata, cuántos alimentos o cuánta agua" se van a destinar para abastecer a los 12.000 soldados que Estados Unidos ha mandado a Haití y consideró que ese dinero "debería gastarse en los damnificados" por el terremoto y no en los militares.
- Confió en que el propio pueblo estadounidense rechace "el uso abusivo" de sus recursos económicos para lo que insistió en calificar como "intervención militar".
- "Los tiempos de imperio se terminan: son tiempos de pueblos", sentenció.

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:26 PM
To: H; 'SullivanJJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Speech ETA?

Should have been faxed
Checking now.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'sullivanjj@state.gov' <sullivanjj@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jan 20 21:23:05 2010
Subject: Speech ETA?

Do you know when it will arrive?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 3:45 PM
To: H
Subject: a thought before our call tonight (2 sentences!)

Just fyi, thought you might be interested in the opening line of a pamphlet that the British policy planning office put out on "Better International Policy." The Introduction, written by the Permanent Under-Secretary of States, opens: "The FCO is at the centre of policy making on international issues in Whitehall. We are the experts in government at analyzing and influencing what is happening overseas and in turning this into clear and well-judged policy advice for Ministers."

B5

I have sent this to Jack, Jim, Jake, and Cheryl. AM

Anne-Marie Slaughter
Director of Policy Planning
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:27 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: RE: Speech ETA?

It's on its way with the book but someone will fax now.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:23 PM
To: Huma Abedin; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Speech ETA?

Do you know when it will arrive?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:37 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Speech being faxed right now.

Book will be there in 10 minutes.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 5:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: 6:00 PSD call

Sorry - first I've heard of it. Philippe and I are sitting on the shuttle which takes off at 6. I'll catch up w Cheryl after.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon May 03 17:47:15 2010
Subject: 6:00 PSD call

Will you be on it?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 7:44 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Nice job today....

----- Original Message -----
From: Solomon, Jay [redacted] B6
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon May 03 19:25:44 2010
Subject: Nice job today....

Thought HRC KOd Mahmoud. He looked crazy and zealous. She looked conciliatory but strong. Best, Jay

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, May 3, 2010 7:45 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Nice job today....

Meant to write that Solomon is a tough critic.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Mon May 03 19:44:19 2010
Subject: Fw: Nice job today....

----- Original Message -----
From: Solomon, Jay [redacted] B6
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon May 03 19:25:44 2010
Subject: Nice job today....

Thought HRC KOd Mahmoud. He looked crazy and zealous. She looked conciliatory but strong. Best, Jay

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 6:07 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Reuters / Haiti humanitarian need competes with recovery plan

I really like Rick

See b/l in case you get ques at press conf re urgent needs being crowded out by recovery

Cdm

From: Barton, Rick (USUN)
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Barton, Rick (USUN); DeMarcellus, Roland F
Sent: Tue Mar 30 16:48:08 2010
Subject: FW: Reuters / Haiti humanitarian need competes with recovery plan

Cheryl, I thought the meeting and the press conference went well.

Below is an interesting analysis done by Doug Mercado that relates to one of the questions you were asked about the flash appeal. Good background (for when you have a minute), as well as a reminder that there is a great deal of liquidity in the NGO community that needs creative guidance.

Please let us know if there is anything you need.

Best, Rick

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Mercado, Douglas E
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 5:46 PM
To: Ventrell, Patrick H (USUN); Rice, Susan E (USUN); Anderson, Brooke D (USUN)
Cc: Cousens, Elizabeth (USUN); Ahmed, Salman (USUN); Tekach, Mara (USUN); Vadino, Carolyn; Sammis, John F (USUN); Barton, Rick (USUN)
Subject: RE: Reuters / Haiti humanitarian need competes with recovery plan

Hi All,

Just to put this into perspective....yes, the UN Flash Appeal for Haiti is only funded at 48% ($718 million). Just for comparison, here are figures for other UN humanitarian appeals: DRC is funded at 5%, Sudan at 23%, Afghanistan at 31%, Kenya at 18%, Chad at 4%. Clearly, not all disasters/responses are the same. Perhaps the scenario that most closely approximates the needs generated by the Haiti earthquake is that of the Indian Ocean tsunami (2004/2005). Oddly enough, the UN Flash Appeal for the Indian Ocean Tsunami ran to $1.4 billion (the exact same figure as for the Haiti Flash Appeal). In the end, the UN humanitarian appeal for the Indian Ocean tsunami stood at $1.2 billion (a coverage rate of 85%). In the worst of disasters, the funding for UN humanitarian appeals never reaches 100%.

We should not forget that there is an enormous amount of money being funneled through channels outside the UN appeal system. For example, the Red Cross movement (including IFRC, ICRC and the national societies) has raised between $700 and $800 million for Haiti. The American Red Cross alone raised $400 million (they project that it will take them five years to spend this money on relief and recovery activities in Haiti). InterAction, the consortium of US-based NGOs has announced that its members have raised nearly $700 million for relief and early recovery activities in Haiti. I met with two NGOs today: OXFAM has raised over $100 million. World Vision has raised $250 million specifically for its earthquake response in Haiti (on top of its regular budget of $50 million for Haiti). We haven't been able to get reliable figures on what non-US NGOs have raised, but I would imagine it to be considerable (at least over $500 million as a conservative estimate).

[redacted] Clearly, there is an enormous amount of money raised for Haiti relief and recovery efforts through the UN system and outside the UN system. The challenge is to get an accurate tally of the funding available from UN agencies, IOs and NGOs (perhaps a tasking for the OSE and/or OCHA) and maximize coordination among the various agencies holding this money to improve allocation of resources. There very well may be underfunded sectors and overfunded sectors in terms of the humanitarian response. Information sharing among donors and aid agencies sitting on funding is critical to avoid spending too much money in some sectors/geographic areas and spending too little in others. B5

[redacted] B5

Doug Mercado
Adviser - Humanitarian Affairs
United States Mission to the United Nations
Tel. +1-212-415-4398
Mob. [redacted] B6
Fax +1-212-415-4141
E-mail: mercadode@state.gov
E-mail: [redacted]
www.usun.state.gov
Follow us on Twitter and Facebook

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Ventrell, Patrick H (USUN)
Sent: Monday, March 29, 2010 5:16 PM
To: Rice, Susan E (USUN); Anderson, Brooke D (USUN)
Cc: Cousens, Elizabeth (USUN); Ahmed, Salman (USUN); Tekach, Mara (USUN); Vadino, Carolyn; Mercado, Douglas E; Sammis, John F (USUN); Barton, Rick (USUN)
Subject: Reuters / Haiti humanitarian need competes with recovery plan

Haiti humanitarian need competes with recovery plan

Mon Mar 29, 2010 4:55pm EDT

* Haiti humanitarian aid 52 percent short of $1.4 bln goal

* Time and money running out for humanitarian effort - UN

By Michelle Nichols

UNITED NATIONS, March 29 (Reuters) - As donors are being asked to dig deep for Haiti's reconstruction, they also need to address the country's immediate humanitarian need as hurricane season looms and quake survivors face increasing violence, U.N. officials said on Monday.

While a U.N. summit in New York on Wednesday will aim to raise an initial $3.8 billion for the impoverished Caribbean nation's recovery, an appeal by the world body for $1.4 billion in humanitarian aid is 52 percent short of its goal.

The initial appeal by the U.N. Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs for $575 million was met within a month, but when the call for funding was later more than doubled, the donations slowed to a trickle.

"Perhaps the extension of the flash appeal has got a little bit crowded by the fact that this conference -- with a big ask for recovery -- is coming, so maybe donors have held back a little," said U.N. Development Program chief Helen Clark.

"Obviously this medium/long term reconstruction recovery is incredibly important but ... if we don't get the humanitarian relief side right as well you don't have the foundation for the successful longer term recovery," she told a news conference.

Possibly more than 300,000 were killed when a magnitude 7.0 earthquake struck Haiti's capital Port-au-Prince on Jan. 12 in what some experts are calling the deadliest natural disaster of modern times. Haiti's economy and infrastructure were decimated and more than 1 million survivors left homeless.

"We should not think that the humanitarian crisis is over. The rain and the hurricane season will start soon," said Edmond Mulet, acting head of the U.N. mission in Haiti.

"This may cause hundreds of thousands of Haitians who now live in tents -- some made of sticks and cardboard -- to once again lose everything," he said. "Lives are at stake; we need to urgently build more durable shelter."

He also said protection of the vulnerable, particularly the women and children in camps, needed to be strengthened. "But time and money is running out," Mulet said.

Violence is also increasing, he said, with the National Hospital, morgue and aid group Doctors Without Borders reporting an increase in gunshot wounds. Mulet said there had also been a rise in sexual violence.

Mulet gained notoriety for wielding an iron fist during a previous stint as head of the U.N. mission when he led mostly Brazilian "blue helmet" troops in a successful crackdown on Haiti's heavily armed gangs.

"Now they are outside on the streets so now we have to start all over again from zero," he said of the thousands of gang members who escaped from jail after the earthquake.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: postmaster@state.gov
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:30 PM
To: H
Subject: Undeliverable: Speech ETA?
Attachments: details.txt; Re: Speech ETA? (2.50 KB)

Delivery has failed to these recipients or distribution lists:

tillemnants@state.gov
The recipient's e-mail address was not found in the recipient's e-mail system. Microsoft Exchange will not try to redeliver this message for you. Please check the e-mail address and try resending this message, or provide the following diagnostic text to your system administrator.

Diagnostic information for administrators:

Generating server: MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu

tillemnants@state.gov
#< #5.1.1> #SMTP#

Original message headers:

```
Received: from vance3.state.gov ([10.4.16.249]) by
 MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu with Microsoft SMTPSVC(6.0.3790.3959);         Wed, 20
 Jan 2010 22:30:18 -0500
Received: from mail.clintonemail.com (ool-18bbeabb.static.optonline.net [24.187.234.187])
        by vance3.state.gov  with ESMTP id o0L30mHN011693;
        Wed, 20 Jan 2010 22:00:48 -0500
Received: from CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993]) by CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993%10]) with mapi; Wed, 20
 Jan 2010 22:30:16 -0500
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: "'sullivanjj@state.gov'" <sullivanjj@state.gov>, "'tillemnants@state.gov'"
        <tillemnants@state.gov>
Date: Wed, 20 Jan 2010 22:30:15 -0500
Subject: Re: Speech ETA?
Thread-Topic: Speech ETA?
Thread-Index: AcqaQKnfjAE7BOKaQrSapf9ApC4jcQAAH0QQAAI5Unk=
Message-ID: <786762D781A7FF4FAC9060892B404488036430B867@CLNTINET08.clinton.local>
Accept-Language: en-US
Content-Language: en-US
X-MS-Has-Attach:
X-MS-TNEF-Correlator:
acceptlanguage: en-US
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="utf-8"
Content-Transfer-Encoding: base64
MIME-Version: 1.0
Return-Path: HDR22@clintonemail.com
```

X-OriginalArrivalTime: 21 Jan 2010 03:30:18.0482 (UTC) FILETIME=[0DE48D20:01CA9A4A]
X-TM-AS-Product-Ver: SMEX-8.0.0.4125-6.000.1038-17134.000
X-TM-AS-Result: No--12.277300-5.000000-31
X-TM-AS-User-Approved-Sender: No
X-TM-AS-User-Blocked-Sender: No

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:34 PM
To: H
Cc: Tillemann, Tomicah S
Subject: RE: Tomicah

Added here.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:33 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Tomicah

Do you have his email address? The email I sent to you both came back undelivered.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:40 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Speech ETA?

On the phone with Bader, [redacted] B5

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:30 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; 'tillemnants@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Speech ETA?

Thank you TT for a very good speech. I have a few questions:

[redacted]

Also, pls be sure the text is carefully proofread since there are a number of typos and missing words.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Jan 20 21:26:43 2010
Subject: RE: Speech ETA?

It's on its way with the book but someone will fax now.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:23 PM

To: Huma Abedin; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Speech ETA?

Do you know when it will arrive?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:45 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: The speech

B5

little has changed in substance or language.

Still working on it, though.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:32 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: The speech

Jake-

What's your take on the impact of this version?

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Huma Abedin [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 11:08 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ashton meeting

No problem.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Jan 20 23:05:33 2010
Subject: Ashton meeting

I'd like to invite two EUR staffers--Jeremy Shapiro and Siddharth Mohandas-- who wrote a good memo about US-EU to come by and meet Lady Ashton tomorrow. Or even sit in on the mtg if ok w Phil Gordon.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 7:59 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Did u hear anything from [redacted]?

Fyi [redacted]

---

From: Shah, Rajiv (AID/A) [redacted] B6
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: 'Shah, Shivam Mallick' <[redacted]
Sent: Tue Mar 30 12:13:27 2010
Subject: RE: Did u hear anything from [redacted]?

Hi Huma,

[redacted]

Raj

---

From: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Friday, March 26, 2010 10:24 AM
To: Shah, Rajiv (AID/A)
Subject: Did u hear anything from [redacted]?

RELEASE IN PART
B5, B6

From: Tillemann, Tomicah S <TillemannTS@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 11:18 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: Speech ETA?

Thanks very much. On your questions:

B5

[redacted] B5

Also, pls be sure the text is carefully proofread since there are a number of typos and missing words.

Absolutely -- sorry about that.

Thanks,
Tomicah
----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Jan 20 21:26:43 2010
Subject: RE: Speech ETA?

It's on its way with the book but someone will fax now.

Tomicah Tillemann, Ph.D.
Speechwriter to the Secretary
Policy Planning Staff
Department of State

S/P Main: 202.647.2372 [redacted] B6
Fax: 202.647.0844 | Room 7311 (S/P) | 2201 C Street NW | Washington, DC 20520

-----Original Message-----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 11:06 PM
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S
Subject: FW: Speech ETA?

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:30 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; 'tillemnants@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Speech ETA?

Thank you TT for a very good speech. I have a few questions:

[redacted] B5

B5

Also, pls be sure the text is carefully proofread since there are a number of typos and missing words.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Jan 20 21:26:43 2010
Subject: RE: Speech ETA?

It's on its way with the book but someone will fax now.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:23 PM
To: Huma Abedin; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Speech ETA?

Do you know when it will arrive?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 12:11 AM
To: H
Subject: speech

You'll have a new draft when you wake up. I think it's getting close but can use one more pass from you.

B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 9:06 AM
To: H
Subject: H: NI fallout continues. Sid

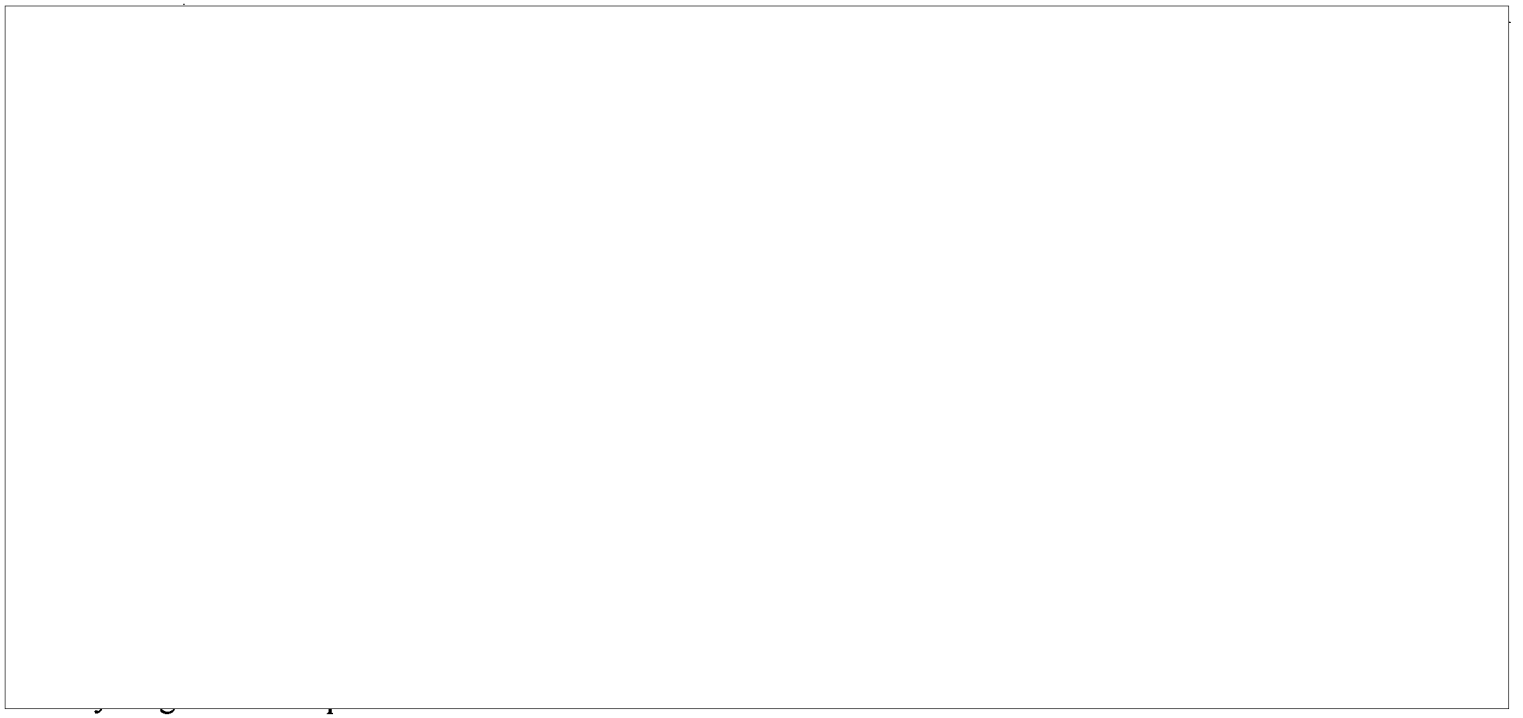
New blow for Conservative alliance with UUP as assembly member quits party

Alan McFarland follows MP Lady Hermon in resigning from Ulster Unionists to sit as independent

- Henry McDonald, Ireland correspondent
- guardian.co.uk, Wednesday 31 March 2010 09.48 BST

The Conservatives' alliance with the Ulster Unionists has sustained a second blow in North Down after last week's resignation of the sitting MP Lady Hermon.
Assembly member and former army major Alan McFarland announced today that he was leaving the UUP in protest at its pact with the Tories.
It is expected McFarland will now work for Hermon's re-election as an independent against the official UUP-Tory candidate.
A UUP statement said the timing of McFarland's announcement was "disappointing". He has been a UUP member of the Stormont assembly for 12 years and was once a loyal ally of Lord Trimble, Northern Ireland's former first minister.
Trimble has been one of the driving forces behind the UUP-Conservative alliance.
Last night McFarland resigned his membership of the party and said he would now sit as an independent member of the assembly.
"With the recent confirmation of candidates, including the imposition of a Conservative candidate in my own North Down constituency, it is clear that the party is determined to continue down the Conservative road," he said in a statement.
"I do not wish to join them. I am sorry to leave a party that contains many good friends, and greatly regret that events have developed in the way they have."
Last week Hermon, the MP for North Down, said she would run in the general election as an independent unionist.
In a statement, the Ulster Unionist party thanked McFarland for his service, but said the "electoral pact has the potential to transform politics in Northern Ireland in a manner not previously witnessed" in Ulster.



RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Koh, Harold Hongju <KohHH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 5:35 AM
To: H
Subject: Thoughts re Haiti

Madame Secretary:

Pardon the early morning email, but I am responding to your invitation to send you our thoughts on Haiti. You probably have already had all the thoughts below, but I wanted to put mine in writing. First, and most important, thanks for what you have done thus far, which has been remarkable. One week in, we have reacted most admirably to the Haiti crisis. State and AID are firmly in the lead; you, Cheryl, Raj, and Jake have done a heroic job; and the most urgent humanitarian challenges seem in hand. Although I have not participated in many of the departmental conversations about Haiti, based on my years thinking about that country, I wanted to offer suggestions that might prove helpful on the next round of interrelated challenges:

B5

B5

Best,

Harold

--
Harold Hongju Koh

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 9:35 AM
To: H
Subject: Great to see you and President Clinton sitting on either side of Ban Ki Moon!

And the speech was excellent.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 6:07 AM
To: H
Subject: Isabelle confirmed for 8:15

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 6:09 AM
To: H
Subject: Final speech about to be faxed to house.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 10:09 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

Fyi

---

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Mar 31 09:55:03 2010
Subject: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

Not much of a surprise. Later this morning KBH will announce that she will NOT resign her Senate seat.

You'll recall that she had had promised during her gubernatorial campaign that, win or lose, she'd give up her seat.

Miguel E. Rodríguez

Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs

Bureau of Legislative Affairs

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-2645

rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 10:24 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:20:18 2010
Subject: Re: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:09:09 2010
Subject: Fw: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

Fyi

---

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Mar 31 09:55:03 2010
Subject: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

Not much of a surprise. Later this morning KBH will announce that she will NOT resign her Senate seat.

You'll recall that she had had promised during her gubernatorial campaign that, win or lose, she'd give up her seat.

Miguel E. Rodríguez

Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs

Bureau of Legislative Affairs

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-2645

rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 10:49 AM
To: H
Subject: Troika on Sudan

Team would like to release following statement. Okay by you?

MEDIA NOTE
Joint Statement on the Upcoming Sudan National Elections

Following is the text of a joint statement by U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, Norwegian Foreign Minister Jonas Støre, and United Kingdom Foreign Secretary David Miliband on the upcoming national elections in Sudan.

Begin Text:

National elections in Sudan this month will represent a major milestone in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement that ended Sudan's twenty-two year civil war, and are an important opportunity for the people of Sudan to participate in the political process.

We urge all parties in Sudan to work urgently to ensure that elections can proceed peacefully and credibly in April. We are deeply concerned by reports of continued administrative and logistical challenges, as well as restrictions on political freedoms. We call on the Government of Sudan, the National Elections Commission, and all political parties to engage in further dialogue to resolve practical obstacles, procedural impediments, and address allegations of intimidation, harassment, and safety concerns, and other legitimate concerns raised by various political parties. We continue to urge the parties to improve conditions on the ground in Darfur and create a secure environment conducive to Darfuri participation.

Irrespective of the outcome of elections, it is essential that work continues and is accelerated to meet remaining CPA deadlines. Progress is needed urgently to complete border demarcation, to establish the commissions that will supervise the referenda for the South and Abyei, to conduct popular consultations in Blue Nile and Southern Kordofan, and to negotiate sustainable post-CPA arrangements in areas such as wealth-sharing, citizenship and assets, and liabilities.

We reiterate our commitment to ensure that the referenda must happen on schedule and that their outcomes need to be respected. It is time to redouble efforts to achieve these ends. We urge all parties in Sudan and all regional and international partners to work together to achieve the peaceful future that the people of Sudan deserve.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 10:53 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Troika on Sudan

I did. I had been told it was a wet kiss to the NSC. It wasn't. You and Gates look good.

What did you think?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:50:22 2010
Subject: Re: Troika on Sudan

Ok. Did you see the latest FT article?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:49:10 2010
Subject: Troika on Sudan

Team would like to release following statement. Okay by you?

MEDIA NOTE
Joint Statement on the Upcoming Sudan National Elections

Following is the text of a joint statement by U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, Norwegian Foreign Minister Jonas Støre, and United Kingdom Foreign Secretary David Miliband on the upcoming national elections in Sudan.

Begin Text:

National elections in Sudan this month will represent a major milestone in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement that ended Sudan's twenty-two year civil war, and are an important opportunity for the people of Sudan to participate in the political process.

We urge all parties in Sudan to work urgently to ensure that elections can proceed peacefully and credibly in April. We are deeply concerned by reports of continued administrative and logistical challenges, as well as restrictions on political freedoms. We call on the Government of Sudan, the National Elections Commission, and all political parties to engage in further dialogue to resolve practical obstacles, procedural impediments, and address allegations of intimidation, harassment, and safety concerns, and other legitimate concerns raised by various political parties. We continue to urge the parties to improve conditions on the ground in Darfur and create a secure environment conducive to Darfuri participation.

Irrespective of the outcome of elections, it is essential that work continues and is accelerated to meet remaining CPA deadlines. Progress is needed urgently to complete border demarcation, to establish the commissions that will supervise the referenda for the South and Abyei, to conduct popular consultations in Blue Nile and Southern Kordofan, and to negotiate sustainable post-CPA arrangements in areas such as wealth-sharing, citizenship and assets, and liabilities.

We reiterate our commitment to ensure that the referenda must happen on schedule and that their outcomes need to be respected. It is time to redouble efforts to achieve these ends. We urge all parties in Sudan and all regional and international partners to work together to achieve the peaceful future that the people of Sudan deserve.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 10:58 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:52:28 2010
Subject: Re: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:23:59 2010
Subject: Re: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:20:18 2010
Subject: Re: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Mar 31 10:09:09 2010
Subject: Fw: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

Fyi

---

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Mar 31 09:55:03 2010
Subject: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

Not much of a surprise. Later this morning KBH will announce that she will NOT resign her Senate seat.

You'll recall that she had had promised during her gubernatorial campaign that, win or lose, she'd give up her seat.

Miguel E. Rodríguez

Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs

Bureau of Legislative Affairs

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-2645

rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 11:39 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: HbJ

In case u see hbj

----- Original Message -----
From: Feltman, Jeffrey D
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Macmanus, Joseph E
Sent: Wed Mar 31 07:30:16 2010
Subject: HbJ

Hi. I'm in NYC too, but on leave. Hamad bin Jassim has asked to see me today at 11 a.m., after S speech. I don't know the subject.

B5

Jeffrey Feltman

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, April 2, 2010 9:16 PM
To: H; Doug Band
Subject: Fw: Thank You

For wjc fyi too

----- Original Message -----
From: rene.preval [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Apr 02 20:40:25 2010
Subject: Thank You

Cheryl,
I would like to personnaly thank you for the tremendous work you have done and your total commitement which have contributed to make this historical summit a succes.Nonetheless this is just the starting point and you can count on my full support for all upcoming task to be performed. On behalf of the haitian thank you again.

Best regards.

Rene Preval
Sent from my BlackBerry® device from Digicel

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 12:00 PM
To: H
Subject: Barbara bush

HOUSTON – (March 31, 2010) - Former First Lady Barbara Bush was discharged Wednesday from The Methodist Hospital in Houston after undergoing a series of tests. Doctors believe Mrs. Bush, 84, may have had a mild relapse of her Graves disease, a thyroid condition for which she was treated in 1989. As a result, her physicians at Methodist have adjusted her medication. Upon discharge she was alert, talkative and appeared to be getting stronger as she prepared to return home.

Mrs. Bush arrived Saturday at the hospital, where she received a number of tests including blood tests and imaging studies. Just over a year ago Mrs. Bush received a replacement aortic valve at Methodist, which doctors said is working very well.

Mrs. Bush is expected to make a full recovery and should soon return to her normal activities.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 12:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: In case S calls S. Africa Foreign Minister

This is further background on the Mashabane call, [redacted] B5

From: Seiden, Maya D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Ashraf, Madeeha S; Park, Pamela P; Butte-Dahl, Jennifer X; Beale, Courtney A Kramer; Syed, Zia S
Sent: Tue Mar 30 15:38:52 2010
Subject: In case S calls S. Africa Foreign Minister

I understand that South African Foreign Minister has placed a call to the Secretary on the proposed World Bank loan for a coal-fired power plant. Wanted to give you some background on that (beyond what will be in the call sheet), in case the Secretary ends up returning the call. I've pasted below a DRAFT IM that was prepared for the two Ds. It gives more substantive background on the project, which I thought might be helpful. It does not yet fully reflect building views, so I've tried to summarize those here.

[redacted]

B5

Don't hesitate to reach out if you want more information on any of this.

MS

INFORMATION MEMO FOR DEPUTY SECRETARY STEINBERG AND DEPUTY SECRETARY LEW

FROM: E – Robert Hormats
S/SECC – Todd Stern
S/CIEA – David Goldwyn
AF – Johnnie Carson

SUBJECT: Proposed World Bank Loan for South African Coal-fired Power Plant

On April 8 the World Bank Board is expected to consider whether to approve a $3.75 billion loan for a 4,800 megawatt (MW) coal-fired power plant in South Africa (the "Medupi project"). The project, by South Africa's state-owned Eskom utility, is intended to address a worsening power shortage. The loan is controversial due to the 26 million tons of CO2 emissions per year that the plant will emit when completed, making it one of the largest single sources of carbon emissions in the world. South Africa has sought U.S. support for the project from senior levels at the Department and our Ambassador in Pretoria.

B5

B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 4:28 PM
To: H
Subject: H: In case you haven't seen this in today's FT. Sid http://www.ft.com/cms/s/0/df53a396-3c2a-11df-b40c-00144feabdc0.html

Financial Times FT.com

COMMENT

Analysis

US foreign policy: Waiting on a sun king

By Edward Luce and Daniel Dombey
Published: March 30 2010 22:22 | Last updated: March 30 2010 22:22

Barack Obama at the Great Wall of China last year. Unlike his predecessor Richard Nixon, who turned to Henry Kissinger for advice, the US president has no big foreign policy strategist

For better or for worse, Washington has grown used to the fact that Barack Obama runs the most centralised – or "White House-centric" – administration since Richard Nixon. When Nixon wanted foreign policy advice, everyone knew where he got it from: Henry Kissinger, variously his national security adviser and secretary of state.

In contrast, Mr Obama has no big foreign policy strategist. Even insiders give different answers when asked to whom he turns for advice on the big international questions. But almost all agree with the following observation. "The truth is that President Obama is his own Henry Kissinger – no one else plays that role," says a senior official. "Every administration reflects the personality of the president. This president wants all the trains routed through the Oval Office."

Fifteen months after he took office, the character and structure of Mr Obama's foreign policy machinery is still evolving. But from interviews with dozens of insiders and outsiders, including senior officials both authorised and unauthorised to speak, and three former national security advisers, it is clear the buck not only stops with, but often floats for quite a long time around, Mr Obama himself.

Foreigners have complained about the tendency of his domestic agenda to crowd out the international one – the passage last week of healthcare reform was greeted with an audible sigh of relief among US allies. But within foreign policy itself, his centralised structure can also result in many issues being left on the back burner awaiting presidential attention, say critics.

"On the positive side, we have a very conscientious president who takes advice widely," says the official. "On the debit side, for all the president's intelligence, Barack Obama came to office with very little experience. He just doesn't have much depth on some issues."

The core of Mr Obama's foreign policy machinery is in the White House-based National Security Council, which advises the president and co-ordinates activities across an increasingly complex alphabet soup of Washington departments, military commands and intelligence agencies. The most widely questioned link in the chain is Jim Jones, whom, to many people's surprise, Mr Obama brought in as his national security adviser.

Only briefly acquainted with Mr Obama beforehand, General Jones, a retired four-star marine corps general, shows little interest in running the "inter-agency" process – a key part of the job. Somewhat unconventionally, Gen Jones travels frequently and is thus often out of town. Unusually, it is Mr Obama himself who usually chairs the weekly National Security Council, known as the "principals meeting", not Gen Jones.

Rahm Emanuel, Mr Obama's chief of staff, is also a key part of it. "If you were to ask me who the real national security adviser is, I would say there were three or four, of whom Rahm is one and of which Gen Jones is probably the least important," says another official.

Anyone who has dealt with Gen Jones speaks highly of his matter-of-factness, his geniality and the respect many foreign governments have for him – Pakistan and Israel among them. But as he himself admitted rather disarmingly last year, he does not have a taste for bureaucracy. Speaking at the Atlantic Council, a think-tank where he previously worked, Gen Jones provoked laughter when he said: "I fondly remember [the Atlantic Council] as a place where people actually did what you asked them to do. In my new role I'm finding out that an order is a basis for negotiation."

The lack of a strong national security adviser has created recurring difficulties. Perhaps the best example is the Arab-Israeli peace process, which Mr Obama launched on his second day in office when he appointed George Mitchell as his envoy. Three months later, Mr Obama insisted Benjamin Netanyahu freeze all settlements activity in order to boost Arab confidence in the talks.

In a heated showdown in the Oval Office last May, in which Mr Netanyahu refused to accede to Mr Obama's demand, the only officials present were Mr Emanuel and David Axelrod, senior adviser to Mr Obama in office and during the campaign. Gen Jones was not there. The fallout put the talks in abeyance and damped high Arab hopes for Mr Obama.

"The question is, which bright spark advised the president to demand a settlements freeze without working out what the next step should be when Netanyahu inevitably said 'No'?" says Leslie Gelb, an official in the Carter administration and former head of the Council on Foreign Relations. "Why wasn't George Mitchell in the room? Where was Jones?"

Mr Obama's character is also stamped on the inter-agency process, set up and managed by Tom Donilon, deputy national security adviser. The nitty-gritty of foreign policy-making is done at these frequent "deputies' meetings", which can sometimes consume four to six hours a day.

Described by one insider as "the most powerful man in the White House whose name isn't widely known", Mr Donilon, who was an official in the Clinton administration, is the man who keeps Mr Obama's trains running on time. And there are a lot of trains. Last year, Mr Donilon held 270 deputies meetings – a workload described as "clinically insane" by a former senior diplomat under Bill Clinton.

But as time goes on, it is becoming streamlined – now taking up roughly two to three hours a day, say officials. "People forget that we inherited two wars, terrorism threats, and perhaps the biggest single eight-year decline [George W. Bush's two terms] in America's power and reputation in our history," says a senior official. "It took time to put in place a process that could deal with the very complex decisions we had to take."

Also the organiser of Mr Obama's 9.30am national security briefing, Mr Donilon reinstated the paper trails needed to prevent intra-governmental anarchy, using the model devised by Brent Scowcroft, national security adviser to George Bush senior and Gerald Ford. Vice-president Joe Biden's team was also incorporated to prevent the kind of "parallel process" Dick Cheney used to circumvent the bureaucracy under George W. Bush.

"If you look for the 2002 or 2003 meeting where the decision to go to war in Iraq was taken, you cannot find it," says the senior official. "By getting the process right, we are improving the quality of decisions."

The deputies' ties go back years. For example, the families of Mr Donilon and Jim Steinberg, deputy secretary of state, often go on holiday together. Mr Donilon's wife, Cathy Russell, is chief of staff to Jill Biden, the vice-president's wife. Mr Steinberg's wife, Sherburne Abbott, is deputy to John Holdren, Mr Obama's chief scientific adviser.

All those who regularly attend, including Michèle Flournoy, a senior Pentagon official, and Susan Rice, the US ambassador to the United Nations, have known each other since at least 1993, when they started off in the Clinton administration. This is just as well, since they spend half their lives together: "A lot of work gets done in that group," says Ms Flournoy. "Sometimes it feels like shovelling coal to keep the fires going."

The refurbished machinery was perhaps most in evidence during the build-up to Mr Obama's decision in December to send another 30,000 US troops to Afghanistan – a journey that took four months and involved him in 40 hours of Oval Office meetings.

But the very diligence of the process crowded out Mr Obama's time to focus on other crises – of which there are many. "Time is the most precious commodity a president has," says a former national security adviser. "On average he is only going to have 45 minutes a day for foreign policy, so you want to make sure it is well spent."

The widely expected departure of Gen Jones before the end of the year has also created rivalries within the engine room. Those who are thought to have ambitions to replace him include Mr Steinberg, Ms Rice, Mr Donilon and Denis McDonough, NSC chief of staff and the foreign policy official who is personally closest to Mr Obama. Although all are widely respected, none is considered a big strategic thinker in the Kissinger or Scowcroft mould.

Described by Mr Gelb as Mr Obama's "Lord High Executioner", Mr McDonough "has appended himself to the Chicago crowd", says another official. Mr McDonough's widely feared role highlights some of the contradictions of Mr Obama's foreign policy apparatus.

Once an adviser to former Senate majority leader Tom Daschle, Mr McDonough was frequently at Mr Obama's side during the campaign. Insiders describe him as the "enforcer" and as the keeper of "message discipline", a key element of any campaign but something that can drastically slow the wheels of government.

"McDonough is the guy from the campaign and the one who plays basketball with the president – they're very close," says an official. "Instead of Jim Jones telling McDonough what the president thinks, it is the other way round."

Indeed, if Mr Obama's highly centralised foreign policy machine had a face, it would be Mr McDonough's. "Donilon has been perceived to make the process inclusive and give everyone a seat at the table," says David Rothkopf, a former Clinton official and scholar on the NSC. "Fairly or not, McDonough has been perceived as representing a process that was taking place in another room, among the inner circle, at a table to which most weren't invited."

Mr Obama has built a machine in which all roads lead to and from him. On the minus side, that means a lot of lower-level meetings without decisions. It also means neglecting issues that cannot be squeezed into his diary, such as trade policy, which continues to drift; or relations with India, which are unnecessarily tense.

And it means that the fingerprints of Mr Obama's political inner circle are detected by the rumour mill even when they are absent, such as on the president's decision to begin the troop withdrawal from Afghanistan in July 2011 – a recommendation that came from Robert Gates, secretary of defence.

On the plus side, Mr Obama has a sharp learning curve, which means his administration continues to evolve. On the plus side also, if it has to be White House-centric, it is perhaps better with him as the Sun King than, say, Nixon or George W. Bush.

"At the end of each meeting, the president summarises what everyone has said and the arguments each has made with a real lawyer's clarity," says a participant to the NSC principals meeting, which includes Mr Gates and Mrs Clinton. "When the president finally makes a decision, it is with the full facts and usually shows a high calibre of judgment."

When Mr Obama makes a decision, that is.

STATE AND DEFENCE DEPARTMENTS

An 'alliance of the unsackables' finds it can confront the inner circle

If there is a caveat to the depiction of the Obama administration as White House-centric, it is in the alliance between Hillary Clinton and Robert Gates, the president's secretaries of state and defence.

Mrs Clinton has proved one of the surprises of Barack Obama's tenure, forging a strong working relationship with her former rival and establishing herself as his chief foreign policy spokesperson internationally – if not at home, where Mr Obama's inner circle often seems to monopolise the explaining.

Mr Gates, who recently decided to stay for at least another year, is seen as unsackable, not least for the credibility he lends on issues ranging from missile defence to Guantánamo Bay and Afghanistan. As a holdover from the Bush administration, his national security bona fides are hard to dispute. It is no coincidence that Mrs Clinton is probably the only other unsackable cabinet member.

The combination has made itself felt in some of the administration's most significant debates, notably on Afghanistan, where both successfully urged the deployment of more troops.

"Gates and Clinton happen to like each other, which no one really predicted," says one official, who notes that while the traditional role of the NSC is to "play referee" between the state and defence departments, it is as often nowadays a combination of the two against the White House. This is very different from how it worked when Donald Rumsfeld and Colin Powell held those positions.

"We work together well," Mr Gates said at an appearance with Mrs Clinton on CNN last year. "I think it starts with, frankly, based on my experience, the secretary of defence being willing to acknowledge that the secretary of state is the principal spokesperson for United States foreign policy."

Their outlooks often overlap. From the Pentagon, Mr Gates has long called for more US spending on diplomacy. As chief diplomat, Mrs Clinton has adopted a muscular approach. On Iran, both favour tough sanctions; on Russia, both have sought to reassure Moscow's neighbours even while improving relations with the Kremlin.

But for all their workmanlike co-operation, there is no escaping the fact that Mrs Clinton is not part of the Obama inner circle – a traditionally helpful feature in that job. There is also a constant "residue of friction" between Mr Obama's and Mrs Clinton's teams, according to insiders. For example, Cheryl Mills, Mrs Clinton's chief of staff, has had several run-ins with others in the administration.

One official describes Mrs Clinton as "totally loyal" to Mr Obama. He adds: "She and the president are not the best of friends – how could they be? But she totally respects the presidency – she was married to a president and she wanted to be one ... She still might be."

Copyright The Financial Times Limited 2010. Print a single copy of this article for personal use. Contact us if you wish to print more to distribute to others.

"FT" and "Financial Times" are trademarks of the Financial Times. Privacy policy | Terms
© Copyright The Financial Times Ltd 2010.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, May 4, 2010 10:38 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: S stop in Ecuador

Fyi - Arturo making a renewed pitch for ecuador. We haven't discussed further yet [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Valenzuela, Arturo A
To: Kelly, Craig A; Jacobson, Roberta S; Reynoso, Julissa; Drucker, Milton K; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Fuchs, Michael H; Bennett, Virginia L
Cc: Gonzalez, Juan S
Sent: Mon May 03 10:36:36 2010
Subject: S stop in Ecuador

Would like to make a renewed pitch for stop in Ecuador. [redacted] B5

Best, Arturo

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, March 31, 2010 9:58 PM
To: H
Subject: Mack called back

He landed and is home [redacted] He will also be in the office for the entire day tomorrow. 202 419 1420. B6

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:52 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: speech

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Jan 21 07:44:59 2010
Subject: Re: speech

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 00:10:57 2010
Subject: speech

You'll have a new draft when you wake up. I think it's getting close but can use one more pass from you. [redacted]

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 5:45 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Preval rejects US Advice on Presidential election and respond to Lugar's report

B6

From: Guy Noel
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wed Jun 30 22:44:31 2010
Subject: Preval rejects US Advice on Presidential election and respond to Lugar's report

A PALI PAPA..PONYET PREVAL GONFLE

==========

Preval rejects US advice on presidential election

By JONATHAN M. KATZ (AP) – 2 hours ago

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haiti's president on Wednesday rejected U.S. Senate recommendations on holding an election for his successor, brushing off criticism that the current process will leave the shattered country without a credible leader.

A report issued this month by Sen. Richard Lugar, the ranking Republican on the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "strongly encourages" Haiti to let its international partners help restructure the eight-member Provisional Electoral Council, which has been accused of corruption.

The report also recommends ensuring the participation of the key opposition party of ousted former President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, which was blocked from participating in 2009 legislative contests because of a dispute over rival candidate lists.

On Tuesday, President Rene Preval fulfilled one recommendation of the report by issuing a signed decree setting election day for Nov. 28.

But speaking at a news conference in an open-air gazebo alongside the broken remains of the national palace a day later, Preval told reporters he had no intention of complying with the rest, including changing the election body, known as the CEP.

"I'm not doing the CEP with international partners. I'm doing the CEP with national partners," Preval said. "The senator's proposition is inadmissible."

Seeking to show the council was not "hand-picked," as he said in English, Preval handed out copies of nomination letters for the panel's members submitted by various national and religious organizations, including the National Council of Political Parties, Roman Catholic Church and National Confederation of Haitian Vodou.

He also defended the prohibition on the exiled Aristide's Fanmi Lavalas party in last year's elections, a ban that came after rival factions of the party submitted competing lists of candidates.

"International donors need to look for an accord with the CEP and the political parties and the factions of Fanmi Lavalas," Preval said. "We are giving (the parties) the support that they need, and the factions need to figure it out (for themselves)."

Preval did not discuss the forced resignation of an electoral council member accused of stealing a staffer's pay or opponents' allegations that the council gave special privileges to the president's newly formed Unity Party ahead of planned Feb. 28 legislative elections, which were postponed because of the Jan. 12 earthquake that devastated the capital.

He also declined to answer questions about another U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee report that criticizes Haiti's earthquake recovery, saying he would address that issue at a news conference on reconstruction next week.

Elections have never been easy in Haiti, a country whose founding president crowned himself emperor. It took 186 years to hold what the international community considered a democratic election in 1990, which was then closely followed by a coup d'etat.

Preval, in fact, is the only Haitian ever to be elected president, serve a full term and hand off power to an elected successor. Unable to run for re-election in the November contest, he pledged to relinquish power again as he did in the 1990s — after protesters alleged earlier this year that he was dragging his feet on holding presidential the election.

Doing so will require significant help. The electoral council's headquarters were destroyed and its records lost in the quake, while millions of voters were either killed, made homeless or displaced. Its new headquarters is a former Gold's Gym seized by drug agents.

The election will also be a cost burden for this grindingly poor Caribbean nation: $29 million according to electoral officials at the news conference with Preval, $38 million according to the U.S. Senate report.

The Organization of American States and United Nations have pledged support. U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon issued a statement Wednesday praising the decree setting the election date and pledged the help of U.N. peacekeepers and advisers in preparing and supporting the ballot. Ban urged member states to quickly provide the money needed to run the vote.

Copyright © 2010 The Associated Press. All rights reserved.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 9:21 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Urgent -- Rep. Loretta Sanchez Re Vietnam HR

Importance: High

Loretta will be at speech.

---

From: Marciel, Scot A
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Gatz, Karen L
Sent: Thu Jan 21 09:19:22 2010
Subject: Urgent -- Rep. Loretta Sanchez Re Vietnam HR

In case Rep. Loretta Sanchez engages the Secretary on the margins of her internet freedom speech, here is some quick background and a few suggested points – we didn't have time to clear it with anyone, but I thought better something than nothing. Scot

Background:

Representative Loretta Sanchez asked yesterday to speak with you regarding her concerns that the Administration is moving too fast in the direction of providing economic benefits to Vietnam -- for example, granting access to the General System of Preferences (GSP), permitting participation in the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) as an associate member -- even as the human rights situation deteriorates. Sanchez may try to button-hole you at your Internet speech today.

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 9:16 AM
To: H
Subject: Byrd family

Not sure who will be there but here is possibility:

[redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 10:35 AM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ashton meeting

We have a lot of people in meeting but we talked and will bring them to end of meeting so she can specially meet them.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Jan 20 23:05:33 2010
Subject: Ashton meeting

I'd like to invite two EUR staffers--Jeremy Shapiro and Siddharth Mohandas-- who wrote a good memo about US-EU to come by and meet Lady Ashton tomorrow. Or even sit in on the mtg if ok w Phil Gordon.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 11:07 AM
To: H

After Afghan Shift, Top U.S. Civilians Face Tricky Future By MARK LANDLER WASHINGTON — As General David H. Petraeus takes command in Afghanistan, the two top American civilian officials in the war face an uncertain and tricky future, working with a newly empowered military leader, under the gaze of an impatient president who has put them on notice that his fractious war council needs to pull together.Richard C. Holbrooke, the Obama administration's special representative to the region, and Karl W. Eikenberry, the ambassador to Afghanistan, both hung on to their jobs in the uproar that followed Gen. Stanley A. McChrystal's career-ending quotes in Rolling Stone magazine.But privately, at least one senior White House official suggested using General McChrystal's exit as an excuse for a housecleaning, according to senior officials. That was rejected as too disruptive during a military campaign that relies heavily on civilian support, these people said.In recent days, other administration officials have begun floating the idea that Ambassador Eikenberry might be replaced by Ryan C. Crocker, the highly regarded former ambassador in Iraq who forged a close partnership with General Petraeus during the successful Iraq troop increase. Such a prospect is viewed as remote, given Mr. Crocker's prestigious new post at Texas A&M University. But the fact that his name is being invoked underlines the challenges that confront Ambassador Eikenberry, as he adapts to a new partner — one who has strong ideas about how soldiers and diplomats should work together in war.It also illustrates the remarkably powerful role that General Petraeus will assume in the nine-year-old war, setting him up as almost a viceroy in Afghanistan and a key broker in negotiations between President Hamid Karzai and Pakistan over an eventual political settlement.Before General Petraeus's arrival, some critics said the White House had created a problem by recruiting several forceful, ambitious personalities and giving them jobs with overlapping responsibilities. Administration officials acknowledge that, as one said, "there are obviously a number of substantial personalities on the team." But the White House believes that the current lineup can mesh, and that a difficult war demands this much talent. Still, the McChrystal blow-up has reverberated through the State Department. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton instructed Ambassador Eikenberry and Mr. Holbrooke to take a hard look at the civilian team, two officials said. She is not wedded to the current lineup if it continues to bog down in internecine battles, they said."You can't have a major shift in a civ-mil structure without having the civilian side take a step back and look at everything," said a senior State Department official, using the jargon for a civilian-military campaign.General Petraeus, whose appointment was approved 99-0 by the Senate on Wednesday, took pains at his confirmation hearing on Tuesday to back a unified civilian and military effort. He noted then that he had telephoned Mr. Holbrooke and would rendezvous with Ambassador Eikenberry in Brussels, so the two could land in Kabul together."Holbrooke has been my wingman, to a great degree," General Petraeus said in an interview. "We have had, and do have, a very good relationship." That role, he said, will now fall to Ambassador Eikenberry.Ambassador Eikenberry was highly critical of the Pentagon's proposal last year to send 60,000 additional troops to Afghanistan, which led to a difficult relationship with General McChrystal. But in fact General Petraeus was the true architect of the plan.The ambassador, a retired lieutenant general and former commander in Afghanistan, graduated from West Point in 1973, a year ahead of General Petraeus, but they did not know each other at the academy. The two share a scholarly bent: General Petraeus holds a Ph.D. from Princeton, while Ambassador Eikenberry has master's degrees from Harvard and Stanford.While they were never assigned together, their careers intersected twice. In Iraq, General Eikenberry led an assessment of Iraqi security forces while General Petraeus was commanding the 101st Airborne Division in Mosul. When General Eikenberry was commander in Afghanistan, General Petraeus led an assessment of Afghan National Security Forces.General Petraeus declined to discuss personnel issues, while Ambassador Eikenberry and Mr. Holbrooke turned down requests for an interview. Mr. Crocker, now the dean of the George Bush School of Government at Texas A&M, did not return a call for comment.For Mr. Holbrooke, the new landscape is challenging in other ways. Officials said his job security was less in doubt than it was six months ago, when his ouster was the subject of Washington chatter. Yet he has arguably become a less central player: Jacob J. Lew, a deputy secretary of state, manages much of the civilian influx in Afghanistan that Mr. Holbrooke helped shape, while the embassy in Kabul is carrying it out. Mr. Holbrooke's current portfolio has played to his weaknesses, his own allies admit. He is best as a high-level negotiator, and not as comfortable with the nitty-gritty work of helping Afghanistan build an economy.These days, Mr. Holbrooke has become a globe-trotting diplomat, trying to retain flagging European allies while seeking to draw influential Muslim countries like Egypt into helping Afghanistan. At a recent conference of 35 countries in Madrid, Mr. Holbrooke drummed up more support from allies for the Afghan government's campaign to reintegrate Taliban fighters into mainstream society.Mr. Karzai's longer-term effort to reconcile with Taliban leaders, and his negotiations with Pakistan, could propel Mr. Holbrooke back into a central role. Were these talks to become more serious, several officials said, Mr. Holbrooke's negotiating skills could be put to use, as a broker and guardian of American interests. For now, though, as evidence of General Petraeus's influence, he will do most of the shuttling between Kabul and Islamabad, the Pakistani capital.On his last visit to the region, Mr. Holbrooke met with Mr. Karzai and with senior Pakistani officials, including the army chief of staff, Ashfaq Parvez Kayani. Mr. Holbrooke's past run-ins with Mr. Karzai, several officials said, have not hindered his ability to deal with the Afghan leader, and Pakistani officials said they trusted him. Husain Haqqani, Pakistan's ambassador to Washington, said that Mr. Holbrooke took time to understand Pakistan's concerns. "Ambassador Holbrooke is liked by some, admired by others and seen as effective, even by those who may not like him," Mr. Haqqani said.Still, General Petraeus is indisputably the key player, and he has wasted no time asserting his control. On a secure videoconference call last Saturday, a person familiar with the call said, General Petraeus threw his support behind a costly, and controversial, plan to install temporary generators to supply more electricity to Kandahar, the Taliban stronghold that is the next major American military target.Mr. Holbrooke and Ambassador Eikenberry swiftly assented.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 3:04 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: fyi

This is the paper - see below.

cdm

-----Original Message-----
From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Thursday, July 01, 2010 12:15 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: fyi

Maariv: Hebrew language daily tabloid

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Maariv

-----Original Message-----
From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Thursday, July 01, 2010 11:54 AM
To: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: FW: fyi

What paper is this from?

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, July 01, 2010 11:09 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: fyi

Let's discuss.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] <sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Cc: cheryl.mills [redacted] <cheryl.mills [redacted]
Sent: Thu Jul 01 11:06:04 2010
Subject: fyi

<http://coteret.com/author/didiremez/>
Maariv: Netanyahu won't meet Clinton; 'sources' say she "isn't relevant" <http://coteret.com/2010/07/01/maariv-netanyahu-wont-meet-clinton-sources-say-she-isnt-relevant/>

Didi Remez <http://coteret.com/author/didiremez/> | July 1, 2010 at 15:25 | Categories: Diplomacy <http://coteret.com/category/diplomacy/> | URL: http://wp.me/pHlQV-Ep

Do they honestly think that publicizing a quote like this, on record or off, works to their advantage?

Israeli diplomatic [euphemism for Prime Minister's Office -- DR] sources said: "Clinton isn't relevant and is out of the circle of influence. Mitchell has taken over the peace process to a great extent and Obama, in any event, is the important person in this story because he is the one who decides."

---

<http://didiremez.files.wordpress.com/2009/11/maariv.gif>
<http://didiremez.files.wordpress.com/2009/11/maariv.gif>
<http://didiremez.files.wordpress.com/2009/11/maariv.gif> Netanyahu to meet Obama, but not Clinton
Eli Bardenstein, Maariv, July 1 2010 [page 7; Hebrew original here and at bottom of post]
<http://www.scribd.com/doc/33775924/Maariv-Jul01-10-Netanyahu-Will-Not-Meet-Clinton>
<http://www.scribd.com/doc/33775924/Maariv-Jul01-10-Netanyahu-Will-Not-Meet-Clinton>
<http://www.scribd.com/doc/33775924/Maariv-Jul01-10-Netanyahu-Will-Not-Meet-Clinton> Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu is to leave next week for Washington, where he will meet with US President Barack Obama. Rather curiously, he is not scheduled to meet with Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in the course of his visit to Washington.

Contrary to his previous visit in March, this time the US administration intends to create the impression, outwardly at least, that the severe crisis in the relationship has passed and that the relations between the two countries are as strong as ever. In order to bolster that impression, the two leaders will meet the media together and will be photographed. As opposed to the previous time, Netanyahu will also be put up at Blair House, the official White House guesthouse, and not at a hotel.

That said, officials in Washington are waiting apprehensively for the answers that Netanyahu will provide in the course of the meeting, which is expected to address the transition from the proximity talks that are at an impasse to direct negotiations. Obama, apparently, will demand that Netanyahu agree to extend the construction freeze in Judea and Samaria beyond the September 26 expiration date in hope of securing PA Chairman Abu Mazen's consent to begin direct talks with Israel. For the time being, the forum of seven is divided over this issue.

Read more of this post <http://coteret.com/2010/07/01/maariv-netanyahu-wont-meet-clinton-sources-say-she-isnt-relevant/#more-2505>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 3:58 PM
To: H
Subject: Pending Calls

MS, when you ready, we have three calls that are pending from the last 60/90 minutes – Jones (unsecure), Cheryl and Mullen (secure).
Jake recommends speaking to Cheryl first.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 10:41 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: [redacted] family have asked Jim to accompany them to Haiti B6

fyi

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 10:41 AM
To: 'Buhl, Cindy'; Jacobs, Janice L
Cc: Philbin, Christopher; Kennedy, Patrick F; Verma, Richard R
Subject: RE: [redacted] family have asked Jim to accompany them to Haiti

Cindy – please call me so you appreciate the impact of this trip on others who would be being used to do search and rescue and transport goods and services and so that you have realistic expectations as we cannot support this in the fashion folks ordinarily are accommodated in non-disaster areas.

202-647-5548.

---

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto[redacted]
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 10:16 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Jacobs, Janice L
Cc: Buhl, Cindy; Philbin, Christopher
Subject: [redacted] family have asked Jim to accompany them to Haiti

Dear Cheryl and Ambassador Jacobs,

[redacted] and his family have asked Jim to accompany them, the president of Lynn University (Kevin M. Ross) and others to Haiti this weekend. They intend to go to the Hotel Montana to look at the USAR operations and [redacted] Jim has to accept this invitation, so he is going with them. It's our understanding that Senator Kerry has been or will be invited, as well. It's also our understanding that Lynn University will be providing the air transport to Haiti.

Jim, first and foremost, wanted you to know this is happening. Second, he asks that whatever permissions he and the [redacted] Family/Lynn University delegation might need to enter Haiti, for Lynn University to land their aircraft, and for them to go to and review the Hotel Montana USAR operation be granted and expedited.

The primary contact in our office on this matter is our Chief of Staff, Chris Philbin.
Our general office phone is 202-225-6101.
Chris's cell phone # is [redacted]
And I have copied him on this email so that you have his email/blackberry address
[redacted]

I am, of course, here to help in any way I can.

Cindy

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 6:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Holbrooke, Richard
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Jul 01 18:07:11 2010
Subject: Fw: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Jake please pass to hillary. I will call. She may want to, especially given forthcoming trip. R PS--tell her I had a good (I think)u talk with Misha S today. Hope it helps trip.

----- Original Message -----
From: Nasr, S Vali R
To: 'HolbrookeR@state.gov' <HolbrookeR@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jul 01 17:32:48 2010
Subject: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Richard

3 bombs devastated the shrine of Data Ganjbakhsh (the most sacred Muslim place in all of South Asia, and the shrine S was supposed to go to). Aside from loss of life, this is a major blow to Pakistan. I recommend that you call Qureshi, Nawaz and Pasha (who will be here tomorrow). This will either break Pakistanis or will get them into the fight. This shrine is deeply tied to the foundation of Islam in Pakistan.
Vali Nasr

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, May 4, 2010 12:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Pakistan detains man over Times Square bomb

From: Packer, Adam D
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-Pakistan; NEWS-SCT
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Tue May 04 12:44:43 2010
Subject: (AP) Pakistan detains man over Times Square bomb

KARACHI (AP) - Pakistan intelligence officials say at least one man has been detained in the southern city of Karachi in connection with the Times Square bombing attempt. The official said the man was named Tauseef and was a friend of Faisal Shahzad, the American of Pakistani descent who is in custody in the United States over the failed attack. He did not say when the man was picked up. Another official said several people had been taken into custody since the failed attack Saturday. Both officials spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of their work.

Adam Packer
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center
(202) 647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 6:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Yep

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Jul 01 18:25:22 2010
Subject: Re: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Can you get me more info about the shrine?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jul 01 18:24:02 2010
Subject: Fw: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Holbrooke, Richard
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Jul 01 18:07:11 2010
Subject: Fw: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Jake please pass to hillary. I will call. She may want to, especially given forthcoming trip. R PS--tell her I had a good (I think)u talk with Misha S today. Hope it helps trip.

----- Original Message -----
From: Nasr, S Vali R
To: 'HolbrookeR@state.gov' <HolbrookeR@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jul 01 17:32:48 2010
Subject: Bomb at Sufi shrine

Richard

3 bombs devastated the shrine of Data Ganjbakhsh (the most sacred Muslim place in all of South Asia, and the shrine S was supposed to go to). Aside from loss of life, this is a major blow to Pakistan. I recommend that you call Qureshi, Nawaz and Pasha (who will be here tomorrow). This will either break Pakistanis or will get them into the fight. This shrine is deeply tied to the foundation of Islam in Pakistan.
Vali Nasr

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 10:58 AM
To: H
Subject: Miliband mtg

Pls raise Afghan women's participation in the London meeting. I'm looking at the draft document to come out of the London conference and there's no mention of women. I'm working on a few suggestions and going to meet shortly with one of Miliband's colleagues.

Melanne S. Verveer
Ambassador at Large for Global Women's Issues
U.S. Department of State
2201 C Street NW, Room 6805
Washington, DC 20520
Tel: (202) 647-7283
Fax: (202) 647-7288
VerveerMS@state.gov

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 8:09 PM
To: H
Subject: 8:10pm

MS, the crew is asking if you would like dinner soon -- I wanted to check with you before they interrupted you in the cabin.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, May 4, 2010 1:12 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: (Reuters) Pakistan makes arrests connected to NYC bomb attempt

---

From: Packer, Adam D
Sent: Tuesday, May 04, 2010 1:10 PM
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-Pakistan; NEWS-SCT
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Subject: (Reuters) Pakistan makes arrests connected to NYC bomb attempt

ISLAMABAD (Reuters) - Pakistan on May 4 made several arrests in connection with the failed Times Square car bomb attack in New York, security sources said.

"We have picked up a few family members" related to Faisal Shahzad, the chief suspect in the attempted attack, a security official in Karachi said. A friend of Shahzad was also arrested.

Shahzad, a 30-year-old Pakistani-American, was arrested late on May 3 at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York after being removed from a plane as it was about take off for Dubai, American officials said.

Another intelligence official in Pakistan said Shahzad received militant training in northwest Pakistan near the garrison town of Kohat. The area around Kohat is a stronghold of Tariq Afridi, the main Pakistani Taliban commander in the region.

Pakistan, which could come under renewed U.S. pressure to crack down harder on militants after the Times Square incident, vowed to help the United States bring Shahzad to justice

Shahzad will appear in Manhattan federal court to face charges "for allegedly driving a car bomb into Times Square on the evening of May 1", according to a statement by U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara, FBI agent George Venizelos and New York City Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly.

"We will cooperate with the United States in identifying this individual and bringing him to justice," Interior Minister Rehman Malik told Reuters.

U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan Anne W. Patterson met Pakistani Foreign Minister Shah Mehmood Qureshi and Malik and talked about the issue, Pakistani government officials and the U.S. Embassy said.

"We have an ongoing cooperation with the United States on anti-terrorism efforts. If required by the United States, we will extend full cooperation to them in this regard," Pakistani Foreign Ministry spokesman Abdul Basit said.

Adam Packer
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center
(202) 647-1512

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 12:44 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: CNN on Syria

----- Original Message -----
From: Alec Ross [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J; Chollet, Derek H; Crowley, Philip J; (U) Benton, Cheryl A
Cc: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Thu Jul 01 19:44:47 2010
Subject: CNN on Syria

Washington (CNN) -- Sometimes foreign policy isn't best digested 140 characters at a time.

That's what a pair of young State Department officials found in Syria, where they were leading a trade delegation of Silicon Valley executives. Their bosses back in Washington were mortified when media blogs picked up the musings of Alec Ross and Jared Cohen on Twitter about which Syrian cafes serve the greatest frappuccino (Kalamoon University) and their challenge to the Syrian telecom minister for a cake-eating contest (called "Creative Diplomacy.") Creative, indeed.

It was a mild, but unfortunate distraction from what was widely considered an otherwise productive mission. The delegation of senior executives, from tech heavyweights like Microsoft, Cisco Systems and Dell, met with Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and other officials, as well as businessmen, civil society groups and academics battling their government's tight-fisted control on the internet.

The visit illustrated both the opportunities and the landmines Hillary Clinton's State Department has to navigate as it logs into the digital age.

In Foggy Bottom, one needs to be fired up about being wired up.
Blogging and tweeting are now part of every diplomat's job description. At any given moment you can find someone like the top official on Latin America tweeting in Spanish about his latest trip to Peru, or Secretary Clinton herself posting podcasts on the State Department website and soliciting questions from the public on the State Department's blog, Dipnote.

Beneath the web atmospherics is what Ross, Clinton's "innovation" guru, calls "21st century statecraft."

Ross, a 38-year-old former technology adviser to the Obama campaign, and his partner in crime, Jared Cohen, a 28-year-old author on genocide, youth and jihad who joined the State Department during the Bush administration, are at the forefront of a new push by Clinton to use technology and social media as a diplomatic tool. Since taking office, Clinton has made the spread of information technology and internet freedom a cornerstone of her foreign policy, hoping both will serve as catalysts for spreading democracy.

It used to be one of the biggest carrots the State Department could dangle before a country was a visit by the secretary of state. Now it is a delegation of Silicon Valley heavyweights led by Ross and Cohen, which might include executives from Microsoft, Google or Facebook.

Since the Obama administration took office, they have led delegations with executives from tech giants such as Google, Facebook and Twitter to Iraq, Russia and Mexico with some tangible results. In Iraq, Google created a project to make digital copies of 14,000 antiquities in Iraq's National Museum. And in Mexico, the delegation helped develop a network for Mexicans to report drug-related crimes by cell phone.

The visit to Syria came as the Obama administration takes baby steps toward engagement with that nation. The United States had not had an ambassador in Damascus for five years and the administration's efforts to fill that post have been stymied by Congress.

The U.S. delegation was requested by President Assad himself earlier this year in meetings with senior U.S. officials. The United States hopes playing to Assad's desire to modernize his economy and stated willingness for better diplomatic and trade ties with the Obama administration could drive a wedge between Syria and Iran, its closest ally.

Moreover, the United States hopes facilitating the flow of information into Syria will create a more open political climate there. While in Syria, the delegation was surprised to find many young entrepreneurs with a widely different attitude about the outside world and a desire to network into it, including one young woman who, during a session with the deputy IT minister, looked him straight in the eye and asked for more access to the internet.

"Syria's population is going to double in the next 17 years," Cohen said. "And young people in Syria are going to become increasingly digital and connected or increasingly isolated. It is in our interest to see they are digital and connected."

Strict U.S. sanctions against Syria for its support for terrorist groups in Lebanon, Iraq and the Palestinian territories ban the sale of most technology to Syrian markets, but the White House does have waiver authority to sell certain products to Syria, and the purpose of the trip, in part, was to help facilitate American technology companies to enter the Syrian market.

The Obama administration has eased exports of certain telecommunication products in countries where they were once banned, including Cuba, Iran, Sudan and China, out of fears repressive regimes would use them to oppress their people.

"We are not naive," Ross said. "... Syria says it needs this technology for it's economic development. We understand that, but we were very careful about the companies we selected for this delegation.
We won't support technology being reverse-engineered."

The Syrian government has blamed the sanctions for its economic stagnation. But the executives, whose companies have a combined market value of close to a half a trillion dollars, delivered a blunt message to the regime in Damascus -- one which can't be delivered credibly by the US government: Our companies won't do business in a country without internet freedom or protections for intellectual property.

"They painted a picture of what Syria could have," Cohen said of the delegation. "What they could invest in if Syria took certain steps."
During the visit both Cisco and Microsoft raised the possibility of training in Syria under the right conditions.

As a result of the visit, the Syrians pledged to pass an e-commerce law that would provide safeguards against government censorship or infiltration of internet sites, something the Obama administration had pushed for. But U.S. officials made clear further steps would be based on Syria's actions on loosening the information chokehold, rather than its promises. Ahmed Salkini, a spokesman for the Syrian Embassy in Washington, said his government is dedicated to "creating an environment conducive for the work of IT companies and hopes to pass the e-commerce law "in the very near future"

Salkini said the Syrian government found the delegation was successful in scoping opportunities for future cooperation.

"We constantly encourage private sector interaction between the U.S. and Syria," he said. But he added, "We think the only way for this type of cooperation to succeed is with a lack of governmental interferences and lack of political agenda from both sides."

This month Ross and Cohen will lead a delegation to Colombia and later this year, it's on to India.

They are a couple of virtual and diplomatic soul mates, virtually attached at the hip and finishing each other's sentences. Both have become Twitterati (celebrities on Twitter) in their own right, as they tweet their way around the world spreading the gospel of 21st century statecraft. Ross has some 287,000 followers on Twitter, while Cohen -- who gained notoriety last year when he asked Twitter to delay scheduled maintenance to allow the Iranian opposition to continue to use it to organize after the disputed election -- has about 305,000.

They are the public face of an effort at the State Department to wire the unwired. Clinton recently told a group of Russian civil society groups visiting Washington, "We have a great team of really dedicated young people -- primarily young people -- who care deeply about connecting people up. And I'm very proud of the work they're doing."

If they have a corner on the 21st century statecraft market now, it won't be for long. Recently Ross trained 50 European ambassadors on how to implement the concept in their own countries. His goal, he says, is to create a community in which countries can share their technology innovations among each other. For example Kenya, a pioneer in mobile banking, could help spread the concept to its neighbors and beyond.

After their Syrian adventures in Twitterville, Ross and Cohen were advised to continue to use the technology, but avoid the minutiae.
Still, State Department officials believe the digital duo is good for business, drawing in a new generation of individuals interested in U.S. foreign policy.

"What they do has tremendous value," said Assistant Secretary P.J.
Crowley, the State Department's spokesman. "Whatever they put in their tweets, they have 600,000 Twitters followers that are now connected in some way to the State Department. And I will take that to the bank."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 8:56 AM
To: H
Cc: DiMartino, Kitty; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: startegic communications

Greetings from Nairobi. I'm at the end of week-long trip to Kampala, Kinshasa and now Nairobi. The trip has been very productive and I will fill you in on some of the discussions I have been having when I return. In the meantime, I know that there are a number of discussions with Dan Benjamin and others relating to a new more aggressive approach to CVE and I wanted to update you on my thoughts in terms of how those critical discussions fit in with our overall approach to strategic communications around the globe.

As you and I have discussed, it is essential that we become much more pro-active in all our communications efforts. To put it bluntly, we are in an "information war" on all fronts. With the proliferation of media outlets and opportunities around the world, we must fight aggressively to get, and maintain, our fair share of "consumer share of mind." Both our adversaries and allies recognize the importance of this aspect of foreign policy and are adopting new ways of communicating with foreign publics. Consumers everywhere are constantly facing a barrage of information and in some cases misinformation and dis-information. In order to get our messages across and confront the threats posed by our adversaries, we must develop a new sense of urgency in all our communications efforts. Much has been said and written about the concept of "soldier diplomats". In the same vein, I believe we must empower a corps of "diplomat soldiers" to help us gain ground in this new war.

While countering violent extremism is, and will remain, a key objective of our communications efforts we must apply the same level of determination with respect to all communications. We must both aggressively promote positive stories about the US and rapidly respond to attacks against us. In the past, our failure to respond to attacks and distortions has diminished our credibility and undermined our ability to combat our adversaries. For example, had we not responded to all the rumors and innuendos surrounding our relief efforts in Haiti, I believe we would have provided a fertile field for AQ and others to continue to perpetuate the image of the US as an "invader".

Before I left for this trip, I convened a meeting of our top PD officers and told them that we must become much more aggressive in our strategic communications programs and initiatives. We plan to implement daily calls between our new regional PD DAS's and PAO's in the regions so we can monitor on a daily basis all stories about the USG. We will work with the Posts to ensure that they have strategies for dealing with stories as they develop. I would also like to request that you send a cable to all Chiefs of Mission informing of the new strategy and reminding them of their responsibilities in this critical area. We will work on a draft for your review when you return.

Finally, we are developing new organizational solutions, modeled on an approach I saw at our Mission in Uganda, which I think will greatly clarify roles and responsibilities with respect to in country communications not only within the Mission, but across all government agencies within particular countries.

I will continue to update you as we move forward.

Hope your trip is going well. Look forward to greeting together when we are both back in DC.

JM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:20 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Micheletti Stepping Aside

fyi

---

From: Kelly, Craig A
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Cue, Lourdes C; Aguilera, Patricia; Otero, Maria; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Gonzalez, Francisco J
Cc: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Thu Jan 21 12:24:05 2010
Subject: Micheletti Stepping Aside

Following is close-hold please.

You will have seen press reports that Micheletti is stepping down – reportedly it will be a "leave of absence" for legal reasons. If this holds, it is an important development that we have been pushing to allow space for Pepe Lobo to get off to a good start and encourage greater attendance at the Jan 27 inauguration. This was the point of my Jan 5-6 trip to Tegucigalpa, Hugo's consistent efforts and our follow-up visa revocations. Two nights ago President Martinelli of Panama called me saying Micheletti wanted to find a way out and would he, Martinelli, talk to me. I spoke with Martinelli about ten times over the last two days to discuss specifics. Micheletti wanted to depart Friday but I told Martinelli that it had to be today because regional leaders need time to make their plans. Micheletti wanted assurances that visas would be restored, but we simply forward to Martinelli our standing press guidance that we continuously review visa decisions based on the situation on the ground. ck

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:22 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: great job

nice

---

From: Ann O'Leary [mailto [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 6:57 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: great job

Dearest Cheryl -

You are so good at what you do. I was reminded of it this morning when I heard you on NPR. You're the perfect person to be on the ground dealing with the operation and also translating for the public what is going on. I know you don't enjoy doing press, but you are very good at it and I think it is important for the American public to understand the mission of the U.S. government and the high respect and deference you are giving to the Haitian government. You really got that across this morning.

Sending you lots of love and good luck in your incredibly important mission.

xo,
Ann

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:26 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: great job

At the foot of the master.

I learned.

cdm

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:25 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: great job

And well-deserved. You're a rock star!

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 19:21:57 2010
Subject: FW: great job

nice

From: Ann O'Leary [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 6:57 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: great job

Dearest Cheryl -

You are so good at what you do. I was reminded of it this morning when I heard you on NPR. You're the perfect person to be on the ground dealing with the operation and also translating for the public what is going on. I know you don't enjoy doing press, but you are very good at it and I think it is important for the American public to understand the mission of the U.S. government and the high respect and deference you are giving to the Haitian government. You really got that across this morning.

Sending you lots of love and good luck in your incredibly important mission.

xo,
Ann

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 10:58 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Cultural Letters
Attachments: Congress, Olver Culture Letter, v. 2.docx

Fyi, a bit of Congressipnal outreach.

Jm

---

From: Pally, Maura M.
To: McHale, Judith A
Cc: Stock, Ann; DiMartino, Kitty; Maughan, Chelsea V
Sent: Fri Jul 02 10:14:24 2010
Subject: Cultural Letters

Following up on your great recommendation during the cultural working group debrief to notify Members of Congress when we send their constituents on our cultural programs, we have implemented a correspondence system to notify Members upon the return of their constituents. Each week, we will review our cultural program participant list and send letters accordingly. The basic letter template which will be personalized as needed (see attached for an example) has been cleared by H and R to expedite the process. We will also periodically review how many participants we have from each state and send letters to Senators as appropriate.

Today, we sent our first batch of letters out to:
Congressman Robert Brady (D-PA1)
Congresswoman Yvette Clarke (D-NY11)
Congressman Eliot Engel (D-NY17)
Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton (D-DC)
Congresswoman Sheila Jackson-Lee (D-TX18)
Congressman Jerrold Nadler (D-NY8)
Congressman John Olver (D-MA)
Congressman Charlie Rangel (D-NY15)
Congressman Brad Sherman (D-CA27)

If this process proves as successful as we think it will, we can work towards broadening it to our other programs as well. It's a great idea and a wonderful way to share all that we are doing with those who might not even know they are benefiting!

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769270 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

June 30, 2010

Dear Mr. John Olver:

We thought you would be interested to know that three members of Kaleidoscope Trio, located in your district, recently traveled to Mali and throughout Cote d'Ivoire as part of the Performing Arts Initiative, a cultural exchange program supported by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. This program is an important way to engage foreign audiences by providing U.S. embassies financial support for presentations of American performing arts and artists.

We received excellent feedback on the Kaleidoscope Trio. This outstanding jazz ensemble delighted hundreds of people in Mali through concerts and many thousands more through feature programming on nationwide radio and TV outlets. During stops in Yamoussoukro, Tiassele, and Abidjan, the group conducted participatory workshops and discussions for nearly 475 students.

The ensemble's packed schedule included workshops at the Bamako School for the Blind as well as music and high schools throughout the capital; an outdoor concert for 500 in a town in southwest Mali; and, a joint performance with Grammy-nominated Malian artist Bassekou Kouyate. The Trio members' willingness to provide free music lessons during their downtime deeply impressed Malian audiences. Perhaps the greatest cultural exchange occurred in Abidjan when group member, Gilad Dobrecky, was presented with an "ahoko," an African percussion instrument, and to the surprise and enjoyment of the audience seamlessly incorporated it into the trio's repertoire.

We are thrilled to have the opportunity to showcase America's accomplished and talented artists through our cultural projects. Your constituents' willingness to undertake the rigors of international travel to engage foreign audiences, foster goodwill and provide insight into our culture and values makes them true citizen diplomats. We are grateful to them for helping us accomplish our country's foreign policy objectives.

Sincerely,

Maura M. Pally
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Professional and Cultural Exchanges

The Honorable
John Olver,
House of Representatives.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769270 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 12:33 PM
To: H
Subject: Pakistan bombing

FYI we are putting out the following statement.

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Bombing of the Shrine of Syed Ali Hujviri in Lahore

I was shocked and saddened by yesterday's attack on one of Pakistan's most popular places of worship, the Shrine of Syed Ali Hujviri (Data Ganjbakhsh) in Lahore, which claimed the lives of many innocent Pakistanis.

The extremists have shown that they respect neither human dignity nor the fundamental religious values of Pakistani society. Violating the sanctity of this revered shrine is a particularly sinister attempt to destabilize Pakistan and to intimidate its people. The attackers will not succeed, as the Pakistani public refuses to be cowed by such violence.

We condemn this brutal crime and reaffirm our commitment to support the Pakistani people in their efforts to defend their democracy from the violent extremists who seek to destroy it. Our thoughts and prayers are with the families of the victims and with all the people of Pakistan.

###

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:47 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: A potential climate call tomorrow
Attachments: S points for Wen call 1-21-10 v3.docx

FYI. I'm following up with Kurt to get his thoughts.

---

From: Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:09 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Subject: A potential climate call tomorrow

Jake – it would be useful if HRC could call Wen Jiabao [redacted] B5

<<S points for Wen call 1-21-10 v3.docx>>

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 1:59 PM
To: H
Subject: Pick Tefft's brain about Georgia!

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 2:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Pick Tefft's brain about Georgia!

And also pls pass the salt
Thx

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Fri Jul 02 13:59:11 2010
Subject: Pick Tefft's brain about Georgia!

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:02 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: A potential climate call tomorrow

Froman has encouraged this call. I will also check in with Bader.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:01 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: A potential climate call tomorrow

Let me know what you find out. Probably need to talk w Bader and Froman too.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 19:46:34 2010
Subject: FW: A potential climate call tomorrow

FYI. I'm following up with Kurt to get his thoughts.

---

From: Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:09 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Subject: A potential climate call tomorrow

Jake – it would be useful if HRC could call Wen Jiabao [redacted] B5

B5

<<S points for Wen call 1-21-10 v3.docx>>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 4:28 PM
To: H
Subject: Tomorrow

MS, [redacted] B6

[redacted] Your appointment is scheduled for 7:00am, and we are scheduled to depart the hotel at 8:30am. Monica and I will be ready by 6:00am for anything you need. Thank you!

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 4:28 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: RADM David M. Stone

I will be out of the office until Tuesday, July 6th on official travel with the Secretary. I will be checking my email during this time. If you need immediate assistance, please call 202-647-9572. Thank you!

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, May 4, 2010 2:43 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: E3+Ashton

Steve Mull is proposing that you do a conference call with the E3 FMs and Ashton sometime this week. Here is the rationale and background:

The European Union Foreign Affairs Council, comprised of all 27 EU Foreign Ministers, will next meet on May 10. In a conversation April 26, Bill Burns persuaded the E3 and European Commission to support adding to the agenda of that meeting a discussion of preparations for the sanctions the EU will impose following passage of a UNSCR.

The European Council, comprised of the EU's heads of government, will meet on June 16-17 – a meeting which could direct the imposition of such sanctions if we succeed in passing an UNSCR by then.

The purpose of your teleconference would be to hear from the E3 and Ashton a status report on the EU's preparations to impose such sanctions, and to discuss how the U.S. could best support the EU's forward progress. It would supplement experts' level consultations we have been conducting for several weeks, including meetings on May 3 and May 6.

The measures the Europeans are considering include bans on new Iranian bank branches in the EU, correspondent banking relationships, new investment in the Iranian energy sector, and on access for Iranian ships to European ports.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 4:29 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: RADM David M. Stone

On your schedule

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Jul 02 16:28:13 2010
Subject: Fw: RADM David M. Stone

Can I go?

----- Original Message -----
From: Burns Strider [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Jul 02 12:44:47 2010
Subject: Fw: RADM David M. Stone

Burns Strider

---

From: Steve Abbot [redacted]
Date: Fri, 2 Jul 2010 12:35:50 -0400
To: Steve Abbot [redacted]
Subject: RADM David M. Stone

There will be a funeral mass for RADM David M. Stone at the Fort Myer Old Post Chapel, at 12:45 pm, Wed, Jul 14, 2010. Interment service will follow at the Arlington National Cemetery. There will be a reception at the Army Navy Country Club, Arlington, VA, immediately after. Directions to Fort Myer are provided below, as well as directions to the Army Navy Country Club. Please note that cars without a DOD decal will normally be inspected at the Fort Myer gate, so you should plan on arriving at the gate approximately 30 minutes prior to the service. Each individual in the car is required to have a photo ID.

If entering through the Hatfield Gate off Washington Blvd, once you are on post, proceed straight ahead to the three way stop sign and turn left on McNair Road. The Post Exchange will be on your left and the Memorial Chapel on your right. Travel 0.5 miles on McNair Road until you see the Old Post Chapel ahead on your right. Park in the parking lot in front of the chapel, or, if that is full, in one of the adjacent lots.

If entering through the Wright Gate off Rte 110, once you are on post, proceed straight ahead on Marshall Dr. After 0.3 miles take a left onto McNair Road, and proceed straight ahead 0.3 miles until you see the Old Post Chapel on your left. Park in one of the parking lots near the chapel.

If you use GPS, enter 500 McNair Rd, Fort Myer, VA 22211-1302.

Following the service, if you are continuing to the interment, proceed to your car and form a line behind the caisson in front of the chapel. Follow the caisson into the cemetery and park on the road near the gravesite, which is in Section 36.

After the interment service, exit via the Arlington Cemetery Main Gate which is close to the gravesite. Turn onto Memorial Drive toward the Memorial Bridge.

To reach the Army Navy Country Club, proceed 0.2 miles down Memorial Drive, just past the walkway and stop sign, and take a hard left onto the on ramp for Rte 110. It is not marked as such. If you get to the traffic circle before Memorial Bridge, you have gone too far. Go around the traffic circle and come back toward the cemetery and make the right onto the ramp for Rte 110. On Rte 110 stay in the right lane and take the first exit toward I-395 South and Washington Blvd. Stay to the right and take the first exit toward Columbia Pike/Rte 244. Take a left at the first light onto Southgate Rd/S Joyce St. You will pass the NEX gas station on your left. Go to the light and take a right on Army Navy Drive. Go 0.6 miles and take a right into the Country Club. For use in a GPS, the address is 1700 Army Navy Drive, Arlington, VA 22202. Drive up the hill to the clubhouse and parking.

Directions to Fort Myer

Fort Myer, Virginia, is located across the Potomac River from Washington, D.C., adjacent to Arlington National Cemetery. Fort Myer has two gates for use by visitors:

Hatfield Gate on Washington Blvd at South 2nd Street -- Main gate, open at all times;

Wright Gate on Marshall Dr at Meade St just off Rte 110 --
Open from 5 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week

FROM THE SOUTH ON INTERSTATE 95:

Inside the Capital Beltway, I-95 becomes I-395. Proceed north toward Washington. Take Exit 8A (7 miles inside the Beltway), marked "Washington Blvd., Route 27." Bear left on the ramp, following the signs. Exit Washington Blvd. to the right at the exit marked "Fort Myer Only" to the Hatfield Gate.

FROM THE WEST ON INTERSTATE 66:

Proceed on I-66 inside the Capital Beltway. Take Exit 26 (7 miles inside the Beltway) marked "Route 110 South, Pentagon, Alexandria." Pass the Iwo Jima Memorial on your right, then immediately turn right onto Marshall Drive and continue 3/4 miles to Fort Myer Wright Gate.

FROM THE NORTH ON THE CAPITAL BELTWAY (I-495):

Immediately after crossing the American Legion Bridge into Virginia, exit to the right onto the George Washington Memorial Parkway, toward Washington, Exit 43-44. Merge onto the Parkway, then take exit toward US-50. Merge onto Arlington Blvd/US-50. Proceed west in the right lane to a ramp for Ft. Myer Drive/Meade Street. Make a left turn, pass by the Iwo Jima Memorial on your left, proceed to the stop sign and turn right into Ft. Myer.

FROM D.C.:

Take I-395 out of the city and into Virginia. Pass the Pentagon and take Exit 8A for Washington Blvd. Proceed on Washington Blvd and take exit marked "Fort Myer Only" on the right.

<https://webmail.nmcrs.org/OWA/redir.aspx?C=a22c35b9dc9847beb9471b435a4b928c&URL=http%3a%2f%2fwww.fmmc.army.mil%2fsites%2fabout%2fdirections.asp%23top>

http://www.mapquest.com/mq/9-jxcZ

http://www.arlingtoncemetery.net/mrp-map.htm

ADM Charles S. Abbot, USN (Ret)

President, Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society

875 N. Randolph St., Suite 225

Arlington, VA 22203

[redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 2, 2010 4:30 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: RADM David M. Stone

Yes, it is on your line block for that day.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Fri Jul 02 16:28:13 2010
Subject: Fw: RADM David M. Stone

Can I go?

----- Original Message -----
From: Burns Strider [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Fri Jul 02 12:44:47 2010
Subject: Fw: RADM David M. Stone

Burns Strider

---

From: Steve Abbot [redacted]
Date: Fri, 2 Jul 2010 12:35:50 -0400
To: Steve Abbot [redacted]
Subject: RADM David M. Stone

There will be a funeral mass for RADM David M. Stone at the Fort Myer Old Post Chapel, at 12:45 pm, Wed, Jul 14, 2010. Interment service will follow at the Arlington National Cemetery. There will be a reception at the Army Navy Country Club, Arlington, VA, immediately after. Directions to Fort Myer are provided below, as well as directions to the Army Navy Country Club. Please note that cars without a DOD decal will normally be inspected at the Fort Myer gate, so you should plan on arriving at the gate approximately 30 minutes prior to the service. Each individual in the car is required to have a photo ID.

If entering through the Hatfield Gate off Washington Blvd, once you are on post, proceed straight ahead to the three way stop sign and turn left on McNair Road. The Post Exchange will be on your left and the Memorial Chapel on your right. Travel 0.5 miles on McNair Road until you see the Old Post Chapel ahead on your right. Park in the parking lot in front of the chapel, or, if that is full, in one of the adjacent lots.

If entering through the Wright Gate off Rte 110, once you are on post, proceed straight ahead on Marshall Dr. After 0.3 miles take a left onto McNair Road, and proceed straight ahead 0.3 miles until you see the Old Post Chapel on your left. Park in one of the parking lots near the chapel.

If you use GPS, enter 500 McNair Rd, Fort Myer, VA 22211-1302.

Following the service, if you are continuing to the interment, proceed to your car and form a line behind the caisson in front of the chapel. Follow the caisson into the cemetery and park on the road near the gravesite, which is in Section 36.

After the interment service, exit via the Arlington Cemetery Main Gate which is close to the gravesite. Turn onto Memorial Drive toward the Memorial Bridge.

To reach the Army Navy Country Club, proceed 0.2 miles down Memorial Drive, just past the walkway and stop sign, and take a hard left onto the on ramp for Rte 110. It is not marked as such. If you get to the traffic circle before Memorial Bridge, you have gone too far. Go around the traffic circle and come back toward the cemetery and make the right onto the ramp for Rte 110. On Rte 110 stay in the right lane and take the first exit toward I-395 South and Washington Blvd. Stay to the right and take the first exit toward Columbia Pike/Rte 244. Take a left at the first light onto Southgate Rd/S Joyce St. You will pass the NEX gas station on your left. Go to the light and take a right on Army Navy Drive. Go 0.6 miles and take a right into the Country Club. For use in a GPS, the address is 1700 Army Navy Drive, Arlington, VA 22202. Drive up the hill to the clubhouse and parking.

Directions to Fort Myer

Fort Myer, Virginia, is located across the Potomac River from Washington, D.C., adjacent to Arlington National Cemetery. Fort Myer has two gates for use by visitors:

Hatfield Gate on Washington Blvd at South 2nd Street -- Main gate, open at all times;

Wright Gate on Marshall Dr at Meade St just off Rte 110 --
Open from 5 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week

FROM THE SOUTH ON INTERSTATE 95:

Inside the Capital Beltway, I-95 becomes I-395. Proceed north toward Washington. Take Exit 8A (7 miles inside the Beltway), marked "Washington Blvd., Route 27." Bear left on the ramp, following the signs. Exit Washington Blvd. to the right at the exit marked "Fort Myer Only" to the Hatfield Gate.

FROM THE WEST ON INTERSTATE 66:

Proceed on I-66 inside the Capital Beltway. Take Exit 26 (7 miles inside the Beltway) marked "Route 110 South, Pentagon, Alexandria." Pass the Iwo Jima Memorial on your right, then immediately turn right onto Marshall Drive and continue 3/4 miles to Fort Myer Wright Gate.

FROM THE NORTH ON THE CAPITAL BELTWAY (I-495):

Immediately after crossing the American Legion Bridge into Virginia, exit to the right onto the George Washington Memorial Parkway, toward Washington, Exit 43-44. Merge onto the Parkway, then take exit toward US-50. Merge onto Arlington Blvd/US-50. Proceed west in the right lane to a ramp for Ft. Myer Drive/Meade Street. Make a left turn, pass by the Iwo Jima Memorial on your left, proceed to the stop sign and turn right into Ft. Myer.

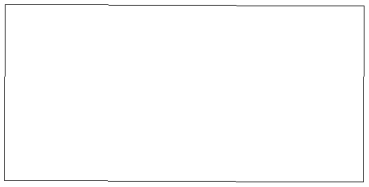
FROM D.C.:

Take I-395 out of the city and into Virginia. Pass the Pentagon and take Exit 8A for Washington Blvd. Proceed on Washington Blvd and take exit marked "Fort Myer Only" on the right.
<https://webmail.nmcrs.org/OWA/redir.aspx?C=a22c35b9dc9847beb9471b435a4b928c&URL=http%3a%2f%2fwww.fmmc.army.mil%2fsites%2fabout%2fdirections.asp%23top>

http://www.mapquest.com/mq/9-jxcZ



http://www.arlingtoncemetery.net/mrp-map.htm

ADM Charles S. Abbot, USN (Ret)

President, Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society

875 N. Randolph St., Suite 225

Arlington, VA 22203

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 9:57 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Griot education project in Haiti - anothter idea -- much quicker ramp-up

fyi

---

From: David Domenici [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:54 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Griot education project in Haiti - anothter idea -- much quicker ramp-up

Cheryl:

After watching scenes on TV, talking w/ you and others, here is idea for nearly immediate way to get kids back 'in school' or into school for the first time. It would be very cheap, could get started very soon—say mid-February, could be linked to other distribution networks (food/medical supplies), and would be quite organic and grassroots. I'll call it the Griot education project (in the west African tradition of a streetside storytellers).

Context/Understanding:
Looks like there are a few hundred thousand kids in Port-au-Prince who pretty soon will be (already are) sitting around day-to-day w/ more or less nothing to do. Their schools got destroyed, their neighborhoods in rough shape. These are young kids who would be best served if they could get out of the house for a few hours a day (possibly even freeing up parents to do rebuilding or other work), and not spend their time getting caught up in crime, or desperately searching through rubble for a mal to eat...and get back to school, and engage their naturally curious brains.

The goal of this program is to immediately give them a place to go, a chance to interface with an energetic educator, and at least expose them to relevant, skill-enhancing academic work that engages them while we rebuild education infrastructure. It also would likely get them 1 meal each day, and if needed a way to get referred for immediate medical attention.

Griot Educators:
We recruit and equip a cadre of teachers who will go out into communities with a set of portable materials each morning—educators who after a few days will find a place to teach, and will have attracted class of students. This is modeled off the street artist/storyteller.

We flyer the neighborhoods, advertising teaching positions. We work w/ whoever we can find who can help us identify people who were good teachers prior to the earthquake and/or people who have the abilty to attract kids (appropriately).

We select teachers. We agree to pay them a daily/weekly stipend. We want people who know their communities, who don't need a lot of direction, who will take a cart full of educational materials, find a corner, or abandoned building and start teaching to whoever shows up. People who will do anything to get some young kids to try to read or do some math problems or sing songs and write poetry...

Education Supply Centers
We set up education supply centers and a distribution system. Each center is staffed by small team—1 lead person is an education-leader, others are admin and support. Griots come the center in the morning, they get a day's worth of educational materials (we select it, we photocopy it, we give them 50 pencils, etc.). We agree to send over 50 meals two hours later. Each Griot wheels his portable classroom to his/her spot and sets up shop...Kids come, and he/she teaches. It builds momentum and kids get off the streets, out of their homes and come to the morning 'school' site. Kids who come get a meal. Maybe we end up w/ 3 tiers of Griots—1 who works w/ 4, 5, 6 year olds, 1 with 7, 8, 9 year olds, 1 with 10, 11, 12 year olds. Each one picks up a packet of material that is more or less appropriate for that age group. All this is incredibly flexible and fluid. Maybe one morning session and then an after lunch session.

The education supply centers are warehouses we set up. They have copiers, lots of paper, basic school supplies, some art supplies, etc. (Over time, maybe people donate a bunch of books or magazines, etc—they become ways for artists, volunteers, entertainers to connect w/ kids, as well.) Each morning a group of Griots go to their supply centers and pick up materials, and fill up their cart...and roll down the block, or blocks and set up their 'school' for the day. Maybe someone wants to donate a bunch of art supplies, or harmonicas—who knows—whatever it takes to get kids to show up and do some academic and enrichment activities. These education supply centers likely get linked to other distribution hubs. This way they can get linked w/ food or other supplies.

Longer-term/setting the stage for longer-term ramp up
Over time, some of the Griots will end up running little schools that start to feel permanent. Kids will bring in chairs and stools...maybe some of the teaching material ends up staying at the school sites, and the end up as likely places for folks to build/rebuild schools. But in the near term, the 'school' is whatever spot the Griot goes to where he/she can attract a cadre of kids—and the good news is that can be almost anywhere.

This program is cheap -- as costly as it is to pay stipends to the Griots, plus the cost of supplies, delivery, and some human capital to man the supply centers, develop/acquire high interest, high educational value material. I think quite cheap, and could easily be costed out once we knew about how much we need to pay a Griot for a day of teaching.

It also gets some folks working, immediately.

Some Griots would take stipend and not teach; some wouldn't do it well; some would pawn off the food/biscuits...But we could weed much of that out and w/ this sort of approach, you don't let a few bad apples spoil the larger program (or fear of them stop it from getting started). This program is about planting the seeds for the future schools to come, about getting young kids off streets and stoops and into a fun/learning environment, about empowering talented teacher-artists to go out into their communities armed w/ some basic materials, their good will, their creativity (and a paycheck)—together the kids and the Griots will find local places to call and claim as their schools.

And while this is going on, we have time to build out infrastructure (human capital, facilities, instructional/curricular materials) for more robust ramp-up over time.

Per usual, feel free to ignore or pass on.

dd

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 10:20 PM
To: H
Subject: H: early review. Sid

H: Jim Fallows told me he was at your speech and thrilled by it. He's just returned from three years in China. He didn't expect you would be so frank. Here's his post on The Atlantic website. Sid http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/a_momentous_40_hours.php#more

« Hillary Clinton's "Internet freedom" speech | Main

A momentous 40 hours, leading to Clinton/China/Internet

21 Jan 2010 04:12 pm
Apart from two obvious pieces of momentous news in the past day-and-a-half -- the new junior Senator from Massachusetts, and the new Buckley v. Valeo (by which I mean today's lamentable, straight-party-line Supreme Court ruling that removes limits from direct corporate underwriting of political campaigns) -- there is one other event today that will have big ripple effects. I mean SecState Hillary Clinton's speech this morning about "Internet Freedom," mentioned here and with a prelude discussion here.

I'm not going to take time for a thorough gloss of the speech. Instead I highly recommend reading the full text, here, or watching the official video, here. And for now some of the main points while listening (and noting main points down in real time with the handy LiveScribe pen.)

- In contrast to the dreamy Internet optimism of a decade or so ago -- I'm not naming names, but I remember! -- when many people imagined that info technology, by itself, would undermine oppression and bring the world together, Clinton started off with a very astringent reminder that this technology, like others, was neither good or bad in itself and is already being used in both helpful and destructive ways:

> "Amid this unprecedented surge in connectivity, we must also recognize that these technologies are not an unmitigated blessing. These tools are also being exploited to undermine human progress and political rights. Just as steel can be used to build hospitals or machine guns, or nuclear power can either energize a city or destroy it, modern information networks and the technologies they support can be harnessed for good or for ill. The same networks that help organize movements for freedom also enable al-Qaida to spew hatred and incite violence against the innocent. And technologies with the potential to open up access to government and promote transparency can also be hijacked by governments to crush dissent and deny human rights."

And a very nice pivot out of this section, effective because it's so blunt and plain:

> "On their own, new technologies do not take sides in the struggle for freedom and progress, but the United States does."

- Underscoring the "this is a big deal" tone of the speech, she enumerated the "Four Freedoms" that FDR proclaimed in 1941, as part of the struggle for the world's future, and said there were a comparable set of Four Freedoms for the Internet age. Check out the speech yourself for details.

- The China surprise: the speech was a more frontal challenge to Chinese internet and overall censorship policy than I expected, and than I recall in other US-China interactions in a very long time. For instance, early in the speech, an itemization of the places where suppression is getting worse:

> "In the last year, we've seen a spike in threats to the free flow of information. China, Tunisia, and Uzbekistan have stepped up their censorship of the internet. In Vietnam, access to popular social networking sites has suddenly disappeared. And last Friday in Egypt, 30 bloggers and activists were detained."

Tunisia, Uzbekistan, Vietnam, Egypt -- this is not the grouping of countries that the Chinese government, in its recent sense of rise to superpower status, is used to being lumped with. Compared to the US as a financial power, OK; overtaking Japan in economic size, yes; being a crucial player in environmental negotiations... all that is one thing. Bracketed in the same sentence with Tunisia and Uzbekistan is different. Sentences like this don't appear in formal, big-deal SecState addresses by accident.

Other passages to the same effect:

> "As I speak to you today, government censors somewhere are working furiously to erase my words from the records of history. But history itself has already condemned these tactics....
>
> "Those who disrupt the free flow of information in our society or any other pose a threat to our economy, our government, and our civil society. Countries or individuals that engage in cyber attacks should face consequences and international condemnation...."

And then the Google section itself.
I had wondered whether the speech would mention Google by name -- and had reason to think it might not. (Main argument for leaving it implicit rather than referring directly to the Google case: in the company's ongoing efforts to find a "win-win-win" acceptable way to remain in China, rather than a lose-lose-lose permanent split, it's not necessarily a help to have the U.S. government standing officially by its side. ) But the way Sec. Clinton introduced the point was significant: as a proxy for China's own ability to fulfill its potential and sustain its economic rise:

> "To use market terminology, a publicly listed company in Tunisia or Vietnam that operates in an environment of censorship will always trade at a discount relative to an identical firm in a free society. If corporate decision makers don't have access to global sources of news and information, investors will have less confidence in their decisions over the long term. Countries that censor news and information must recognize that from an economic standpoint, there is no distinction between censoring political speech and commercial speech. If businesses in your nations are denied access to either type of information, it will inevitably impact on growth.
>
> "Increasingly, U.S. companies are making the issue of internet and information freedom a greater consideration in their business decisions. I hope that their competitors and foreign governments will pay close attention to this trend. The most recent situation involving Google has attracted a great deal of interest. And we look to the Chinese authorities to conduct a thorough review of the cyber intrusions that led Google to make its announcement. And we also look for that investigation and its results to be transparent.
>
> "The internet has already been a source of tremendous progress in China, and it is fabulous. There are so many people in China now online. But countries that restrict free access to information or violate the basic rights of internet users risk walling themselves off from the progress of the next century. Now, the United States and China have different views on this issue, and we intend to address those differences candidly and consistently in the context of our positive, cooperative, and comprehensive relationship."

There's a lot more in the speech, including about terrorism, disaster relief, religion, etc -- but it's there for the reading. Back to the to-do list for me now.
Permalink ::
Share This

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 11:23 PM
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: FW: Dartmouth

You are getting a memo on universities.

FYI on this from Jim Kim

From: Jim Y. Kim [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 9:47 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject:

Hi Cheryl,

Hate to bother you with so much else going on but was wondering if the Secretary had made any decisions about coming to Dartmouth. We're holding our breath and not inviting anyone else until we hear.

We're heavily into the Haiti response and very proud of how Dartmouth has responded. The community is now well over 5 million dollars in aid and we've sent two large teams to support Partners In Health already. This is so, so heartbreaking!

Hope you're well!

Jim

Jim Yong Kim
President
Dartmouth College

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 7:14 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Update for Davut call

----- Original Message -----
From: Gordon, Philip H
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Kaidanow, Tina S; O'Brien, Vincent J; Fitzpatrick, Kathleen M; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Jan 22 06:18:42 2010
Subject: Update for Davut call

Armenian FM Nalbandian made comments below in a news conference today. S shd be made aware before call w/ Davutoglu today [redacted] B5

"Armenia is committed to the letter and spirit of the protocols and ready to go forward, to implement the protocols without preconditions. We hope that Turkish side as well, will respect the agreements, which we have reached and which are reflected in these protocols. We also hope, that Turkish side will head to the ratification and implementation of the agreements without preconditions, swiftly and without delays."

He said that later on he said that the court decision did not attach preconditions to the protocols.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 7:36 AM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Commencements

Yes we agree
Lona wanted to make sure you knew what was out there in case [redacted] There are one or 2 we want to discuss with u.

----- Original Message -----
From: H B5
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Jan 22 07:30:06 2010
Subject: Commencements

Shall we wait until we make decisions [redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 7:54 AM
To: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: Re: Commencements

Exactly -- in case you wanted to factor any into May/June planning.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin [redacted]
To: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri Jan 22 07:36:05 2010
Subject: Re: Commencements

Yes we agree
Lona wanted to make sure you knew what was out there in case [redacted] There are one or 2 we want to discuss with u. B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Jan 22 07:30:06 2010
Subject: Commencements

Shall we wait until we make decisions [redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 8:16 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 1/22/10 Friday

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:15 am WEEKLY MEETING w/REGIONAL BUREAU SECRETARIES
10:00 am Deputy Secretary's Conference Room

10:15 am MEETING w/S&ED TEAM
10:45 am Secretary's Outer Office

10:45 am STAFF MEETING
11:15am Secretary's Outer Office

11:15 am OFFICE TIME
12:00 pm Secretary's Office

12:00 pm BILATERAL w/MOLDOVAN PM VLADIMIR FILAT
12:30 pm Secretary's Conference Room *Official photo in East Hall preceding.

12:30 pm MCC SIGNING CEREMONY w/GOVERNMENT OF MOLDOVA
12:50 pm Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor

1:00 pm MEETING w/HAITI TEAM
1:30 pm Secretary's Office

1:30pm OFFICE TIME
2:00pm Secretary's Office

2:00 pm REMARKS TO THE WHA CHIEFS OF MISSION CONFERENCE
2:30 pm George C. Marshall Conference Center

2:30 pm BILATERAL w/CANADIAN FM LAWRENCE CANNON
3:00 pm Secretary's Conference Room *Press avail following.

3:05 pm PRESS PRE-BRIEF
3:10 pm Secretary's Outer Office

3:15 pm JOINT PRESS AVAILABILITY w/FM CANNON
3:35 pm Madison Room

4:00 pm MEETING w/UNESCO DIRECTOR-GENERAL IRINA BOKOVA
4:15 pm Secretary's Office *Official photo in anteroom preceding.

4:15pm MEETING w/MIKE FUCHS AND CHERYL MILLS
4:30pm Secretary's Office

4:30 pm OFFICE TIME
5:00 pm Secretary's Office

5:05 pm PRIVATE MEETING w/ SARA EHRMAN
5:15 pm Secretary's Office

5:20 pm DEPART State Department *En route Washington National Airport

5:40 pm ARRIVE Washington National Airport

6:00 pm DEPART Washington National Airport via US Airways Shuttle #2182
En route New York, NY

7:24 pm ARRIVE New York LaGuardia Airport

7:30 pm DEPART LaGuardia Airport
En route Private Residence

8:15 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

FYI:

4:00 pm SWEARING-IN CEREMONY FOR LESLIE ROWE, US AMBASSADOR TO MOZAMBIQUE Treaty Room

4:00 pm SWEARING-IN CEREMONY FOR RICK BARTON, REPRESENTATIVE OF THE U.S. ON THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL OF THE UNITED NATIONS Benjamin Franklin Room

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 8:34 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: A potential climate call tomorrow

They're still not as good as the DPRK at these barbs.

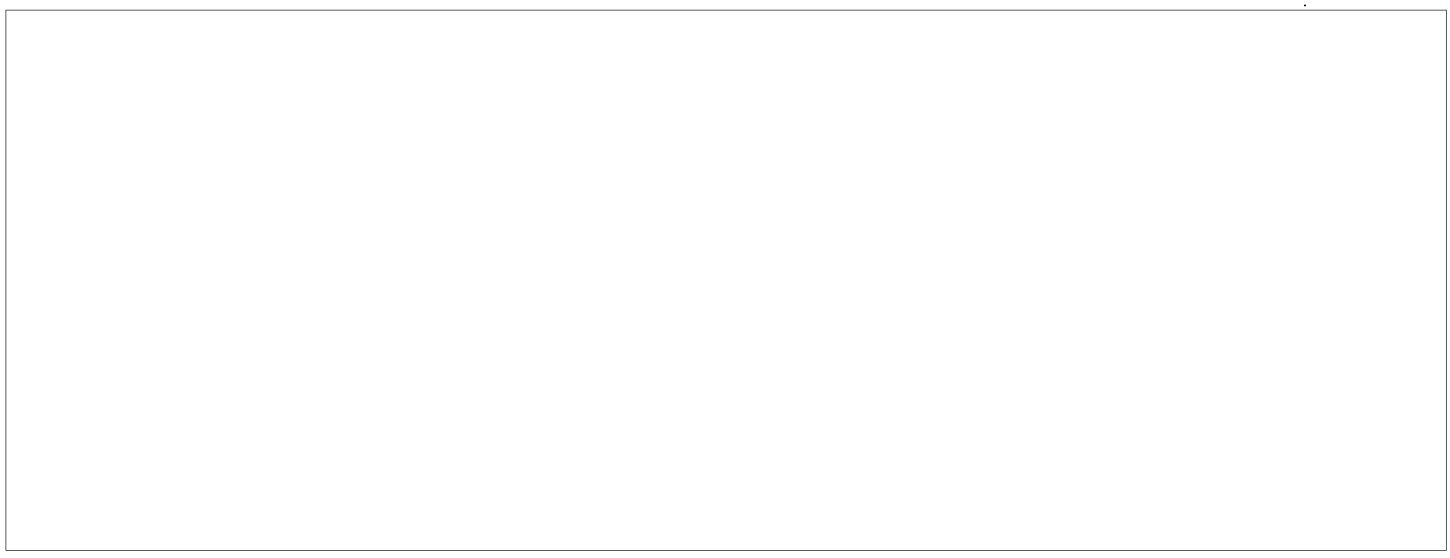
Amb Zhou saw Kurt and Jeff yesterday. Will download.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Jan 22 06:15:18 2010
Subject: Re: A potential climate call tomorrow

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 19:46:34 2010
Subject: FW: A potential climate call tomorrow

FYI. I'm following up with Kurt to get his thoughts.



---

From: Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:09 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Subject: A potential climate call tomorrow

Jake – it would be useful if HRC could call Wen Jiabao [redacted]

[redacted]

B5

<<S points for Wen call 1-21-10 v3.docx>>

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 1:13 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Lady Ashton

I just want to underline how valuable and important it is for you to be building the relationship with her that you are.

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 2:56 PM
To: H
Subject: news report on missing kids in Haiti

This is an AFP report from today.

Also, GTIP is working on a memo for you and Cheryl about child trafficking dangers in Haiti.

Trafficking fears as Haiti children go missing

Posted 5 hours 47 minutes ago
Updated 5 hours 46 minutes ago

Slideshow: Photo 1 of 2

The UN has warned countries not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the wake of the disaster. (AFP: Matthew Marek

United Nations officials say children have gone missing from hospitals in Haiti since the devastating January 12 earthquake, raising fears of trafficking for adoption abroad.

"We have documented around 15 cases of children disappearing from hospitals and not with their own family at the time," said UNICEF adviser Jean Luc Legrand.

"UNICEF has been working in Haiti for many years and we knew the problem with the trade of children in Haiti that existed already beforehand.

"Unfortunately, many of these trade networks have links with the international adoption market."

The agency said it had warned countries during the past week not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the immediate wake of the quake.

However several are fast-tracking adoption procedures already under way, including Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Spain and the United States.

Mr Legrand said the situation was similar to the aftermath of the tsunami in Asia five years ago.

Trafficking networks were springing into action immediately after the disaster and taking advantage of the weakness of local authorities and relief coordination "to kidnap children and get them out of the country".

Rupert Colville, a spokesman for the office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, said child enslavement and trafficking in Haiti was "an existing problem and could easily emerge as a serious issue over the coming weeks and months".

The UN mission in Haiti has stepped up surveillance of roads, UNICEF officials said.

Mr Legrand said there was separate but only anecdotal evidence of people taking children by road to the neighbouring Dominican Republic and loading children on to planes.

"We have seen over the past years many children being taken out of the country without any legal procedure," he said.

"This is going on. This is happening now. We are starting to have the first evidence of that, this is unquestionable."

He was unable to give details on the 15 missing children or their condition or clearly connect the anecdotal observations in Haiti's chaos with trafficking.

The cases were documented by social workers and by partner non-governmental organisations working for UNICEF in hospitals.

- AFP

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 3:00 PM
To: H
Subject: internet freedom

If you have the time or inclination, it would be really nice if you could send an email to Tomicah, or phone him. He went for almost 100 hours without sleep to get the speech done, under unusually trying circumstances. He deserves some recognition for grace under pressure and a job well done.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, May 5, 2010 11:03 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Call to Cheryl Mills from Dr. Muhammad Daoud Miraki.

---

From: Pauli, Rosemarie
Sent: Wednesday, May 05, 2010 10:49 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: FW: Call to Cheryl Mills from Dr. Muhammad Daoud Miraki.

Barney Rubin knows him so I asked him to call back on your behalf—here is the feedback no need to call him back. . .

He was calling Cheryl because he wanted to tell the Secretary of State that he has been contacted by tribes and ulama from both sides of the border. They have proposals for the US strategy and also a message about the interest in peace of some of the insurgents. I told him that our office handled those issues on behalf of the Secretary of State and that we would schedule an appointment with him the week after the Karzai visit.

I have been in touch with him most recently because he is doing research on corruption in Afghanistan and wrote to tell me [redacted] he asked me to set up a meeting with the Secretary of State. I said I could not do that. I made clear that [redacted] He had written to me to say that he would keep my interests in mind, and I wrote back to say [redacted] He wrote back to say I had misunderstood. Then he made the contact with the secretary's office directly. B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 3:42 PM
To: H
Subject: H: May head your way, you might be asked, and you might develop a response give that many firms are owned by nations. Sid http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx

Posted Friday, January 22, 2010 1:05 PM
Newsweek

Should Foreign Corporations Spend Money on U.S. Political Candidates?

Krista Gesaman

Foreign businesses might be the real winners in Citizens United v. Federal Elections Commission, the landmark case that allows corporations and unions to spend limitless amounts of money on presidential and congressional political campaigns. A majority of large businesses are now owned by foreign entities, and this means international corporations could pour tons of money into the United States political scene, potentially swaying the political climate.

The biggest questions with this ruling is the scope of the term "corporation," says Edward Foley, law professor at the Ohio State University College of Law and director of the election-law program. Does the high court want this decision to apply to foreign corporations as well as domestic ones, he ponders? The truth is, the court didn't make a decision one way or the other.

Foley best explains the potential issues by talking about the electronic, video, and communication giant, Sony. The corporation is headquartered in Japan, but a large number of its shareholders reside in the United States. In fact, people can even buy and trade Sony's stock on the New York Stock Exchange. The issue is whether this corporation, with strong ties to a foreign country and the United States, should be permitted to independently contribute money to presidential and congressional campaigns.

The court sought to expand First Amendment protection for corporations, but did it really mean to promote the free flow of ideas from Russian or Chinese corporations, Foley asks? Justice John Paul Stevens focused on the same concerns in his dissenting opinion. The majority's position "would appear to afford the same protection to multinational corporations controlled by foreigners as to individual Americans," he writes.

This afternoon, President Obama asked Congress to "develop a forceful response" to the ruling. But with Congress juggling so many other important issues, it's unlikely that a change will be made in the immediate future. This could mean that foreign cash could be supporting political candidates in next year's congressional midterm elections.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Cheryl Mills [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:26 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office Re: Fw: news report on missing kids in Haiti

I am traveling overseas and only have sporadic access to my email. If you need immediate assistance, please call State Department Operations at 202-647-1512 and ask for Nora Toiv who can assist you.

cdm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:29 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: internet freedom

Great. Thanks. I know he will appreciate it.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:27 PM
To: Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: Re: internet freedom

I did once before speech and will do again. Thx to all.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 14:59:34 2010
Subject: internet freedom

If you have the time or inclination, it would be really nice if you could send an email to Tomicah, or phone him. He went for almost 100 hours without sleep to get the speech done, under unusually trying circumstances. He deserves some recognition for grace under pressure and a job well done.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:37 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Thank you!

The little things go a long way. Thanks for being in touch with him.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:36 PM
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S
Cc: Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: Thank you!

TT (As prepared)--Thank you for all you did to make the speech yesterday so effective and powerful. We've gotten many positive comments and laid a solid foundation for future action.
Please get caught up on sleep! All the best, Hillary

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Tillemann, Tomicah S <TillemannTS@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:42 PM
To: H
Cc: Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: RE: Thank you!

You're very kind. The delivery was flawless and your idea to focus on the girl rescued from the rubble in Haiti wove it all together. It was an honor to help out -- and I think we did some real good. Onward, onward...

Best,
Tomicah

Tomicah Tillemann, Ph.D.
Speechwriter
Policy Planning Staff
Department of State

S/P Main: 202.647.2372 | Direct: [redacted] | Blackberry: [redacted] (urgent calls only)
Fax: 202.647.0844 | Room 7311 (S/P) | 2201 C Street NW | Washington, DC 20520

B6

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:36 PM
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S
Cc: Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: Thank you!

TT (As prepared)--Thank you for all you did to make the speech yesterday so effective and powerful. We've gotten many positive comments and laid a solid foundation for future action.
Please get caught up on sleep! All the best, Hillary

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Toiv, Nora F <ToivNF@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:43 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: news report on missing kids in Haiti

Thanks. Printing for her.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:28 PM
To: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: Fw: news report on missing kids in Haiti

Pls show to Cheryl.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 14:55:39 2010
Subject: news report on missing kids in Haiti

This is an AFP report from today.

Also, GTIP is working on a memo for you and Cheryl about child trafficking dangers in Haiti.

Trafficking fears as Haiti children go missing

Posted 5 hours 47 minutes ago
Updated 5 hours 46 minutes ago

<javascript:slideshowPrev();> <javascript:slideshowNext();> Slideshow: Photo 1 of 2

<http://www.abc.net.au/reslib/201001/r498072_2617306.jpg>

The UN has warned countries not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the wake of the disaster. (AFP: Matthew Marek

United Nations officials say children have gone missing from hospitals in Haiti since the devastating January 12 earthquake, raising fears of trafficking for adoption abroad.

"We have documented around 15 cases of children disappearing from hospitals and not with their own family at the time," said UNICEF adviser Jean Luc Legrand.

"UNICEF has been working in Haiti for many years and we knew the problem with the trade of children in Haiti that existed already beforehand.

"Unfortunately, many of these trade networks have links with the international adoption market."

The agency said it had warned countries during the past week not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the immediate wake of the quake.

However several are fast-tracking adoption procedures already under way, including Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Spain and the United States.

Mr Legrand said the situation was similar to the aftermath of the tsunami in Asia five years ago.

Trafficking networks were springing into action immediately after the disaster and taking advantage of the weakness of local authorities and relief coordination "to kidnap children and get them out of the country".

Rupert Colville, a spokesman for the office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, said child enslavement and trafficking in Haiti was "an existing problem and could easily emerge as a serious issue over the coming weeks and months".

The UN mission in Haiti has stepped up surveillance of roads, UNICEF officials said.

Mr Legrand said there was separate but only anecdotal evidence of people taking children by road to the neighbouring Dominican Republic and loading children on to planes.

"We have seen over the past years many children being taken out of the country without any legal procedure," he said.

"This is going on. This is happening now. We are starting to have the first evidence of that, this is unquestionable."

He was unable to give details on the 15 missing children or their condition or clearly connect the anecdotal observations in Haiti's chaos with trafficking.

The cases were documented by social workers and by partner non-governmental organisations working for UNICEF in hospitals.

- AFP

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:01 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: haiti comments

From: Mark Schneider [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 12:29 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Brigety, Reuben; Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: haiti comments

That number--I think it has to be over $1 b. tho because people will compare it to Mitch--sounds right to me altho not only will the destruction likely go higher than the final numbers of I believe $8.5 b. for Mitch/George but the cost of reconstruction if the aim is modern buildings, modern systems, decentralized development is also likely to be higher.

A separate question, beyond the money are the people who can be committed, which goes to USAID ramping up its staff and capabilities, the civilian response corps and I suspect your QDDR recommendations, on how to imagine a sector by sector renewal with international partners on the ground able to work side-by-side with Haitians in every ministry (starting with those that are priorities, which have to be justice [police, judiciary and prisons], education, agriculture, energy/public works/environment, etc. in PAP but also in those department capitals where you want regional development to be launched--Cap Haitian, Gonaives, Jacmel, Hinche, etc. If it were done as part of an international support team, under UN coord (?), and sign-off upfront from the Haitian government, it might work.
Three last points: 1) the Crisis Corps of the Peace Corps--I know that every RPCV who served in Haiti will be desperate to help. Many of them have professional capabilities. Ask Aaron to locate them.
2) As part of what announcement is made on Monday, this might be the time to add some number of US Haitian-American Creole-speaking police to the UNPolice force, particularly those with community policing experience, say 100.
3) Finally, what about an emergency lifting of whatever restrictions (quotas, tariffs, etc.) that may still impinge on Haitian agricultural products coming to US, an emergency provisions of phytosanitary expertise to enable their farmers to meet our standards and remove any restrictions (which exist) on their subsidizing their rice farmers for their domestic production.

I know that you all are working 24/7 on this so I apologize to some degree for accepting your offer to send advice. But that probably won't stop me from sending!! Warm regards, Mark

Mark L. Schneider
Sr. Vice President
International Crisis Group
1629 K St. NW Suite 450
Washington, DC 20006
(fax)

www.crisisgroup.org
Crisis Group - the international conflict prevention organization

From: Mills, Cheryl D [mailto:MillsCD@state.gov]
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 10:12 AM
To: mschneider[redacted] B6
Cc: Brigety, Reuben; Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: haiti comments

Working on the supp now with a similar number.

Keep the advice coming.

Many thanks.

cdm

---

From: Mark Schneider [mailto:[redacted]
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 8:42 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Brigety, Reuben
Subject: RE: haiti comments

Hi Cheryl,
Heard you yesterday on NPR. Right on the money in terms of emphasizing coop with GoH and coord with UN et. al. One thing I am not sure that I mentioned. I looked back and relatively early--4 weeks after Mitch at end Oct 98--we made the estimate that the US contribut would have to be about $1 b. (when early damage estimate was $6 b.) and that was the general amount mentioned in the first formin meeting by Madeleine here in early Dec and then the supplemental went to Congress with more of a breakdown from USAID in early Feb. As soon as you can get an early supplemental to the Hill while the focus is on Haiti, and our forces are on the ground there, the better chances that it will receive early action. Best, mark

Mark L. Schneider
Sr. Vice President
International Crisis Group
1629 K St. NW Suite 450
Washington, DC 20006
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]

www.crisisgroup.org
Crisis Group - the international conflict prevention organization

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D [mailto:MillsCD@state.gov]
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 10:12 PM
To: mschneider[redacted]
Cc: Brigety, Reuben
Subject: RE: haiti comments

Great – thanks so much. Love that you are focused on how we rebuild their police force

---

From: Mark Schneider[redacted]
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 3:40 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Brigety, Reuben
Subject: haiti comments

Just in case some of this might be of use as you plan for moving forward. Best, Mark

Mark L. Schneider
Sr. Vice President
International Crisis Group
1629 K St. NW Suite 450
Washington, DC 20006
[redacted] fax)
[redacted]

www.crisisgroup.org
Crisis Group - the international conflict prevention organization

B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:08 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Dan Glickman to depart MPAA in April; Bob Pisano to be Interim CEO

From: Howard_Gantman [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 10:55 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Dan Glickman to depart MPAA in April; Bob Pisano to be Interim CEO

Dan asked me to forward this to you:

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
January 22, 2010

GLICKMAN STEPPING DOWN FROM MPAA

Will become President of Refugees International in April; Pisano named as Interim CEO

Washington, D.C. – Dan Glickman, Chairman and CEO of the Motion Picture Association of America, Inc. (MPAA) today announced that he will be leaving the MPAA beginning April 1, to become President of Refugees International, the leading advocacy organization on refugee crises worldwide. Bob Pisano, President and Chief Operating Officer at the MPAA since 2005, will become interim CEO, while the search continues for Glickman's replacement.

"In making this announcement, I want to thank Barry Meyer, Jim Gianopulos, Brad Grey, Bob Iger, Michael Lynton, Ron Meyer, and the entire MPAA Board of Directors, for their guidance and leadership. It has been an honor to have worked so closely with them. I also want to thank Bob Pisano and all the MPAA staff for their dedication during a time of major transition in our business," Glickman said. "As I look forward to returning to public service and joining Refugees International, I am proud to look back at what the MPAA has accomplished since I took this job in 2004. We have fought vigorously on behalf of the 2.4 million Americans and other workers throughout the world whose jobs are based on a vibrant film and television business. This is a powerful medium that can help make a difference, and I will always value my time here. For me, perhaps the best thing about the job was the movies. I love movies. And as far as I am concerned, we make the best movies in the world."

Barry M. Meyer, Chairman and CEO, Warner Bros. Entertainment Inc., praised Glickman's leadership. "Dan has demonstrated great leadership in his role as Chairman of the MPAA. He has guided the organization during a time of historic changes and unprecedented challenges throughout the entertainment industry," said Mr. Meyer. "We thank Dan for his tireless support of the issues facing our businesses, particularly in protecting intellectual property rights in the United States and around the world. We wish him every success in his new position."

Mr. Meyer continued: "We would also like to express our gratitude to Bob for agreeing to be interim Chairman and have every confidence in his abilities to continue the crucial work of the MPAA."

"Throughout his tenure at the MPAA, Dan served as an incredibly skillful and dedicated advocate for the issues that are most important to the film and television industries – global market access, copyright protection and ensuring an overall healthy future for our collective businesses," said Jim Gianopulos, Chairman and CEO of Fox Filmed Entertainment. "Furthermore, we look forward to working with Bob and are grateful that he's agreed to serve as interim CEO over the near term."

"Our industry has been well served by Dan's efforts and advocacy worldwide and we appreciate the job he has done on our behalf. He is a great humanitarian and will be very effective in his new role," said Bob Iger, president and CEO, The Walt Disney Company.

Glickman, who has held the top position at the MPAA since 2004, had previously announced that he would not be seeking a renewal of his contract beyond September 2010 and has been working with the MPAA board during its search process for a new chief.

Glickman presided over the MPAA during a period of unprecedented transition in the film and television industry. The rise of digital technology has presented both challenges in the form of massive copyright theft and innovative opportunities for filmmakers to share their work around the world.

Through his leadership, Glickman helped raise awareness of the economic consequences of copyright theft. He also worked with a broad labor and business coalition to secure passage of the Pro-IP Act, which increased resources and enforcement to protect intellectual property. And he has vigorously promoted a myriad of legitimate ways for consumers to view movies and TV shows on the Internet.

Glickman also helped lead the effort to win passage of legislation banning camcording in movie theaters throughout the United States and around the world. And he worked to modernize the movie rating system, increasing its transparency and launching a free weekly Red Carpet Ratings email service that makes this resource more accessible to parents.

Bob Pisano has served as President and Chief Operating Officer of the Motion Picture Association of America, Inc. (MPAA) since October 2005 and brings to the MPAA a wealth of diversified experience in business and legal practice. Pisano is responsible for all day-to-day worldwide operations of the motion picture and television industry trade association, and a member of the Board of Directors.

Prior to joining the MPAA, he was National Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer of the Screen Actors Guild. Before his tenure with the Screen Actors Guild, Pisano served for six years at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer (MGM) where he was first appointed Executive Vice President and then Vice Chairman and a member of the studio's Board of Directors. Prior to that, he served as Executive Vice President and General Counsel and Member of the Office of the Chairman of Paramount Pictures.

About the MPAA

The Motion Picture Association of America, Inc. (MPAA) serves as the voice and advocate of the American motion picture, home video and television industries from its offices in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C. Its members include: Walt Disney Studios Motion Pictures; Paramount Pictures Corporation; Sony Pictures Entertainment Inc.; Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation; Universal City Studios LLLP; and Warner Bros. Entertainment Inc.

# #

For more information, contact:

MPAA Washington, D.C.
Howard Gantman
(202) 293-1966

MPAA Los Angeles
Elizabeth Kaltman
(818) 995-6600

Howard S. Gantman
Vice President, Corporate Communications
Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA)
1600 "Eye" Street NW
Washington, DC 20006

B6

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 7:26 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Cannon and Honduras Inauguration

FYI.

Still gathering info [redacted] B5 B6

From: Kelly, Craig A
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Jan 22 19:24:28 2010
Subject: Cannon and Honduras Inauguration

Jake:

I understand that Cannon told S they were still weighing the level of their participation because Micheletti had stepped "sideways but not down." That's a nice metaphor, but a little misleading. Micheletti took " a leave of absence." That is a legal construct to protect himself from prosecution (coup-related) since there is no amnesty yet. But he is gone from the Presidential Palace and has promised not to speak out.

I think Canada will send its Minister of State for the Americas, Peter Kent. That's a serious level.

ck

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 8:12 PM
To: H
Subject:

Matt passed along the following barebones intel from Lute and Samantha on [redacted] (he made clear that everyone is groping through the dark on this search):

[redacted] B5 B6

[redacted]

[redacted]

Will let you know if I learn more.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 7:00 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Note to S on Haiti TIP.docx -- resending
Attachments: Note to S on Haiti TIP.docx

FYI:

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED January 22, 2010

NOTE FOR THE SECRETARY

FROM: G/TIP – Luis CdeBaca

SUBJECT: Child Trafficking in Haiti

G/TIP is gravely concerned about the potential for human trafficking (TIP) in the wake of the earthquake, both as a result of the displacement of the population and the influx of troops and aid workers. Even before the earthquake, there were in Haiti up to 300,000 restaveks (children given away or sold by their parents and enslaved as domestic servants), as well as reports that members of MINUSTAH used trafficked women in prostitution. In the 2009 TIP Report Haiti was classified as a Special Case country with governance so dysfunctional it could not be ranked.

The initial disaster response is focusing on immediate needs of food, shelter, and medical care, but has thus far not addressed TIP prevention and protection issues. While attention is being paid to the problems of orphans and adoptees, TIP was not adequately addressed in the UN's initial flash appeal, so it is unclear which agency in the international system has the lead on the ground. UNICEF has the child protection lead, UNFPA leads prevention of sexual and gender-based violence, and IOM is tasked with shelter and camp management. We will work to remedy, in a subsequent appeal, the omission of TIP from the operational plan.

We are moving to redirect $1 million of program funds that G/TIP has on Hispaniola and to reprogram an additional $550,000; we will work with PRM to identify other funding possibilities. Working through existing grantees and other experienced NGOs, it is our intention to help resuscitate police child protection brigades that already exist in Haiti, to rebuild capacity of Haitian organizations that protect restaveks, to prevent traffickers in the Dominican Republic from enslaving displaced Haitians on farms and in prostitution, and to educate Haitian parents of the risks of giving their children away in this time of crisis. We will consult with partner agencies to ensure that the U.S. presence does not contribute to trafficking. It will be important for the Department's messaging to convey our commitment to fighting human trafficking in both the immediate and long term.

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

From: CdeBaca, Luis
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 9:38 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Burns, Jillian L
Subject: FW: Note to S on Haiti TIP.docx -- resending

Hello folks. We just sent this up, through the Line.

LOU

Ambassador Luis CdeBaca
Office to Monitor & Combat Trafficking in Persons
U.S. Department of State
1800 G. Street, NW
Washington, DC 20520
(202) 312-9640
CdeBacaL@state.gov

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769375 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED January 22, 2010

NOTE FOR THE SECRETARY

FROM: G/TIP – Luis CdeBaca

SUBJECT: Child Trafficking in Haiti

G/TIP is gravely concerned about the potential for human trafficking (TIP) in the wake of the earthquake, both as a result of the displacement of the population and the influx of troops and aid workers. Even before the earthquake, there were in Haiti up to 300,000 restaveks (children given away or sold by their parents and enslaved as domestic servants), as well as reports that members of MINUSTAH used trafficked women in prostitution. In the 2009 TIP Report Haiti was classified as a Special Case country with governance so dysfunctional it could not be ranked.

The initial disaster response is focusing on immediate needs of food, shelter, and medical care, but has thus far not addressed TIP prevention and protection issues. While attention is being paid to the problems of orphans and adoptees, TIP was not adequately addressed in the UN's initial flash appeal, so it is unclear which agency in the international system has the lead on the ground. UNICEF has the child protection lead, UNFPA leads prevention of sexual and gender-based violence, and IOM is tasked with shelter and camp management. We will work to remedy, in a subsequent appeal, the omission of TIP from the operational plan.

We are moving to redirect $1 million of program funds that G/TIP has on Hispaniola and to reprogram an additional $550,000; we will work with PRM to identify other funding possibilities. Working through existing grantees and other experienced NGOs, it is our intention to help resuscitate police child protection brigades that already exist in Haiti, to rebuild capacity of Haitian organizations that protect restaveks, to prevent traffickers in the Dominican Republic from enslaving displaced Haitians on farms and in prostitution, and to educate Haitian parents of the risks of giving their children away in this time of crisis. We will consult with partner agencies to ensure that the U.S. presence does not contribute to trafficking. It will be important for the Department's messaging to convey our commitment to fighting human trafficking in both the immediate and long term.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769375 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 7:31 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Another Rescue--22 year old man by Israeli SAR

---

From: Klevorick, Caitlin B
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 7:29 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Another Rescue--22 year old man by Israeli SAR

From Ha'aretz (NYT also reporting this, but quote about American and French teams failing is of concern):

An Israel Defense Forces search and rescue team extricated a 22-year-old Haitian man on Friday from the rubble of a three-story building which collapsed as a result of last week's devastating earthquake.

The man was being treated at an IDF field hospital and is currently in stable condition.

Local residents directed the IDF crew to the trapped victim, the IDF said.
"American and French doctors were unable to rescue the trapped man and called upon the Israeli Advertisement delegation's search and rescue teams who rescued the man within half an hour, from a tunnel, 2.5-3-meters long and were able to release him whole and healthy," said Maj. Zohar Moshe, a member of the rescue team.

Caitlin Klevorick
Office of the Counselor
Department of State
KlevorickCB@state.gov
202.647.6115
[redacted] (blackberry)

B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 7:40 AM
To: Grantham, Suzanne L; Coley, Theodore R; Kennedy, Patrick F; Bernier-Toth, Michelle; Jacobs, Janice L
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: UPDATE: Saturday Lynn University/Rep McGovern Trip

All:

See below for appreciation for all your efforts – congrats and thanks.

Please pass along to whomever I missed.

cdm

From: Matthew Chaloux [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 7:37 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: UPDATE: Saturday Lynn University/Rep McGovern Trip

Dear Ms. Mills,

On a personal note, pls allow me to express my thanks for you and your team's long hours, hard work and dedication to all Americans. As you well know, no family in grief can possibly think anything being done is enough for their loved one.

You and I both know that the efforts of everyone involved in the rescue/relief efforts, from the ramp loader to Secretary Clinton has been nothing but 110%.

Thank you is not something you and your colleagues have likely heard a great deal in the last 9 days, so allow me to say, THANK YOU.

Matt Chaloux
Proud American

From: Mills, Cheryl D [MillsCD@state.gov]
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 7:28 AM
To: Matthew Chaloux
Cc: Buhl, Cindy; Kennedy, Patrick F; Grantham, Suzanne L; Coley, Theodore R
Subject: RE: UPDATE: Saturday Lynn University/Rep McGovern Trip

We have seen a UN statement indicating that GOH has advised that but we have not had confirmation from GOH though we are seeking that.

As you know, we still have a team at the Montana working.

On your second question, that is a larger issue we are working through for the entire disaster area which we'll update publicly as we make assessments.

cdm

From: Matthew Chaloux [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 7:27 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy; Kennedy, Patrick F; Grantham, Suzanne L; Coley, Theodore R
Subject: Re: UPDATE: Saturday Lynn University/Rep McGovern Trip

Very well. Got that from his office last night. Thanks

Media outlets report Haitian government has declared rescue over. Can you confirm that. Also do you have any info on committment on remain retreival?

Matt

Matthew P. Chaloux, MBA
Director of Auxilary Services
Lynn University

On Jan 23, 2010, at 6:55 AM, "Mills, Cheryl D" <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> Matt
>
> Please find below and updated schedule for today's travel.
>
> Rep McGovern is now going commercially to Santo Domingo.
>
> Best.
>
> cdm
> <Expanded Jan. 23 Schedule.docx>

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 8:12 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: What is the deadline on Aceh Fund brief
Attachments: Lessons from Aceh Multi Donor Trust Fund.docx

FYI

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:16 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: What is the deadline on Aceh Fund brief

From Jean-Louis on Aceh Multi Donor Trust Fund. It's interesting.

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto:[redacted]] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:15 PM
To: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: What is the deadline on Aceh Fund brief

Meghann

Please see attached a few quick notes based largely on the Trust Fund's progress report and an independent evaluation commission by the World Bank, DFID, NORAd and others.

I spoke to Kathleen. I did have to cancel a piece for Canada's main evening news at CBC, which they plan to air on Sunday before the Montreal Summit. I understand that media appearances, especially if higher profile, can cause sensitivities.

Best wishes

Jean-Louis

Lessons from the Aceh and Nias Multi-Donor Trust Fund

1. The Government of Indonesia (GOI) responded to the Tsunami by issuing a series of government decrees, and immediately organized both overview and relief efforts to ensure a rational and coordinated response. The first task was to produce a Damage and Loss Assessment (DLA). The DLA was followed by a more detailed Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction (MPRR). The MPRR provided in-depth sector plans, spatial planning, the governance and supervision arrangements of finances with considerable attention to how to avoid or minimize corruption. The process behind the MPRR was consultative, with a wide range of local stakeholders and public offices being heard. The MPRR was presented on 26 March, only 3 months after the Tsunami.

2. The MPRR was to form the basis for a general three-stage strategy. The Relief phase was originally set to six months, but was then reduced to three: January- March 2005. The Rehabilitation phase is to run for about 21 months, through December 2006, and the Reconstruction phase from July 2006 through December 2009. The MPRR provides a well defined phasing of interventions.

3. The objectives for the Relief efforts were humanitarian relief: rescue; food and medicine; emergency infrastructure and temporary shelter; and burying the dead. The Rehabilitation phase is to restore services to minimum level: public services; economic facilities; banking and financial institutions; trauma treatments; secure land rights; law and order; and temporary shelter. Finally, Reconstruction is to rebuild the region: rebuilding the economy (production, trade and banking); the transportation, telecommunications, and social and cultural systems; improving institutional capacity; and housing.

4. The Government set up a ministerial-level agency to manage the MPRR program from Aceh itself, the Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias. The BRR was formally established end April 2005 and became operational early May. The World Bank Board on 30 March 2005 formally established the Multi-Donor Trust Fund (MDF) with a Steering Committee comprised of BRR, GOI, donors and civil society. Having a credible local coordinators was key to success.

5. The EC channels nearly 93% of its funds through the MDF, while only 2.5% of USD 400 million from the US goes to the MDF. While payments into the fund were slow, disbursements out of it were to begin with even slower. By October 2005, project agreements for about USD 200 million had been signed, but only USD 3 million had actually been disbursed. Disbursements picked up the pace thereafter. The delay was caused by two principal impediments: first, donors were quick to pledge funds, but getting all the exact written agreements in place took time. This points to the need for donors to be flexible regarding formal agreements, and accept simple, generic paragraphs that can contribute to speedy resolution of slightly differing phrasings and concerns. Second, the processing time for project approval and implementation was a concern. Since the MDF was to have funded projects on-budget, they had to be implemented by government institutions. This crated bottlenecks.

6. Smaller donors joined because they wished to support the reconstruction efforts in Aceh but do not have own capacity and often not strong views on how best to pursue this. They want the Bank to assume fiduciary responsibilities for the funds in a high-risk environment, and also to take a lead in ensuring that the funds go to prioritized activities. The MDF is thus seen a well-managed bank account with some paid-for administrative services. However, the all-inclusive Steering Committee made membership large and to some extent unwieldy, and forced it to discuss both policy and operational issues.

7. The Multi Donor Fund Secretariat has developed an Outreach Strategy that includes regular radio talk shows, field visits to meet and discuss with beneficiaries and communication through advertisements as well as a telephone hotline.

8. MDF received praise for engaging the Government of Indonesia (GOI) in policy dialogue. The MDF is thus an entry point for engaging on conditions for sustainability, relevance and impact.

9. Because the MDF does not accept strict ear marking of donor contributions – though it does allow for preference indications – it means that the funds are freely available for programming according to the criteria and priorities that the MDF agrees to. Given strong GOI participation, the MDF is seen as the most successful instrument for harmonization and coordination in an environment that has been criticized for a lack of coordination. The MDF's Mid Term Review conducted in 2008-2009 found that the MDF had made a positive contribution to harmonizing donor efforts and to increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of the reconstruction effort.

10. The MDF did not sufficiently engage the private sector and did not have a coherent job creation strategy. The MDF lacked executive rights, but GOI and BRR are credited with leveraging a decisive response.

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A [mailto:CurtisMA@state.gov]
Sent: 22 January 2010 16:27
To: Jean-Louis Warnholz
Subject: RE: What is the deadline on Aceh Fund brief

No official deadline. I just ran off an FAQ and gave it to her. But would be interested to know if you have insights into what worked and what didnt

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto:[redacted]] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 4:24 PM
To: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: What is the deadline on Aceh Fund brief

Best wishes, JL

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A [mailto:CurtisMA@state.gov]
Sent: 22 January 2010 14:49
To: Jean-Louis Warnholz
Subject: RE: Talking points on Haiti Fund - pls confirm

New tasking directly from the Secretary to me (and you now!). She wants information about how the Aceh fund worked and how we can replicate it and what did or didn't work. I was going to start doing some research now but would welcome your help on that too.

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto:[redacted]] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 1:04 PM
To: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: Talking points on Haiti Fund - pls confirm

Thanks for the feedback. I really hope Monday will break sufficient ground to move forward swiftly. There will only be broad global public support for a limited time, in which decisions have to be set in stone. I looked back at all these Haiti donor conferences after the countless disasters. More of the same will only mean more big catastrophes.

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A [mailto:CurtisMA@state.gov]
Sent: 22 January 2010 12:52
To: Jean-Louis Warnholz
Subject: RE: Talking points on Haiti Fund - pls confirm

Excellent points. Thanks so much.

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 10:45 AM

To: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: Talking points on Haiti Fund - pls confirm
Importance: High

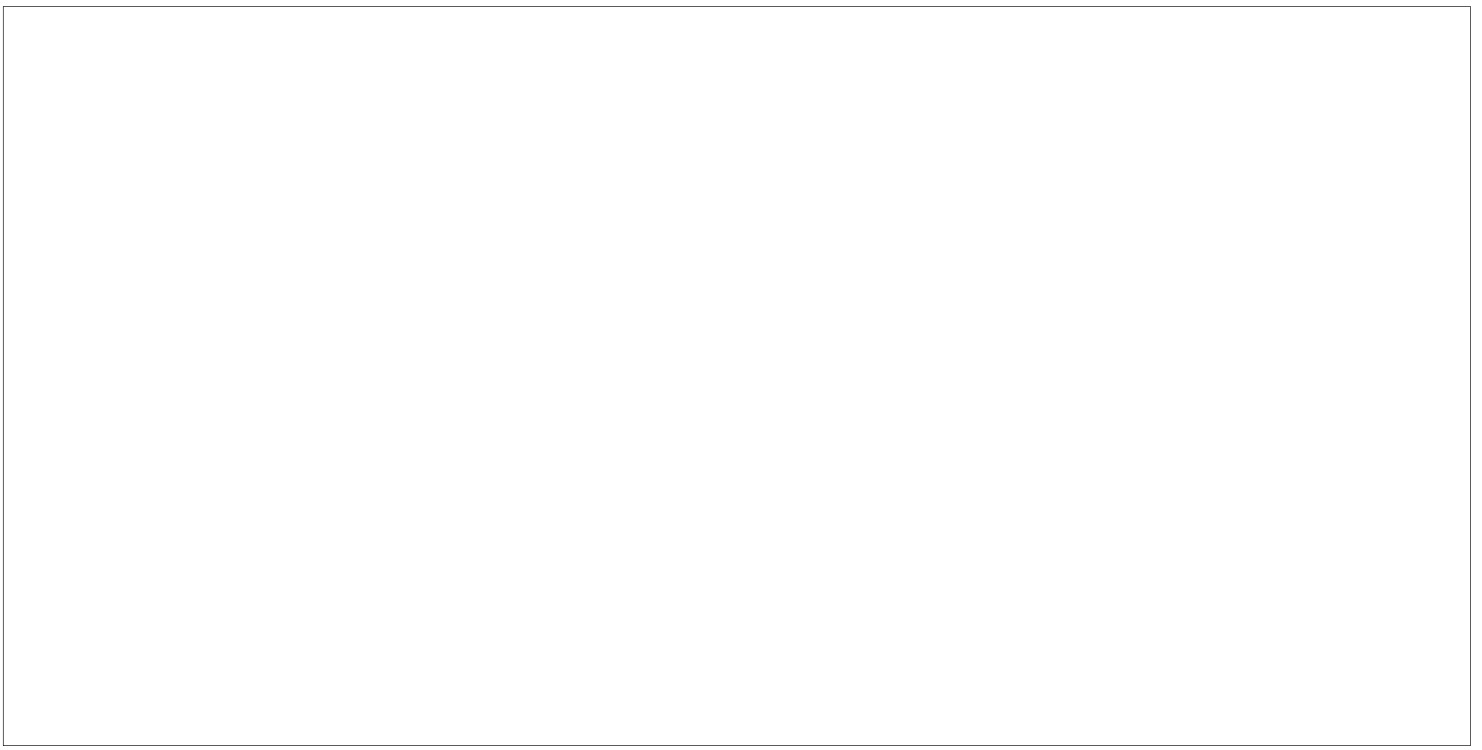
Meghann

Please see below and attached.



Best wishes

Jean-Louis

Private Talking Points on Haiti Fund

B5

B5

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769380 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Lessons from the Aceh and Nias Multi-Donor Trust Fund

1. The Government of Indonesia (GOI) responded to the Tsunami by issuing a series of government decrees, and immediately organized both overview and relief efforts to ensure a rational and coordinated response. The first task was to produce a Damage and Loss Assessment (DLA). The DLA was followed by a more detailed Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction (MPRR). The MPRR provided in-depth sector plans, spatial planning, the governance and supervision arrangements of finances with considerable attention to how to avoid or minimize corruption. The process behind the MPRR was consultative, with a wide range of local stakeholders and public offices being heard. The MPRR was presented on 26 March, only 3 months after the Tsunami.

2. The MPRR was to form the basis for a general three-stage strategy. The Relief phase was originally set to six months, but was then reduced to three: January- March 2005. The Rehabilitation phase is to run for about 21 months, through December 2006, and the Reconstruction phase from July 2006 through December 2009. The MPRR provides a well defined phasing of interventions.

3. The objectives for the Relief efforts were humanitarian relief: rescue; food and medicine; emergency infrastructure and temporary shelter; and burying the dead. The Rehabilitation phase is to restore services to minimum level: public services; economic facilities; banking and financial institutions; trauma treatments; secure land rights; law and order; and temporary shelter. Finally, Reconstruction is to rebuild the region: rebuilding the economy (production, trade and banking); the transportation, telecommunications, and social and cultural systems; improving institutional capacity; and housing.

4. The Government set up a ministerial-level agency to manage the MPRR program from Aceh itself, the Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias. The BRR was formally established end April 2005 and became operational early May. The World Bank Board on 30 March 2005 formally established the Multi-Donor Trust Fund (MDF) with a Steering Committee comprised of BRR, GOI, donors and civil society. Having a credible local coordinators was key to success.

5. The EC channels nearly 93% of its funds through the MDF, while only 2.5% of USD 400 million from the US goes to the MDF. While payments into the fund were slow, disbursements out of it were to begin with even slower. By October 2005, project agreements for about USD 200 million had been signed, but only USD 3 million had actually been disbursed. Disbursements picked up the pace thereafter. The delay was caused by two principal impediments: first, donors were quick to pledge funds, but getting all the exact written agreements in place took time. This points to the need for donors to be flexible regarding formal agreements, and accept simple, generic paragraphs that can contribute to speedy resolution of slightly differing phrasings and concerns. Second, the processing time for project approval and implementation was a concern. Since the MDF was to have funded projects on-budget, they had to be implemented by government institutions. This crated bottlenecks.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769380 Date: 08/31/2015

6. Smaller donors joined because they wished to support the reconstruction efforts in Aceh but do not have own capacity and often not strong views on how best to pursue this. They want the Bank to assume fiduciary responsibilities for the funds in a high-risk environment, and also to take a lead in ensuring that the funds go to prioritized activities. The MDF is thus seen a well-managed bank account with some paid-for administrative services. However, the all-inclusive Steering Committee made membership large and to some extent unwieldy, and forced it to discuss both policy and operational issues.

7. The Multi Donor Fund Secretariat has developed an Outreach Strategy that includes regular radio talk shows, field visits to meet and discuss with beneficiaries and communication through advertisements as well as a telephone hotline.

8. MDF received praise for engaging the Government of Indonesia (GOI) in policy dialogue. The MDF is thus an entry point for engaging on conditions for sustainability, relevance and impact.

9. Because the MDF does not accept strict ear marking of donor contributions – though it does allow for preference indications – it means that the funds are freely available for programming according to the criteria and priorities that the MDF agrees to. Given strong GOI participation, the MDF is seen as the most successful instrument for harmonization and coordination in an environment that has been criticized for a lack of coordination. The MDF's Mid Term Review conducted in 2008-2009 found that the MDF had made a positive contribution to harmonizing donor efforts and to increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of the reconstruction effort.

10. The MDF did not sufficiently engage the private sector and did not have a coherent job creation strategy. The MDF lacked executive rights, but GOI and BRR are credited with leveraging a decisive response.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 8:38 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: INR's Latest Media Analysis: Americas: Don't Blame U.S. for Taking Lead in Haiti
Attachments: 1-22 Americas--Don't Blame U.S. for Taking Lead in Haiti.pdf

From: McLean, Andrew J On Behalf Of Media, Reaction 1
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 2:34 PM
Subject: INR's Latest Media Analysis: Americas: Don't Blame U.S. for Taking Lead in Haiti

Attached please find the latest INR media analysis:

Americas: Don't Blame U.S. for Taking Lead in Haiti

(January 22, 2010) Most Western Hemisphere media commend U.S. relief efforts as "sincere," with some rejecting allegations of U.S. imperialist intent. Several hope the international community will turn current aid into a long-term sustainable development plan for Haiti.

Andrew J. McLean
Foreign Media Analyst, EUR/WHA
Office of Opinion Research
Bureau of Intelligence and Research
(202) 736-4330

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769383 Date: 08/31/2015

FOR OFFICIAL U.S. GOVERNMENT USE ONLY

RELEASE IN FULL

Media Analysis

January 22, 2010

Office of Research

Americas: Don't Blame U.S. for Taking Lead in Haiti

Most Western Hemisphere media commend U.S. relief efforts as "sincere," with some rejecting allegations of U.S. imperialist intent. Several hope the international community will turn current aid into a long-term sustainable development plan for Haiti.

Regional media are quick to reject allegations of a hidden agenda behind U.S. assistance to Haiti. Criticism of U.S. leadership on relief has come in part from leaders such as Venezuelan President Chavez and associated media outlets. When pro-Chavez Ultimas Noticias called U.S. efforts "an invasion presented as relief assistance," the Dominican Republic's Diario Libre labeled such statements "silliness." Ecuador's popular Diario Expreso comments, "To provide assistance is not an invasion, it falls within the scope of humanitarian law."

Criticism also has come from countries, primarily Brazil and Jamaica, which see themselves as rightful leaders of Haitian assistance. Brazil's command of the U.N. peace mission led some Brazilian officials to see it as the "natural candidate to coordinate efforts to help the Haitian nation rise from the ruins." Jamaica's Sunday Gleaner argues Jamaica, as the "natural leader" of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) and coordinator of its efforts in Haiti, "must spearhead" the nation's rebuilding.

U.S. must take the lead now...

Some media in both Brazil and Jamaica, however, argue that the United States alone is able to lead efforts in Haiti. Brazil's center-right O Estado de S. Paolo scolds Brazilian authorities for their "less than awkward" initial reaction to U.S. operations in Haiti. The same paper argues "the Brazilian reaction ignored the basic reality, which was clear to President Preval, that no other country had comparable means to help Haiti other than the U.S." The Jamaica Observer concedes the United States "is probably in the best condition" to "take charge of the situation," but argued it should do so with the support of the U.N. and the CARICOM Secretariat.

...Global community for the long haul

Several outlets note that Haiti has long lacked the infrastructure and institutions that could give its citizens "political, intellectual, and economic freedom." As a result, media, regardless of attitudes toward U.S. relief efforts, now call for the international community to take a more comprehensive approach to aiding Haiti. Chile's conservative La Tercera wants the international community, especially Latin America, to maintain a "long-term focus" on Haiti. Both Canada's Toronto Star and Jamaica's Sunday Gleaner want a "Marshall Plan" for Haiti, not as a U.S. initiative, but as part of a "global effort."

Canada's liberal *Toronto Star
January 16, 2010

This product analyzes commentary from the Western Hemisphere January 14-22, 2010 reacting to the international relief effort in Haiti. Reports are selected by post for their relevance to U.S. policy and public diplomacy efforts. Prepared by the Office of Opinion Research, Media Reaction Division, rmrMail@state.gov; (202) 736-4330. Drafted by Andrew J. McLean and Julianne Paunescu.

The findings presented do not necessarily reflect the views of the U.S. Government.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769383 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin <[redacted]> B6
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 9:14 AM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: London

No problem

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sat Jan 23 08:59:27 2010
Subject: London

I have to find time to meet w Rasmussen while I'm there. Maybe 20 minutes but I will give him whatever time he wants.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 9:26 AM
To: H
Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

By John Tomasic 1/22/10 3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek and the Center for Public Integrity.

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

> The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:
>
> > One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.
> > And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.
>
> I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

> While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 9:30 AM
To: H
Subject: more...

Justice Ginsburg's questions in the Citizens United case to its attorneys focused on foreign owned corporations spending in US elections. Ted Olson, attorney for CU, told her he opposed congressional restrictions on such spending.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 10:14 AM
To: H
Subject: Honduras

I spoke with Arturo this morning about the delegation to Honduras.

B5

They are proposing one of two alternatives: (1) Arturo, Jose F, Craig, and Dan R. or

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 10:22 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Honduras

Roger.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 23 10:17:27 2010
Subject: Re: Honduras

I prefer (1) and they can all stay the next day for meetings if possible.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 10:14:04 2010
Subject: Honduras

I spoke with Arturo this morning about the delegation to Honduras. [redacted] B5

They are proposing one of two alternatives: (1) Arturo, Jose F, Craig, and Dan R. or [redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Huma Abedin <
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:27 AM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Napolitano

Yes ops is reaching out to her soon.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 24 09:56:19 2010
Subject: Napolitano

Am I scheduled to talk w her this morning?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 10:50 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: feedback on the internet speech

You must read this -- a Chinese blogger said that the Internet speech "was like a song to his heart."

---

From: Chollet, Derek H
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S; Muscatine, Lissa; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Ross, Alec J; Cohen, Jared A; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 23 06:23:11 2010
Subject: Fw: feedback on the internet speech

Pretty cool

---

From: Heather Hurlburt < > B6
To: Chollet, Derek H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 16:04:00 2010
Subject: feedback on the internet speech

Several NSN staff went to a CAP forum with some Chinese bloggers today, and came back emotionally overwhelmed by the bloggers' positive response to her speech. One of them apparently said the speech was like "a song to his heart" and my hard-bitten 20-something staffer said he almost cried when the guy said it. Nice work.

Heather Hurlburt
Executive Director
National Security Network

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 1:05 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Aceh Background
Attachments: Lessons from Aceh Multi Donor Trust Fund.docx

FYI: From one of the folks we hired who had been working with Pierre Louis:

Lessons from the Aceh and Nias Multi-Donor Trust Fund

1. The Government of Indonesia (GOI) responded to the Tsunami by issuing a series of government decrees, and immediately organized both overview and relief efforts to ensure a rational and coordinated response. The first task was to produce a Damage and Loss Assessment (DLA). The DLA was followed by a more detailed Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction (MPRR). The MPRR provided in-depth sector plans, spatial planning, the governance and supervision arrangements of finances with considerable attention to how to avoid or minimize corruption. The process behind the MPRR was consultative, with a wide range of local stakeholders and public offices being heard. The MPRR was presented on 26 March, only 3 months after the Tsunami.

2. The MPRR was to form the basis for a general three-stage strategy. The Relief phase was originally set to six months, but was then reduced to three: January- March 2005. The Rehabilitation phase is to run for about 21 months, through December 2006, and the Reconstruction phase from July 2006 through December 2009. The MPRR provides a well defined phasing of interventions.

3. The objectives for the Relief efforts were humanitarian relief: rescue; food and medicine; emergency infrastructure and temporary shelter; and burying the dead. The Rehabilitation phase is to restore services to minimum level: public services; economic facilities; banking and financial institutions; trauma treatments; secure land rights; law and order; and temporary shelter. Finally, Reconstruction is to rebuild the region: rebuilding the economy (production, trade and banking); the transportation, telecommunications, and social and cultural systems; improving institutional capacity; and housing.

4. The Government set up a ministerial-level agency to manage the MPRR program from Aceh itself, the Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias. The BRR was formally established end April 2005 and became operational early May. The World Bank Board on 30 March 2005 formally established the Multi-Donor Trust Fund (MDF) with a Steering Committee comprised of BRR, GOI, donors and civil society. Having a credible local coordinators was key to success.

5. The EC channels nearly 93% of its funds through the MDF, while only 2.5% of USD 400 million from the US goes to the MDF. While payments into the fund were slow, disbursements out of it were to begin with even slower. By October 2005, project agreements for about USD 200 million had been signed, but only USD 3 million had actually been disbursed. Disbursements picked up the pace thereafter. The delay was caused by two principal impediments: first, donors were quick to pledge funds, but getting all the exact written agreements in place took time. This points to the need for donors to be flexible regarding formal agreements, and accept simple, generic paragraphs that can contribute to speedy resolution of slightly differing phrasings and concerns. Second, the processing time for project approval and implementation was a concern. Since the MDF was to have funded projects on-budget, they had to be implemented by government institutions. This crated bottlenecks.

6. Smaller donors joined because they wished to support the reconstruction efforts in Aceh but do not have own capacity and often not strong views on how best to pursue this. They want the Bank to assume fiduciary responsibilities for the funds in a high-risk environment, and also to take a lead in ensuring that the funds go to prioritized activities. The MDF is thus seen a well-managed bank account with some paid-for administrative services. However, the all-inclusive Steering Committee made membership large and to some extent unwieldy, and forced it to discuss both policy and operational issues.

7. The Multi Donor Fund Secretariat has developed an Outreach Strategy that includes regular radio talk shows, field visits to meet and discuss with beneficiaries and communication through advertisements as well as a telephone hotline.

8. MDF received praise for engaging the Government of Indonesia (GOI) in policy dialogue. The MDF is thus an entry point for engaging on conditions for sustainability, relevance and impact.

9. Because the MDF does not accept strict ear marking of donor contributions – though it does allow for preference indications – it means that the funds are freely available for programming according to the criteria and priorities that the MDF agrees to. Given strong GOI participation, the MDF is seen as the most successful instrument for harmonization and coordination in an environment that has been criticized for a lack of coordination. The MDF's Mid Term Review conducted in 2008-2009 found that the MDF had made a positive contribution to harmonizing donor efforts and to increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of the reconstruction effort.

10. The MDF did not sufficiently engage the private sector and did not have a coherent job creation strategy. The MDF lacked executive rights, but GOI and BRR are credited with leveraging a decisive response.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 8:16 AM
To: Thessin, James H
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A; 'Alexandre, Carl'
Subject: Aceh Background

Jim

See below.

Meghann

B5

[redacted] B5

cdm

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:16 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: What is the deadline on Aceh Fund brief

From Jean-Louis on Aceh Multi Donor Trust Fund. It's interesting.

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto:[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:15 PM
To: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: What is the deadline on Aceh Fund brief

Meghann

Please see attached a few quick notes based largely on the Trust Fund's progress report and an independent evaluation commission by the World Bank, DFID, NORAd and others.

I spoke to Kathleen. I did have to cancel a piece for Canada's main evening news at CBC, which they plan to air on Sunday before the Montreal Summit. I understand that media appearances, especially if higher profile, can cause sensitivities.

Best wishes

Jean-Louis

Lessons from the Aceh and Nias Multi-Donor Trust Fund

11. The Government of Indonesia (GOI) responded to the Tsunami by issuing a series of government decrees, and immediately organized both overview and relief efforts to ensure a rational and coordinated response. The first task was to produce a Damage and Loss Assessment (DLA). The DLA was followed by a more detailed Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction (MPRR). The MPRR provided in-depth sector plans, spatial planning, the governance and supervision arrangements of finances with considerable attention to how to avoid or minimize corruption. The process behind the MPRR was consultative, with a wide range of local stakeholders and public offices being heard. The MPRR was presented on 26 March, only 3 months after the Tsunami.

12. The MPRR was to form the basis for a general three-stage strategy. The Relief phase was originally set to six months, but was then reduced to three: January- March 2005. The Rehabilitation phase is to run for about 21 months, through December 2006, and the Reconstruction phase from July 2006 through December 2009. The MPRR provides a well defined phasing of interventions.

13. The objectives for the Relief efforts were humanitarian relief: rescue; food and medicine; emergency infrastructure and temporary shelter; and burying the dead. The Rehabilitation phase is to restore services to minimum level: public services; economic facilities; banking and financial institutions; trauma treatments; secure land rights; law and order; and temporary shelter. Finally, Reconstruction is to rebuild the region: rebuilding the economy (production, trade and banking); the transportation, telecommunications, and social and cultural systems; improving institutional capacity; and housing.

14. The Government set up a ministerial-level agency to manage the MPRR program from Aceh itself, the Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias. The BRR was formally established end April 2005 and became operational early May. The World Bank Board on 30 March 2005 formally established the Multi-Donor Trust Fund (MDF) with a Steering Committee comprised of BRR, GOI, donors and civil society. Having a credible local coordinators was key to success.

15. The EC channels nearly 93% of its funds through the MDF, while only 2.5% of USD 400 million from the US goes to the MDF. While payments into the fund were slow, disbursements out of it were to begin with even slower. By October 2005, project agreements for about USD 200 million had been signed, but only USD 3 million had actually been disbursed. Disbursements picked up the pace thereafter. The delay was caused by two principal impediments: first, donors were quick to pledge funds, but getting all the exact written agreements in place took time. This points to the need for donors to be flexible regarding formal agreements, and accept simple, generic paragraphs that can contribute to speedy resolution of slightly differing phrasings and concerns. Second, the processing time for project approval and implementation was a concern. Since the MDF was to have funded projects on-budget, they had to be implemented by government institutions. This crated bottlenecks.

16. Smaller donors joined because they wished to support the reconstruction efforts in Aceh but do not have own capacity and often not strong views on how best to pursue this. They want the Bank to assume fiduciary responsibilities for the funds in a high-risk environment, and also to take a lead in ensuring that the funds go to prioritized activities. The MDF is thus seen a well-managed bank account with some paid-for administrative services. However, the all-inclusive Steering Committee made membership large and to some extent unwieldy, and forced it to discuss both policy and operational issues.

17. The Multi Donor Fund Secretariat has developed an Outreach Strategy that includes regular radio talk shows, field visits to meet and discuss with beneficiaries and communication through advertisements as well as a telephone hotline.

18. MDF received praise for engaging the Government of Indonesia (GOI) in policy dialogue. The MDF is thus an entry point for engaging on conditions for sustainability, relevance and impact.

19. Because the MDF does not accept strict ear marking of donor contributions – though it does allow for preference indications – it means that the funds are freely available for programming according to the criteria and priorities that the MDF agrees to. Given strong GOI participation, the MDF is seen as the most successful instrument for harmonization and coordination in an environment that has been criticized for a lack of coordination. The MDF's Mid Term Review conducted in 2008-2009 found that the MDF had made a positive contribution to harmonizing donor efforts and to increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of the reconstruction effort.

20. The MDF did not sufficiently engage the private sector and did not have a coherent job creation strategy. The MDF lacked executive rights, but GOI and BRR are credited with leveraging a decisive response.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769392 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Lessons from the Aceh and Nias Multi-Donor Trust Fund

1. The Government of Indonesia (GOI) responded to the Tsunami by issuing a series of government decrees, and immediately organized both overview and relief efforts to ensure a rational and coordinated response. The first task was to produce a Damage and Loss Assessment (DLA). The DLA was followed by a more detailed Master Plan for Rehabilitation and Reconstruction (MPRR). The MPRR provided in-depth sector plans, spatial planning, the governance and supervision arrangements of finances with considerable attention to how to avoid or minimize corruption. The process behind the MPRR was consultative, with a wide range of local stakeholders and public offices being heard. The MPRR was presented on 26 March, only 3 months after the Tsunami.

2. The MPRR was to form the basis for a general three-stage strategy. The Relief phase was originally set to six months, but was then reduced to three: January- March 2005. The Rehabilitation phase is to run for about 21 months, through December 2006, and the Reconstruction phase from July 2006 through December 2009. The MPRR provides a well defined phasing of interventions.

3. The objectives for the Relief efforts were humanitarian relief: rescue; food and medicine; emergency infrastructure and temporary shelter; and burying the dead. The Rehabilitation phase is to restore services to minimum level: public services; economic facilities; banking and financial institutions; trauma treatments; secure land rights; law and order; and temporary shelter. Finally, Reconstruction is to rebuild the region: rebuilding the economy (production, trade and banking); the transportation, telecommunications, and social and cultural systems; improving institutional capacity; and housing.

4. The Government set up a ministerial-level agency to manage the MPRR program from Aceh itself, the Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency for Aceh and Nias. The BRR was formally established end April 2005 and became operational early May. The World Bank Board on 30 March 2005 formally established the Multi-Donor Trust Fund (MDF) with a Steering Committee comprised of BRR, GOI, donors and civil society. Having a credible local coordinators was key to success.

5. The EC channels nearly 93% of its funds through the MDF, while only 2.5% of USD 400 million from the US goes to the MDF. While payments into the fund were slow, disbursements out of it were to begin with even slower. By October 2005, project agreements for about USD 200 million had been signed, but only USD 3 million had actually been disbursed. Disbursements picked up the pace thereafter. The delay was caused by two principal impediments: first, donors were quick to pledge funds, but getting all the exact written agreements in place took time. This points to the need for donors to be flexible regarding formal agreements, and accept simple, generic paragraphs that can contribute to speedy resolution of slightly differing phrasings and concerns. Second, the processing time for project approval and implementation was a concern. Since the MDF was to have funded projects on-budget, they had to be implemented by government institutions. This crated bottlenecks.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769392 Date: 08/31/2015

6. Smaller donors joined because they wished to support the reconstruction efforts in Aceh but do not have own capacity and often not strong views on how best to pursue this. They want the Bank to assume fiduciary responsibilities for the funds in a high-risk environment, and also to take a lead in ensuring that the funds go to prioritized activities. The MDF is thus seen a well-managed bank account with some paid-for administrative services. However, the all-inclusive Steering Committee made membership large and to some extent unwieldy, and forced it to discuss both policy and operational issues.

7. The Multi Donor Fund Secretariat has developed an Outreach Strategy that includes regular radio talk shows, field visits to meet and discuss with beneficiaries and communication through advertisements as well as a telephone hotline.

8. MDF received praise for engaging the Government of Indonesia (GOI) in policy dialogue. The MDF is thus an entry point for engaging on conditions for sustainability, relevance and impact.

9. Because the MDF does not accept strict ear marking of donor contributions – though it does allow for preference indications – it means that the funds are freely available for programming according to the criteria and priorities that the MDF agrees to. Given strong GOI participation, the MDF is seen as the most successful instrument for harmonization and coordination in an environment that has been criticized for a lack of coordination. The MDF's Mid Term Review conducted in 2008-2009 found that the MDF had made a positive contribution to harmonizing donor efforts and to increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of the reconstruction effort.

10. The MDF did not sufficiently engage the private sector and did not have a coherent job creation strategy. The MDF lacked executive rights, but GOI and BRR are credited with leveraging a decisive response.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is from Justice Stevens' dissent in the Citizens United case:

If taken seriously, our colleagues' assumption that the identity of a speaker has no relevance to the Government's ability to regulate political speech would lead to some remarkable conclusions. Such an assumption would have accorded the propaganda broadcasts to our troops by "Tokyo Rose" during World War II the same protection as speech by Allied commanders. More pertinently, it would appear to afford the same protection to multinational corporations controlled by foreigners as to individual Americans: To do otherwise, after all, could " 'enhance the relative voice' " of some ( i.e. , humans) over others ( i.e. , nonhumans). Ante , at 33 (quoting Buckley , 424 U. S., at 49). [51] Under the majority's view, I suppose it may be a First Amendment problem that corporations are not permitted to vote, given that voting is, among other things, a form of speech.

http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/html/08-205.ZX.html

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

B6

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%239217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging <http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/> is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/theqaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx> and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>.

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company – once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:09 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Getting a legislative fix might be a good initiative for SOTU. Let the Republicans try to oppose it. S

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%

2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging <http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/> is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx> and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>.

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

> One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company – once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:23 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

Me, too. He shouldn't retire
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sat, 23 Jan 2010 16:08:57
To: 'sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

B6

Good for him. I wish he were 50 instead 90!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:06:22 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is from Justice Stevens' dissent in the Citizens United case:

If taken seriously, our colleagues' assumption that the identity of a speaker has no relevance to the Government's ability to regulate political speech would lead to some remarkable conclusions. Such an assumption would have accorded the propaganda broadcasts to our troops by "Tokyo Rose" during World War II the same protection as speech by Allied commanders. More pertinently, it would appear to afford the same protection to multinational corporations controlled by foreigners as to individual Americans: To do otherwise, after all, could " 'enhance the relative voice' " of some ( i.e. , humans) over others ( i.e. , nonhumans). Ante , at 33 (quoting Buckley , 424 U. S., at 49). 51 <http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/html/08-205.ZX.html#51> Under the majority's view, I suppose it may be a First Amendment <http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct-cgi/get-const?amendment1> problem that corporations are not permitted to vote, given that voting is, among other things, a form of speech.

http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/html/08-205.ZX.html

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop [redacted] <sbwhoeop [redacted]> B6

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love

about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging <http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/> is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx> and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>

.

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:23 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

Some groups going for amendment but foreign corps may be low hanging fruit. Don't know, an idea to investigate Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sat, 23 Jan 2010 16:15:21
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]'<sbwhoeop[redacted]
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Not sure there is a legislative fix. Haven't read the opinion yet. May require constitutional amendment.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:08:34 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Getting a legislative fix might be a good initiative for SOTU. Let the Republicans try to oppose it. S

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]<sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love

about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging

<http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/> is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx>

and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:39 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a frontcompanybecomes a "person" under US law. S

You have people somewhere who can explore this Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sat, 23 Jan 2010 16:26:47
To: 'sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

Agreed.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:23:28 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

Some groups going for amendment but foreign corps may be low hanging fruit. Don't know, an idea to investigate Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sat, 23 Jan 2010 16:15:21
To: 'sbwhoeop '<sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Not sure there is a legislative fix. Haven't read the opinion yet. May require constitutional amendment.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:08:34 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Getting a legislative fix might be a good initiative for SOTU. Let the Republicans try to oppose it. S

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging <http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/> is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx> and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>

.

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 5:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a frontcompanybecomes a "person" under US law. S

See what harold koh says, just the foreign corp piece Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sat, 23 Jan 2010 16:26:47
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]'<sbwhoeop[redacted]
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

B6

Agreed.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:23:28 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

Some groups going for amendment but foreign corps may be low hanging fruit. Don't know, an idea to investigate Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sat, 23 Jan 2010 16:15:21
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]<sbwhoeop[redacted]
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Not sure there is a legislative fix. Haven't read the opinion yet. May require constitutional amendment.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:08:34 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Getting a legislative fix might be a good initiative for SOTU. Let the Republicans try to oppose it. S

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love

about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging <http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/> is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx> and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>

.

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 8:34 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: UN Haiti Operation

FYI

---

From: Schwartz, Eric P
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 6:15 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: UN Haiti Operation

Cheryl:

FYI. I understand that Susan Rice and the Secretary discussed UN Haiti operation. Susan subsequently asked me for my views on the organization of the UN tsunami operation, with a view toward enhancing the effectiveness of the current effort on Haiti. I have lots of thoughts – as the operation needs to be much, much stronger institutionally – which I will share with her on Monday.

Eric

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 10:46 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: update on Montana Hotel visit

FYI

---

From: Callaghan, Tim [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 9:30 PM
To: Harris, Elizabeth J; Lindwall, David E; Cantrell, Paul M; Callaghan, Tim (DCHA/OFDA/LAC); Rex, Gary L; Mayer, Paul O
Subject: Re: update on Montana Hotel visit

The family visit was Respectful and alowed the families to have some closure.

Very shortly after arriving at the site I believe the families understood the magnitude of the devastation at the Hote Montana and the reality of surviving such devastaion.

They thanked the Ambassador and Rescue teams, Consulate, etc who were Searching for their loved ones.

Given the sad situation - the families were greatful to speak with people who were searching for their children.

I am around tomorrow if you have any questions.

Tim
**********
Tim Callaghan
DART Team Leader

---

From: Harris, Elizabeth J <HarrisEJ@state.gov>
To: Lindwall, David E <LindwallDE@state.gov>; Cantrell, Paul M <CantrellP@state.gov>; Callaghan, Tim (DCHA/OFDA/LAC) [USAID]; Rex, Gary L <RexGL@state.gov>; Mayer, Paul O <MayerPO@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Jan 23 21:09:38 2010
Subject: update on Montana Hotel visit
State Ops is calling for an update on how the Lynn University/McGovern visit to the Hotel Montana went. Gary Rex is still at the airport with the group and my cell phone call is not going through. Can one of you please provide an urgent update to Ops at 202-647-1512?

Thank you,
Liz

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 10:48 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Lynn University

FYI
----- Original Message -----
From: Lindwall, David E
To: Kennedy, Patrick F
Sent: Sat Jan 23 21:30:45 2010
Subject: RE: Lynn University

Pat,
I heard it went well. They got to the Montana when there was still about a half hour of light. [redacted] B6
[redacted] American SAR personnel discussed each specific site within the Montana with the families and they could see the immense challenge of doing more than had already been done. [redacted] Recovery operations had already begun and seven bodies (if I remember the number correctly) were extracted this afternoon, including a number of Amcits. [redacted]
[redacted] Cheers, David

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

-----Original Message-----
From: Kennedy, Patrick F
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 8:53 PM
To: Lindwall, David E
Subject: Lynn University

David

Any feedback on atmospherics?

Regards

Pat

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:12 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Trust Fund

The trust fund

---

From: Schwartz, Eric P
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 7:26 PM
To: Curtis, Meghann A; Mills, Cheryl D; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: RE: Trust Fund

To all:

In response to the query to me from Meghann, below, here are some key issues that the Administration should consider regarding a trust fund:

B5

B5

Best,
Eric

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:37 PM
To: Drew, Elizabeth I; Schwartz, Eric P
Subject: Trust Fund

Eric, Elizabeth,

Attached is what I drafted for the Secretary. It is pretty straightforward; lifted more or less from their website. To the extent that you have editorial commentary, please send it our way. I'll be traveling with S on Monday for the Montreal conference and we expect the trust fund concept to be a big topic of conversation. S is very interested in using Aceh Fund as a model.

Meghann

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:26 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: From Paul Collier
Attachments: Final version of Dubai Report Fragile States[1].doc; Rethinking the Provision of Public Services in Post-1[1].doc

---

From: Curtis, Meghann A
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 2:31 PM
To: Brigety, Reuben; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: From Paul Collier

Have not had a chance to read yet but wanted to share asap. Paul and Jean-Louis are still working on scrubbing our strategy for adds and drops.

---

From: Paul Collier [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:57 AM
To: Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: modalities for Haiti

Meghann,

A couple of ideas.

1. To avoid a coordination nightmare, try to get a structure in which there is a single authority with some temporary power - e.g. a senior Haiti figure (ex-PM would be ideal) + Bill Clinton, as co-CEOs, supported by a council where you can put the key parties on so they dont feel excluded (e.g. EU which will otherwise sulk). It could start from the April Plan and the US Plan.

2. To scale up basic service provision without doing a total bypass of the state, I suggest the Public Service Agencies model that I have been working up for the OECD. Essentially, centralized funding of decentralized provision. Fortuitously, this has just been endorsed by the Davos Global Agenda Council for Fragile States and will be pitched as one of the key ideas at Davos. I attach the brief Davos write-up of the idea, and a fuller paper that I did recently for the OECD. Please circulate as you think fit.

If you need anything from me I will be happy to help. I will be in Davos late next week.

Paul

CSAE Department of Economics, Manor Rd Oxford OX13UQ
phone (44)1865-271084 gen; [redacted]
http://users.ox.ac.uk/~econpco

RELEASE IN FULL

[redacted]

Council Report – Issue Overview (page 1)

Council Name: GAC on Fragile States

States suffering fragility are those states where the national public authority is not providing the basic public goods that allow their societies to live in peace and improve their prospects for the future. These are states that do not provide (1) accountable and effective security and social protection; (2) predictable and enforced laws that are generally accepted as legitimate; (3) revenue collection and management of external aid to ensure the delivery of basic social and economic services to society; (4) mechanisms of accountability of state authorities to society.

These states are vulnerable to both internal and external shocks and thus their populations are likely to suffer the most from the vagaries of climate change and the impact of droughts and flooding, regional insecurity, and regional and international economic crises. They are marked by low food security, high crime rates and high youth unemployment and are susceptible to the mobilisation efforts of entrepreneurs of violence of all sorts. In all these respects they represent the weakest links in the global community.

The causes of state fragility are varied and historically and context specific, so action by the international community needs to be based on an understanding of the particularities of each fragile situation. While not all states marked by poverty and underdevelopment are fragile, almost all fragile states are poor and underdeveloped, so international action needs to be concerned with the reduction of poverty and the creation of wealth in these societies.

The past half century of experience underscores that reforming the institutions and organisations of the state in fragile states is a decadal, possibly even generational challenge. The international community must consider what needs to be done today or tomorrow to create the stability and breathing space that will allow these longer term efforts to take root and flourish

In recent years the international community has increasingly recognised that to ensure a prosperous and secure global community there is a need to increase foreign assistance to fragile states and to support processes of state-building. We follow the OECD in recognizing that state-building is "an endogenous process to enhance capacity, institutions and legitimacy of the state driven by state-society relations".

Important analytical work on understanding the conditions of fragility and the requirements of external assistance to state-building has been undertaken by the OECD, the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund and by individual bilateral development agencies. The Council wishes to build on these initiatives, avoid duplication and draw attention to areas that have not received enough attention.

Council Report – Summarized Proposal(s) (page 2)

Council Name: GAC on Fragile States

Innovating in Governance in fragile states: A New System of Mutual Responsibility in Delivering Basic Economic and Social Services

In fragile states, there is a challenge to meet the urgent needs of the population through the delivery of essential social and economic services, while building sustainable and accountable systems of public authority. Often states are heavily dependent on external resources to finance such services and the challenge is to put these to good use without undermining incentives to raise domestic revenue that can eventually replace external assistance. Donors in a hurry to see that funds are spent effectively often channel them outside state systems, which can undermine or pre-empt the consolidation of viable and accountable state organisations. At the same time, for understandable reasons, donors are cautious about budget support, where blank cheques are written to governments without assurances that accountability standards will be met.

The existing tools of development assistance, however appropriate for delivering aid to poor but stable and relatively well functioning states, are not adequate for confronting the conditions of state fragility:

- where people have a deep distrust of states
- where states are often weak and repressive
- where societies nonetheless have considerable resilience

The costs of donor mistakes in delivering aid are high everywhere, but in fragile states the costs can be catastrophic, leading to state collapse, violence and in the worst cases regional instability and war.

The existence of fragile states compels us to look for imaginative solutions.

An innovative approach will ensure:

- Mutual responsibility between donors and states in spending public resources
- Accountability to local communities in how public resources are spent
- Building upon existing local capacities and drawing on capacities at the regional and national levels
- Delivering resources in ways perceived as equitable and just
- Long term commitment by donors that matches the long term task of overcoming fragility

Objectives:

A New Aid Delivery Mechanism would:

1. Allow for domestic resources to be collected and donor moneys channelled according to a set of accountability mechanisms that would be transparently measured and reported upon; and
2. Key policies and services to be implemented through "National Programs" that would implement specific functions at the appropriate level of governance, through a system of implementation within state systems, thereby avoiding the creation of parallel organisations outside the state and instead contributing to developing state systems that can eventually replace external aid with domestic revenue;
3. Ensure that representative organisations in society have the opportunity and means to participate in, monitor and supervise the exercise of power and dispensation of public resources.

Means:

1. A set of Accountability Standards across the key state functions should be agreed, and the state required to report on and make transparent all revenues, procurement and licensing decisions, asset disposal and acquisition, budgets, expenditures, accounts and audits.
2. The integrity of spending would be guaranteed through a dual-oversight agency where responsibility is shared between state authorities and external funders. A range of instruments could be deployed, including IMF/ World Bank monitoring, trust funds that pool donor resources against these standards, and linking of use of the sovereign guarantee to a government's meeting those standards. GEMAP in Liberia provides one example.
3. A set of National Programs should be designed and launched through a partnership of government, civil society and international oversight, whereby the ministry provides the policy framework; the trust fund and / or domestic revenue provides the funding flow; monitoring and oversight by the civil service in partnership with international representatives; and implementation by the combination of communities, private sector, NGOs and civil service appropriate to the context and the available capacities. The National Solidarity Program and other national programs in Afghanistan provide examples of such mechanisms.

4. Establish regular reporting on activities to representative organisations however constituted through domestic political processes (inclusive of all regions and social groups).
5. A consortium of Private businesses could be established to link investment to meeting of Accountability standards.
6. As a country develops capacity to raise revenues to replace external aid the shared responsibility with donors can pass to shared responsibility between the state and its citizens (through parliamentary committees and the like), while states developed also shared responsibility in their regions.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769411 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Rethinking the Provision of Public Services in Post-Conflict States

Paul Collier

Centre for the Study of African Economies,

Department of Economics,

University of Oxford

September 2009

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769411 Date: 08/31/2015

Introduction

The provision of basic social services is inherently difficult. Considerations of equity demand that a minimum provision be available to all citizens regardless of ability to pay. But if provision is through non-market mechanisms how are resources to be allocated and what are the incentives for effort? There is no universally ideal organizational solution to these problems and approaches differ considerably between countries.

African governments inherited a common model of public service provision from colonial times. That model was rooted in how British and French governments were themselves providing public services during the 1950s. For the following half-century African governments struggled to make this model work. In many of them, and most particularly in those with the social stresses associated with being post-conflict, that model has proved to be inappropriate. It is high time to try delivery systems which are better suited to the local context.

The Inherited Model

The 1950s European model was for a government ministry to take responsibility for an entire service, such as health or education. Such ministries combined the potentially distinct functions of planning, resource allocation, on-the-ground service delivery, and evaluation. Further, they held a national monopoly over the provision of the service.

African governments tended to assume that this was the appropriate way for a developed society to deliver public services, so that it was the system to which they should aspire. In fact, in many respects this organizational approach was not an encompassing model for a developed society, but was rooted in its highly unusual time, namely the aftermath of the Second World War. One legacy of the war was a belief in planning. In wartime Britain national planning had been successful and it was now applied to the problem of service delivery. Delivering social services through centralized planning requires information: the war had taught the civil service how to gather and marshal it for military objectives and initially this worked well for service provision. Another legacy of the war was a strong sense of nationhood and public-spiritedness. This spirit resolved the problem of motivating public sector workers: they had internalized the norms of serving the society and so did not need either close monitoring or large financial incentives. The combination of information-guided central planning and a motivated workforce was highly cost-effective.

In ideal conditions the European model of the 1950s is by far the most cost-effective system. Both post-war Britain and modern Scandinavia met these conditions. Scandinavia combines a self-motivated public sector workforce with a comprehensive system of centralized social information. But these advantages are underpinned by an unusually homogenous population with a strong sense of national identity and a belief in social equity. In Britain, neither aspect of the system proved to be sustainable. Gradually, the helpful norms of public sector workers eroded. For example, after three decades British nurses abandoned their policy of not threatening to strike. As service delivery became more complex, it became more information-intensive and so less much more demanding for the command-and-control approach that had worked well for military objectives. As conditions became less suited to the 1950s model it became unwieldy. Ministries grew far beyond the size originally envisaged: for example, the National Health Service became the largest employer in Europe. In response, reliance upon self-motivation through internalized norms has gradually been replaced through ad hoc reforms by increasingly detailed targets combined with high levels of pay. The system of central planning has been partially replaced by resource allocation that is guided by simulated 'internal' markets.

Why the Inherited Model is often unsuited to Fragile States

Fragile states are far removed from the conditions in which the 1950s European model works well. Public sector employees have long ceased to internalize the norms of public-spiritedness. Further, social information is neither detailed nor up-to-date. Unfortunately, in the absence of these conditions the model works extremely badly. Most workers are not self-motivated to serve the public interest but the system lacks the means either to rebuild the norms of public service, or to motivate workers with financial incentives.

Prevailing norms of public service

In the fragile states the prevailing norms of public sector workers are radically different from those in Scandinavia. People are more heterogeneous and conflicted and so have a weaker sense of the national public interest. Shirking, as instanced by high rates of absenteeism, is common, as is minor corruption. Often the collapse in the norm of public service was due to the erosion in salaries. If public sector workers are not paid enough to live then they have no choice but to abuse their positions for personal gain. However, once the new norms of self-interest become established they become very difficult to change: the new pattern of behaviour is an equilibrium in which the conduct of each worker is rational given the expected conduct of other workers. Prevailing dysfunctional norms are thereby collectively self-reinforcing. For example, many public service jobs depend upon teams so that the return to individual effort depends upon that of others. Individually each worker is locked into prevailing norms unless there is a credible reason to believe that the norms of other workers have changed. Large and coordinated changes in norms of work among staff are very difficult for management to achieve. Simply reversing the salary decline is unlikely to restore the norms of public service. The more likely outcome is that what was a badly performing but low-cost delivery system is replaced by a badly performing but more expensive delivery system.

Dysfunctional norms are passed on between generations of public sector workers. By its nature public service tends to attract young people with a degree of idealism. For example, survey evidence from Ethiopia shows that newly trained nurses enter the profession with a strong sense of public spiritedness. However, once placed into clinics where the prevailing norm is self-interest over the next three years their initial public-spiritedness is replaced by the dysfunctional norms of their elders. Hence, the current model of service delivery is repeatedly destroying the asset of self-motivation in the young workforce.

Limited Alternatives to Self-Motivation

Even if workers have not internalized the norms of the organization, it may nevertheless be possible to motivate them to good performance by means of financial incentives. However, the 1950s European model is ill-suited to this approach. Being within the civil service, the range of financial rewards and penalties that can be deployed is extremely limited. Virtually everywhere civil servants have very strong job security so that the threat of dismissal is not credible. Demotion is very rare and constrained by cumbersome systems of appeal. Hence, the only scope for incentives is through rewards. Even here the civil service is heavily constrained by the need for perceived equity among staff and pay scales that are tied to seniority, age, and rank. In post-conflict conditions these generic problems of discretionary rewards and penalties for civil servants are further complicated by the history of conflict. In the contest for control of the state, public sector employment comes to be regarded not merely as an input into service delivery, but as a valued prize in itself. This leaves a legacy of pervasive suspicions that discretionary rewards reflect patronage and favour rather than performance. The post-conflict imperative of achieving perceived equity in public employment between rival political factions may make performance-related incentives infeasible.

Even where incentives are politically feasible, they can only be effective to the extent that they can be linked to observable aspects of performance. Yet in post-conflict conditions the information needed to assess performance on public service delivery is simply not being generated. This is partly due to the larger problems endemic to post-conflict situations such as broken local administrations. But it is also itself an instance of the incentive problem: if prevailing performance is generally poor, civil servants have an incentive not to collect timely evidence by which it could be measured. Yet the same information that would be needed to measure performance would also be needed for overall resource allocation through central planning to be effective. Starved of information, central planning is blind and an easy prey to crude political pressures.

The consequence for service delivery

The result is that the same system which in Scandinavia produces the best and most cost-effective social services on earth, in African post-conflict conditions produces the worst. Workers are motivated neither by internalized norms of public service, nor by financial incentives. Central planning without information inevitably grossly misallocates resources. As a result services are inevitably very bad.

Faced with a delivery system that is manifestly dysfunctional, donors starve it of finance. This produces the very bad, but very inexpensive systems that prevail in the public sector in fragile states. Without question, adequate social provision will require substantially more international funding than has been provided to date. However, the root of the problem is not the lack of funding, but the lack of a delivery system that could productively use enhanced funding.

Donor bypass of the state

Faced with the overwhelming case for responding to social needs, donors have usually resorted to bypassing the state, channelling finance through NGOs and the UN agencies. This has advantages and disadvantages.

Advantages of non-government provision

Unlike government provision, non-government provision is not a uniform model and there is considerable variation. Two different approaches can both achieve good organizational performance. One approach, typified by mission-run hospitals and schools, achieves good performance by maintaining a high level of organizational commitment on the part of its workers. Given the high intrinsic satisfaction from activities such as healing the sick and teaching children, and the highly visible needs in post-conflict societies, it is possible to create islands of self-motivation even where in the public sector norms of service have collapsed. The other approach, typified by some for-profit organizations, achieves good performance by solving the difficult problem of linking financial incentives to observable performance. In many aspects of service delivery individual performance is not readily observable and so effective monitoring is difficult. The two approaches are not easily combined and so tend to be alternatives. Norms of self-motivation, or working for the common good, thrive on trust and equity among staff. In contrast, the essence of addressing motivation by means of financial incentives is that trust is replaced by monitoring, and equity is replaced by income differences based on differential performance. Field evidence suggests that where strong financial incentives are introduced into service delivery organizations norms of service and worker cohesion are undermined.

According to the type of service, the local context, and the personal characteristics of managers, either approach can be more effective. However, while some non-government organizations solve the service delivery problem by one or other of the above approaches, others fail. Some rely upon trust but have unmotivated staff; others rely on financial incentives but monitor aspects of behaviour which are not sufficiently related to performance. Hence, donors cannot tell simply by observing the type of organization whether it is efficient. The implication is that by bypassing the state donors will sometimes be financing organizations that are considerably more efficient, but that there will be considerable variation.

Disadvantages of bypassing the state

The most obvious drawback of donors bypassing the state is that, while unsustainable, it does not lead to an exit strategy. The bypass of the state does not build state capacity and may further undermine it. Yet it is acknowledged that the complete bypass cannot itself be the long-term solution to service delivery. If the state is not involved in providing basic services to citizens it will be very difficult for it to establish a claim to legitimacy in the eyes of its citizens.

The total bypass has a further serious drawback which donors are less willing to recognize: the lack of coordination and continuity. The services funded by donors are usually localized and often specific to a particular aspect of service delivery. Given this approach there is no systematic scope for a nation-wide and sector-wide approach to resource allocation. Donor financing of any particular service provider is likely to be temporary. Field staff are typically rotated every three years and the priorities of individual donors change as ministers change. Given the natural human inclination to make a difference, this is a recipe for continuous turmoil.

However, the most serious drawback is the lack of accountability to the ordinary people who are the users of services. Generically, there are two mechanisms for such accountability: political and commercial. By definition, as a result of the donor bypass of the state, political accountability to users is not possible. The alternative of commercial accountability is dependent upon donor financing of service providing agencies being conditional upon their observed performance. However, other than for the most rudimentary aspects of performance, donors lack the monitoring capacity with which to hold agencies to account.

Public Service Authorities

An alternative to the 1950s model of the monopoly government ministry and the total bypass of the state is to unbundle the functions that in the 1950s model are all performed by a single ministry. Some of these functions are intrinsic to the responsibilities that a state should undertake. For other functions the state can achieve its objectives better by purchasing the function from other providers. Even in the most centralized and efficient of European states this approach is now standard: for example, in France both blood-testing and ambulance services are financed publicly but provided privately.

A Public Service Authority (PSA) is a design of public service delivery which may be particularly appropriate for post-conflict conditions. It need not be merely a temporary measure: it may evolve into a permanent organization much as Independent Revenue Authorities have become permanent in many fragile states. Although all PSAs have some core features in common, they can take many different forms. For example, at one extreme a single PSA could have a national mandate for many different types of service, while at the other, each district might have several PSAs, one for each type of service. Such choices should vary country-by-country, according to local capacity. Here I focus on the core principles of a PSA rather than on such choices.

A PSA is a public agency: it is an implementing agency of government but is independent of the civil service, analogous to central banks and revenue authorities. While it is an agency of government, its board of directors can include a minority of non-government appointees. In post-conflict conditions these should include the main donor agencies and key components of civil society. The primary purpose of such representation is to provide equal and unrestricted access to information on the decisions and performance of the PSA for government, donors and civil society. As a result, a PSA is structurally transparent.

The government ministries responsible for service provision have representation on the board of the PSA and set policy guidelines by which the PSA must operate. For example, they may set minimum standards of provision, and require the PSA to allocate resources so as to ensure geographic equity. Ministries will also continue to provide state services directly. Since in post-conflict conditions service provision is invariably inadequate, the PSA should constitute an expansion in provision not a change in the management of existing services. Over time, if the PSA-provided services proved to be better value that those directly provided by the ministries then it would be a matter for the government to decide whether to reorganize the directly provided services.

A PSA receives funds from donors and government for the purchase of services from primary providers. Since the PSA is an implementing agency of government, the money allocated to the PSA, including that from donors, appears in the government budget as an expenditure. Hence, donor funding of services through the PSA is somewhat analogous to ring-fenced budget support.

The PSA enters into contracts with primary service providing agencies but does not provide services directly. This avoids a conflict of interest and focuses the PSA exclusively on negotiating and monitoring the performance of the primary providers. These providers can be NGOs, local communities, local governments, or private for-profit organizations. Ideally, the PSA will experiment with multiple channels of provision for the same service to maximize the scope for variation in performance.

The PSA devotes most of its resources to monitoring performance and comparing it. The evidence on comparative performance is provided to the board of the PSA on a regular basis. The board uses this information to reallocate resources from less-efficient providers to more-efficient providers.

The PSA can also experiment with distributing vouchers to households rather than money to service providers. This reduces the need for monitoring of performance but introduces other problems. To take a trivial example, in health care the prescription of glucose will produce a short-term improvement in the patient without addressing the causes of the illness. Users can easily misinterpret this effect as indicating that they need repeated treatment rather than different treatment. Hence, in the absence of good ethical standards among practitioners in this instance vouchers could be dysfunctional. More generally, the balance of whether service providers are more effectively monitored by professions or by users will vary according to type of service and local context and is best determined by experiment.

Why a PSA should improve service delivery

A PSA is a design that is based on modern economic principles and the evidence from fieldwork (see Bold, Collier and Zeitlin (2009) for a discussion of how a PSA fits with theory and evidence). This does not guarantee that it is appropriate, but there are clear reasons to expect it to work considerably better than either the 1950s model or the donor bypass.

Variation, competition and selection

A PSA builds in variation in approaches to service delivery: different providers will be attempting to solve the problem worker motivation in different ways. Since the core function of the PSA is to evaluate these different approaches it enables gradual improvement in overall efficiency. The increase in efficiency comes about through two different mechanisms.

The most obvious is through the awareness of competition acting as a disciplining device on providers. Through this mechanism, the performance of the typical service provider might be expected to improve. However, this is probably not the most important.

The more important mechanism is that resources can gradually be reallocated from inefficient providers to efficient providers. Since the variation in efficiency between different providers is likely to be considerable, simply by reallocating money between them the PSA can raise the efficiency of the average dollar spent on service provision. Note that this does not depend upon any improvement in efficiency in each organization.

Branding

Unlike the donor bypass of the state, with a PSA donor money is routed through a state organization. A condition of for a non-government service provider receiving money from the PSA should be that the services delivered are co-branded by government. While the visibility of donor operations is reduced, that of government is increased. Ordinary citizens are able to see that the government is doing something that is beneficial.

Scaling up because of donor confidence

By design, the PSA generates information on the performance of the organizations that it funds, and hence on its own performance. Since donors are represented on the management board of the PSA they have full access to this information. Transparency of information for donors is crucial in post-conflict conditions to enable donors to scale up financing beyond the immediate post-conflict period. During the first few years donors give governments are the benefit of the doubt, but this rapidly erodes. In its place governments need rapidly to build donor confidence. This cannot be done either by declarations or by comprehensive improvements in governance. Declarations of good practice can be made equally well by those governments that have no intention of adhering to them and so, despite a deceptively courteous reception, cut no ice with donors. Comprehensive improvements in governance simply take too long to achieve to stave of reductions in donor funding. A PSA provides a quick institutional solution to the problem of building credibility with donors: transparency and design substitute for the lack of trust. As quantitative evidence of performance builds up, the local offices of donor agencies are in a much stronger position to press their headquarters for a larger share of the budget.

Centralized resource allocation

The PSA retains the key benefit of central planning: resource allocation can be coordinated rather than being simply the aggregation of individual donor decisions. Further, since the PSA is designed to generate information, the precondition for central planning to be effective is met. However, while overall resource allocation is centrally determined, the incentive problem is not micro-managed. The PSA does not attempt to motivate or monitor the workers who deliver services. That task is decentralized to individual service providers to solve as best they can. The PSA faces the less daunting task of monitoring the overall performance of each delivery organization.

Motivating the PSA

The Board of the PSA faces the task of motivating the staff of the PSA. Why might this be any easier than the task of motivating civil servants in the service delivery ministries? In part it is easier because, being a new organization outside the civil service the PSA can start with higher pay structures that are credibly linked to rewards and penalties. Recruits have some reason to expect that the behaviour of their colleagues will not be the same as civil service behaviour. Perhaps more importantly, the remit of the PSA is more narrowly defined than the remit of a ministry. It is not trying to do everything from policy design to on-the-ground delivery of services. It is allocating money between providers and evaluating their performance. Finally, it is subject to day-to-day scrutiny by donors and civil society who as members of the management board receive a continuous flow of information about the performance of managers.

How can a PSA be established?

A PSA does not need to start with a 'big bang'. It can start small, with one or two donors cooperating with a particular government ministry to finance an expansion in the delivery of a particular service. It should be viewed as an experiment in the architecture of public service delivery. As an experiment it should be evaluated, but, by design, such evaluation is automatic. If it succeeds it can be scaled up virtually without limit. Ultimately, the government might decide that the PSA, or a series of PSAs, is the most cost-effective and politically effective way of delivering services for the society. If it fails then it can readily be closed: donors are used to running projects which terminate. Nor is failure likely to have high costs. Unfortunately, in there is currently no successful model of large scale service delivery in post-conflict conditions, so that the opportunity cost of failure is likely to be modest.

Conclusion

Post-conflict societies have been attempting to deliver basic services using an inherited colonial model that has little prospect of success in the context of their own societies. Given the acute needs of their citizens, it is high time for governments to experiment with other designs. The key desiderata are that a new system should be capable of being rapidly scaled up, while leading to something that is politically sustainable. A PSA is not as good as the 1950s model when that model is deployed in ideal conditions. However, based on theory and evidence, it is likely to be more successful than the centralized ministerial approach in the conditions that actually prevail in post-conflict societies. Given the enormous attention that post-conflict societies and other fragile states are now rightly receiving, there is a strong case for experimenting with the PSA design on a pilot basis.

Reference:

Tessa Bold, Paul Collier, and Andrew Zeitlin, 2009, Public Service Authorities, Centre for the Study of African Economies, Oxford.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:41 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

See traffic at bottom which Bob Maquire (Haiti expert) sent to Leslie Voltaire (Haiti's rep to WJC Envoy office and UN) who also forwarded to PM Bellerive.

[redacted] B5

cdm

---

From: remaguire [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:23 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

Cheryl - See below the response of Leslie Voltaire and PM Jean Max Bellerive to talking points for tomorrow's Montreal meeting I proposed yesterday. Talking points at the end. Response positive. I have also shared these with Paul Farmer. Same response. Sources at the UN fear, however, that the donors will focus on PAP and miss this historic opportunity. - Bob
(email sent also to Patrick G.)

----- Message transféré ----
De : Jean Max Bellerive <[redacted]
À : Leslie Voltaire [redacted]
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 19 h 33 min 51 s
Objet : Re: Montreal - talking points - urgent

Thanks ! En ligne avec ce que je pense dire [TRANLATION – IN LINE WITH WHAT I AM THINKING OF SAYING]

JMB

---

From: Leslie Voltaire <[redacted]>
To: Jean-Max Bellerive <[redacted]>
Sent: Sat, January 23, 2010 10:23:24 PM
Subject: Montreal - talking points - urgent

PM
Reflexions de Bob Maguire
Leslie

----- Message transféré ----
De : "remaguire[redacted] B6
À : lvoltaire[redacted]
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 13 h 22 min 27 s
Objet : Montreal - talking points - urgent

Leslie - First, thank god you were in NYC on Jan 12th. I hope your personal losses were minimal. Surely, Haiti has lost much. We all have...

Thoughts for Montreal:

1. This offers an opportunity to 'rebalance' Haiti.
2. Pay attention to the exodus from PAP and catch up with it. (The migration to PAP over the past 30 years was an unnatural development, spurred by rural neglect and urban concentration.)
3. A decentralized system of 'welcome centers' in town and villages can assist returnees re-integrate. Medical and continuing education services should be a part of them. NEED TO ACT NOW.
4. More important, the centers must be equipped to provide work - make them the basis for organizing the civic service corps. Higly decentralized: work for cash; public works/environmental restoration/food production; restoration of human dignity; rural-urban partnerships through work;e in Haiti's real future. Also a chance to begin repairing the social fabric. Will need a 'tough love' approach; disciplined management. Not the work for NGOs.
5. No investment in rural areas and no response to this opportunity will = back to the future re. crowded PAP. People will trickle back to the city to replicate past problems.
6. The damage was done before the earthquake by development/investment policies that ignored the rural areas; saw Haitians simply as sources of cheap labor; denigrated human dignity; failed to strengthen local institutions.
7. This must stop; can't happen again.
8. This is the time to move forward with the Civic Service Corps - quickly.

kenbe. Pa lage. - Bob

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:26 AM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Napolitano

I don't believe so but Huma would have a better update than I would.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(202) 647-9071 (direct)

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Huma Abedin [redacted] Valmoro, Lona J B6
Sent: Sun Jan 24 09:56:19 2010
Subject: Napolitano

Am I scheduled to talk w her this morning?

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:21 AM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Yang

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Huma Abedin <
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jan 24 10:49:17 2010
Subject: Re: Yang

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 10:46:07 2010
Subject: Yang

Jake said he spoke to you about making yang call. U willing to do tonite? Tomorrow morning?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:25 AM
To: H
Subject: On the Ground Intelligence

Ruh-roh

---

From: remaguire [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:42 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

General and specific concerns: Specifically heard from Haiti is that Preval has acceded too much authority to the Vorbe family.

Second, more general, is that the BAMBAM families (the term, I understand, created from the initials of the 6 leading elite families) are gearing up to inflate costs of doing things and to try to monopolize to the extent they can. Will forward in a separate email one or two articles I've seen on this.

I'm off to Trinity to prepare my classes for this week. (A reality of my full-time teaching load). While check email later. Thanks for this opportunity to share thoughts. Am very anxious to do this.

Can't miss the NFC game, even though the Eagles (I'm from Philly) already collapsed. I also lived in S.W. Louisiana during the N.O. "Aints" years.

Best - Bob

On Jn 24, 2010, Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> You and our secretary share similar concerns about making sure Haiti's future is decided by Haiti.
>
> When we met with PM and P, they both indicated they wanted US to play a large coordination role on their behalf to ensure their voice, plans and goals were accomplished. We are committed to doing that as they requested.
>
> I do think fast will mean some will make money they shouldn't – but goal is to have balance so we move with enough alacrity to build confidence that things are getting done.
>
> Who are the Haiti "operator" types of which this concern is being spoken?

B6

From: remaguire
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:44 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

I hope the GOH has back-up to hold firm to its positions. Some will want to push it around. Also, while urgent need for tent cities clear PAP is clear, definitely not part of solution. Fearful of potential permanance of them unless alternates for rural resettlement along lines of talking points exist.

Am hearing that lots of concern that Haiti's "operators" are licking their chops to make lots of money off this. Fact of life or need to expand circle of actors?

Hang in there. - Bob

On Jan 24, 2010, Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> Great – right in line with our thinking so this is great.
>
> Thanks for forwarding – anything else of note?
>
> cdm

---

From: remaguire
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:23 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

Cheryl - See below the response of Leslie Voltaire and PM Jean Max Bellerive to talking points for tomorrow's Montreal meeting I proposed yesterday. Talking points at the end. Response positive. I have also shared these with Paul Farmer. Same response. Sources at the UN fear, however, that the donors will focus on PAP and miss this historic opportunity. - Bob
(email sent also to Patrick G.)

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Leslie Voltaire
Date: Jan 23, 2010
Subject: Tr : Montreal - talking points - urgent
To: remaguire

Komisyon pa chaj

Leslie

----- Message transféré ----
De : Jean Max Bellerive
À : Leslie Voltaire
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 19 h 33 min 51 s
Objet : Re: Montreal - talking points - urgent

B6

Thanks ! En ligne avec ce que je pense dire

JMB

---

From: Leslie Voltaire
To: Jean-Max Bellerive
Sent: Sat, January 23, 2010 10:23:24 PM
Subject: Montreal - talking points - urgent

PM

Reflexions de Bob Maguire

Leslie

----- Message transféré ----
De : "remaguire
À : lvoltaire
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 13 h 22 min 27 s
Objet : Montreal - talking points - urgent

Leslie - First, thank god you were in NYC on Jan 12th. I hope your personal losses were minimal. Surely, Haiti has lost much. We all have...

Thoughts for Montreal:

1. This offers an opportunity to 'rebalance' Haiti.
2. Pay attention to the exodus from PAP and catch up with it. (The migration to PAP over the past 30 years was an unnatural development, spurred by rural neglect and urban concentration.)
3. A decentralized system of 'welcome centers' in town and villages can assist returnees re-integrate. Medical and continuing education services should be a part of them. NEED TO ACT NOW.
4. More important, the centers must be equipped to provide work - make them the basis for organizing the civic service corps. Higly decentralized: work for cash; public works/environmental restoration/food production; restoration of human dignity; rural-urban partnerships through work;e in Haiti's real future. Also a chance to begin repairing the social fabric. Will need a 'tough love' approach; disciplined management. Not the work for NGOs.

5. No investment in rural areas and no response to this opportunity will = back to the future re. crowded PAP. People will trickle back to the city to replicate past problems.
6. The damage was done before the earthquake by development/investment policies that ignored the rural areas; saw Haitians simply as sources of cheap labor; denigrated human dignity; failed to strengthen local institutions.
7. This must stop; can't happen again.
8. This is the time to move forward with the Civic Service Corps - quickly.

kenbe. Pa lage. - Bob

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:39 AM
To: H
Subject: Multi-Donor Trust Fund Background Memo
Attachments: FINAL MDF IM for the Secretary.docx

This document in text below is coming up the line to you as material for your trip. This is separate (but related) to what we discussed earlier today. This focuses on the MDTF, using the tsunami model as a guide.

I also have tasked Jean-Louis to put together a think piece for this evening that we can look at re: the larger issue of ensuring efficient, effective coordination of: bi-lateral donors investment, MDTF, and private fund/NGO efforts that all must come together in a coherent fashion. Of not in this memo is fact that in tsunami, there was a GOI reconstruction plan

B5

See below on the Mult-Donor Trust Fund

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED January 24, 2010

INFORMATION MEMO FOR THE SECRETARY

From: C – Cheryl Mills
Re: Creation of a Multidonor Reconstruction Fund (MDF) for Haiti

This memo provides a summary of key issues related to the creation of a multidonor reconstruction fund for Haiti (MDF), incorporating lessons learned from reconstruction efforts following the 2004 tsunami.

B5

B5

Lessons from Aceh:

- MDFs encourage greater donor participation: Smaller donors joined the Aceh fund because they wished to support reconstruction efforts but lacked independent capacity and often did not have strong views on how to pursue reconstruction. They wanted the Bank to assume fiduciary responsibilities for the funds in a high-risk environment, and also to take a lead in ensuring that the funds go to prioritized activities.

- Develop an outreach strategy: The Aceh MDF Secretariat developed an Outreach Strategy that includes regular radio talk shows, field visits to meet and discuss with beneficiaries, and communication through advertisements as well as a telephone hotline.

- Engage the government in dialogue: The Aceh MDF received praise for engaging the GoI in policy dialogue. The MDF was an entry point for engaging on conditions for sustainability, relevance and impact.

- Appointment on Envoy: The appointment of a high-profile UN Special Envoy (former President Clinton) increased the availability of funding and willingness of international agencies to try new approaches. It also could provide one forum for coordination among donors, if the Envoy's office is adequately supported.

- Disaster prevention: The tsunami underscored the critical role of disaster prevention in "building back better." It is difficult to overemphasize the importance of embedding risk reduction into recovery, especially in Haiti, where natural disasters have caused enormous human suffering.

- Coordinate proliferating aid agencies: Large numbers of both public and private aid agencies are likely be active in Haiti for some time. It is important to develop effective coordinating mechanisms and work to ensure that agencies bring actual expertise to the country, reduce turnover of international staff, and seek staff with appropriate language skills.

- Authoritative Assessment: Authoritative joint assessments involving the UN, the Red Cross, and national governments could have a beneficial impact on the decision making process and ensure broad buy-in.

Drafted:

Peter Harrell, S/P – x. 7-0724; [redacted] (cell) B6
Ted Andrews, S/P

Cleared:

WHA – Julissa Reynoso (ok)
PRM – Eric Schwartz (ok)
L – Harold Koh (ok)

---

From: Harrell, Peter E
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:53 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A; Reynoso, Julissa
Subject: RE: Urgent: Revised IM on MDFs

Cheryl,

Do you want to take a last look at this final version before I send it on for inclusion in S's book?

Peter

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:40 AM
To: Harrell, Peter E
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A; Schwartz, Eric P
Subject: RE: Urgent: Revised IM on MDFs

Great - thanks

---

From: Harrell, Peter E
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:30 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Curtis, Meghann A; Schwartz, Eric P
Subject: RE: Urgent: Revised IM on MDFs

I am proofreading now and hope to have final w/in about 20 minutes.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:21 AM
To: Schwartz, Eric P; Harrell, Peter E
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Urgent: Revised IM on MDFs

This is looking good.

Can you also catch the typos in it.

What is timeline for a final draft?

cdm

---

From: Schwartz, Eric P
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:06 AM
To: Harrell, Peter E; Reynoso, Julissa; Brigety, Reuben; Curtis, Meghann A; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Mills, Cheryl D; Andrews, Theodore H; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Koh, Harold Hongju; Eichensehr, Kristen E; Townley, Stephen G
Cc: Nagy, Eleanor
Subject: RE: Urgent: Revised IM on MDFs

Peter:
With edits in track changes. Most are self-explanatory, but call if you have questions – I'm in the office.
I've also made two marginal comments that you should consider.
Best,
Eric

---

From: Harrell, Peter E
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 8:33 PM
To: Reynoso, Julissa; Brigety, Reuben; Schwartz, Eric P; Curtis, Meghann A; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Mills, Cheryl D; Andrews, Theodore H; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Koh, Harold Hongju; Eichensehr, Kristen E; Townley, Stephen G
Subject: Urgent: Revised IM on MDFs

Eric,

I have revised the IM per your extremely helpful comments--I am hardly the expert on these issues, but I am the body available to draft today... Please take a look at these revisions.

[redacted] B5

Peter Harrell
S/P

---

From: Peter Harrell <[redacted]> B6
To: Harrell, Peter E
Sent: Sat Jan 23 20:25:15 2010
Subject: Revised IM on MDFs

--
Peter E. Harrell
[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5, B6

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED January 24, 2010

INFORMATION MEMO FOR THE SECRETARY

From: C – Cheryl Mills
Re: Creation of a Multidonor Reconstruction Fund (MDF) for Haiti

This memo provides a summary of key issues related to the creation of a multidonor reconstruction fund for Haiti (MDF), incorporating lessons learned from reconstruction efforts following the 2004 tsunami.

B5

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

B5

B5

Lessons from Aceh:

- MDFs encourage greater donor participation: Smaller donors joined the Aceh fund because they wished to support reconstruction efforts but lacked independent capacity and often did not have strong views on how to pursue reconstruction. They wanted the Bank to assume fiduciary responsibilities for the funds in a high-risk environment, and also to take a lead in ensuring that the funds go to prioritized activities.

- Develop an outreach strategy: The Aceh MDF Secretariat developed an Outreach Strategy that includes regular radio talk shows, field visits to meet and discuss with beneficiaries, and communication through advertisements as well as a telephone hotline.

- Engage the government in dialogue: The Aceh MDF received praise for engaging the GoI in policy dialogue. The MDF was an entry point for engaging on conditions for sustainability, relevance and impact.

- Appointment on Envoy: The appointment of a high-profile UN Special Envoy (former President Clinton) increased the availability of funding and willingness of international agencies to try new approaches. It also could provide one forum for coordination among donors, if the Envoy's office is adequately supported.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769420 Date: 08/31/2015

- Disaster prevention: The tsunami underscored the critical role of disaster prevention in "building back better." It is difficult to overemphasize the importance of embedding risk reduction into recovery, especially in Haiti, where natural disasters have caused enormous human suffering.

- Coordinate proliferating aid agencies: Large numbers of both public and private aid agencies are likely be active in Haiti for some time. It is important to develop effective coordinating mechanisms and work to ensure that agencies bring actual expertise to the country, reduce turnover of international staff, and seek staff with appropriate language skills.

- Authoritative Assessment: Authoritative joint assessments involving the UN, the Red Cross, and national governments could have a beneficial impact on the decision making process and ensure broad buy-in.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769420 Date: 08/31/2015

Drafted:

Peter Harrell, S/P – x. 7-0724; [redacted] (cell) B6
Ted Andrews, S/P

Cleared:

WHA – Julissa Reynoso (ok)
PRM – Eric Schwartz (ok)
L – Harold Koh (ok)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:43 AM
To: H
Subject: Setting up holbrooke first, and then Eugenie.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:46 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Public Afghanistan Strategy

fyi

---

From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:27 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Jones, Paul W
Subject: Re: Public Afghanistan Strategy

[redacted] A separate section on women was never created. [redacted]

B5

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Jones, Paul W
Sent: Sun Jan 24 08:58:55 2010
Subject: Public Afghanistan Strategy

Barbara Boxer apparently sent a letter to saying there is nothing about women in the Afghan strategy. There is nothing in the table of contents.

Is this accurate? Seems odd given that I know that AMS had flagged this and I b/l Jake you had.

Can you advise.

cdm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:47 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Setting up holbrooke first, and then Eugenie.

Yes it is eikenberry, my automatic spell check make it eugenie!

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Jan 24 11:43:24 2010
Subject: Re: Setting up holbrooke first, and then Eugenie.

Who? I thought Eikenberry.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 11:42:34 2010
Subject: Setting up holbrooke first, and then Eugenie.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:56 AM
To: H
Cc: Doug Band; Justin Cooper
Subject: FW: Thoughts on Haiti
Attachments: Beyond the Earthquake.doc

HRC/WJC: Read below - worth the read

-----Original Message-----
From: Robert Maguire [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:57 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Thoughts on Haiti

Cheryl - This essay from Haitian-American scholar (and friend) Alex Dupuy has been publiished on Alterpresse today. It is a good summation of concerns and prospects. - Bob

---

Beyond the Earthquake:
A Wake-Up Call for Haiti

Alex Dupuy
Department of Sociology
Wesleyan University
Middletown, CT 06457

Long before the powerful 7.0 magnitude earthquake (and several aftershocks) struck Haiti on January 12 and leveled the metropolitan capital city of Port-au-Prince and surrounding areas, that city was already a disaster waiting to happen. With a population of more than 2 million in a city whose infrastructure could at best sustain a population of 100,000, the local and national public administrations simply abandoned the city to itself. Neither provided meaningful services of any kind-schools, healthcare, electricity, potable water, sanitation, zoning and construction regulations-and what they did provide was poorly administered, or primarily served the needs of the wealthier or better off sectors of the population who could afford to pay for them. Consider, for example, that only about 28 percent of Haitians have access to health care, 50 percent have access to potable water, and 10 percent have electrical services. In short, the Haitian state-i.e., the government-long ago abdicated its responsibilities to the majority of Haitian citizens, and at least since the Duvalier era, deferred to bilateral and multilateral aid donors, non-governmental agencies (NGOs) to provide services to the population. More NGOs per capita operate in Haiti than in any other country in the world, and they provide 70 percent of healthcare in rural areas and 80 percent of public services. This, in turn, has led to an extreme laissez aller and the near total privatization of all basic services. Except for a brief seven month attempt in 1991 that ended in a bloody coup d'état against the democratically elected government of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the turn to democratic governance has not changed that basic reality. It is therefore no accident that while the earthquake caused death and destruction among all social classes, the high death toll-estimates run from as low as 10,000 to a high of 200,000 so far, which means no one really knows-is also a direct consequence of the poor infrastructure, inferior housing construction, and the long-standing disregard for the basic needs and rights of the population.

What's more, geologists had warned the government of the probability of a seismic eruption for years, but as with previous massive destructions and loss of lives caused by hurricanes and tropical storms, the government took no measures to prepare for that possibility. It comes as no surprise, then, that the Haitian people have to rely entirely on the international community to come to its rescue. This would have been the case even if the symbols of government authority-the National Palace, the Parliament, the headquarters of the National Police, and other ministries-had not been destroyed for the simple reason that the capacity of the Haitian state to respond to a crisis of this magnitude-or even to less severe ones-is non existent due primarily to shortsighted practices and policies-political, economic, and social-that prioritized the interests of the few-the 4 percent of the population who hold 66 percent of total assets and the 1 percent who appropriate 55 percent of the national income-at the expense of the 75 percent of the population who live on less than $2/day and the more than half who live on less than $1/day.

There is no doubt that the dominant economic and political classes of Haiti bear great responsibility for the abysmal conditions in the country that exacerbated the impact of the earthquake (or of hurricanes or tropical storms). However, these local actors did not create these conditions alone but did so in close partnership with foreign governments and economic actors with long-standing interests in Haiti, principally those of the advanced countries-the United States, Canada, and France-and their international financial institutions (IFIs)-the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the Inter-American Development Bank. Since the 1970s and under various free market mantras, these international actors and institutions sought to and succeeded in transforming Haiti into a supplier of the cheapest labor in this hemisphere for foreign and domestic investors in the export assembly industry; in dismantling all obstacles to free trade; in privatizing public enterprises; and in weakening further the institutions of the state through policies that reinforced Haiti's dependence on foreign aid organizations-governmental and non-governmental.

These policies had drastic consequences for the Haitian economy. Locating the assembly industries primarily in Port-au-Prince encouraged migration from the rural areas to the capital city, contributed to its bloated population and sprawling squalor, and provided a never ending supply of cheap labor for those industries. At the same time, removing tariffs on food imports were detrimental to Haitian agriculture. Whereas in the 1970s Haiti produced most of the rice it consumed and imported only 10 percent of its food needs, by the end of the 1990s it was importing more than 42 percent of its food needs, had become the highest per capita consumer of subsidized US imported rice in the Western Hemisphere, and the largest importer of foodstuffs from the US in the Caribbean. Thus, US farmers benefitted at the expense of Haitian producers. These policies, too, propelled rural-to-urban migration, with Port-au-Prince as the primary destination, as well as emigration to the neighboring Dominican Republic, the Caribbean, and North America. Haiti is becoming increasingly dependent on remittances from its immigrants, which now represent 35 percent of Haiti's GDP.

What, then, is to be done? The response of the international community-from governments, the UN, and NGOs around the world-for medical treatment, food, water, temporary shelter, and road and communication repairs-has been immediate and massive, but will need to be sustained for a longer time span if it is to help Haiti recover economically in the short and medium term. Pressure is also mounting on bilateral and multilateral aid donors to cancel Haiti's debt of some $1.15 billion.

But to be effective and long lasting, future aid must be unconditional and be given more in the form of grants than loans. To that end, the Haitian people need to rethink how the country relates to the international community, in particular the major powers and the IFIs. Basically, I would argue, Haiti needs to break with the policies advocated by the major powers and IFIs that have proved disastrous for the Haitian economy. These policies are predicated on the belief that Haiti can develop only if it remains open to the world market, relies on its comparative advantage of low-cost labor to attract foreign investments in the export assembly industry, and prioritizes the production of selected agricultural goods, such as mangoes, for export. Despite the failure of these policies to generate sustainable development, reduce unemployment and improve the standard of living of the majority of Haitians, the major powers and IFIs continue to advocate them as the solution to Haiti's chronic underdevelopment and poverty. This is shown, for example, by the report written by former World Bank economist Paul Collier for UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon in 2008, and the latter's appointment of former US President Bill Clinton to spearhead that strategy in Haiti. Ignoring the evidence of the last 38 years, Collier's report calls for establishing a cluster of free trade zones for garment production beyond the two that currently exist in Port-au-Prince and Ouanaminthe, and creating such zones for the production and export of mangoes.

It is time for the Haitian people to mobilize as they did in 1990 to change the status quo, but this time by learning from the mistakes of the past and avoiding placing their faith in false prophets. As it did in 1990, an agenda for change would need to include the following:

1. Reject all the different versions of the structural adjustment policies of the IFIs that require that Haiti remove tariffs on food and other imports, privatize public enterprises, exempt foreign investors from taxes on their profits in the assembly industries, and curb social spending. Haiti could instead negotiate bilateral or multilateral agreements with those countries that are willing to provide aid without tying them to the implementation of specific economic or social policies.

2. Launch an immediate large-scale and national public works project to rebuild or expand Haiti's infrastructure, communication, transportation, public schools, public health facilities, and public housing. Here, too, Haiti could rely on bilateral or multilateral agreements to sustain this effort beyond the immediate post-crisis reconstruction now underway with foreign assistance that will focus primarily on the quake-ravaged areas.

3. Prioritize Haiti's food security and sovereignty by launching an agrarian reform, and subsidizing production for the local market as well as for export.

4. Promote the development of local and national agro-industries that use domestic inputs to produce consumer and durable goods; and support the national handicraft industry and promote its expansion on the international market.

5. Protect workers' rights, such as the right to form trade unions and the right to strike, and provide a living wage to all workers, especially in the export assembly industries.

It is obvious that these goals cannot be implemented all at once or immediately. But they must serve as the basis for a large scale popular mobilization to hold the elected representatives of the people to account and to renegotiate Haiti's relations with the international community.

Alex Dupuy is the Class of 1958 Distinguished Professor of Sociology at Wesleyan University. His most recent book is The Prophet and Power: Jean-Berttrand Aristide, the International Community, and Haiti (2007).

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769426 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Beyond the Earthquake: A Wake-Up Call for Haiti

Alex Dupuy
Department of Sociology
Wesleyan University
Middletown, CT 06457

Long before the powerful 7.0 magnitude earthquake (and several aftershocks) struck Haiti on January 12 and leveled the metropolitan capital city of Port-au-Prince and surrounding areas, that city was already a disaster waiting to happen. With a population of more than 2 million in a city whose infrastructure could at best sustain a population of 100,000, the local and national public administrations simply abandoned the city to itself. Neither provided meaningful services of any kind—schools, healthcare, electricity, potable water, sanitation, zoning and construction regulations—and what they did provide was poorly administered, or primarily served the needs of the wealthier or better off sectors of the population who could afford to pay for them. Consider, for example, that only about 28 percent of Haitians have access to health care, 50 percent have access to potable water, and 10 percent have electrical services. In short, the Haitian state—i.e., the government—long ago abdicated its responsibilities to the majority of Haitian citizens, and at least since the Duvalier era, deferred to bilateral and multilateral aid donors, non-governmental agencies (NGOs) to provide services to the population. More NGOs per capita operate in Haiti than in any other country in the world, and they provide 70 percent of healthcare in rural areas and 80 percent of public services. This, in turn, has led to an extreme laissez aller and the near total privatization of all basic services. Except for a brief seven month attempt in 1991 that ended in a bloody coup d'état against the democratically elected government of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the turn to democratic governance has not changed that basic reality. It is therefore no accident that while the earthquake caused death and destruction among all social classes, the high death toll—estimates run from as low as 10,000 to a high of 200,000 so far, which means no one really knows—is also a direct consequence of the poor infrastructure, inferior housing construction, and the long-standing disregard for the basic needs and rights of the population.

What's more, geologists had warned the government of the probability of a seismic eruption for years, but as with previous massive destructions and loss of lives caused by hurricanes and tropical storms, the government took no measures to prepare for that possibility. It comes as no surprise, then, that the Haitian people have to rely entirely on the international community to come to its rescue. This would have been the case even if the symbols of government authority—the National Palace, the Parliament, the headquarters of the National Police, and other ministries—had not been destroyed for the simple reason that the capacity of the Haitian state to respond to a crisis of this magnitude—or even to less severe ones—is non existent due primarily to shortsighted practices and policies—political, economic, and social—that prioritized the interests of the few—the 4 percent of the population who hold 66 percent of total assets and the 1 percent who appropriate 55 percent of the national income—at the expense of the 75 percent of the population who live on less than $2/day and the more than half who live on less than $1/day.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769426 Date: 08/31/2015

There is no doubt that the dominant economic and political classes of Haiti bear great responsibility for the abysmal conditions in the country that exacerbated the impact of the earthquake (or of hurricanes or tropical storms). However, these local actors did not create these conditions alone but did so in close partnership with foreign governments and economic actors with long-standing interests in Haiti, principally those of the advanced countries—the United States, Canada, and France—and their international financial institutions (IFIs)—the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the Inter-American Development Bank. Since the 1970s and under various free market mantras, these international actors and institutions sought to and succeeded in transforming Haiti into a supplier of the cheapest labor in this hemisphere for foreign and domestic investors in the export assembly industry; in dismantling all obstacles to free trade; in privatizing public enterprises; and in weakening further the institutions of the state through policies that reinforced Haiti's dependence on foreign aid organizations—governmental and non-governmental.

These policies had drastic consequences for the Haitian economy. Locating the assembly industries primarily in Port-au-Prince encouraged migration from the rural areas to the capital city, contributed to its bloated population and sprawling squalor, and provided a never ending supply of cheap labor for those industries. At the same time, removing tariffs on food imports were detrimental to Haitian agriculture. Whereas in the 1970s Haiti produced most of the rice it consumed and imported only 10 percent of its food needs, by the end of the 1990s it was importing more than 42 percent of its food needs, had become the highest per capita consumer of subsidized US imported rice in the Western Hemisphere, and the largest importer of foodstuffs from the US in the Caribbean. Thus, US farmers benefitted at the expense of Haitian producers. These policies, too, propelled rural-to-urban migration, with Port-au-Prince as the primary destination, as well as emigration to the neighboring Dominican Republic, the Caribbean, and North America. Haiti is becoming increasingly dependent on remittances from its immigrants, which now represent 35 percent of Haiti's GDP.

What, then, is to be done? The response of the international community—from governments, the UN, and NGOs around the world—for medical treatment, food, water, temporary shelter, and road and communication repairs—has been immediate and massive, but will need to be sustained for a longer time span if it is to help Haiti recover economically in the short and medium term. Pressure is also mounting on bilateral and multilateral aid donors to cancel Haiti's debt of some $1.15 billion.

But to be effective and long lasting, future aid must be unconditional and be given more in the form of grants than loans. To that end, the Haitian people need to rethink how the country relates to the international community, in particular the major powers and the IFIs. Basically, I would argue, Haiti needs to break with the policies advocated by the major powers and IFIs that have proved disastrous for the Haitian economy. These policies are predicated on the belief that Haiti can develop only if it remains open to the world market, relies on its comparative advantage of low-cost labor to attract foreign investments in the export assembly industry, and prioritizes the production of selected agricultural goods, such as mangoes, for export. Despite the failure of these policies to generate sustainable development, reduce unemployment and improve the standard of living of the majority of Haitians, the major powers and IFIs continue to advocate them as the solution to Haiti's chronic underdevelopment and poverty. This is shown, for example, by the report written by former World Bank economist Paul Collier for UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon in 2008, and the latter's appointment of former US President Bill Clinton to spearhead that strategy in Haiti. Ignoring the evidence of the last 38 years, Collier's report calls for establishing a cluster of free trade zones for garment production beyond the two that currently exist in Port-au-Prince and Ouanaminthe, and creating such zones for the production and export of mangoes.

It is time for the Haitian people to mobilize as they did in 1990 to change the status quo, but this time by learning from the mistakes of the past and avoiding placing their faith in false prophets. As it did in 1990, an agenda for change would need to include the following:

1. Reject all the different versions of the structural adjustment policies of the IFIs that require that Haiti remove tariffs on food and other imports, privatize public enterprises, exempt foreign investors from taxes on their profits in the assembly industries, and curb social spending. Haiti could instead negotiate bilateral or multilateral agreements with those countries that are willing to provide aid without tying them to the implementation of specific economic or social policies.

2. Launch an immediate large-scale and national public works project to rebuild or expand Haiti's infrastructure, communication, transportation, public schools, public health facilities, and public housing. Here, too, Haiti could rely on bilateral or multilateral agreements to sustain this effort beyond the immediate post-crisis reconstruction now underway with foreign assistance that will focus primarily on the quake-ravaged areas.

3. Prioritize Haiti's food security and sovereignty by launching an agrarian reform, and subsidizing production for the local market as well as for export.

4. Promote the development of local and national agro-industries that use domestic inputs to produce consumer and durable goods; and support the national handicraft industry and promote its expansion on the international market.

5. Protect workers' rights, such as the right to form trade unions and the right to strike, and provide a living wage to all workers, especially in the export assembly industries.

It is obvious that these goals cannot be implemented all at once or immediately. But they must serve as the basis for a large scale popular mobilization to hold the elected representatives of the people to account and to renegotiate Haiti's relations with the international community.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769426 Date: 08/31/2015

Alex Dupuy is the Class of 1958 Distinguished Professor of Sociology at Wesleyan University. His most recent book is The Prophet and Power: Jean-Berttrand Aristide, the International Community, and Haiti (2007).

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769426 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:05 PM
To: H
Subject: The Broader Donor Coordination and Accountability

His reference to our ppt was to the donor coordination mechanism [redacted] B5

[redacted]

From: remaguire [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:43 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: RE: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

Enforced transparency will countermand it.

I thought Collier's earlier idea of an Independent Service Authority was interesting as long as it was transitional (toward a strengthened GOH) and had GOH authority from the get go.

I like your idea. At this point a reconstruction authority with Bellerive at its head makes sense. I like your idea of a donor's coordination mechanism that I saw in your policy review powerpoint, with coordination on 'our' side under the UN Special Envoy mechanism.

Maybe within the authority, there can be a private sector sub-group coordinated and monitored by the larger authority? This sub-group might also include non-Haitians, including Dominicans.

Haiti's private sector will be less interested in decentralized investment, I think, especially if it focuses on intensive labor and providing dignity and liveable wages to Haiti's people. This is a public works/public sector initiative, in conjunction with international public sector organizations.

Sachs idea of the decentralized growth poles is also interesting - perhaps a way to mobilize decentralized investment.

On Jan 24, 2010, Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> So I have many Vikings fans I'm supposed to be supporting today – won't tell them that I've now got divided loyalties.
>
> This is helpful but raises the question, what can we do to countermand this.

I'm going to look to see what businesses these folks are in but this speaks more than ever to the need for a Haitian reconstruction authority with Bellerive at the head with outside key donor or two like in the tsunami that has the plenary authority to make decisions ideally free from this type of influence. What are thoughts you have heard in that regard?

cdm

---

From: remaguire [mailto B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:42 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

General and specific concerns: Specifically heard from Haiti is that Preval has acceded too much authority to the Vorbe family.

Second, more general, is that the BAMBAM families (the term, I understand, created from the initials of the 6 leading elite families) are gearing up to inflate costs of doing things and to try to monopolize to the extent they can. Will forward in a separate email one or two articles I've seen on this.

I'm off to Trinity to prepare my classes for this week. (A reality of my full-time teaching load). While check email later. Thanks for this opportunity to share thoughts. Am very anxious to do this.

Can't miss the NFC game, even though the Eagles (I'm from Philly) already collapsed. I also lived in S.W. Louisiana during the N.O. "Aints" years.

Best - Bob

On Jn 24, 2010, Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> You and our secretary share similar concerns about making sure Haiti's future is decided by Haiti.
>
> When we met with PM and P, they both indicated they wanted US to play a large coordination role on their behalf to ensure their voice, plans and goals were accomplished. We are committed to doing that as they requested.
>
> I do think fast will mean some will make money they shouldn't – but goal is to have balance so we move with enough alacrity to build confidence that things are getting done.
>
> Who are the Haiti "operator" types of which this concern is being spoken?

B6

From: remaguire [mailto:
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:44 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

I hope the GOH has back-up to hold firm to its positions. Some will want to push it around. Also, while urgent need for tent cities clear PAP is clear, definitely not part of solution. Fearful of potential permanance of them unless alternates for rural resettlement along lines of talking points exist.

Am hearing that lots of concern that Haiti's "operators" are licking their chops to make lots of money off this. Fact of life or need to expand circle of actors?

Hang in there. - Bob

On Jan 24, 2010, Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> Great – right in line with our thinking so this is great.
>
> Thanks for forwarding – anything else of note?
>
> cdm

---

From: remaguire [mailto:
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:23 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

Cheryl - See below the response of Leslie Voltaire and PM Jean Max Bellerive to talking points for tomorrow's Montreal meeting I proposed yesterday. Talking points at the end. Response positive. I have also shared these with Paul Farmer. Same response. Sources at the UN fear, however, that the donors will focus on PAP and miss this historic opportunity. - Bob
(email sent also to Patrick G.)

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Leslie Voltaire
Date: Jan 23, 2010
Subject: Tr : Montreal - talking points - urgent
To: remaguire

Komisyon pa chaj

Leslie

----- Message transféré ----
De : Jean Max Bellerive
À : Leslie Voltaire B6
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 19 h 33 min 51 s
Objet : Re: Montreal - talking points - urgent

Thanks ! En ligne avec ce que je pense dire

JMB

---

From: Leslie Voltaire
To: Jean-Max Bellerive
Sent: Sat, January 23, 2010 10:23:24 PM
Subject: Montreal - talking points - urgent

PM

Reflexions de Bob Maguire

Leslie

----- Message transféré ----
De : "remaguire
À : lvoltaire
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 13 h 22 min 27 s
Objet : Montreal - talking points - urgent

Leslie - First, thank god you were in NYC on Jan 12th. I hope your personal losses were minimal. Surely, Haiti has lost much. We all have...

Thoughts for Montreal:

1. This offers an opportunity to 'rebalance' Haiti.
2. Pay attention to the exodus from PAP and catch up with it. (The migration to PAP over the past 30 years was an unnatural development, spurred by rural neglect and urban concentration.)
3. A decentralized system of 'welcome centers' in town and villages can assist returnees re-integrate. Medical and continuing education services should be a part of them. NEED TO ACT NOW.
4. More important, the centers must be equipped to provide work - make them the basis for organizing the civic service corps. Higly decentralized: work for cash; public works/environmental restoration/food production; restoration of human dignity; rural-urban partnerships through work;e in Haiti's real future. Also a chance to begin repairing the social fabric. Will need a 'tough love' approach; disciplined management. Not the work for NGOs.

5. No investment in rural areas and no response to this opportunity will = back to the future re. crowded PAP. People will trickle back to the city to replicate past problems.
6. The damage was done before the earthquake by development/investment policies that ignored the rural areas; saw Haitians simply as sources of cheap labor; denigrated human dignity; failed to strengthen local institutions.
7. This must stop; can't happen again.
8. This is the time to move forward with the Civic Service Corps - quickly.

kenbe. Pa lage. - Bob

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:07 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tavis Smiley

He asked you about this when you sat down. The press hangs in the Andrews DV lounge and gets on the plane well before you, the Air Force must have had Fox on when he was with us.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Tavis Smiley
Sent: Jan 24, 2010 12:04 PM

I just saw an article he wrote in USA Weekend claiming we had FOX on our airplane screens. What is he talking about? He makes a big deal out of it.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:09 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tavis Smiley

I don't know, people make big deals out of nothing, rather than subscribe to Occam's Razor

I have to look it up but I think you said you never noticed, probably because it's when you're not on the plane

I'll double check

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Re: Tavis Smiley
Sent: Jan 24, 2010 12:07 PM

But why did he make such a big deal out of it? And what did I say when he asked?

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 12:06:34 2010
Subject: Re: Tavis Smiley

He asked you about this when you sat down. The press hangs in the Andrews DV lounge and gets on the plane well before you, the Air Force must have had Fox on when he was with us.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Tavis Smiley
Sent: Jan 24, 2010 12:04 PM

I just saw an article he wrote in USA Weekend claiming we had FOX on our airplane screens. What is he talking about? He makes a big deal out of it.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:15 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Public Afghanistan Strategy

FYI

---

From: Jones, Paul W
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:07 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Verma, Richard R; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E; Feldman, Daniel F; Misko, Sean A
Subject: RE: Public Afghanistan Strategy

The approach we took was to integrate our emphasis on women throughout the strategy, vice indicating that it was a separate effort. All of our programs benefit women, usually be specific design. Below are a few places under education, health and judicial access where women's issues are highlighted in the strategy. We are completely open to how best to address this.

Page ii - "improving ed opps for all Afghansn regardless of gender, is a top priority"

Page 11 - protecting women's rights in Af cited in context of judicial reform

Page 12 - "emphase on legal aid, gender, and juv justice issues" in enhancing access to justice

Page 18 - "significant gains in...ensuring ed opportunities for all Afghans, regardless of gender"

Page 21 - protecting women in Pak cited as priority

---

From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:44 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Verma, Richard R; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E; Jones, Paul W
Subject: Re: Public Afghanistan Strategy

Yes, it is accurate. Unless I am badly mistaken, the report does not have a separate section on women.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Verma, Richard R; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Rodriguez, Miguel E; Jones, Paul W
Sent: Sun Jan 24 11:41:50 2010
Subject: RE: Public Afghanistan Strategy

The real issue is – is it accurate that the strategy does not have a section regarding women, which would seem almost impossible.

cdm

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 1:05 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: READ BELOW RE: DONOR COORDINATION AND A HRA

FYI

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:55 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A
Subject: RE: READ BELOW RE: DONOR COORDINATION AND A HRA

Thanks Cheryl

I am now at my desk. I agree with concerns below. The cementing of the monopoly by Preval for the public container port is a prime example how elite capture runs directly counter to job creation and social welfare.

Assets (land, heavy equipment, cement, petroleum) that are in high demand during a construction boom are in the hands of a few. The risk is that price spikes will severely drive out the potential gains from aid dollars. Dual signatures and injecting foreign experts into a HRA task force to review projects for eligibility will counteract obvious forms of corruption.

The much harder task is to determine realistic benchmarks for project costs, given transfer pricing and de facto cartels. Injecting competition and open bidding is needed to counteract this. The problem is that any Haitian firm will loose business to US or Chinese contractors with much more favorable pricing structures (but limited spillovers to local economy). A middle ground may be to invite joint ventures between Haitian and international companies to build up the local workforce and overall skill base.

Best, JL

---

From: remaguire
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:43 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: RE: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

> Enforced transparency will countermand it.
>
> I thought Collier's earlier idea of an Independent Service Authority was interesting as long as it was transitional (toward a strengthened GOH) and had GOH authority from the get go.
>
> I like your idea. At this point a reconstruction authority with Bellerive at its head makes sense. I like your idea of a donor's coordination mechanism that I saw in your policy review powerpoint, with coordination on 'our' side under the UN Special Envoy mechanism.
>
> Maybe within the authority, there can be a private sector sub-group coordinated and monitored by the larger authority? This sub-group might also include non-Haitians, including Dominicans.
>
> Haiti's private sector will be less interested in decentralized investment, I think, especially if it focuses on intensive labor and providing dignity and liveable wages to Haiti's people. This is a public works/public sector initiative, in conjunction with international public sector organizations.

Sachs idea of the decentralized growth poles is also interesting - perhaps a way to mobilize decentralized investment.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 1:15 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Situation Report No. 34 - Haiti Earthquake (SBU)

Fyi

---

From: OpsAlert
Sent: Sat Jan 23 19:13:19 2010
Subject: Situation Report No. 34 - Haiti Earthquake (SBU)

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

SITUATION REPORT No. 34

Haiti Earthquake Task Force TFHA01

Saturday, January 23, 2010
1900 EST

VIP TRAVEL

- (SBU) Representative James McGovern (D-MA) and a group from Lynn University visited the Hotel Montana January 23. Contrary to earlier indications, Senator John Kerry (D-MA), did not travel with the Lynn University group. (TF1/DHS e-mail, TF1/OFDA e-mail)
- (SBU) Senator Bill Nelson (D-FL) was scheduled to arrive January 23 with the non-profit Help Bring Hope for Haiti, Inc. However, difficulties in arranging return transportation precluded the Senator from accompanying the non-profit.
  (TF1/DHS e-mail, Tampa Bay Tribune)

SEARCH AND RESCUE (SAR)

- (SBU) The Government of Haiti informed Ambassador Merten at 0054 EST January 23 that it has not ceased search and rescue operations. At approximately 1630 EST, media reported a new live rescue in the capital. (TF1/Embassy Port-au-Prince e-mail, CNN)
- (SBU) Six SAR teams are in country, two at the Hotel Montana. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)

COMMODITY FLOW

- (SBU) U.S. forces facilitated delivery of $2 million in cash to 12 banks around the capital January 23. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)
- (SBU) The UN estimates current fuel supplies will last until the port is rehabilitated to the point where it can receive fuel shipments. (USAID SitRep#20)
- (SBU) JTF-H made adjustments to the aircraft arrival schedule allowing flights from Brazil, China, and Argentina to land January 23 even though they had not arranged landing slots. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)

- (SBU) JTF-H will revise the scheduling of aircraft to make the process more transparent. An Air Force Brigadier General has assumed responsibility for coordinating all air activities supported by JTF-H. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)

EVACUATIONS/AMERICAN CITIZEN AND LE STAFF WHEREABOUTS

- (SBU) Post reports 489 evacuees departed January 23. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)
- (SBU) Post expects to process 100 orphan cases January 23 and another 100 January 24. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)
- (SBU) Post expects the remains of four private American citizens and three USG family members to be repatriated to Dover AFB January 23. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)
- (SBU) HHS agreed to keep its assessment team in Port-au-Prince until relieved. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)

MEDICAL RESPONSE

(SBU) As of 1700 EST January 23, USNS Comfort has 243 patients on board and capacity to accommodate another 757. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call, SOUTHCOM DCO)

INTERNATIONAL COORDINATION/REQUESTS

(U) No updates at this time.

DEPLOYMENT OF U.S. GOVERNMENT ASSETS

(SBU) There are currently 19,063 U.S. military personnel in Haiti or on ships nearby, in addition to personnel from OFDA, DHS, HHS, and other agencies.
(JTF-Haiti SitRep, TF1/OFDA telcon)

HUMANITARIAN/SECURITY/INFRASTRUCTURE

- (SBU) The port is still operating at 30 percent capacity (about 150 containers off-loaded in 24 hours) due to damage to the pier, but SOUTHCOM estimates the port's capacity will increase to 400 containers in the next 96 hours. There are 14 ships waiting to unload. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call, USAID SitRep#20)
- (SBU) Six television stations are operating between six and 12 hours daily; over 30 FM stations are also broadcasting. (TF1/Interagency Conference Call)

POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS

(SBU) Representatives of MINUSTAH, the Government of Haiti, and the Dominican armed forces will meet in Santo Domingo to arrange for the deployment of about 150 Dominican troops to MINUSTAH. (TF1/Embassy Santo Domingo e-mail)

Additional updates are available through our unclassified Intellipedia portal at http://www.intelink.gov/wiki/Portal:Crisis_Haiti_Earthquake.

Drafted:DSChristensen Approved: RPSanders
Dist: State (all bureaus), NSS, OSD, NMCC, JCS, CIA, OSC, NCTC, DHS, DNI

SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, July 3, 2010 1:36 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: S's query

I am currently traveling. If you need immediate assistance, please contact Nora Toiv (ToivNF@state.gov) or Joanne Laszczych, (LaszczychJ@state.gov) at 202-647-5548.

If it is an emergency after business hours, please reach out to our Operations Center to have them reach me.

Thank you

cdm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, July 3, 2010 12:06 PM
To: H
Cc: Verveer, Melanne S

MS, we would like to do one photo at the plane with the local police as you are leaving if that's okay.
Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(202) [redacted] (direct) B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Cherie Blair
Sent: Sunday, July 4, 2010 2:03 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: confidential

Thank you for that I think it was his office rather than the Crown Prince himself who met your staff.
All is very well and the mobile phone project is really developing in a fantastic way can't wait for you to launch it in the autumn

Cherie Blair

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: 03 July 2010 06:54
To: Cherie Blair
Subject: Re: confidential

We're setting up a call for next week. He's visited and talked already w the folks leading out food/hunger efforts but I'm happy to discuss w him as well.

Love your work on women and mobile phones. Hope all is well--H

----- Original Message -----
From: Cherie Blair
To: H
Cc: dband
Sent: Wed Jun 30 09:00:41 2010
Subject: RE: confidential

Hilary can you give me a telephone number the Qatar Crown Prince can ring you on and he will get in touch.
Alternatively I can get his personal phone number for you. What is the best for you?

Cherie Blair

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: 15 June 2010 02:35

To: Cherie Blair
Subject: Re: confidential

I would be happy to meet w him. How should I follow up to arrange a mutually agreeable time? All the best to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: Cherie Blair [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Mon Jun 07 09:56:45 2010
Subject: confidential

As you know I have good links to the Qataris. Sheikha Mosah's son is the 31/32 year old Crown Prince and she is keen that he starts to build a wider international profile. He has been appointed head of the Qatar National Food Security Programme which is designed to deal with Qatar's food security issues its a $30 billion programme. He is aware that food security is an issue you are majoring on and would love to meet with you in person to discuss this and to explore potential partnership areas between US and Qatar including possible participation in the US/World Bank Food Security Fund. He is also keen to talk more generally about US/Qatari cooperation and even suggested they could help out with the Oil spill problem. There is apparently a Arab Food Security Summit in October 2010 and he would like to discuss Us participation in that too.

IS a meeting possible [redacted] Or maybe we could set up an initial phone call. B6

Can you let me know if this appeals to you at all?

Cherie Blair

[redacted] B6

This message has been scanned by MailController - www.MailController.altohiway.com

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, July 5, 2010 2:16 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Statement on Syrian human rights activists for review

NEA is asking for a statement from you on the sentencing of Syrian human rights activists. White House released a statement on this. Draft below:

Statement by Secretary Clinton

Syrian Convictions of Human Rights Activists

The sentencing of Syrian lawyer Haitham Maleh to three years in prison is an example of Syria's failure to comply with minimum international human rights standards. Convicting Maleh for exercising free speech and defending universal human rights sends a clear message to the world that Syria does not tolerate peaceful forms of expression. We call on the Syrian government to meet its responsibilities under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. It should demonstrate its commitment to international legal norms by releasing Maleh and other Syrian citizens, including Muhannad al-Hassani and Ali Abdullah, who have been imprisoned solely for seeking to exercise their most fundamental human rights.

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, July 5, 2010 3:52 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw:

Fyi - happy to give more context.

----- Original Message -----
From: Morningstar, Richard L
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Jul 05 02:06:20 2010
Subject:

Per the subject we discussed, we have a diplomatic, "psychological" issue, not a legal issue. Our friend has to be given a way out. We should recognize his concerns and frame it in terms of a misunderstanding with no malevolent intent and that we will make sure there is no recurrence. Our person won't be able to do anything anyway. If he has to leave so be it.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 12:02 AM
To: H
Subject: Thank you for having me join you for the trip. I can now add the Caucuses to the countries we've traveled to together! You were magnificent. There is clearly much to be done in the region and I'll be following up from my end.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 2:12 PM
To: H
Subject: H: From Pat Lang on VMI... Sid

-----Original Message-----
From: Pat Lang
To: sbwhoeop
Sent: Sun, Jan 24, 2010 2:06 pm
Subject: RE: the CIA, etc.

B6

Sidney

On a rainy, gloomy Sunday I write to you in the hope that we will have agreement from Secretary Clinton to accept the "distinguished Diplomat" award at VMI. I am assured by the Superintendent, General JHB Peay, and the department head of International Relations/Political Science, Colonel Jim Hentz that the award is hers if she will accept it. This is a "done deal."

All that is needed for her to receive an official letter from General Peay is for me to know that she will accept the award. They want to give her the award this year on a suitable day before graduation in late May. The letter will ask her to address the corps of cadets in a suitable on post (campus) setting. I would like to see it in Jackson Memorial Hall, a beautiful medieval revival building. An alternative setting would be the two story atrium in the Marshall Center for Leadership and Ethics. The award would be presented at the end of the address. Media coverage would be welcomed and assisted. She would be honored by being the reviewing person at a regimental review of the corps. A suitable dinner and or luncheon would be arranged.

If this is going to happen it would be a good idea to set the wheels in motion as soon as possible so that the staffs can work out the details.

Best

Pat Lang
VMI '62

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 6:44 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: (Washington Post) Obama's worst foreign-policy mistake

FYI

---

From: Simmons, Krista M
Sent: Tuesday, July 06, 2010 6:32 AM
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-ISN; NEWS-EUR; T_SpecAssts
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_Shift-II
Subject: (Washington Post) Obama's worst foreign-policy mistake

By Mitt Romney
Tuesday, July 6, 2010
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/07/05/AR2010070502657.html

Given President Obama's glaring domestic policy missteps, it is understandable that the public has largely been blinded to his foreign policy failings. In fact, these may have been even more damaging to America's future. He fought to reinstate Honduras's pro-Chávez president while stalling Colombia's favored-trade status. He castigated Israel at the United Nations but was silent about Hamas having launched 7,000 rockets from the Gaza Strip. His policy of "engagement" with rogue nations has been met with North Korean nuclear tests, missile launches and the sinking of a South Korean naval vessel, while Iran has accelerated its nuclear program, funded terrorists and armed Hezbollah with long-range missiles. He acceded to Russia's No. 1 foreign policy objective, the abandonment of our Europe-based missile defense program, and obtained nothing whatsoever in return.

Despite all of this, the president's New Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (New-START) with Russia could be his worst foreign policy mistake yet. The treaty as submitted to the Senate should not be ratified.

New-START impedes missile defense, our protection from nuclear-proliferating rogue states such as Iran and North Korea. Its preamble links strategic defense with strategic arsenal. It explicitly forbids the United States from converting intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) silos into missile defense sites. And Russia has expressly reserved the right to walk away from the treaty if it believes that the United States has significantly increased its missile defense capability.

Hence, to preserve the treaty's restrictions on Russia, America must effectively get Russia's permission for any missile defense expansion. Moscow's vehemence over our modest plans in Eastern Europe demonstrate that such permission would be extremely unlikely.

The treaty empowers a Bilateral Consultative Commission with broad latitude to amend the treaty with specific reference to missile defense. New START does something the American public would never countenance and the Senate should never permit: It jeopardizes our missile defense system.

The treaty also gives far more to the Russians than to the United States. As drafted, it lets Russia escape the limit on its number of strategic nuclear warheads. Loopholes and lapses -- presumably carefully crafted by Moscow -- provide a path to entirely avoid the advertised warhead-reduction targets. For example, rail-based ICBMs and launchers are not mentioned. Similarly, multiple nuclear warheads that are mounted on bombers are effectively not counted. Unlike past treaty restrictions, ICBMs are not prohibited from bombers. This means that Russia is free to mount a nearly unlimited number of ICBMs on bombers -- including MIRVs (multiple independently targetable reentry vehicles) or multiple warheads -- without tripping the treaty's limits. These omissions would be consistent with Russia's plans for a new heavy bomber and reports of growing interest in rail-mobile ICBMs.

Under New START, the United States must drastically reduce our number of launchers but Russia will not -- it already has fewer launchers than the treaty limits. Put another way: We give, Russia gets. And more troubling, the treaty fails to apply the MIRV limits that were part of the prior START treaty. Again, it may not be coincidental that Russia is developing a new heavy-load -- meaning MIRV-capable -- ICBM.

New-START gives Russia a massive nuclear weapon advantage over the United States. The treaty ignores tactical nuclear weapons, where Russia outnumbers us by as much as 10 to 1. Obama heralds a reduction in strategic weapons from approximately 2,200 to 1,550 but fails to mention that Russia will retain more than 10,000 nuclear warheads that are categorized as tactical because they are mounted on missiles that cannot reach the United States. But surely they can reach our allies, nations that depend on us for a nuclear umbrella. And who can know how those tactical nuclear warheads might be reconfigured? Astonishingly, while excusing tactical nukes from the treaty, the Obama administration bows to Russia's insistence that conventional weapons mounted on ICBMs are counted under the treaty's warhead and launcher limits.

By all indications, the Obama administration has been badly out-negotiated. Perhaps the president's eagerness for global disarmament led his team to accede to Russia's demands, or perhaps it led to a document that was less than carefully drafted.

Whatever the reason for the treaty's failings, it must not be ratified: The security of the United States is at stake. The only responsible course is for the Senate to demand and scrutinize the full diplomatic record underlying the treaty. Then it must insist that any linkage between the treaty and our missile defense system be eliminated. In a world where nuclear weapons are proliferating, America's missile defense shield must not be compromised. As currently drafted, New START is a non-starter.

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D)

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 7:19 AM
To: H
Subject: Barak

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Slightly edited Background for Barak call:

[redacted]

On Gaza and the "controlled items" list, Israeli MFA Director General Yossi Gal and Ministry of Defense COGAT General Eitan Dangot briefed Monday in Israel on a release of the new list, and newly announced international projects. (The

[redacted]

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 07/05/2035

RELEASE IN PART
B5

Concept Note: Haiti 2020 Planning Team

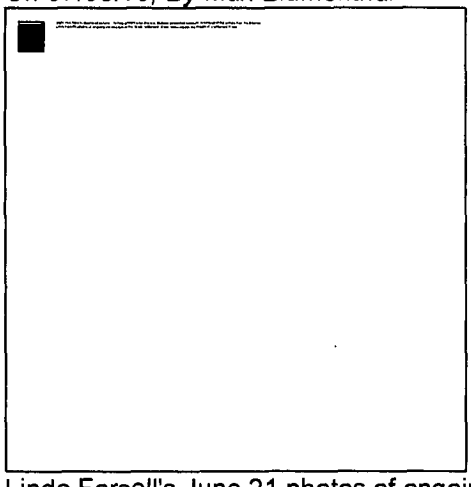
B5

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6



B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 7:54 AM
Subject: The Settlement Freeze That Never Was, And Never Will Be http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/07/the-settlement-freeze-that-never-was-and-never-will-be/

The Settlement Freeze That Never Was, And Never Will Be

On 07.05.10, By Max Blumenthal

Linda Forsell's June 21 photos of ongoing construction in the Israeli settlement of Har Homa expose the illusion of Netanyahu's settlement freeze

With the Israeli settlement moratorium scheduled to expire on September 26, the right-wing parties in Israel's coalition government are exerting maximum pressure on Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to block the policy's renewal. "Let's get rid of the freeze and get back to building," declared Israeli Minister of Public Affairs and the Diaspora Yuli Edelstein on Israel National Radio yesterday. "It's our land anyway!" (Edelstein lives in the settlement of Neve Daniel).

Back in the US, the former Israel lobbyist and ex-Clinton Assistant Secretary of State Martin Indyk took to the Washington Post's op-ed page to praise Netanyahu and Barack Obama for ensuring that "there were zero building starts in the West Bank settlements."

During the week of June 21, I traveled through the West Bank with Swedish photojournalist Linda Forsell to document new settlement construction and the settlers' theft of water from Palestinian towns. Forsell took a series of photos at Har Homa, a massive Israeli settlement towering over the Palestinian town of Beit Sarhour. Her photos show ongoing construction of hundreds of new settlement units — documents of the settlement freeze sham.

Netanyahu authorized the building of new settlement units just days after he announced the freeze in November 2009. He attempted to disguise new settlement construction by drawing a false distinction between the West Bank and "parts of Jerusalem" like Har Homa that actually lie outside 1967 lines. As Israeli government flack Mark Regev remarked in December 2009, "We've made a clear distinction between the West Bank and Jerusalem. Jerusalem is our capital and will stay as such." With a few exceptions, Obama allowed this scheme to go forward.

According to the Washington Post, Obama's meeting with Netanyahu this week will have more to do with reassuring Jewish Democrats than with halting the wholesale colonization of the West Bank. As the Post's Anne Kornblut reported, "The White House meeting will not dwell on some of the most difficult time-sensitive issues, including the expiration of a moratorium on Israeli settlement construction in September." This may mean an end to the settlement freeze, but it was only an illusion after all.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 10:55 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: [InsidersOut] Body of Ugandan LGBT volunteer was found beheaded

FYI

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tuesday, July 06, 2010 10:53 AM
To: Carson, Johnnie
Cc: Yamamoto, Donald Y; Baer, Daniel B; Sullivan, Jacob J; Posner, Michael H
Subject: FW: [InsidersOut] Body of Ugandan LGBT volunteer was found beheaded

Johnnie:

Do we know anything more about this?

Thx

cdm

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Jim Burroway [redacted] B6
Date: Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 1:17 AM
Subject: [InsidersOut] Body of Ugandan LGBT volunteer was found beheaded
To: InsidersOut[redacted]

http://www.boxturtlebulletin.com/2010/07/05/24020

Ugandan LGBT Advocate Found Beheaded

Jim Burroway

July 5th, 2010

A reader tipped me to this horrible news. The severed head of a volunteer for Integrity Uganda, the pro-LGBT organization founded by Bishop Christopher Senyonjo, was found in a pit latrine on a farm in Makindye Sabagabo, Wakiso District.

> Judith Nabakooba, a police spokesperson, identified the head as that of Pasikali Kashusbe, one of the workers on Kigggundu's farm and a member of Integrity Uganda. Pasikali and his partner Abbey are youth workers with Integrity Uganda charged with the responsibility of mobilising young LGBT people in activities which build community capacity to face up to the challenge of homophobia, especially in the area of attitude change and care through drama and sports activities.

> According to the police, a mutilated torso which was earlier in the week discovered in Kabuuma Zone, about half a kilometre away from Kiggundu's farm was probably Pasikali's The torso was described as belonging to a young man and had no genitals.
>
> Pasikali went missing over three and half weeks ago when the country was celebrating Uganda Martyrs Day. All efforts by his partner Abbey and other family members to find him had been fruitless.
>
> Bishop Christopher Senyonjo, Chairperson of Integrity Uganda lamented the murder of this young man as 'absurd' adding that, 'clearly, the values of tolerance and social inclusion are sadly being sacrificed on the altar of state ignorance, ineptness and good old colonial stupidity'.

Uganda's Martyr's Day, a national holiday, is a particularly dangerous time for LGBT people. The holiday commemorates the death of several Anglican and Catholic missionaries ordered by the Bugandan King Mwanga II, who felt that foreign religious influences posed a threat to his kingdom. In fact, his fears proved correct; the executions prompted Britain to invade Uganda and turn it into a British colony. Popular lore has it that King Mwanga II, who himself was a teenager, killed the martyrs because they refused his homosexual advances. It is unclear how much of that part of the story is true or how much of it is lore that was reinforced by the British colonial government to discredit the king.

The farm where Kashusbe's head was found is reportedly owned by Badru Kiggundu, who is the chairman of Uganda's Electoral Commission. Police found the head while searching for a missing priest, Rev Henry Kayizzi Nsubuga, who disappeared almost two and half weeks ago after delivering a speech at St. Paul's Church in Kanyanya supporting homosexuality in Uganda.

The independent television network NTV Uganda posted this video three days ago, but doesn't mention the circumstances which appear to have led to Pasikali's murder:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JBjlbN3gtnQ

Daily Monitor, Uganda's largest newspapers, has a few more sparse details here. In this report, the victim is identified as Paschal Kashushu. Amid conflicting reports, it appears that at at least one man has been arrested, possibly a relative. I'm trying to get more information directly from Uganda.

Changing Attitudes has this statement from Rev Erich Kasirye, General Secretary, Integrity Uganda:

> Pasikali and his partner Abbey joined Integrity Uganda in June 2007 and during the last three years, Integrity Uganda has seen an increase in coordination and harmonisation of youth activities. Pasikali emphasized the promotion of the concept of care across the continuum through the formation of voluntary home care groups for young LGBTIs who continue to live in fear. He will be greatly missed by the entire LGBTI fraternity.

As for the missing priest, the only direct news reports that I can find about him appear in the government-owned New Vision. There is no mention of Rev. Nsubuga's sermon. Instead, it appears that relatives are painting the missing priest as mentally "stressed." A report by a reporter from Kamulali Newspaper and re-published on the virulently anti-gay web site Virtue Online provides more hints about the possible link between Rev. Nsubuga's disappearance and his pro-gay sermon.

--

Reminder: This list is an invitation only lists and all posts are OFF THE RECORD.
You received this message because you are subscribed to the Google Groups "InsidersOut" group.
To post to this group, send email to InsidersOut

B6

To unsubscribe from this group, send email to InsidersOut-unsubscribe[redacted] B6
For more options, visit this group at http://groups.google.com/group/InsidersOut?hl=en

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: postmaster@state.gov
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 4:09 PM
To: H
Subject: Undeliverable: Followup w Sec Napolitano
Attachments: details.txt; Followup w Sec Napolitano (2.69 KB)

Delivery has failed to these recipients or distribution lists:

scwarzericp@state.gov
The recipient's e-mail address was not found in the recipient's e-mail system. Microsoft Exchange will not try to redeliver this message for you. Please check the e-mail address and try resending this message, or provide the following diagnostic text to your system administrator.

Diagnostic information for administrators:

Generating server: MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu

scwarzericp@state.gov
#< #5.1.1> #SMTP#

Original message headers:

```
Received: from vance2.state.gov ([10.4.16.249]) by
 MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu with Microsoft SMTPSVC(6.0.3790.3959);         Sun, 24
 Jan 2010 16:09:22 -0500
Received: from mail.clintonemail.com (ool-18bbeabb.static.optonline.net [24.187.234.187])
        by vance2.state.gov  with ESMTP id o0OKfLRW013222;
        Sun, 24 Jan 2010 15:41:21 -0500
Received: from CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993]) by CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993%10]) with mapi; Sun, 24
 Jan 2010 16:09:21 -0500
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: "'cheryl.mills[redacted]" <cheryl.mills[redacted]                                B6
        "'brimmere@state.gov'" <brimmere@state.gov>, "'scwarzericp@state.gov'"
        <scwarzericp@state.gov>
CC: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sun, 24 Jan 2010 16:09:21 -0500
Subject: Followup w Sec Napolitano
Thread-Topic: Followup w Sec Napolitano
Thread-Index: AcqdOX+x0D6YJ2s7QS+7tLkSF8OrVw==
Message-ID: <786762D781A7FF4FAC9060892B4044880368178E41@CLNTINET08.clinton.local>
Accept-Language: en-US
Content-Language: en-US
X-MS-Has-Attach:
X-MS-TNEF-Correlator:
acceptlanguage: en-US
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="utf-8"
Content-Transfer-Encoding: base64
```

MIME-Version: 1.0
Return-Path: HDR22@clintonemail.com
X-OriginalArrivalTime: 24 Jan 2010 21:09:22.0667 (UTC) FILETIME=[806AF3B0:01CA9D39]
X-TM-AS-Product-Ver: SMEX-8.0.0.4125-6.000.1038-17148.000
X-TM-AS-Result: No--15.161000-5.000000-31
X-TM-AS-User-Approved-Sender: No
X-TM-AS-User-Blocked-Sender: No

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 11:05 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Thank you

PAGE(S) MISSING

FYI traffic.

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tuesday, July 06, 2010 10:59 AM
To: Posner, Michael H
Cc: Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: RE: Thank you

You did a great job – I went back and reviewed the outline you provided and this was a very faithful rendition of your thoughts.

I am out this week but let's try for next week.

Copying joanne to find a time.

cdm

From: Posner, Michael H
Sent: Tuesday, July 06, 2010 10:57 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Thank you

Cheryl

The Secretary's speech in Krakow was a home run. I am getting lots of comments like this one from people in my world. This speech will give us lots of running room to follow up on these issues.

When your schedule permits I would like to come see you. It has been a long time since we've talked and it would be good to catch up on a few things.

Best

Mike

From: Douglas Rutzen [mailto [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, July 06, 2010 10:45 AM
To: Posner, Michael H; A/S Posner
Cc: Duncan, Dara L; Davidson, Lynne A (DRL)
Subject: Thank you

Dear Assistant Secretary Posner:

I am writing to express my deep appreciation to you, Dara, Lynne, and the entire DRL team for your tireless support in connection with the recent Community of Democracies meeting. The Secretary's speech was superb. I was sitting with

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 11:28 AM
To: H
Subject: Blair call

Can be done whenever you are back. His office knows you are running just a few minutes late.
Lauren

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 12:54 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: A unique request for your help from Hilary Rosen

I will follow up on this today.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, July 06, 2010 12:53 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: A unique request for your help from Hilary Rosen

How can we get this done?

----- Original Message -----
From: Rosen And Company <hilary [redacted] B6
To: H; millscd@state.gov <millscd@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jul 04 11:09:52 2010
Subject: A unique request for your help from Hilary Rosen

HRC:

You may remember many years ago when olympic champion swimmer diana nyad tried to swim from cuba to florida and failed. Diana wants to try again as part of an ongoing commitment she has to promoting fitness among older people. As you can see from this email she needs your help to get clearance. I wouldnt ask if i didnt think taking it to your level is the only way to get it done.

Thanks so much in advance for looking into this. I know it is a busy month for you. You are just the best!!!

Hilary Rosen
[redacted]

---

From: Diana Nyad [redacted]

In full appreciation of Hilary's always-hectic life....and particularly her current high-octane stresses with the oil spill work....I thought it easiest for her to simply show her below a letter I wrote this week to hopeufilly be delivered to Congresswoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz, dem out of FL, in a desperate plea for help to get me and my expedition cleared intto Cuba.

The basics for Hilary to know are that CNN is covering the entire summer's event I'm doing live.
24-hour training swim off Key West next week-end.
The Cuba Swim early August, weather dictating.

It's not that I've been flat turned down by the State Dept. But I have been told I won't be approved this summer.....warm water, my training, all of it....there's no other time I can or will do it.

It's going to be a terribly upbeat story to follow (in CLEAN ocean just nearby the oil spill), it's going to be an embraced strong message to redefine middle age as strong and relevant, to see a 60-year old swim 103 miles and walk up onto the shores of her own country.

I have been told by lawyers within Treasury that it will take either Hilary Clinton or Obama himself to clear my event.
I know somebody has the power to green light in an hour's time, if I can just get to the right person.

. Please know that I wouldn't interrupt either your or HIlary's precious holiday week-end if I hadn't committed a year of hardship training to this and now involved many good people in the adventure.
I just can't let this dream slip away because I can't get into Cuba with State Dept approval.

Here is the Schultz doc below. And next I'm going to send you a link to a short promo video.

Thanks so very, very much,
diana

DIANA NYAD CUBA SWIM

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

At the end of July, 2010, just a month from now, I will attempt to become the first person in history to swim the 103 miles from Cuba to Florida without the aid of a shark cage.

In 1978, I swam out of Havana into a raging sea. 41hrs, 49mins later, it was not to be.

I'm 60 now. This time, when I do walk up onto the Florida shore, I will send a loud message to all the millions my age that 60 is not irrelevant, that we are still strong, vital, vibrant individuals, that our best days are not by any means all behind us.

For 30 years, I hadn't swum a stroke. I valued physical fitness to an extreme degree, but just hadn't swum at all for 30 years. And now this past year's training is done. It has been intense. Many, many 10, 12, 15 hour swims in the Caribbean. Grueling tests of both body and spirit.

But I was naive to think the training would be the tough part. I am feeling strong and confident. But the government permissions for me to walk off the Cuban shore are keeping me from my Dream.

I first went to the Cuban Interest Section and was told the Cubans would eagerly welcome my event. They remember my first attempt and I have been back many times for clinics and such. But they said I would definitely need to first have approval from the State Department. I was told there that it is a sensitive time politically, that both Obama and Hilary Clinton are very much pro-embargo and it would take perhaps a year to procure State Department clearance.

On advice from three lawyers from Sonnenschein in D.C., I was told that it would take a direct green light from Hilary herself to get this expedition cleared.

Because I have been stymied by Treasury and the State Dept, I let the Cuban Interest Section permissions go so now I don't have permissions from their end, either.

I am going to make one last attempt to get this done legally by contacting Congresswoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz. Perhaps in light of a positive story vis a vis Florida Tourism....there is beautifully clean water, not far from the oil disaster.....and the heroic message of a 60-year-old swimming 100 miles and walking up onto the shores of her own country, her own home state, Congresswoman Schultz could champion the project into full legal status, from both the Cuban and the State Department sides.

CNN is the exclusive broadcast coverer of my swim. I am just tonight on the front page of CNN.com.

There will no doubt be much positive news to come from this story...and to Florida....throughout my endeavor.

I will do a 24-hour training swim off Key West the week-end of July 10-11. CNN will cover live.

And then the hope is to go over to Havana on July 23 (or wait at a training camp in Key West starting on July 23) and then get the Cuba swim started whenever Mother Nature gives us a forecast of calm seas.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 4:18 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Undeliverable: Followup w Sec Napolitano

SchwartzEP@state.gov

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Sun Jan 24 16:13:06 2010
Subject: Re: Undeliverable: Followup w Sec Napolitano

What is Eric Scwarz's email?

----- Original Message -----
From: postmaster@state.gov <postmaster@state.gov>
To: scwarzericp@state.gov <scwarzericp@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 24 16:09:23 2010
Subject: Undeliverable: Followup w Sec Napolitano

Delivery has failed to these recipients or distribution lists:

scwarzericp@state.gov
The recipient's e-mail address was not found in the recipient's e-mail system. Microsoft Exchange will not try to redeliver this message for you. Please check the e-mail address and try resending this message, or provide the following diagnostic text to your system administrator.

Diagnostic information for administrators:

Generating server: MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu

scwarzericp@state.gov
#< #5.1.1> #SMTP#

Original message headers:

Received: from vance2.state.gov ([10.4.16.249]) by
MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu with Microsoft SMTPSVC(6.0.3790.3959); Sun, 24
Jan 2010 16:09:22 -0500

Received: from mail.clintonemail.com (ool-18bbeabb.static.optonline.net [24.187.234.187])
by vance2.state.gov with ESMTP id o0OKfLRW013222;
Sun, 24 Jan 2010 15:41:21 -0500
Received: from CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993]) by CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993%10]) with mapi; Sun, 24 Jan 2010 16:09:21 -0500
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: "'cheryl.mills[redacted]'" <cheryl.mills[redacted]>, B6
"'brimmere@state.gov'" <brimmere@state.gov>, "'scwarzericp@state.gov'" <scwarzericp@state.gov>
CC: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sun, 24 Jan 2010 16:09:21 -0500
Subject: Followup w Sec Napolitano
Thread-Topic: Followup w Sec Napolitano
Thread-Index: AcqdOX+x0D6YJ2s7QS+7tLkSF8OrVw==
Message-ID: <786762D781A7FF4FAC9060892B4044880368178E41@CLNTINET08.clinton.local>
Accept-Language: en-US
Content-Language: en-US
X-MS-Has-Attach:
X-MS-TNEF-Correlator:
acceptlanguage: en-US
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="utf-8"
Content-Transfer-Encoding: base64
MIME-Version: 1.0
Return-Path: HDR22@clintonemail.com
X-OriginalArrivalTime: 24 Jan 2010 21:09:22.0667 (UTC) FILETIME=[806AF3B0:01CA9D39]
X-TM-AS-Product-Ver: SMEX-8.0.0.4125-6.000.1038-17148.000
X-TM-AS-Result: No--15.161000-5.000000-31
X-TM-AS-User-Approved-Sender: No
X-TM-AS-User-Blocked-Sender: No

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 6, 2010 7:48 PM
To: H
Subject: Jack lew asking to talk to u.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 4:41 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: H: From Pat Lang on VMI... Sid

It's actually not too far past Richmond/Lynchburg so a late afternoon/evening trip is realistic. We can discuss tomorrow and give you a recommendation.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct)

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin [redacted]
Sent: Sun Jan 24 15:42:49 2010
Subject: Fw: H: From Pat Lang on VMI... Sid

Can we give a date? Should we? Could we do during week?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 14:11:44 2010
Subject: H: From Pat Lang on VMI... Sid

-----Original Message-----
From: Pat Lang [redacted]
To: sbwhoeop [redacted]
Sent: Sun, Jan 24, 2010 2:06 pm
Subject: RE: the CIA, etc.

Sidney

On a rainy, gloomy Sunday I write to you in the hope that we will have agreement from Secretary Clinton to accept the "distinguished Diplomat" award at VMI. I am assured by the Superintendent, General JHB Peay, and the department head of International Relations/Political Science, Colonel Jim Hentz that the award is hers if she will accept it. This is a "done deal."

All that is needed for her to receive an official letter from General Peay is for me to know that she will accept the award. They want to give her the award this year on a suitable day before graduation in late May. The letter will ask her to address the corps of cadets in a suitable on post (campus) setting. I would like to see it in Jackson Memorial Hall, a beautiful medieval revival building. An alternative setting would be the two story atrium in the Marshall Center for Leadership and Ethics. The award would be presented at the end of the address. Media coverage would be welcomed and assisted. She would be honored by being the reviewing person at a regimental review of the corps. A suitable dinner and or luncheon would be arranged.

If this is going to happen it would be a good idea to set the wheels in motion as soon as possible so that the staffs can work out the details.

Best

Pat Lang
VMI '62

RELEASE IN PART B5, B6

From: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, July 7, 2010 12:29 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Previous CTO proposal

Madam Secretary,

Jake mentioned that you asked for more information about a proposal made in 2005 for a global CT organization, and he asked me to find out a little about it. Below is some brief information on the proposal, which was made by Saudi Arabia:

The proposal made by the then crown prince (now king) in Feb. 2005 called for the establishment of an international counterterrorism center "under the auspices of the UN." The purpose of the organization would be to, among other things, "develop a mechanism for exchanging information and expertise between States" on a wide range of non-military counterterrorism issues, encourage the establishment of national and regional centers, and provide assistance to developing countries to deal with crises and terrorist acts. The center, as conceived in 2005, would also allow national counterterrorism coordinators from different countries and regions to meet and share information and experiences.

This proposal was endorsed by the OIC (and OIC countries reaffirm their support for the center each year at the UNGA), but has never received any serious consideration within the UN by non-OIC members. The Saudis continue to be interested in implementing the proposal. Most significantly, recently there have been discussions between the UN and Saudis as to how their proposal could be married with efforts to enhance the UN's capacity to support implementation of the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy by allowing the UN Counter-Terrorism Task Force (CTITF) Office and the different CTITF member entities to engage more actively and directly with CT experts/practitioners in capitals and have multilateral CT consultations wherever necessary.

[redacted] B5
But S/CT mentioned that, if we were to move forward on S/CT's CTO idea, we would hope to work closely with the Saudis.

Please let me know if you would like any further info.

Thanks,
Mike

Michael H. Fuchs
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-1709
[redacted] (cell) B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, July 7, 2010 6:06 PM
To: H
Subject: 2 calls:

Strobe talbott returned your call through ops. Also, colombian president uribe has put in a request to speak with you. He would like to thank you for your public statements on the free trade agreement.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, July 7, 2010 9:36 PM
To: H
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Phone call from FM Moratinos

MS, the Spanish FM just called through Ops -- he is boarding a plane from Cuba in about 30-40 minutes and would like to speak with you as soon as possible. Would you like Ops to connect the call to the residence or wait until tomorrow?

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, July 7, 2010 10:13 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: 2 calls:

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Wed Jul 07 22:10:16 2010
Subject: Re: 2 calls:

Let's call both tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jul 07 18:05:56 2010
Subject: 2 calls:

Strobe talbott returned your call through ops. Also, colombian president uribe has put in a request to speak with you. He would like to thank you for your public statements on the free trade agreement.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 5:54 PM
To: H
Subject: Cheryl wants to talk to you.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, July 7, 2010 10:13 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Phone call from FM Moratinos

Yes, doing now.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
redacted

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Wed Jul 07 22:09:24 2010
Subject: Re: Phone call from FM Moratinos

Just seeing this. Can you ask Ops to call him and connect him to my house?

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jul 07 21:35:30 2010
Subject: Phone call from FM Moratinos

MS, the Spanish FM just called through Ops -- he is boarding a plane from Cuba in about 30-40 minutes and would like to speak with you as soon as possible. Would you like Ops to connect the call to the residence or wait until tomorrow?

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted]direct)

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, July 7, 2010 11:35 PM
To: H
Subject: fyi, going around...

Fire the Mideast Policy Team!
by Leslie H. Gelb

July 7, 2010 | 2:38pm

President Barack Obama meets with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu in the Oval Office of the White House, July 6, 2010. (Gary Fabiano / Sipa Press) Obama's bow to Netanyahu was just the latest in a series of disastrous missteps in U.S. policy toward Israel. Leslie H. Gelb on who's to blame—and how the White House can get back on course.

Whoever advised President Obama to flay Israel publicly until this week should be fired. Only advisers with no experience in dealing with Israel could have believed that Israeli leaders like Prime Minister Netanyahu would bow to public attacks. And whoever advised Mr. Obama to kneel rhetorically to Mr. Netanyahu in public on Tuesday should also be fired. The only thing accomplished by this embarrassing tactic was to put Israel in a position to call the shots on Mideast policy for the rest of Obama's first term.

The real enemy of a negotiated settlement in the Mideast is not time; it's failure.

Were the culprits the non-foreign policy White House intimates – chief of staff Rahm Emanuel and political honcho David Axelrod? Axelrod knows nothing about this, and worse, Emanuel thinks he does because he lived in Israel. Was George Mitchell, the president's Mideast negotiator, the brains behind the foolishness? Surely, he's had enough experience working with Israelis to know better. Did General James Jones, the National Security Adviser, remain silent, again? And of course, where was Secretary of State Hillary Clinton? Strangely for someone so adept at pleasing Israel's constituents in America, she spent a lot of time this past year publicly beating up on Israeli leaders. Has she been led astray by the pro-Arab contingent of the State Department?

• Martin Indyk: New Hope for Mideast Peace

• Peter Beinart: Netanyahu's Latest Insult Or is the guilty party none other than President Obama himself? The more we find out about who makes decisions in the White House on every subject from nuclear weapons to coloring of Easter eggs, it turns out to be the man in the Oval Office himself. He's the expert. He's the decider. He invites everyone to state his or her piece or peace, then he tells them what to do – and seemingly without question, they do his bidding.

Mr. Obama started his White House tenure from a near-zero base of foreign policy knowledge and no experience in the Middle East. It was easy enough to guess this blissful state from his earliest decisions. He came out of the box demanding that Israel agree to suspend construction on the West Bank as a precondition for direct negotiations with the Palestinians. Anyone who knew anything about this situation surely would have told the president that the chances of Mr. Netanyahu agreeing to this "proposal" were zero, or minus zero. No Israeli leader, even a dovish one, would ever dream of beginning negotiations by conceding his major bargaining card. As the teenagers say, what were Obama and his advisers thinking? And yes, after the Israelis publicly humiliated Vice President Biden during his trip to the Holy Land by announcing they would start new construction in East Jerusalem, Washington had to respond vehemently. The Israelis had been arrogant and stupid on this one. They had weakened American power in the region. No U.S. president could let them get away with it. Clinton and others made strong public statements of criticism, and those were fine. But Mr. Obama then allowed Mr. Netanyahu to come ahead with his planned visit to D.C. – and publicly humiliated him. The U.S. president let the Israeli prime minister cool his heels for hours before meeting with him, then wouldn't shake his hand when he departed. There's no surer way to unite a nation behind its leader, even a controversial one like Netanyahu, than to have a foreign leader humiliate him.

This brilliant tactic – thought of by Obama's advisers or the president himself – accomplished two things. It stiffened Israeli backs even further against being conciliatory about starting talks with the Palestinians. The Israeli government was not about to cave to American pressures. It also galvanized Israeli supporters in the United States – in particular within conservative parts of the Jewish community and the Republican Party. There went Mr. Obama's support for pressing Israel even in private.

To top this all off with Tuesday's meeting, full of smiles and the adoption of Israeli-desired language on almost every topic, only made matters worse. It made the situation look as if the American president had been cowed by Jewish control of American politics. That certainly pleased American and Israeli hawks, but it did not please others who want to see genuine progress in Mideast talks.

There is a time and place for Washington to put pressure on Israel. Mr. Obama and his team picked every wrong time and place. The right occasion to squeeze is when the negotiations have reached the point where both sides have given and where both must give more to close the deal. Only at that point does pressure make sense. All parties would get a real shot at peace in return for their concessions.

To be sure, many ask at this point – How do you get to that point? The answer is not to browbeat the parties to scurry to the negotiating table. That tactic simply never pays off. The answer is to build conditions beyond the negotiating table, conditions in the political community in both Israel and Palestine, that would support compromises at the table. The British pushed the Catholics and Protestants to make concessions year after year, only to fail time and again, only to further inflame feelings all around and spur greater violence. Finally, London focused on getting Protestant and Catholic women to form common groups to support compromise. London did as much with various business communities that evolved into backers of mutual concessions as well. Only then did parties know that they had support for compromises, their negotiations got somewhere, and they reached agreement. That's what needs to be done between Israel and the Palestinians.

We hear time and again that the enemy of peace in the Middle East is time, and that time is running out. Perhaps that is what has caused Mr. Obama and his team to misstep so badly; they think it's a race against the clock. Do something now or fail. But the real enemy of a negotiated settlement in the Mideast is not time; it's failure. Neither Israel nor the Palestinians nor the United States can afford to fail again. After yet another failure, it could well result in perpetual violence.

To set his Arab-Israeli policy on a sensible course, Mr. Obama needs to search for new advisors who know how to get things done in the Middle East, hire them, and listen to them.

Leslie H. Gelb, a former New York Times columnist and senior government official, is author of Power Rules: How Common Sense Can Rescue American Foreign Policy (HarperCollins 2009), a book that shows how to think about and use power in the 21st century. He is president emeritus of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Get a head start with the Morning Scoop email. It's your Cheat Sheet with must reads from across the Web. Get it.

For inquiries, please contact The Daily Beast at editorial@thedailybeast.com.

URL: http://www.thedailybeast.com/blogs-and-stories/2010-07-07/obama-gets-more-bad-advice-on-israel-leslie-gelb/p/

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Toiv, Nora F <ToivNF@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 6:53 PM
To: H
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: RE: Need a favor

Yes. I'll have them for you before you leave State in the morning.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 6:33 PM
To: Toiv, Nora F
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Need a favor

Nora--

Cheryl has emailed dozens of memos about Haiti to me this weekend. Can you please print them and organize them in chrono order for me for my trip tomorrow or send to Lauren so she can do? Thx.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 8:30 PM
To: H
Subject: [redacted] cell. Funeral tomorrow. B6

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 8:56 PM
To: H
Cc: Doug Band; Justin Cooper
Subject: CONCEPT NOTE - donor coordination

HRC

Attached and below is a concept note for how the donor coordination and leadership for Haiti's reconstruction could be established, with key being, given Haitian's critical voice. It is modeled after tsunami entity that was created by GOI.

(Doug/Justin – can you get to WJC this evening?)

[redacted] B5

The assumptions underpinning this approach are at the bottom of the email.

cdm

---

From: Jean-Louis Warnholz [mailto:[redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 7:05 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Concept note - pls confirm receipt - TRYING TO REACH YOU

Cheryl

Please see draft attached.

Best, JL

[redacted] B5

Page Denied

Page Denied

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:40 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Doctors report from Haiti

Depressing

B5

See not only Mike's email – really see the incoming one.

cdm

---

From: Posner, Michael H
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 6:21 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Doctors report from Haiti

Cheryl

This came to me through a doctor friend of Harold's and mine. It is a pretty grim snapshot from a group of doctors ( I think from Mt Sinai hospital in NY) who returned from Haiti late last week .Our friend , Michael Hausman , is a terrific hand surgeon who was trying to get down there to help . I was reluctant to send this to you because I know how hard you and many other people have been working to relieve suffering and that you and others are working round the clock. Nonetheless I thought you might be interested in their impressions so I am sending it to you as a data point.

Please feel free to share this with others.

Best

Mike

---

From: Hausman, Michael [mailto:

B6

Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 8:17 AM
To: mrhausman
Subject: Fw: OR Report - Worth the Read!

From: "Dean Lorich" <
Date: Thu, 21 Jan 2010 00:11:38
To: Christopher Born<
Cc: Helfet<

Subject: Re: Haiti

Chris
Thanks much appreciated.

I believe we went in with a reasonably comprehensive service we wanted to provide acute trauma care in an orthopedic disaster. Our plan was to be at a hospital where we could utilize our abilities as trauma surgeons treat the acute injuries involved in an orthopaedic disaster. We expected many amputations however came with a philosophy that would reasonably start limb salvage in what we thought was a salvageable limb.

David Helfet put a team together which included:
2 orthopaedic trauma surgeons
3 orthopaedic trauma fellows
2 highly skilled anesthiologists
1 general surgery trauma surgeon
2 synthes reps who were also scrub techs
1 trauma nurse practioner to do triage
2 OR nurses

Our equipment including a huge amount of anesth medications and equipment, ability to construct 150 ex fix both small and large, OR equipment including scalpels etc, OR soft goods, splint material, OR prep material.

We also had a plan of physician and equipment replacemnt that was dynamic where w/i 24hrs we could bring in what was necessary on the Synthes private jet.

We thought the plan was a good one.

We were incredibly naïve.

Disaster management on the ground was nonexistent. The difficulties in getting in despite the intelligence we had from people on the ground and david helfet's high political connections with Partner's in Health as well as the Clintons only portended the difficulties we would have once we arrived.

We started out friday morning, got a slot to get in friday that was eventually cancelled when we were on the runway to be rescheduled the next day. We diverted to the DR and planned on arriving in P OP saturday.

Once on the ground the hospital we had intelligence that was up and running with 2 OR's General Hospital was included severely in the earthquake and not capable of running functioning OR's as there was no running water and only a limited electrical supply on generator.

We quickly took our second option
Community Hospital of Haiti. We found approx 750 pt in the hospital upon our initial eval, the hospital had running water, electricity and 2 functional OR's
Our naivette did not expect that the 2 anesth machines would not work, there would be 1 cautery for the hospital, autoclave that fit instruments the size of a cigar box, no sterile saline, no functioning fluoro and no local staff only a ragtag group of voluntary health providers who like us had made it there on there own.

To summarize we had no clue the medical infrastructure of the country was so poor.

As we got up and running in the OR and organized the patients for surgery we communicated our new needs back to Synthes and more supplies were loaded for a second trip - these included battery operated pulse lavage, a huge supply of saline, soft goods in the OR. This plane landed as planned sunday pm, equipment was loaded on a truck and subsequent hijacked between the airport and the hospital.

At the hospital we had zero security despite promises form NYPD and NYFD to provide that to us.

Our philosophy was to work like this was a marathon run the OR's around the clock with the idea that we would have a defined extraction time of 11pm tues. The plane that extracted us would come in with a new medical staff compliment to replace us. Equipment included urgent things to maximize issues that were nonexistent in the hospital that would enable us to provide better and more efficient care:
2 portable anesth machines
2electrocautery
2 portable monitors for the pacu
2autoclaves
Replacement exfix
Things that didn't arive with the previous flight

That planes slot was cancelled by the military at 6am tues.
We also previously had seen daylight in the remaining patients monday night haviving completed approx 100 surgeries. However on tues morning we found a huge # of new patients. The hospital was forced to undergo lockdown closing its gates to the outside and outside crowd becoming angry.

We also noted tues morning that many of the patients we were operating on were becoming septic.
We finished operating at noon tues, the last surgery our group assisting an obstetrician on a caesarian and resuscitating a baby that was not breathing.

We decided as a group the situation for us at the hospital was untenable supplies were running out, team was exhauted, safety a huge concern, and no extraction plan with resupply. We decided to make our way to airport thru the help of a hospital benefactor. Jamaican soldiers with M-16 were necessary to escort us out with our luggage as the crowd outside saw us abandoning the hospital.

We made it to airport on back of a pickup track, got onto the tarmac, hailed a commercial plane that carried cargo to montreal and had private jet pick us up there.

The issues we were unprepared for and witnessed were
1. The amount of human devastation
2. The complete lack of a medical infrastructure in the country

3. The lack of support of the haitian medical community
4. The complete lack of any organization on the ground. Noone was in charge, we had the first functional up and running hospital in the P OP area yet noone and I me NOONE came to the hospital to assess what we were doing, what we were capable of doing and what we would need, to be more efficient. The fact that the military could not or would not protect the resupply equipment on sunday or let the tues flight come in says it all.
5. Lack of any security at all at the hospital

I would take away that disasters like this need organization on a much higher level than we had with the clear involvement and approval of the military from the beginning.

Currently there is Noone obviously running the show and care is in chaotic at best. MD's are coming in country with no plan of what the are going to do. Surgeons that expect to just show up and operate are delusional as to what there role would be as without a complement of support staff and supplies they would be of limited or no value.

`I hope this helps. We all felt as though we abandoned these patients and that country and feel terrible. Our role now being back in NY is to expose the inadequacies of the system to the media in the hopes of effecting a change in this system immediatly. We feel that the only way to really help now is an urgent programtic change and organization in the support of the medical staff on the ground and what is critically needed to expeditiosly bring in.

Cherrios on the tarmac are not getting it done on these patients which clearly would be savable if good care could urgently be provided.

Please share this email with everyone and anyone you find might help.

Good luck
Dean

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:55 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Huffington Post piece on Internet Speech

FYI

-----Original Message-----
From: Alec Ross [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 6:05 PM
To: Cheryl Mills; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: one more

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/jose-antonio-vargas/internet-freedom-hilla ry_b_431830.html

Internet Freedom, Hillary Clinton and Being the Web's First Global Diplomat (VIDEO)

When it comes to education and how students learn in the 21st century, when it comes to developing businesses and encouraging entrepreneurship in a flattening digital marketplace, when it comes to forming social connections regardless of geographic, linguistic and cultural borders -- when it comes to promoting democracy and protecting the rights of individuals around the world -- no two words, no other phrase, holds more value. It may sound trite but it's true -- just ask students and activists in Iran and China. With the Internet comes freedom. With freedom comes the Internet. In countless ways, for many people, the Internet is freedom.

Hillary Clinton underlined that reality in a bold, impassioned speech at the Newseum in Washington, D.C. this morning. Words like "bold" and "impassioned" are not usually found in most of the mainstream media's caricature of Clinton. Nevertheless, the Secretary of State gave by far the most important speech about Internet freedom delivered by a top U.S. official. What makes it all the more notable is the fact that it was given by arguably the most recognizable female political figure in the world. In parts of the Middle East, women are beaten and killed by relatives who find out they are using sites like Twitter and Facebook. "Honor" beatings, they're called.

"Given the magnitude of the challenges we're facing, we need people around the world to pool their knowledge and creativity to help rebuild the global economy, protect our environment, defeat violent extremism and build a future in which every human being can realize their God-given potential," said Clinton, who announced a new $15 million project to help more women, young people and citizen groups to get online. (WATCH: Video of her speech is below.)

Clinton, speaking in broad strokes and finer details, outlined what she called the "five key freedoms of the Internet age."
Freedom to connect online anywhere. Freedom of speech. Freedom of worship.
Freedom from fear of cyber attacks. "In an interconnected world," she said, "an attack on one nation's networks can be an attack on all."
Freedom of "want" -- which means that the here-comes-everybody ethos of the Web, the fact that we can bear witness to each other online, can be leveraged in helping relieve suffering worldwide.

On the Twitterverse, where Internet observers and activists commented on Clinton's remarks and her subsequent Q&A in real time, some took note of her "disappointing" answers regarding China's alleged cyber attacks targeted at human rights activists. And inevitably, immediate coverage of the speech in our conflict-driven mainstream media, from the

New York Times to the Associated Press, focused on the China-Google dispute, which is being closely watched by human rights activists, government officials and Internet companies. But the overall meaning and message of her remarks, beyond the China-Google stand-off, cannot be overstated. The Internet, after all, was born in America, created by our researches and funded by our government. With help and input from other countries, the Web's evolving ethos and guiding principles should be shaped by America -- and, naturally, by America's top diplomat.

"Sec. Clinton once and for all established the fact that free speech and free enterprise can no longer be achieved unless we have Internet freedom," Andrew Rasiej, founder of the Personal Democracy Forum, an annual conference on technology's impact on politics and policy, told me shortly after Clinton's remarks. He called her speech nothing short of a "milestone" in the future of American foreign policy. "

"In a world where billions are connected with each other through technology -- through the Internet and mobile phones -- it is imperative that governments recognize that it's easier and faster for people to connect with each other than for governments to connect with their citizens. Any government that fails to understand this dynamic will left in the history books," Rasiej continued."

Less than two weeks ago, Clinton hosted a nearly two-hour dinner for some of the tech industry's leading thinkers and innovators. It was a small, intimate affair, and guests included Twitter creator Jack Dorsey, Google CEO Eric Schmidt and Howcast CEO and co-founder Jason Liebman, who wrote about the event for HuffPostTech in a blog titled "Facebook, YouTube and Twitter Are Tools For Diplomacy." Rasiej was one of the guests. Clinton is interested in how technology can spur innovation within the State Department and in countries that the U.S. has interest in supporting, Rasiej said. Accompanying Clinton in the dinner was her senior staff and her growing new media department; most recently, Katie Jacobs Stanton, a former Google exec who joined the White House as its director of citizen participation, joined the State Department.

There's a bit of irony at work here. Early in the long, bruising primary campaign that pitted the establishment-backed former first lady turned New York senator against the little-known insurgent junior senator from Illinois, Clinton was considered less Web-savvy than Barack Obama. Hers was a top-down, command-and-control operation, online observers suggested. In fact, the first online attack ad that spread on YouTube and foreshadowed the narrative of their historic fight for the Democratic nomination portrayed Clinton as the old PC and Obama as the shiny new Mac.

"After having lost to Obama, especially to Obama's use of the Internet in attracting and mobilizing supporters," Rasiej pointed out, "Clinton is now leading the way within the Obama administration in recognizing the transformational opportunities that the Internet can provide."

Using DipNote, the State Department's blog, recording videos from all corners of the world, especially where girls and women are considered second-class citizens, leveraging technological tools that, as we're seeing in the response and outpouring of support for Haiti, allow us to become "global citizens," Clinton can be the Web's first global diplomat.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 8, 2010 5:20 PM
To: H
Subject: Maggie Williams called you back

She will be around/reachable the rest of the evening.

B6

Ops also has her phone number on file.
###

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:33 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Jim's going to call you

fyi

---

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 4:32 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: Jim's going to call you

Dear Cheryl -
He's going to call your [redacted] number. We're both hoping, on one had, that you're not there and you're at home. Please feel free to call his cell phone [redacted] -- or he'll call you again on Monday. In the meantime, he asked me to pass along to you this simple but heartfelt comment: "Please tell her I've never been prouder of my government. I mean that. Sincerely." B6

Cindy

---
Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:36 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Think I may have sent this but interesting insights and overlapping ones.

From: Peter Harrell < > B6
To: Harrell, Peter E
Sent: Sun Jan 24 14:56:20 2010
Subject: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Cheryl,

I had a good conversation with Bob this afternoon. The major points he wanted to emphasize were the ones he had included in his emails to you, including:

- "Rebalancing" Haitian development: Redevelopment should occur nationwide and encourage a more even distribution of the Haitian population. The international community should not rebuild Port-au-Prince at the expense of the rest of the country. Bob thinks that nationwide rebuilding will also reduce the chances of elite capture of the rebuilding effort, since elites are strongly concentrated in Port-au-Prince.

- Transparency: Bob is cautious about just throwing money at the problem. He thinks the international community should establish a new norm of transparency in Haiti, for example, to ensure that there isn't widespread corruption, price gauging, grants of monopolies, etc.

- Link the Haitian business community to other business communities: Bob thinks that if all the rebuilding is done by the usual suspects in the Haitian business community, they'll simply build back the country they had before. He recommends working to bring in foreign investors, and then linking foreign investors and leading Haitian businessmen (e.g., in a business roundtable) to socialize better business practices in Haiti.

- On the issue of legal authorities for reconstruction: Bob recommends exploring whether presidential commission-like structures could be empowered to resolve the legal problems likely to arise as barriers to reconstruction.

- Duration of US presence: Bob cautioned that most Haitians would be happy to see a long-term US military presence in the country, though this would likely have adverse reputational consequences in the hemisphere for the United States. Given that hurricane season will begin in the fall, Bob recommends that when we do draw down, we make clear that we will return if needed.

- Getting people to work: Bob argued that NGOs may not be the best vehicles for getting Haitians to work (e.g., through job training, etc.). In short, they're too nice. Many Haitians have never held a regular job, are unfamiliar with showing up on time, etc. They'll need a bit of tough love and discipline. Bob though ex-military might set the right kind of example.

- Diaspora: Engaging the diaspora is clearly important, but we do not want to support widespread repatriation of the diaspora as NGO employees, reconstruction experts, etc., at the expense of Haitians who never left. This reinforces wage differentials and social discontent about returnees.

- Conditional cash transfers: Bob thinks that conditional cash transfer programs have a lot of potential to improve education and the delivery of health services in Haiti.

--
Peter E. Harrell

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 8, 2010 6:33 PM
To: H
Subject: you were a complete star with the Jefferson Fellows

They were very grateful. Thanks.

Anne-Marie Slaughter
Director of Policy Planning
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:06 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Jim's going to call you - MCGOVERN mcgovern

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:56 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Jim's going to call you

Who's Jim?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 22:32:31 2010
Subject: FW: Jim's going to call you

fyi

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 4:32 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: Jim's going to call you

Dear Cheryl -
He's going to call your [redacted] number. We're both hoping, on one had, that you're not there and you're at home. B6
Please feel free to call his cell phone [redacted] -- or he'll call you again on Monday. In the meantime, he asked me to pass along to you this simple but heartfelt comment: "Please tell her I've never been prouder of my government. I mean that. Sincerely."

Cindy

---
Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: cheryl.mills
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: URGENCE

Agree - it we also have folks who need hosp care for a period; there are several things like this we should consider Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Mon, 25 Jan 2010 07:15:13
To: 'cheryl.mills
Subject: Fw: URGENCE

We should help students whose education has been interrupted finish here or in French speaking countries. See story below.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman <
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 20:13:09 2010
Subject: FW: URGENCE

Dear Hillary,

I just arrived back but my heart and mind are back in Haiti..... I am thankful that you helped me get there and supported the resurrection of the hospital in just one week. General Keen was key in reestablishing the hospital (and I got to appreciate MRE's). When we got there there were 1500 patients and 400 corpses in a deserted hospital — our team of 7 was the only group there.... And slowly over the week we have built a functioning hospital again.

Meeting and working with Paul has been good for the soul---- although when I felt I wanted to meet him – this was not the way...But I think I am in this for the long haul...

Below is an email for President Clinton (it was good to see him and Chelsea and Mark there) I promised to forward this email by a medical student he spoke to in the operating room .... Desperate to find a way to continue his education. Attached is picture of him and I in front of the surgery area. And there were 3 more I met a few nights later who had volunteered since the first days but had not eaten in a week (I managed to gather bag of biscuits from the world food program from behind 3 padlocks after 1 hours of searching – They slept on the hospital grounds because their homes were destroyed.

I am not sure what we can do... But I promised to pass this on!

Thank you for who you are in the world.. God bless you!

Your friend in gratitude,

Mark

------ Forwarded Message
From: [redacted] B6
Date: Sun, 24 Jan 2010 18:22:03 -0600
To: Mark Hyman <[redacted]>
Subject: URGENCE

Dear M. President
My name is [redacted] the young man who took to you on the Hospital in Haiti.
With all my Heart i want to thank you so much for helping Haiti in this terrible situation,... Thank you so much for your visit in the country, we really appreciate that, so thank you so much...
As you know, all the universities are broken, so now we get no way to continue our education... And we are with our family in the streets, so life is become more difficult as we never imagine.... I know that the USA used to help Haiti with Scholarship, but is really sad to tell you that the kind of young man as me, never get chance to benefice a scholarship, just because we are in the last categories in the society (the poor persons)....So, In that Situation we need your help more than ever, Please, please, please M. President we are "3" friends are helping in the hospital since after the catastrophe, and now we are thinking about how to continue to sturdy, So Please, please, please help us have a scholarship in USA... And we promiss to come back after to teach, and help the orders... God will Bless you for that M. President because we are really, really, really in need...
Thank you so much to gave me a chance to talk to you, when you was in the country, and thank you for reading this mail, God bless you...
[redacted]

------ End of Forwarded Message

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 8, 2010 7:04 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Read-out: Ambassador Eikenberry's phone call with HAC-FO Chairwoman Nita Lowey

FYI.

From: Holbrooke, Richard
Sent: Thursday, July 08, 2010 7:01 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: Read-out: Ambassador Eikenberry's phone call with HAC-FO Chairwoman Nita Lowey

FYI for you and HRC

Ambassador Eikenberry and Chairwoman Lowey had a positive conversation that lasted more than an hour. He thanked the Chairwoman for her leadership and support and for her willingness and commitment to work with her colleagues to secure the significant amounts of funding that is so essential to the success of our Mission's programs and efforts. They had a very candid and detailed conversation about the elements, causes, and contributors to corruption in Afghanistan and the various interagency programs that are partnering with Afghan institutions to promote transparency and investigate corrupt practices and prosecute corrupt actors.

Chairwoman Lowey appreciated Ambassador Eikenberry's detailed analysis and thorough review of the conditions in Afghanistan. She stated that there is an absolute need to ensure meaningful and effective accountability of US taxpayer funds appropriated by Congress. She conceded that we are not going to create an utopian society free of corruption, but stressed the need for accountability and transparency. She was particularly concerned with various reports that officials within the GIRoA are impeding the Embassy's efforts to assist the Afghans in investigating and prosecuting corrupt actors. The Chair asked if there are enough credible partners in the Afghan government who are committed to good governance and transparency. Ambassador Eikenberry provided an assessment of where he thought the challenges are, the next steps to be taken, and how progress can be made going forward.

The Chair reiterated her longstanding support for assistance programs, especially education and health, and she asked Ambassador Eikenberry if he felt we are making progress in the areas of health, education, and agriculture. He provided a review of the various health, education, and agriculture programs and the multitude of changes that have been implemented to ensure greater transparency, accountability, and flexibility of funds and how these changes have better equipped the embassy to hold contractors accountable.

The Ambassador raised the certification of Ministries program; how we are seeking to certify additional ministries once the Ministries achieve the appropriate level of financial accountability standards; and how these efforts will help develop Afghan capacity and ultimately allow us to increase the amount of assistance that goes through the Afghan government. They discussed the NSP program, and the Chair reiterated her support for the program and how she had consistently increased funding for NSP.

Ambassador Eikenberry explained the Afghan public's reaction to reports that the assistance money had been removed and he respectfully encouraged her to reinstate the funding as quickly as possible so as to send a clear message to Afghans that we intend to have an enduring civilian assistance presence. He invited her to visit Afghanistan for several days and travel the country to see first-hand the progress that has been made and the challenges and opportunities that remain. She thanked him for his invitation and suggested that any visit might have to be deferred until November.

Several times she asked how the hearings could be helpful or if the hearings could be useful to shine a spotlight on particular areas, and she welcomed Ambassador Eikenberry's thoughts on that issue. Ambassador Eikenberry agreed to give that idea some additional consideration and to speak with the Chair on Tuesday morning.

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:43 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 9/25/10 Monday

8:10 am ARRIVE State Department

8:15 am BILATERAL w/ITALIAN FOREIGN MINISTER FRANCO FRATTINI
8:45 am Secretary's Conference Room *Official photo in East Hall preceding.

8:45 am PRESS PRE-BRIEF
8:50 am Secretary's Office

8:50 am JOINT PRESS AVAILABILITY w/ITALIAN FM FRANCO FRATTINI
9:00 am Treaty Room

9:00 am DEPART State Department *En route Andrews AFB

9:25 am ARRIVE Andrews AFB

9:30 am DEPART Andrews Air Force Base via Air Force Aircraft Tail #

9:45 am SECURE PHONE CALL w / GEORGE MITCHELL

10:55 am ARRIVE Montreal-Pierre Elliott Trudeau International Airport

11:00am DEPART Montreal-Pierre Elliott Trudeau International Airport
En route International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

11:35 am ARRIVE ICAO

11:45 am WORKING SESSION PART II: "TRANSITION FROM HUMANITARIAN 12:05 pm NEEDS TO LONGER TERM STRATEGIC VISION" ICAO Council Chamber

12:15 pm MEETING w/CANADIAN PRIME MINISTER HARPER
12:45 pm Meeting Room, 3rd Floor *Camera Spray at top

12:50 pm FAMILY PHOTO w/CONFERENCE PARTICIPANTS
12:55 pm Delegates' Lounge

1:00 pm SESSION: "RECONSTRUCTION AND BEYOND: A VISION FOR THE
3:15 pm NEW HAITI" ICAO Council Chamber *Camera Spray at top.

3:30 pm JOINT PRESS AVAILABILITY w/FM CANNON, PM BELLERIVE,
4:00 pm AND OTHERS TBD

4:15 pm MEDIA INTERVIEW TBD
4:40 pm Media Room Tbd

4:50 pm DEPART ICAO *En route Montreal-Pierre Elliott Trudeau International Airport

5:25 pm ARRIVE Montreal-Pierre Elliott Trudeau International Airport

5:30 pm DEPART Montreal-Pierre Elliott Trudeau International Airport via Air Force Aircraft Tail

7:00pm ARRIVE Andrews Air Force Base

7:10 pm DEPART Andrews Air Force Base *En route Private Residence

7:30 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Rice, Susan E (USUN) <RiceSE@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 8, 2010 7:47 PM
To: H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Need to talk tonight, if at all possible

Hillary,

I would like to share the outcome of the meeting I had with Netanyahu today. I need some guidance from you urgently and before I talk to SG (at Netanyahu's short fuse request).

I am reachable through Ops.

Many thanks,

Susan

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Capricia Marshall
Sent: Thursday, July 8, 2010 9:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Are you back from China yet?

Yes! A great trip.

On Thu, Jul 8, 2010 at 9:02 PM, H <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 9, 2010 10:40 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: REVISED: CFR 2.0 draft
Attachments: CFR 2.0 draft -v5.doc

Below and attached is a proposed draft for a speech next Thursday at CFR. You'll recall that we discussed this with you at the last speech meeting. The idea is to give a speech one year after your last CFR address that updates and amplifies the frame you outlined, and fills it in with the work of the past year. The speech will also underscore the continuity between your speech and the National Security Strategy.

B5

The below draft still needs a good bit of work, but we have between now and next Thursday to get it into shape. AMS was initially skeptical, but I think she believes the speech is heading in the right direction (she'll write you with specific comments ... I have my own suggestions for further improvement) and that on balance it should be given. Derek is a strong proponent of the speech, and Jim, who has not read a draft, embraced the concept.

DRAFT

SECRETARY OF STATE HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON REMARKS AT COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS WASHINGTON, DC JULY 15, 2010

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

Thank you.

###

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 9, 2010 11:32 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: REVISED: CFR 2.0 draft

Are you up for that given your other demands?

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, July 09, 2010 11:30 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: REVISED: CFR 2.0 draft

What about delivering it in NY July 27?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jul 09 10:40:09 2010
Subject: FW: REVISED: CFR 2.0 draft

Below and attached is a proposed draft for a speech next Thursday at CFR. You'll recall that we discussed this with you at the last speech meeting. The idea is to give a speech one year after your last CFR address that updates and amplifies the frame you outlined, and fills it in with the work of the past year. The speech will also underscore the continuity between your speech and the National Security Strategy.

B5

The below draft still needs a good bit of work, but we have between now and next Thursday to get it into shape. AMS was initially skeptical, but I think she believes the speech is heading in the right direction (she'll write you with specific comments ... I have my own suggestions for further improvement) and that on balance it should be given. Derek is a strong proponent of the speech, and Jim, who has not read a draft, embraced the concept.

DRAFT

SECRETARY OF STATE HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON REMARKS AT COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS WASHINGTON, DC JULY 15, 2010

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

Thank you.

###

RELEASE IN PART B5

DRAFT

Schwerin – v5

SECRETARY OF STATE HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
REMARKS AT COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS
WASHINGTON, DC
JULY 15, 2010

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

DRAFT

B5

Thank you.

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, July 9, 2010 1:13 PM
To: H
Cc: Diane Reynolds; Oscar Flores; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Delayed

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin
Cc: Diane Reynolds; Oscar Flores; 'hanleymr@state.gov' <hanleymr@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jul 09 13:12:04 2010
Subject: Delayed

We've just been told we have a ground stop until 2 because of thunderstorms. Pls tell Liz we're running late. I'll give you updates.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 9, 2010 4:54 PM
To: H; Lew, Jacob J
Subject: FY 2011

Tim Rieser said today our allocation in the Senate for FY11 is $2.6 billion below our request. Haven't seen a break out of the numbers yet, but that is far better than how the House treated us. We are expecting the Senate to mark-up State/Foreign ops on July 22nd.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, July 9, 2010 7:43 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: CFR speech

You have many better things to think about this Friday night, and I hope [redacted] But let me add my 2 cents on the speech. [redacted]

B6

B5

Best,
AM

RELEASE IN PART
B5, B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, July 10, 2010 3:06 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Fw: Your Phone Call to President Karzai

FYI. We are revising call sheet for call to Karzai - potentially Sunday.

---

From: Eikenberry, Karl W
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Mills, Cheryl D; Holbrooke, Richard; Wayne, E Anthony; Petraeus, David H GEN MIL USA USCENTCOM CCCC/CCCC [redacted] B6
Sent: Sat Jul 10 12:36:22 2010
Subject: FW: Your Phone Call to President Karzai

Madam Secretary:

There are two recommended topics for your upcoming phone call with President Karzai:

[redacted] B5

B5

B5

Respectfully,

Karl

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B1,B5,1.4(D),B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, July 10, 2010 3:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Your Phone Call to President Karzai

[redacted] 1.4(D)
B1

Pakistanis will go to Kabul just before the conference to try to bring it home. Checking with Holbrooke to see what is necessary on Pakistani side.

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 07/09/2035

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jul 10 15:10:40 2010
Subject: Re: Your Phone Call to President Karzai

What's status of Agreement?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Jul 10 15:05:47 2010
Subject: Fw: Your Phone Call to President Karzai

FYI. We are revising call sheet for call to Karzai - potentially Sunday.

---

From: Eikenberry, Karl W
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Mills, Cheryl D; Holbrooke, Richard; Wayne, E Anthony; Petraeus, David H GEN MIL USA USCENTCOM CCCC/CCCC [redacted] B6
Sent: Sat Jul 10 12:36:22 2010
Subject: FW: Your Phone Call to President Karzai

Madam Secretary:

There are two recommended topics for your upcoming phone call with President Karzai:

[redacted] B5

B5

B5

B5

Respectfully,

Karl

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Sunday, July 11, 2010 10:06 AM
To: H
Subject: H: fyi, leaked Luntz poll on Bibi policies; and many congrats to Huma! Sid

Below is a transcript from Israeli TV News Channel Ten on a leaked poll taken last week by Frank Luntz. Here's a summary:

1. 56% of Americans agree with the claim that there is a humanitarian crisis in Gaza;
2. 43% of Americans agree with the claim that people in Gaza are starving;
3. 34% of Americans support the Israeli operation against the Flotilla;
4. 20% of Americans "felt support" for Israel following announcement of easing of Gaza closure.

Frank Luntz analyses Netanyahu's media performance in the flotilla affair
The figures are troubling and worrisome. If that is the situation with our great friend the US, it is easy to imagine the situation in other, somewhat less sympathetic countries.
Channel Ten TV News, July 1 2010 20:38
Yaacov Eilon (host): Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is considered to make an extremely persuasive presentation in the world press. But a professional analysis by a US expert presented yesterday to his senior aides strongly criticizes him. Netanyahu's messages on the flotilla caused more harm than good. Our political correspondent Chico Menashe has obtained the report.
Chico Menashe: Criticism of Prime Minister Netanyahu's current PR messages and Israeli PR in general comes from the international elite of media consultants and pollsters and from the mouth of Frank Luntz, considered one of the leading American political consultants, a Republican pollster, a consultant to many governments throughout the world and to dozens of the biggest corporations in the US. He was asked by the Jewish organization The Israel Project to check the opinions of the American public on the messages Israel issued to the world during and after the flotilla events. The result is a harsh document that primarily criticizes the media strategy of the person considered Israel's number one propagandist in the world, Prime Minister Netanyahu.
Netanyahu: Once again Israel faces hypocrisy and a biased rush to judgment.
Chico Menashe: Every time Israeli speakers begin with accusing the international community, writes Luntz, they lose their audience. For example, Netanyahu's comments after the flotilla about the world hypocrisy were rejected by most of the American participants who listened to them. The findings were presented last night to senior members of Netanyahu's Bureau. Luntz checked the opinions with focus groups, not a poll. He warns of a dangerous slide in the public opinion of the only country considered pro-Israeli, the U.S. Israel misses simple opportunities to change world public opinion, he writes, and the consequences are significant. The American public increasingly hesitates to accept arguments that support Israeli positions.
Ehud Barak: There is no hunger in Gaza and no humanitarian crisis.
Netanyahu: There's no shortage of food, there's no shortage of medicine, there's no shortage of other goods.
Chico Menashe: Luntz says Israel must immediately stop using the argument that there is no hunger and no humanitarian crisis in Gaza. He says this fatally destroys Israel's credibility in light of the images on the television screens. Israel must admit that there is a problem, he says, to gain the listeners' sympathy [emphasis mine]. Luntz finds the troubling figure that 56% of participants agree with the claim that there is a humanitarian crisis in Gaza, and no less astonishing is that 43% of participants from the American public agree with the claim that people in Gaza are starving. But even lifting the closure that was supposed to improve Israel's image missed the opportunity, according to Luntz.
Netanyahu: Yesterday an important decision was made by the security cabinet. Its meaning is clear. On the one hand, allowing civilian goods into Gaza, and on the other hand maintaining the military blockade of Hamas.
Chico Menashe: The statement by Netanyahu's bureau of lifting the closure missed the opportunity to gain support in international public opinion [emphasis mine]. Only 20% of the Americans polled felt support of Israel following the statement. According to Luntz, this is the summary of the flotilla damage in American public opinion: Only 34% of the American public support the Israeli operation against the flotilla, and he says that is a dangerously low percentage.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, July 11, 2010 10:51 AM
To: H
Subject: Steinberg

Ms: dep. steinberg has put in a request through ops to speak with you. He says it can be unsecure.
###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, July 11, 2010 11:05 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Pls clear: 15th Anniversary of Srebrenica Genocide

Fyi - we are putting out the following today.

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Reines, Philippe I; Fuchs, Michael H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jul 11 09:35:52 2010
Subject: Pls clear: 15th Anniversary of Srebrenica Genocide

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

15th Anniversary of Srebrenica Genocide

Today we remember the tragic events in Srebrenica fifteen years ago. I join President Obama and the people of the United States in offering our deepest condolences on this most solemn occasion. We honor the memories of the victims and mourn with their families.

The United States stands with Bosnia and Herzegovina, and all countries in the region who wish to foster peace and reconciliation. We remain committed to ensuring that those responsible for these crimes face justice. We recognize that there can be no lasting peace without justice. It is only by bringing all responsible parties to account for their crimes that we will truly honor Srebrenica's victims.

We are duty-bound – to the victims, to their surviving family members, and to future generations – to prevent such atrocities from happening again. Our common faith in the value of freedom and peace unifies us and drives us to act. That is why we are committed to working with all the communities that make up Bosnia and Herzegovina to move forward and build a pluralistic, democratic state that can take its rightful place in the Euro-Atlantic community. A prosperous, free, and unified Bosnia and Herzegovina is the most worthy monument to those who lost their lives at Srebrenica and the best guarantee against such a tragedy ever repeating itself.

###

Drafted: EUR/PPD: TWeik

Cleared:

EUR/FO: NMcEldowney (ok)
EUR/SCE: JBuzbee (ok)
EUR/Press: MCavey (ok)
DRL/EUR: SCorke (ok)
P: TWaser (ok)
D: AScanlon ()
S/P: EGaudiosi (info)

PA:

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, July 11, 2010 12:08 PM
To: H
Subject: Karzai

Ms:
I apologize if this email is duplicating anyone else's efforts (we are trying to leave huma alone today!) Jake has put forth a recommendation for you to call karzai today, and also for you to speak with holbrooke in advance of that call. There is an updated call sheet which has been faxed to your residence in chappaqua, and should be there now.
Let me know if I can help in any other way.
###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, July 12, 2010 2:00 PM
To: Posner, Michael H; Sullivan, Jacob J; Tillemann, Tomicah S
Subject: FW: Kracow Speech

FYI

---

From: Suzy George [mailto
Sent: Monday, July 12, 2010 12:30 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Valmoro, Lona J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: FW: Kracow Speech

B6

All:

Below is a note from Ken Wollack for Secretary Clinton regarding the Kracow speech. Sorry for emailing so many of you, wasn't sure where best to send it.

Thanks.
Suzy

---

From: Ken Wollack [mailto
Sent: Monday, July 12, 2010 11:02 AM
To: Suzy George
Subject: Kracow Speech

Suzy,

Thank you for passing this on to the appropriate people.

Ken

Dear Madam Secretary:

I was in Krakow, along with our chairman, Madeleine Albright, for the 10th anniversary celebration of the Community of Democracies. I just wanted to express our appreciation for your inspirational speech in defense of civil society. Your remarks were warmly received by the group assembled in Poland and sent an important signal to both friends and adversaries worldwide about America's commitment to fundamental human and political rights. From NDI's perspective, your words were also a message of solidarity to democratic activists who, in their peaceful struggle, can often feel isolated and neglected.

Thank you for your continuing interest and concern.

Sincerely,

Ken

Kenneth Wollack
President
National Democratic Institute
2030 M Street, NW, Fifth Floor
Washington, DC, 20036
202-728-5500 (Tel)
202-728-5555 (Fax)
email
website: www.ndi.org

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, July 12, 2010 8:06 PM
To: H

The gentleman you have talked to Bill Burns about has apparently gone to his country's interests section because he is unhappy with how much time it has taken to facilitate his departure. This could lead to problematic news stories in the next 24 hours. Will keep you posted.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, July 13, 2010 11:08 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: (Reuters) Obama names former Clinton budget chief Lew to head OMB

---

From: Morgan, Jack A
Sent: Tuesday, July 13, 2010 11:08 AM
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Subject: (Reuters) Obama names former Clinton budget chief Lew to head OMB

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - President Barack Obama will nominate Jacob Lew as the new director of the White House Office of Management and Budget, the White House said.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, July 14, 2010 5:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Iroquois Update

From: Crowley, Philip J
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Kirby, Michael D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Kennedy, Patrick F
Cc: Toner, Mark C; Macray, Rosemary R; Echard, John E Jr; Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Wed Jul 14 17:48:54 2010
Subject: Iroquois Update

A media update, CNN just called for a comment after the British rejected the letter. I told CNN that we provided the team/delegation the waiver letter earlier this afternoon. I quoted from it that the waiver, which applied to 28 individuals, was a limited authorization for departure from and re-entry in the United States. I made clear during the briefing that even though we granted the waiver they needed to gain visas from the UK. So, there is a sad ending to the story, but I also made clear during the briefing that the unique situation that they found themselves in stemmed from their decision not to apply for a U.S. passport. I'll keep you updated on the media play.

PJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, July 14, 2010 6:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Iroquois Update

---

From: Kirby, Michael D
To: Kirby, Michael D; Crowley, Philip J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Kennedy, Patrick F
Cc: Toner, Mark C; Macray, Rosemary R; Echard, John E Jr; Reines, Philippe I; Sprague, Brenda S; Brennan, John B
Sent: Wed Jul 14 17:56:20 2010
Subject: RE: Iroquois Update

Make that Delta 003.

Michael D. Kirby

Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary

Bureau of Consular Affairs

U.S. Department of State

---

From: Kirby, Michael D
Sent: Wednesday, July 14, 2010 5:52 PM
To: Crowley, Philip J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Kennedy, Patrick F
Cc: Toner, Mark C; Macray, Rosemary R; Echard, John E Jr; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: RE: Iroquois Update

PJ,

It is not the ending. We understand that the British have now agreed to allow those who benefited from our letter (in which we listed those whom we believe to be American citizens) to go to the UK. (To the best of my knowledge, the Canadians have not provided a similar letter to those whom they believe are Canadians.) We believe the group will be on Delta 0036 directly to Heathrow later today.

Michael

Michael D. Kirby

Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary

Bureau of Consular Affairs

U.S. Department of State

---

From: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Wednesday, July 14, 2010 5:49 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Kirby, Michael D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Kennedy, Patrick F
Cc: Toner, Mark C; Macray, Rosemary R; Echard, John E Jr; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Iroquois Update

A media update, CNN just called for a comment after the British rejected the letter. I told CNN that we provided the team/delegation the waiver letter earlier this afternoon. I quoted from it that the waiver, which applied to 28 individuals, was a limited authorization for departure from and re-entry in the United States. I made clear during the briefing that even though we granted the waiver they needed to gain visas from the UK. So, there is a sad ending to the story, but I also made clear during the briefing that the unique situation that they found themselves in stemmed from their decision not to apply for a U.S. passport. I'll keep you updated on the media play.

PJ

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, July 15, 2010 8:22 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: A few things..

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Thu Jul 15 06:57:15 2010
Subject: Fw: A few things..

----- Original Message -----
From: Mark Hyman
To: H
Sent: Sun Jul 11 16:06:03 2010
Subject: A few things..

Hi Hillary,

B6

Just wanted to let you know that the ARC did give a $10 million grant (reduced to $3.8 because of political reasons) - but it almost didn't get accepted by the Haitians because they didn't want oversight. But with Paul Farmer's help we created a joint oversight process with PIH, KPMG and the Ministry of Health. Sadly its slow going. But my cousin at the ARC is working to do the right things.... Any good words you can say about the ARC would be appreciated!

And we are trying to move things forward still...

As always, fondly,

Mark

------ Forwarded Message
From: Mark Hyman
Date: Sun, 11 Jul 2010 15:54:28 -0400
To: Huma Abedin <AbedinH@state.gov>
Subject: A few things..

###

B6

Dear Huma,

Just wanted to check in with you about a few things..

[redacted]

Thanks for letting me know.

Be well,

Mark

--
Mark Hyman, MD
Chairman, Institute for Functional Medicine Volunteer, Partners in Health Founder and Medical Director The UltraWellness Center
45 Walker Street
Lenox, MA 01240

[redacted]

------ End of Forwarded Message

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, July 15, 2010 8:56 AM
To: H
Subject: fyi

http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2010-07-14/americans-disappoving-of-obama-policies-poised-to-enable-republican-gains.html

Americans Disapproving Obama Poised to Enable Republican Gains

By John McCormick and Catherine Dodge - Jul 14, 2010

- Email
- Share
- Print

Chart: Poll Results

Attachment: Poll results and methodology

Americans disapprove of U.S. President Barack Obama's handling of almost every major issue and are deeply pessimistic about the nation's direction, offering a bullish environment for Republicans in the November congressional elections.

A majority or plurality disapproves of Obama's management of the economy, health care, the budget deficit, the overhaul of financial market regulations and the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico, according to a Bloomberg National Poll conducted July 9- 12. In addition, almost 6 in 10 respondents say the war in Afghanistan is a lost cause.

Almost two-thirds say they feel the nation is headed in the wrong direction, an even more sour assessment than in March when 58 percent felt that way. Two-thirds of independent voters are pessimistic, while just 56 percent of Democrats offer a vote of confidence.

"They don't see any solutions in sight," said J. Ann Selzer, president of Selzer & Co., a Des Moines, Iowa-based firm that conducted the nationwide survey. "They have been hammered by the economy and there is a disconnect between the lives Americans are living and Washington. They seem to have lost hope."

Poll respondents are divided on their congressional preference between Democrats and Republicans, with both sides getting 43 percent support. Among those who say they are most likely to vote, Republicans are favored, 48 percent to 40 percent. The Republican advantage is even greater among likely voters who view the election as exceptionally important, with Republicans beating Democrats 56 percent to 34 percent.

Control of Congress

For the Democrats, who control Congress and the White House, the survey shows the potential for losses in November, when voters will fill all 435 House seats, 36 Senate seats and 37 governorships. The outcome could affect Obama's ability to move his agenda through Congress for the two years leading up to his own 2012 re-election bid.

The fate of incumbents will depend to some extent on what happens to the economy in the next four months and whether unemployment drops much from its current 9.5 percent. A rising stock market could help as well. So far this year, the S&P 500 stock index has declined 1.8 percent.

The public's disenchantment with the president's policies doesn't extend to voter feelings about Obama himself, as he gets a job approval rating of 52 percent and personally is viewed favorably by 55 percent. Obama, 48, remains more popular than any of the Republican figures tested in the poll and is topped only by Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and General David Petraeus, the new commander of U.S. forces in Afghanistan, among a list of 15 people and political parties reviewed.

Republican Leaders

The only bright spot for Republican candidates is for Louisiana Governor Bobby Jindal, who gets a 32 percent favorable rating and an 18 percent unfavorable grade. Better-known party leaders such as former vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin and former House Speaker Newt Gingrich both have negative ratings that outweigh the positive views.

Although turnout in midterm elections is historically lower than in presidential races, the electorate is interested. Four- fifths of Americans who plan to vote say November's election is very or exceptionally important.

The likelihood to vote is strongest among older voters, Republicans and those with the highest incomes. Among those 55 and older, three-quarters say they will definitely vote, compared with 48 percent of those younger than 35. Four-fifths of Republicans say they will definitely vote, compared with 65 percent of Democrats and 62 percent of independents.

Referendum on Obama

Seeking to capitalize on the intensity expressed by voters, Republicans want to make the election a national referendum on Obama and the party in power, while the White House and Democrats argue it is about going forward, rather than backward to failed policies.

The challenge for Democrats will be to translate their vision of a better future into more positive feelings about the economy among voters. In the poll, Republicans have the advantage among the independents often critical to winning elections. Among independents likely to vote, Republican congressional candidates are preferred to Democrats, 50 percent to 29 percent.

"Anything that has been tried hasn't resulted in making anything better in the world where ordinary people live," Selzer said. "That's a bad scenario for incumbents of the majority party."

Incumbent Disadvantage

A third of poll participants say they would be less likely to vote for a candidate who has served in Congress for many years. About one-fifth of likely voters say the election is more about sending a message, while three-quarters say it is about picking the party that has the best ideas.

"I don't know what these people are thinking in Washington," says poll respondent Jeff Lockman, 41, a professional golfer and Republican from Malvern, Pennsylvania. "They are going in 10 different directions and they really don't know what to focus on."

The proportion who feel the nation is headed in the wrong direction is about the same as at this point in 1994, when Republicans took control of Congress, and 2006, when Democrats took over.

The public also has soured on Obama's foreign-policy priority, the war in Afghanistan. While the president has ordered an expansion of forces to turn the tide in a conflict where he says the U.S. has a critical stake, 58 percent say it is a lost cause, compared with 36 percent who say it can still be won. A slim majority of Republicans -- 52 percent -- say the U.S. can still win in Afghanistan, while 71 percent of Democrats say the conflict is lost.

Afghanistan Withdrawal

Six in 10 Americans say it would be best to stick with Obama's plan to start withdrawing forces in July 2011, while one-third say they remain open to keeping the same number of troops there, or even adding additional forces.

Reflecting the belief among many that the war cannot be won, a third of Americans say they have become less supportive of the effort there in recent months.

The Bloomberg National Poll is based on interviews with 1,004 U.S. adults ages 18 or older. Percentages based on the full sample may have a maximum margin of error of plus or minus 3.1 percentage points.

Karlyn Bowman, who studies public opinion at the American Enterprise Institute, a public-policy research group in Washington, calls the poll "very, very grim news for the Democrats."

At the same time, she says, one silver lining for Democrats is that Republicans have yet to convince voters that they have a plan.

Obama Visit

One signpost for Democrats in the poll is the finding that just 26 percent of Americans say it would help a Democratic candidate in their area to get a visit from Obama, while 20 percent say it would hurt the candidate and 54 percent say it wouldn't matter or they don't know.

Obama's worst ratings are for his handling of the budget deficit, where 59 percent disapprove and 37 percent approve. It's his worst grade for that subject in any of four Bloomberg polls taken since September 2009. The Obama administration expects a record budget deficit this year of more than $1.5 trillion, or 10.6 percent of GDP, according to projections the White House released in February. It was $1.4 trillion for the 2008-2009 fiscal year, which covers the end of George W. Bush's presidency, and Obama has said that the current fiscal shortfall as well as the unemployment rate are inheritances from his Republican predecessor's administration.

"My biggest fear is we have people in government who don't have a clue about what is going on in the economy," says poll respondent Jim Heeter, 66, from Glendale, Arizona. "They have never run a business or had to make a payroll."

Economy, Health Care

Slim majorities disapprove of Obama's handling of the economy and health care. When it comes to creating jobs, he gets 46 percent approval, addressing problems on Wall Street, 42 percent support, running the war in Afghanistan, 46 percent approve, and managing the BP Plc oil spill, 46 percent support.

Forty-five percent say they have become more supportive in recent months of tougher regulations for Wall Street. The momentum is heading in the opposite direction from the White House and Democrats on most other issues.

Almost half say they have become less supportive in recent months of federal money being loaned to automotive companies to help them stay in business, while 37 percent have become less supportive of the health-care overhaul passed by Congress earlier this year. A majority, 61 percent, say the nation should wait and see how the health-care legislation works or leave it alone, while 37 percent want to see it repealed.

Arizona Immigration Law

Almost half of Americans say they have also grown more supportive of allowing local law enforcement to detain anyone who can't produce proof of citizenship when stopped for an offense, as is contemplated in an Arizona law. Obama has criticized the measure and the Justice Department has announced it plans to sue Arizona.

At least half of respondents also say they would be less likely to support candidates who voted to give financial assistance to the banking or automobile industries.

Americans are roughly divided on whether they would be more or less likely to support a candidate who voted against extending unemployment benefits because of concern over the cost. A measure providing such support worth $34 billion is stalled in Congress.

Clinton Popularity

The disaffection with Obama and Democrats doesn't carry over to all Democrats. Hillary Clinton, 62, is viewed favorably by 61 percent of respondents and a quarter of Americans, including 30 percent of Republicans and 21 percent of Democrats, say the nation would be in a better place if she had been elected president.

The Tea Party movement, which has been mainly associated with Republicans, has lukewarm support in the poll. A majority of 58 percent of all respondents says it would make no difference to them if a candidate was backed by Tea Party activists, while a third of Republicans say that kind of backing would make a candidate more appealing to them.

Those who are more likely to think the Tea Party is a simplistic and misguided movement -- 44 percent of all respondents -- include Democrats, 65 percent, and those with the highest incomes, 52 percent. Independent voters are divided on whether it is misguided or has rightly identified that the nation would be better served by reduced federal government, compared with 39 percent overall.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 5:02 AM
To: H
Subject: Fyi

SECURITY COUNCIL PRESIDENTIAL STATEMENT ON THE RECENT INCIDENT IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN

The Security Council deeply regrets the loss of life and injuries resulting from the use of force during the Israeli military operation in international waters against the convoy sailing to Gaza. The Council, in this context, condemns those acts which resulted in the loss of at least ten civilians and many wounded, and expresses its condolences to their families. The Security Council requests the immediate release of the ships as well as the civilians held by Israel. The Council urges Israel to permit full consular access, to allow the countries concerned to retrieve their deceased and wounded immediately, and to ensure the delivery of humanitarian assistance from the convoy to its destination. The Security Council takes note of the statement of the UN Secretary–General on the need to have a full investigation into the matter and it calls for a prompt, impartial, credible and transparent investigation conforming to international standards. The Security Council stresses that the situation in Gaza is not sustainable. The Council re-emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of Resolutions 1850 and 1860. In that context, it reiterates its grave concern at the humanitarian situation in Gaza and stresses the need for sustained and regular flow of goods and people to Gaza as well as unimpeded provision and distribution of humanitarian assistance throughout Gaza. The Security Council underscores that the only viable solution to Israeli-Palestinian conflict is an agreement negotiated between the parties and re-emphasizes that only a two-State solution, with an independent and viable Palestinian State living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours, could bring peace to the region. The Security Council expresses support for the proximity talks and voices concern that this incident took place while the proximity talks are underway and urges the parties to act with restraint, avoiding any unilateral and provocative actions, and all international partners to promote an atmosphere of cooperation between the parties and throughout the region.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 5:19 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Fyi

Yes

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Jun 01 05:04:45 2010
Subject: Re: Fyi

Are you meeting me at shuttle?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jun 01 05:01:58 2010
Subject: Fyi

SECURITY COUNCIL PRESIDENTIAL STATEMENT ON THE RECENT INCIDENT IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN

The Security Council deeply regrets the loss of life and injuries resulting from the use of force during the Israeli military operation in international waters against the convoy sailing to Gaza. The Council, in this context, condemns those acts which resulted in the loss of at least ten civilians and many wounded, and expresses its condolences to their families. The Security Council requests the immediate release of the ships as well as the civilians held by Israel. The Council urges Israel to permit full consular access, to allow the countries concerned to retrieve their deceased and wounded immediately, and to ensure the delivery of humanitarian assistance from the convoy to its destination. The Security Council takes note of the statement of the UN Secretary–General on the need to have a full investigation into the matter and it calls for a prompt, impartial, credible and transparent investigation conforming to international standards. The Security Council stresses that the situation in Gaza is not sustainable. The Council re-emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of Resolutions 1850 and 1860. In that context, it reiterates its grave concern at the humanitarian situation in Gaza and stresses the need for sustained and regular flow of goods and people to Gaza as well as unimpeded provision and distribution of humanitarian assistance throughout Gaza. The Security Council underscores that the only viable solution to Israeli-Palestinian conflict is an agreement negotiated between the parties and re-emphasizes that only a two-State solution, with an independent and viable Palestinian State living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours, could bring peace to the region. The Security Council expresses support for the proximity talks and voices concern that this incident took place while the proximity talks are underway and urges the parties to act with restraint, avoiding any unilateral and provocative actions, and all international partners to promote an atmosphere of cooperation between the parties and throughout the region.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 5:22 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Ashton Teleconference w/ Israeli FM

I am on travel and will not return to the office until the afternoon of June 1. I will be reviewing e-mail intermittently. If you need immediate assistance please contact Marisa McAuliffe by phone at 202-647-2972 or email at McauliffeMS@state.gov.

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 05/31/2035

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D),B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 6:08 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Text of EU-Russia statement on Gaza to be issued later today

Here is the text of the statement that will be released at the EU-Russia Summit. [redacted] 1.4(D) B1 1.4(B)

"The EU and Russia regret the loss of lives during the Israeli military operation against the Flotilla sailing to Gaza. The EU and Russia demand a full and impartial inquiry of the events and circumstances. The EU and Russia call for immediate opening of crossings for the flow of humanitarian aid, commercial goods and people to and from Gaza."

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Tue Jun 01 05:20:43 2010
Subject: Re: Ashton Teleconference w/ Israeli FM

I've worked on this non-stop since yesterday am. Let's discuss at meeting today.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Mon May 31 19:43:04 2010
Subject: Ashton Teleconference w/ Israeli FM

See below for a summary of Cathy Ashton's conversation w/ Lieberman from her policy planner. if there [redacted] B5 [redacted] AM

---

From: Schmid Helga [redacted] B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Mon May 31 07:19:32 2010
Subject: Teleconference HR Ashton/Israeli FM

Dear Anne Marie,
I am currently travelling with Cathy Ashton. She just spoke to Liberman [redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Helga

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 7:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply:

I will be out of the office and not checking email Friday, May 28, 2010; Our offices will be closed Monday, May 31. I will be back in the office Tuesday, June 1.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 8:14 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: this report appeared in Maariv, major Israeli daily, on May27, fyi, Sid

Call anytime. Sid
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Tue, 1 Jun 2010 06:58:44
To: 'sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: this report appeared in Maariv, major Israeli daily, on May 27, fyi, Sid

Are you up? Can I call?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Mon May 31 12:49:21 2010
Subject: H: this report appeared in Maariv, major Israeli daily, on May 27, fyi, Sid

Netanyahu pleased: I didn't capitulate
Ben Caspit, Maariv, May 27 2010 [page 2 with front page lead; Hebrew original here <http://www.scribd.com/doc/32038200/Maariv-May27-10-Netanyahu-Says-He-Beat-Obama> and at bottom of post] In the course of intimate conversations over the past few weeks with top political officials and civil servants, Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu has said, according to his interlocutors, that he managed to defeat the US administration. Netanyahu is pleased by the fact that the Americans failed, so he said, to twist his arm and that ultimately, in the duel between him and the Obama administration, he was the one who emerged with the upper hand. We did not make concessions on our red lines and they failed to make us fold and to drag us to places we didn't want to go, said Netanyahu, according to people who heard him speak.
Netanyahu is convinced that he is not going to be forced to extend the settlement construction freeze, which is due to expire in September. According to senior officials in Jerusalem, an agreement has already been reached with the administration that the Israeli government will not announce an extension of the construction freeze in the territories, and the Americans will "make sure" that the Palestinians do not withdraw from the talks. Israel, however, will not take "aggressive" action and construction will be resumed only in areas that are clearly within the consensus inside the settlement blocs.
The Prime Minister's Bureau vigorously denied the above report. "The statements attributed to the prime minister are incorrect," said a spokesman in the Prime Minister's Bureau. "They were not said by Netanyahu in any forum. The reason is simple: the prime minister does not think that, Prime Minister Netanyahu holds in great esteem the commitment by President Obama and the administration to Israel's security and their efforts to renew the peace process in our region."
Eli Bardenstein adds: The formal invitation that Netanyahu received yesterday to meet with President Obama next week might attest to a radical change in the White House's attitude towards him. Political sources in Israel described the planned meeting as "the peak of the campaign for Israel and the Jews that has been pursued by the Obama administration in the past number of weeks." The sources said that the meeting was geared to put an end to the grave crisis that erupted some two months ago between the Obama administration and Netanyahu over the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and particularly over the continued construction in East Jerusalem, and to mend the mistaken impression that was received as if Israel was "no longer an absolute ally of the United States."

That crisis, which was initiated by the Americans, elicited fierce criticism in the United States, and sparked a desire among members of the Obama administration to rectify the situation. Another reason for the administration's desire to end the crisis is the fear of failure in the upcoming Congressional elections in November. "The Democratic Party's coffers are empty. Many Democrat members of Congress and Senators have complained that if the hazing of Israel were to continue, they would be unable to obtain donations from Jews and were liable to lose the elections," said one source in Washington.

The prevalent assessment is that Netanyahu will be received far more warmly in Washington next week than he was two months ago. This time the meeting will be covered by the media and the two leaders are expected to have their picture taken together and to give statements to the media.

That said, sources in Washington noted that "Netanyahu is leery of the meeting with Obama and of walking into a trap once again. He knows that the smiles notwithstanding, behind closed doors he is going to have to give answers to very difficult questions, like 'how do you envision the end of the negotiations with the Palestinians.'"

Netanyahu is to begin his political travels today in Paris, where he is to attend the ceremony in honor of Israel's acceptance into the OECD. The prime minister will be arriving in a city that is on strike, which is liable to impede his movement through the city streets to the center of Paris for his meetings.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 8:19 AM
To: H
Subject: Davut mtg

Bill will be at prebrief, then has speech on India. Still checking with Jim.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 9:12 AM
To: H
Subject: RE:

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, June 01, 2010 6:04 AM
To: Ebeling, Betsy
Cc: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Subject: Re:

----- Original Message -----
From: Ebeling, Betsy
To: H
Sent: Thu May 27 16:33:25 2010
Subject:

FISA director leaves legacy of collaboration

Breaking down barriers

Wednesday, May 26, 2010

By Tina Calabro, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Pam Panchak/Post-Gazette

FISA Foundation retiring executive director Dee Delaney, left, with the new executive director, Kristy Trautmann.

To people in the local disability community, Dee Delaney is a household name.

When news came this spring of her intention to retire as executive director of FISA Foundation in August, one could almost hear a collective gasp. With 14 years at the helm of the small but influential foundation, Ms. Delaney has had a pronounced and lasting influence on quality of life in our region.

On behalf of FISA, Ms. Delaney has changed the local landscape not only by funding projects with far-reaching results, but by bringing people together to craft solutions to longstanding problems and by becoming personally involved in many of the projects the foundation funds.

She became the first executive director of FISA Foundation when it began in 1996 with proceeds from the sale of Harmarville Rehabilitation Center, a nonprofit, to HealthSouth, a for-profit organization.

The new foundation would continue the mission of the Federation of Independent School Alumnae, an organization that opened a convalescent home for women in 1911 and the Harmarville Rehabilitation Center in 1954. That mission was to improve the lives of women, girls and people with disabilities in Western Pennsylvania.

Ms. Delaney, who had been involved with Harmarville since 1980 -- starting as a volunteer and ending as development director of its foundation -- sought the job of leading FISA. "I realized the impact the foundation could have. FISA is not a large foundation, but it's a very focused foundation," she said.

Over the past 14 years, FISA's endowment has grown to more than $38 million. Over $17 million has been granted to 726 projects in 298 organizations.

A roll call of projects funded by FISA reflects progressive thinking about including of people with disabilities in all aspects of life, especially access to health care. Programs have become national models.

Women with disabilities, for example, often encounter barriers in typical healthcare settings. Standard exam tables and diagnostic equipment were designed for the able-bodied, and medical staff often struggle to accommodate individuals with special needs. FISA provided the seed money for the Center for Women with Disabilities at Magee-Womens Hospital of UPMC, one of the first such clinics in the nation. FISA is involved in the overall issue of improving access to healthcare for people with disabilities.

Likewise, people with disabilities have difficulty obtaining dental care. A FISA-funded project at Achieva is creating statewide, systemic solutions. FISA also provided support for the Center for Patients with Special Needs at Pitt's School of Dental Medicine.

FISA has also taken the lead on training arts and cultural venues how to make events more accessible and helping places of worship more welcoming.

"Dee is a national leader in the field. If there were more people like her, we wouldn't have the issues we have," said Kim Hutchinson, executive director of the Disability Funders Network, based in Virginia. Ms. Delaney has been a board officer for the group since 2004.

Nancy Murray, president of the ARC of Greater Pittsburgh, said the issues Ms. Delaney has helped solve are ones that people have been working on for years.

"People talk about strategies, but never move forward to solutions. Dee brings all the stakeholders together to get to the solutions," said Ms. Murray.

"I think Dee has greatly influenced the next generation of nonprofit and philanthropic leaders, leading by example on the value of true collaboration," said Susie Chase, a board member of FISA and former executive director of Working Order, a FISA grantee.

"With Dee, it is never about her own role, or FISA's role, it is always about unmet needs in the community and the work that needs to be done. That seems to bring out the best in every partner, and in everyone who has the privilege of working with her."

Ms. Chase added that advice and technical assistance Ms. Delaney provided to Working Order "were of equal or greater value to the organization than the grant funds."

"I still, after many years, never come away from a meeting with Dee that I haven't learned something, been inspired to work harder, and understood more clearly the value of someone else's ideas and efforts."

In her retirement, Ms. Delaney plans to "give back to the community in new ways," she said. A new frontier is helping young people with disabilities prepare for employment and leadership. "We have to keep the fire burning."

On May 19, FISA announced that Kristy Trautmann, who has served as the foundation's program director for six years, was promoted to executive director.

"We sought a person who would follow Ms. Delaney's visionary leadership and guide the foundation into the next decade," said Jane Burger, who chaired the search committee. "We know that we have found such a person in Kristy Trautmann. She understands the challenges facing the populations the foundation supports and has the trust of the board and the community."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 11:00 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: 'We're the only ones who believe them'

From: Toiv, Nora F
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Jun 01 10:10:28 2010
Subject: 'We're the only ones who believe them'

POLITICO

'We're the only ones who believe them'

By: Ben Smith

June 1, 2010 04:44 AM EDT

A delicate diplomatic maneuver by President Barack Obama to smooth frayed relations with Israel without alienating America's Arab allies may have been blown out of the water Monday morning by Israel's botched attempt to enforce the Gaza blockade – and by the lack of condemnation from Washington that followed it.

For while much about the incident remains unclear, a day of carefully parsed statements from the White House and State Department left at least one irrefutable aftershock: With much of the world expressing fury over the raid, the contrast with Washington's muted response could not have been more striking.

"The situation is that they're so isolated right now that it's not only that we're the only ones who will stick up for them," said an American official. "We're the only ones who believe them – and what they're saying is true."

The official was referring to Israeli protestations – backed by Israeli Defense Forces video – that their solders were attacked by passengers on a ship headed for Gaza with humanitarian aid, when they boarded the ship in what the Israelis concede were international waters.

Organizers of the flotilla, meanwhile, insisted that participants were unarmed and that Israeli forces used excessive force.

The timing of the incident had to be viewed with rueful irony among the administration's Middle East hands. Obama spent this spring damping down concern among American friends of Israel that his seeming feud with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had brought the administration to the verge of fundamentally altering the historic U.S. alliance with the Jewish state. Obama met personally with Jewish members of Congress and dispatched top officials to Jewish groups to stress the point, as the "anti-Bibi" rhetoric was simultaneously dialed back precipitously.

The charm offensive appears to have worked. But now an administration that itself has expressed its own fury toward Netanyahu and his government in the past now finds itself close to sharing Israel's isolation at the moment – a dynamic that could complicate Obama's outreach to the rest of the region.

Israel's traditional critics denounced the raid – the chief Palestinian peace negotiator, Saeb Erakat, called it a "war crime" – but so did some the countries Jerusalem counts as friendly. Turkey's Prime Minister described the incident as an act of "inhuman state terror" and Ankara withdrew its ambassador to Israel while the Conservative British Foreign Secretary took the occasion to call the Gaza blockade "unacceptable and counter-productive."

The White House, in sharp contrast, avoided any hint of criticism of the Israeli action in its public statements, and American officials appeared sympathetic to Israeli explanations that their soldiers were attacked by flotilla participants.

The U.S. "deeply regrets the loss of life and injuries sustained" in the Israeli raid, deputy White House press secretary Bill Burton said in the first of three carefully-modulated statements Monday, The administration, he said, is "working to understand the circumstances surrounding this tragedy."

The White House rendition of a call between Obama and Netanyahu also strained to avoid condemnation, and went out of the way to note that many of those wounded in the incident "are being treated in Israeli hospitals."

Six hours later, State Department spokesman PJ Crowley issued a third statement, adding that the U.S. expects that the Israeli government – the unstated emphasis was not the United Nations – "will conduct a free and credible investigation."

Crowley added an evenhanded paragraph calling on the Israelis to open Gaza to humanitarian aid, while simultaneously condemning the militant group Hamas, whose political control of Gaza prompted the blockade.

"Hamas' interference with international assistance shipments and work of nongovernmental organizations, and its use and endorsement of violence, complicates efforts in Gaza," Crowley said.

The immediate upshot of the statements from the United States and other countries is that Obama, perhaps surprisingly, finds himself in the same posture as his predecessors over the past 60 years – one that holds that the U.S. is far more willing to give the Israelis the benefit of the doubt on matters of security.

Washington "is always going to be the most reluctant major global actor to condemn Israeli excesses, and that is the position President Obama finds himself in right now," said Hussein Ibish, a Senior Fellow at The American Task Force on Palestine.

That position squares with the administration's apparent, reluctant rapprochement with Israeli's rightist leader – even if that burying of grudges had deep reverberations for the peace process.

"After wandering around for 15 months, vacillating between pandering to the Israelis and trying o punish them, they have decided they have to work out some kind of relationship with Netanyahu that allows them to do something serious," said Aaron David Miller, a former American peace negotiator. "They need to weather this crisis with the relationship with the Israelis north of where it is now."

The most immediate challenge, Miller said, will be steering a special session of the UN Security Council – called by Arab members – away from forcing the U.S. either to vote on condemning Israel's actions or to veto a resolution condemning them.

Observers of the process expect the U.S. to attempt to craft a resolution that doesn't condemn Israeli directly and doesn't establish any international investigation, like an earlier inquiry into Israel's actions in Gaza led by the former South African Judge Richard Goldstone.

Obama and other American officials stressed the need to study the details of the incident, as the Israeli government pointed to video of passengers on the ship – which was boarded in international waters – attacking Israeli commandos with what appeared to be chairs and metal poles.

"At this point, it is unclear what happened and there must be a thorough investigation," Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman John Kerry said in a statement.

Others suggested that further probes may not change the initial reactions. "You can have an independent commission spend 3 or 4 months studying this thing and come out with something that is stunningly clear and factual, but it doesn't matter," said Miller. "People knew where they were before this episode started."

TRIBES

© 2010 Capitol News Company, LLC

Nora Toiv
Office of the Secretary
202-647-8633

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 11:48 AM
To: H
Subject: h: additional thought. Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

June 1, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: One more thought…

Without "tough love," any support for Israel will lack credibility.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 3:48 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: American University of Central Asia

Madam Secretary,

In advance of your meeting tomorrow with George Soros, below is some information in response to the letter you received from Soros proposing increased USG support for the American University of Central Asia (AUCA). SCA favors providing more USG support for AUCA [redacted] B5

Since 9/11 the United States has provided more than $15 million to AUCA in support of its endowment and various other initiatives. For a majority of these contributions the Soros Foundation matched one dollar for every two dollars provided by the USG. The major USG contributions to AUCA were two grants to the university endowment, the first in 2003 for $10 million, the second in 2008 for $3 million. Other USG support for AUCA included funding for two advisors to the AUCA president on accreditation and development, support for the journalism faculty, and scholarship funds for students from Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, and Afghanistan to attend the university.

Soros has proposed that the USG increase this support, offering a 1-1 match of $10 million each from State and his foundation, totaling $20 million over the next five years. Last fall SCA received the same proposal from Soros, and they have been discussing the issue with Soros' staff. [redacted] B5

A little bit of additional information from SCA on AUCA: The university has made significant progress this year on a number of its key objectives and remains a unique institution in Central Asia, a place where students are judged solely on merit and a forum for free expression and critical thinking. The university achieved an important milestone this year related to its U.S. accreditation, signing an agreement with Bard College under which AUCA graduates starting next May will receive full diplomas from Bard College, an institution accredited in the United States. In addition, AUCA recently established a new partnership with the American University in Kabul facilitated through state of the art video classroom technology and recently announced the appointment of Andrew Wachtel, from Northwestern University, as the new AUCA president who will take office this summer.

I will include this note (in addition to Soros' letter) in your materials for your meeting with Soros tomorrow. Please let me know if you would like any further information.

Thanks,
Mike

Michael H. Fuchs
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-1709
[redacted] B6

RELEASE
IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 6:43 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Fw: Votes

Your wish is my command . . .

----- Original Message -----
From: PRE
To: 'cheryl.mills
Sent: Tue Jun 01 18:28:18 2010
Subject: Votes

B6

As we spoke here is a tally of the total # of nominations to date:

Regional members: 22
Non regionals. 5
Total. 27

Total % of shares 55.582%

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Russo, Robert V <RussoRV@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 1, 2010 10:18 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Back to the future

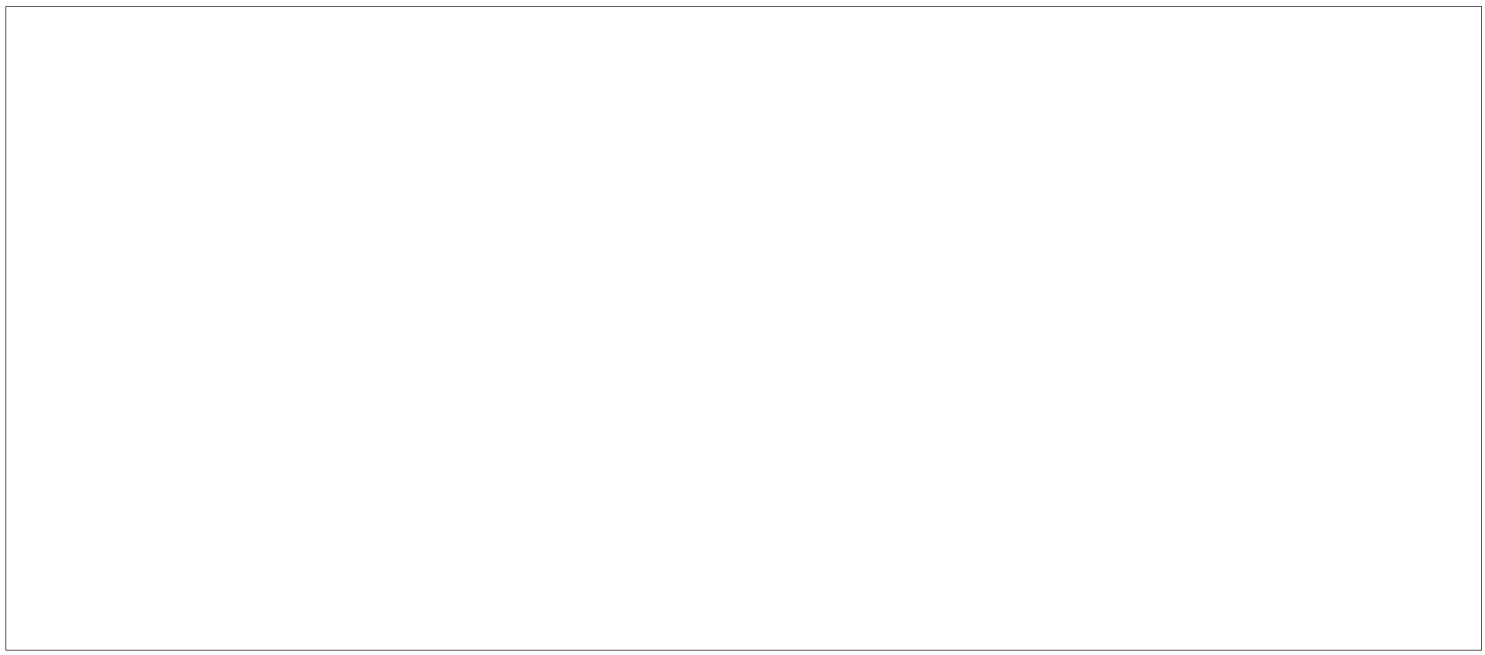
I will prepare for you to sign tomorrow. I just love her sense of humor!

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Russo, Robert V
Sent: Tue Jun 01 22:13:25 2010
Subject: Fw: Back to the future

Pls do letter to margaret.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jun 01 08:45:17 2010
Subject: FW: Back to the future



fyi

From: Margaret V. W. Carpenter [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, June 01, 2010 8:23 AM

[redacted]

Subject: Back to the future

[redacted]

B6

RELEASE
IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 7:48 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule Wednesday 6/2/10

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence *En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING

8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING

8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING

9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:30 am BI-WEEKLY MEETING w/MANAGEMENT TEAM

10:00 am Deputy Secretary's Conference Room

10:00 am WEEKLY MEETING w/UNDER SECRETARIES

10:45 am Secretary's Conference Room

10:50 am VIDEOS (6)

11:10 am George Marshall Room, 7th Floor

11:15 am PHOTOS (4 groups)

11:30 am Secretary's Outer Office

11:30 am GROUP PHOTO w/VISITING MIDDLE EAST DEMOCRACY

11:40 am ACTIVISTS PARTICIPATING IN MIDDLE EAST PARTNERSHIP INITIATIVE

Treaty Room, 7th Floor

11:45 am OFFICE TIME

12:30 pm Secretary's Office

12:30 pm MEETING w/JACK LEW

1:00 pm Secretary's Office

1:15 pm MEETING w/JEFF FELTMAN

1:45 pm Secretary's Office

1:45 pm MEETING w/ANNE-MARIE SLAUGHTER

2:15 pm Secretary's Office

2:30 pm MEETING w/INDIAN EDUCATION MINISTER KAPIL SIBAL

2:45 pm Secretary's Conference Room

3:00 pm PRE-BRIEF FOR THE INDIA STRATEGIC DIALOGUE

4:00 pm Secretary's Office

4:00 pm MEETING w/SANDY WEILL

4:30 pm Secretary's Office

4:45 pm MEETING w/GEORGE SOROS

5:15 pm Secretary's Office

5:30 pm MEETING w/MELANNE VERVEER

6:00 pm Secretary's Office

6:15 pm (t) DEPART State Department *En route Private Residence

6:25 pm (t) ARRIVE Private Residence ###

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 8:55 AM
To: H
Subject: H: Best commentary. Sid

"It was worse than a crime. It was a blunder." Talleyrand.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 10:24 AM
To: H
Subject: H: Jeremy Greenstock has an interesting approach. Sid

Gaza: it's Hamas's move now

Hamas must seize the initiative if there is ever to be an end to Israel's occupation of Palestine

- Jeremy Greenstock
- guardian.co.uk, Wednesday 2 June 2010 12.29 BST

So it has happened again. Nearly 18 months after the Israelis bombed Gaza to a wasteland, with barely a load of building materials allowed in since then, Turkey has taken the brunt of an operation of humanitarian assistance gone wrong. The UN must establish the facts impartially and independently and, if laws have been broken, those responsible must be held to account. Political demonstrations posing as relief flotillas go wrong too easily and Israel understandably has to prevent weapons being smuggled into Gaza. But was this really the best way to bring the ships to shore for examination? A commando attack on civilian ships looks callous and disproportionate. No one should have been hurt, whatever the emotions behind all this.

Why is Gaza under siege in the first place? Under international law, the Israelis are responsible as the occupying force for the proper administration of the territory; and half the point of Israel is not to be above the law. Yet they are creating a traumatised territory of 1.5m neighbours, many of whose children seem to want to grow up to be suicide bombers. They are also pouring fertiliser on al-Qaida's ground.

The director of UNRWA operations in Gaza, John Ging, gave a speech in London this week entitled "Illegal, inhuman and insane: a medieval siege on Gaza in 2010". This objective humanitarian practitioner should be listened to. How has Israel, the only democracy in its region and a symbol of the need for racially inspired violence to end, come to risk any claim to international legitimacy in its handling of this situation?

Hamas are the enemy of Israel, but they do not have to be. They preach violent resistance too readily, yet over the past 17 months they have been trying to control the militant groups intent on threatening Israel with rockets – imperfectly perhaps, but not a single Israeli citizen has been killed (alas, one immigrant worker was) by a rocket since the Gaza bombing stopped in January 2009. They are also the implacable opponents of al-Qaida. They won a fair election in 2006 and claim to respect democracy. Let's test them on that. At present, Hamas security people are being sniped at by the Israeli Defence Forces when they try to arrest other militant groups. This is genuinely getting insane.

The unwisdom of reliance on angry military responses is all the clearer when the mood in Palestine, in both the West Bank and Gaza, is steadily moving towards a negotiated end to the occupation. I am convinced from my own direct experience that Hamas is prepared to establish and respect a long-term ceasefire so that the talking can start without the threat of violence, and that they would enter in good faith, if that were reciprocated, into negotiations to establish two states in the disputed territories, Israel and Palestine, with their own rights and responsibilities under international law. The distortion of their position, a little of it the fault of their own PR, does no side any good.

If a comprehensive negotiation is too much to expect for now, what about a first step? I believe an arrangement to end the blockade is within reach if only Israel, Egypt and Gaza would test the possibilities of dialogue. Hamas have indicated that they could cease all attacks on Israeli soil, close the tunnels, release Gilead Shalit and stop the import of arms into Gaza if the blockade was ended, an agreed number of Palestinian prisoners were released and Gaza began to be rebuilt.

The Palestinians of course have work to do on their own internal reconciliation, while the relationship between Fatah in the West Bank and Hamas in Gaza remains so bad. But the UN, the US, Russia, the EU and the Arab world must make a much more serious attempt to test the possibilities, putting ordinary Israelis and Palestinians first, not their own political comfort.

We are coming close to losing the chance of a two-state solution. US policy, based on a West-Bank-only approach, is locked in a cul-de-sac if Gaza is left out of the equation, because majority Palestinian support will be lacking. Israel is confident in the knowledge that it cannot be militarily defeated.

But that ignores the huge danger of losing the political, diplomatic, legal and moral high ground. This matters in today's world, as the US and the UK discovered in Iraq, because government authority and public opinion interact closely, and legitimacy breeds support.

Israel's relationship with Turkey was the key to a broader understanding with the Islamic community and others beyond the west. That now lies in tatters. If Israel is left as the permanent occupier, or controlling a one-state structure with part of its population downgraded or imprisoned, it will truly be a disaster for its people and what they stand for.

I hope that Hamas will not sit back and enjoy Israel's discomfiture. They have so far, for a political organisation, attracted much too narrow a range of international support. If they wish to be widely accepted as a negotiating partner, they must unequivocally accept the only fully justified condition set by the international Quartet – the cessation of violence – underline that their objective is a two-state settlement, and win international friends for the ending of the occupation. In whoever's hands, bombs, bullets, rockets and iron bars will achieve nothing. But a push for justice will.

• This article was originally written for the Times but not published

RELEASE
IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 5:10 PM
To: H
Subject: From Bob Blake

FYI:

USIBC Launches New Education Initiative to Strengthen K-12, Vocational, and Higher Education Linkages in the U.S. and India

June 2, 2010 - Washington, DC - On the occasion of its 35th anniversary, and looking ahead to the global economy of the future, the U.S.-India Business Council (USIBC) today announced the launch of a new initiative aimed at strengthening institutional linkages between academia, industry and NGOs focusing on the elementary, vocational and higher education sectors in both countries.

"The United States and India must be committed partners in building the workforce of tomorrow, a partnership that will unleash opportunity, spur growth and sustain prosperity not just in our countries but across the global community," said Harold McGraw III, incoming USIBC Chairman and Chairman, President and CEO of The McGraw-Hill Companies. "To do this, we must focus on strengthening our educational ties at every level. By working together our two countries can equip the next generation with the education and skills necessary to compete and win in the global economy."

Mr. McGraw gave the keynote address before a packed audience of over 400 U.S. and Indian business, government, and education leaders at USIBC's 35th Anniversary Summit, entitled "A Pivotal Period in U.S.-India Relations: Tackling Education, Infrastructure and Inclusive Growth."

On the eve of the first-ever U.S.-India Strategic Dialogue, India's Union Minister of External Affairs, SM Krishna, U.S. Education Secretary Arne Duncan, India's Minister of Human Resource Development, Kapil Sibal, and India's Ambassador to the United States, Meera Shankar, joined hundreds of top business leaders in Washington to participate in the U.S.-India Business Council 35th anniversary deliberations.

USIBC's Education Initiative will serve as a dynamic platform for business, NGOs, and academia to provide vital input into both the U.S. and Indian governments - such that the synergies between American and Indian business and educational communities are unleashed.

"We can talk about strategic, defense, civil nuclear, renewable energy and every other type of commercial cooperation, but if we do not develop the skill sets in our respective societies to sustain such collaboration, all this talk will never be successfully converted to action," Ron Somers, President of the U.S.-India Business Council, noted. "How fortunate it is that families across all walks of life in both our societies so highly value education. We have much to learn from one another, and much to accomplish - to prepare for the challenges of the 21st Century," Somers said.

The USIBC Education initiative will focus on three thrust areas:

1. Higher Education: USIBC will host the U.S.-India Higher Education Forum (HEF) at the invitation of the U.S. and Indian governments. The HEF will serve as the premier platform to enlist academia, industry and NGOs to strengthen linkages between U.S. and Indian educational institutions from both countries. The HEF will provide a formalized network for industry, academia and the NGO community to provide direct policy input to the U.S. and Indian governments in all areas of education, with an aim to facilitate greater collaboration, including the opening of India's higher education sector.

2. Elementary K-12 Education : USIBC has embarked on a survey of rural and urban, private and public K-12 schools throughout India to identify best practices that are working well in educating students, while assessing needs where industry, NGOs and government may join together to fill gaps. With the support of Ryan International Group, one of India's leading educators, both financial and intellectual resources will be mobilized to transform these and other schools in a manner that promotes replication of successful models across India.

3. Vocational Training and Skills Development : USIBC will partner with its member-companies to feature Case Studies of Vocational Training and Skills Development that are being implemented across India. The exercise will attempt to enlist more corporations to participate in this important area of human capacity building. Programs helping to train thousands of workers will generate employment opportunities and sustain economic growth now and for the long future - in both countries.

India is embarked on expanding its community college system, including technical training institutions, as well as inviting interest in implementing 30,000 new colleges and 1,500 universities over the next decade.
The United States continues to be the most sought after destination for Indian students studying overseas, attracting as many as 113,000 each year to American universities and colleges. The U.S. wishes to remain a magnet for attracting the best and the brightest from around the world by promoting institutional partnerships between U.S. based educational institutions and new counterparts. Integral to this core knowledge infrastructure, industry must be involved in this enterprise.

The McGraw-Hill Companies (NYSE: MHP) is a global information and education company providing knowledge, insights and analysis in the financial, education and business information sectors through leading brands including Standard & Poor's, McGraw-Hill Education, J.D. Power and Associates and Platts. McGraw-Hill established business operations in India 40 years ago. Through its partnership with CRISIL, India's leading ratings, research, and risk and policy advisory company, Standard & Poor's is helping facilitate access to capital to drive economic growth and job creation in the country. Through its partnership with Tata, McGraw-Hill Education is delivering innovative, digital solutions to help workers acquire the 21st century skills they need to succeed in today's global economy. India is home to McGraw-Hill's largest employee population outside of the U.S. and is the company's fourth largest market.

The U.S.-India Business Council, formed in 1975 at the request of the Government of India and the U.S. Government to advance commercial ties between the world's two largest free-market democracies, is hosted under the aegis of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is the world's largest business federation representing more than 3 million businesses and organizations of every size, sector, and region. The U.S.-India Business Council celebrates its 35th Anniversary at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce on June 2, 2010 in Washington, D.C. For more information please visit www.usibc.com .
www.usibc.com

RELEASE
IN PART B6

B6

From: Strobe Talbott
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 6:21 PM
To: H
Cc: 'Cheryl Mills'; Jake Sullivan (DOS)
Subject: follow up on Afghan matter

Hillary, as promised, I connected with Bruce Jones at NYU about Spanta. Bruce got in touch offered to help Spanta put together an arrangement at NYU that might have a Brookings offshoot. Spanta said he needed to decide with Karzai whether in fact the timing was right for him to leave. He just got back in touch with Bruce saying he's decided to stay on a bit longer. That said, he's agreed to participate in some Track II regional work that Bruce has underway. All in all, it sounds as though this has ended up in the right place for now. Bruce, Martin and I will be open to other NY/DC possibilities down the road when Spanta's situation changes. Thanks again for the truly terrific event at Brookings. Regards, Strobe

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 6:46 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: VPOTUS on Charlie Rose Tonight, comments on Flotilla

Fyi

---

From: Pelton, Erin
Sent: Wednesday, June 02, 2010 6:23 PM
To: NEA-IPA-DL; NEA-Press-DL
Subject: VPOTUS on Charlie Rose Tonight, comments on Flotilla

HAARETZ.com

Biden: Israel right to stop Gaza flotilla from breaking blockade

VP Biden tells Charlie Rose that the Israel Navy might not have needed to drop commandos onto the Gaza-bound ship, but insists that Israel is entitled to defend its security.

By Natasha Mozgovaya Tags: Joe Biden Gaza flotilla

U.S. Vice President Joe Biden on Wednesday defended Israel's blockade of the Gaza Strip and its decision to intercept the pro-Palestinian flotilla bringing humanitarian aid to the coastal territory, though he did not go so far as to defend the Israel Navy raid that killed nine people two days earlier.

In an interview with Charlie Rose, Biden pointed out that Israel had given pro-Palestinian activists the option of unloading their cargo at the Ashdod port, and offered to bring it to the Gaza Strip on their behalf.

"They've said, 'Here you go. You're in the Mediterranean. This ship -- if you divert slightly north you can unload it and we'll get the stuff into Gaza,'", he said. "So what's the big deal here? What's the big deal of insisting it go straight to Gaza? Well, it's legitimate for Israel to say, 'I don't know what's on that ship. These guys are dropping... 3,000 rockets on my people.

"Look, you can argue whether Israel should have dropped people onto that ship or not -- but the truth of the matter is, Israel has a right to know -- they're at war with Hamas -- has a right to know whether or not arms are being smuggled in."

During the interview, Biden also blamed Hamas for the crisis that has wracked the coastal territory and for the ongoing state of conflict with Israel.

"As we put pressure, and the world put pressure on Israel to let material go into Gaza to help those people who are suffering, the ordinary Palestinians there, what happened? Hamas would confiscate it, put it in a warehouse [and] sell it.

"So the problem is this would end tomorrow if Hamas agreed to form a government with the Palestinian Authority on the conditions the international community has set up," Biden told Rose.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 10:02 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Votes

I am currently traveling outside of the country with limited access to email. If you need immediate assistance, please contact Nora Toiv (ToivNF@state.gov) or Joanne Laszczych, (LaszczychJ@state.gov) at 202-647-5548.

If it is an emergency after business hours, please reach out to our Operations Center to have them reach me.

Thank you

cdm

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 10:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Just emailed Ms Cheryl to help co-ordinate a time -love you and thanks for keeping the world together-"Fourth Turning"...might want to re-read the ending chapters of Neil Howe and Bill Strauss book-love you so

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Wed Jun 02 22:03:08 2010
Subject: Fw: Just emailed Ms Cheryl to help co-ordinate a time -love you and thanks for keeping the world together-"Fourth Turning"...might want to re-read the ending chapters of Neil Howe and Bill Strauss book-love you so

Pls get me a copy of this book from the library. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Roy Spence [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Tue Jun 01 18:42:24 2010
Subject: Just emailed Ms Cheryl to help co-ordinate a time -love you and thanks for keeping the world together-"Fourth Turning"...might want to re-read the ending chapters of Neil Howe and Bill Strauss book-love you so

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, May 30, 2010 6:28 PM
To: Roy Spence
Subject: Re: Hillary Clinton is now the most popular politician in America who has held elected office

Well. [redacted] When B6 will come in so we can catch up?

----- Original Message -----
From: Roy Spence <[redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat May 29 09:40:01 2010
Subject: Hillary Clinton is now the most popular politician in America who has held elected office

Hillary Clinton is now the most popular politician in America who has held elected office <http://www.openleft.com/diary/18891/hillary-clinton-is-now-the-most-popular-politician-in-america-who-has-held-elected-office>

by: Chris Bowers <http://www.openleft.com/user/Chris%20Bowers>

Fri May 28, 2010 at 14:00

Here is a weekend factoid for you: among all living politicians in the United States who have ever held elected office, Hillary Clinton the most popular.

That's right. Ever since she became Secretary of State, her favorables have soared into the mid-60's <http://www.pollingreport.com/C2.htm#Hillary> , putting her well clear of any other statewide officeholder in the country. The only national figures who are viewed as favorably as Clinton are Michelle Obama <http://www.pollingreport.com/o.htm#Michelle> , Colin Powell <http://www.pollingreport.com/p.htm#Powell> , and David Patraeus <http://www.pollingreport.com/p.htm#Petraeus> . However, they have never run for office, which invariably lowers your favorables.

Hillary Clinton will turn 69 in in the final week of the 2016 campaign, which makes her slightly younger than Ronald Reagan when he first was elected in 1980. Also, as Secretary of State, a major presidential candidate, a U.S. Senator, and First Lady, she is also probably more credentialed than any other potential Presidential candidate, too. There is even talk she may become the next Secretary of Defense <http://www.politico.com/news/stories/0510/37672.html> , further adding to her credentials.

Some have said that, in choosing Joe Biden as Vice-President, Barack Obama did not pick a successor to lead the Democratic Party. However, that needs rethinking. Because Barack Obama made her Secretary of State, Hillary Clinton remains remarkably well-positioned to run for President in 2016, even more so than she was in 2008.

Anyway, have a good holiday weekend.

Chris Bowers <http://www.openleft.com/userDiary.do?personId=9> :: Hillary Clinton is now the most popular politician in America who has held elected office <http://www.openleft.com/showDiary.do?diaryId=18891>

Ride at Dawn

---

This e-mail is intended only for the named person or entity to which it is addressed and contains valuable business information that is proprietary, privileged, confidential and/or otherwise protected from disclosure. If you received this email in error, any review, use, dissemination, distribution or copying of this email is strictly prohibited. Please notify us immediately of the error via email to disclaimerinquiries@ideacity.com and please delete the email from your system, retaining no copies in any media. We appreciate your cooperation.
----------ideacity.legal.disclaimer.01112008

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 2, 2010 10:28 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Any news to report?

Nothing that can't keep. Actually somewhat quiet night.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Jun 02 22:13:30 2010
Subject: Any news to report?

RELEASE
IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 3, 2010 8:01 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Warning story

Will track down

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Jun 03 07:31:12 2010
Subject: Warning story

According to WPost and PJ, US govt warned Israel about handling the flotilla.

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 3, 2010 8:33 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

Fyi – cir to team for addressing as appropriate

---

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 02, 2010 3:49 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

Dear Cheryl –

In my last email (Friday, 5/28), I attached the letter from the bipartisan Co-Chairs and Executive Committee members of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission sent to Assistant Secretary Mike Posner expressing grave concern about the recent rise in death threats, attacks and murders of Colombian human rights defenders, religious, community and other NGO leaders. Congressman McGovern also strongly encouraged the Secretary to meet with representatives of those organizations and individuals being threatened, with a particularly effort to reach out to and invite the Bishops of Tumaco (Nariño), Barrancabermeja/Medio Magdalena (Santander), and we would now add Putumayo, since the Colombian Catholic Church just advised us yesterday of increased death threats against religious workers there. In addition, we recommended inviting Monseñor Hector Fabio Henao, director of Pastoral Social, at the Archdiocese in Bogotá, who represents all the pastoral work of the Church throughout the country, as well as representatives from the Mennonite and Lutheran churches, in particular.

While in Colombia, the most important thing the Secretary can do is avoid effusive praise for President Álvaro Uribe, who leaves office in August. Inside Colombia, the visit by the Secretary is being described as focusing solely on the free trade agreement and continuing support of the counterdrug strategy/Plan Colombia. Without changes in the human rights situation and the culture of impunity, it is unlikely that anything the Secretary might say or do will alter the equation on Capitol Hill regarding the trade agreement. It should be noted that the October 2008 GAO report on the counter-drug operations in Colombia concluded that U.S. assistance was successful in increasing security in parts of the country, but a failure in the areas of counter-narcotics (GAO-09-71). and a subsequent April 2009 USAID evaluation on U.S. aid for Plan Colombia for illegal crop reduction and Colombian counternarcotics policies actually contribute to increased coca production.

The Colombian president has been a solid backer of U.S. policy and U.S. interests in the region, and has achieved some important improvements in the country's security situation. It is important to recognize that, but to do so without repeating the tone of Defense Secretary Gates' April visit, in which he called Uribe a "great hero" and failed even to mention any concerns.

These concerns are of critical importance, and while the Secretary need not list them all, at least some deserve public acknowledgement – some recognition that it is important to the United States that Colombia, including the current government and its successor, show the necessary political will to deal with them:

- A sharp rise in alleged military killings of civilians. In many cases, these are so-called "false positives": non-combatants murdered and later presented as members of armed groups killed in combat. These, notes UN Special Rapporter for Extrajudicial Executions Philip Alston, "began occurring with a disturbing frequency across Colombia from 2004." Citing prosecutors' and NGOs' reports, Alston indicates that Colombia's security forces may have killed 1,486 civilians during the first six years of Álvaro Uribe's presidency. Alston notes that the Defense Ministry only began to address the situation after the media broke the story of the false-positives and the subsequent negative publicity and horrified public outcry.

  The prosecution of "false positives" is moving with excruciating slowness. In perhaps the most notorious case – the murders of about twenty young men from the poor Bogotá suburb of Soacha – nearly all of the accused soldiers and officers have been released from prison, pending trial, as deadlines for timely prosecution have run out. Since their arrest in late 2008, their case has been prolonged by numerous delaying tactics by the defense, including attempts to have their cases tried in the military court system as "acts of service." Alston reports that the impunity rate on these extrajudicial murders by security forces may be as high as 98.5 percent.

- Mounting allegations that the President's intelligence service, the DAS, was put at the service of paramilitary leaders and narcotraffickers; used to spy on and intimidate Supreme Court justices, opposition politicians, journalists and human rights defenders; and employed in a campaign of sabotage and smears against political opponents.

  Prosecutors are alleging that the orders to have the DAS carry out wiretaps, surveillance and "political warfare" came from high up in the Colombian presidency, though the question of "what President Uribe knew, and when he knew it" remains unanswered. Meanwhile efforts to reform or dissolve the DAS are stalled in Colombia's Congress.

- President Uribe's political coalition has also been hit by a scandal known in Colombia as "para-politics." This coalition has included dozens of political bosses from regions beyond the capital. Many are large landholders with ties to narcotrafficking, the same local leaders who created and fostered the brutal pro-government paramilitary groups that killed tens of thousands of non-combatants in the 1990s and early 2000s.

  Evidence, much of it from former paramilitary leaders, has brought about 300 criminal investigations against legislators, governors, mayors and other local officials, nearly all of them Álvaro Uribe's political supporters, who made common cause with the far-right warlords. To date, of the 278 congresspeople and senators elected in 2006, 68 are under official investigation, on trial, or convicted for paramilitary ties. Those embroiled in parapolitics include the President's cousin, Mario Uribe; the brother of his former foreign minister; and individuals whom the President had named to be Colombia's ambassadors to Chile, the Dominican Republic, and Canada.

The Colombian prosecutors, investigators, witnesses and non-governmental organizations trying to uncover the truth about these abuses are working under conditions of great personal risk. They, too, are heroes and would benefit greatly from a public expression of concern about the cases they are investigating, and a reminder that their work is legitimate and important to U.S. interests in Colombia.

At the same time, it is important to avoid appearing to endorse any candidate in the June 20 runoff elections. Between the first and second rounds of a country's presidential election is a politically awkward time for a high-level official visit. Though President Uribe's former defense minister, Juan Manuel Santos, is the overwhelming favorite given his margin of success in the May 30th first round of balloting over former Bogotá mayor Antanas Mockus, it is necessary at this stage to convey a sense of balance and a willingness to work closely with whoever wins. As a result, any kind words for one candidate should be balanced by praise for the other.

Finally, it would be helpful to remind the Colombian people that the United States supports a peaceful resolution of Bogotá's worsening differences with Venezuela. While President Chávez's behavior is a significant concern, it would be most unhelpful to be perceived on this trip as fanning the flames of conflict with Colombia – or playing into the Chavez rhetoric that the U.S. and Colombia have military aspirations in the region.

Hope this memo, along with last week's copy of the TLHRC letter to Assistant Secretary Posner, are helpful and useful materials for the Secretary as she plans her trip.

Very best wishes –

On behalf of Cong. Jim McGovern

Staff Contact: Cindy Buhl (202-225-6101 or cindy.buhl@mail.house.gov)

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy < [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, June 3, 2010 9:30 AM
To: Bonnie Klehr; [redacted] John Ryan; Susan Mcnamara; Ernest Ricketts; haley. [redacted] Corrine Ebeling; Delano, Omorinsola; Claps, Rocco B6 B6
Subject: Sad news

Boys home closing, but numbers don't tell full story

By Burt Constable | Daily Herald Columnist

Published: 6/3/2010 12:01 AM

When the goal is turning around lives of young abused and neglected boys, filling out the scoresheet is more complicated than simply marking wins or losses.

For the past 15 years, Ann G. Deuel has lived in Arlington Heights, but her heart has resided in Jamal Place, a three-story graystone at 1335 S. California Ave. in the North Lawndale neighborhood of Chicago. As a founder and executive director of Jamal Place, Deuel can tell countless stories about the boys, ages 11 to 17, who have spent time in the group home and about the army of suburbanites from St. Charles, Naperville, Lake Zurich and Lisle who have volunteered, donated and served on the board to help those kids. Lots of people in that field have good things to say about Deuel and Jamal Place.

But when the new fiscal year begins on July 1, the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services will not renew its contract with Jamal Place, forcing those kids to go to other facilities.

"To shut us down and deny kids this opportunity is unconscionable," says Deuel, as she takes a deep breath and dabs at her eyes in an attempt to keep her emotions in check.

She and her staff operated last year through a $1,041,000 contract with DCFS to provide a group home for 10 wards of the state. They've carved out a wonderful reputation in 15 years, so what happened?

The easy answer is that DCFS put the group home under a new performance-based contracting system that determined Jamal Place fell short of benchmarks for keeping kids from running away, requiring hospitalization or ending up in juvenile detention.

"Taxpayers expect and deserve positive results in the children we serve," says DCFS spokesman Kendall Marlowe. Jamal Place simply didn't measure up in the areas the state measures.

Because Illinois has trimmed the number of wards of the state from a high of 52,000 in 1997 to only 15,500, a much higher percentage of those kids have mental illnesses, substance abuse or other problems. Since the state measures an agency's performance by days that the kids are physically present in the home, Jamal Place, with its small population, got bad marks when a child was hospitalized for a mental-health issue or detained by a judge.

"We did what was clinically advisable for these children and we got dinged for it," says Brian Barclay, assistant executive director of Jamal Place. "We did what was in kids' best interest."

There is no consideration given for "incremental improvements in youth behavior, which occur as trusting relationships develop," Deuel notes. "I wish they could find a way to measure the individual aspects."

When compared with similar facilities, Jamal Place graded lower, Marlowe says, adding that it "isn't a happy day" when the state ends an agreement with a facility that has "good people" and has done "good work" in the past. He says DCFS did renew a contract with Deuel for a different transitional living facility that serves an older population.

One of Jamal Place's "unfavorable" outcomes involves a kid who already had a criminal record when he came to the group home at age 14. Now 17, he says he ended up in juvenile court after he made a mistake by hanging with the wrong people on the day when he stole a woman's purse.

"I've got a good relationship with the staff and residents. We did things as a family," says the teen, who now is living with a grandmother. "I love my grandmother, but I'd rather be at Jamal Place. I'm trying to do everything in my power to get back to Jamal Place."

Intangibles aren't part of the bureaucratic process. There isn't a place on an evaluation form to give credit to Deuel and her staff for leading the effort that closed a local "crack house." There's no way to measure the improvements in a former resident that led him for the first time to sign "love" before his name on the Mother's Day card he sent Deuel this year. There's no scoresheet for the local gang leader who stopped preying on Jamal kids when he was confronted by Deuel and recognized her as the woman who gave him a Christmas present a few years earlier. The interview for this story is interrupted when that man calls Deuel, who is helping him find a legitimate job.

"It is enormously frustrating to me that the attachment the boys develop with our staff members is not a 'measurable' outcome," Deuel says. "These are our children. Long after DCFS is done with these kids, our door is still open."

Last weekend, many former residents came back to explain how Jamal Place helped them. On June 26, Jamal Place will celebrate its 15th anniversary with a picnic and walkathon in Douglas Park, across the street from the home. Deuel and her staff are hoping DCFS finds a way to give them more time, another year to continue its mission.

"I've always maintained that God won't let us fail," says Deuel. "For 15 years, that's been the case, and now we've got this challenge."

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 3, 2010 1:48 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

fyi

---

From: Brownfield, William R
Sent: Thursday, June 03, 2010 10:41 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

Cheryl

[redacted] B5

Feel free to share if you wish.
WRB

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Thursday, June 03, 2010 7:33 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Posner, Michael H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Kelly, Craig A; Brownfield, William R; Fuchs, Michael H; Baer, Daniel B; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: FW: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

See b/l re travel to columbia

---

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 02, 2010 3:49 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

Dear Cheryl –

In my last email (Friday, 5/28), I attached the letter from the bipartisan Co-Chairs and Executive Committee members of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission sent to Assistant Secretary Mike Posner expressing grave concern about the recent rise in death threats, attacks and murders of Colombian human rights defenders, religious, community and other NGO leaders. Congressman McGovern also strongly encouraged the Secretary to meet with representatives of those organizations and individuals being threatened, with a particularly effort to reach out to and invite the Bishops of Tumaco (Nariño), Barrancabermeja/Medio Magdalena (Santander), and we would now add Putumayo, since the Colombian Catholic Church just advised us yesterday of increased death threats against religious workers there. In addition, we recommended inviting Monseñor Hector Fabio Henao, director of Pastoral Social, at the Archdiocese in Bogotá, who represents all the pastoral work of the Church throughout the country, as well as representatives from the Mennonite and Lutheran churches, in particular.

While in Colombia, the most important thing the Secretary can do is avoid effusive praise for President Álvaro Uribe, who leaves office in August. Inside Colombia, the visit by the Secretary is being described as focusing solely on the free trade agreement and continuing support of the counterdrug strategy/Plan Colombia. Without changes in the human rights situation and the culture of impunity, it is unlikely that anything the Secretary might say or do will alter the equation on Capitol Hill regarding the trade agreement. It should be noted that the October 2008 GAO report on the counter-drug operations in Colombia concluded that U.S. assistance was successful in increasing security in parts of the country, but a failure in the areas of counter-narcotics (GAO-09-71), and a subsequent April 2009 USAID evaluation on U.S. aid for Plan Colombia for illegal crop reduction and Colombian counternarcotics policies actually contribute to increased coca production.

The Colombian president has been a solid backer of U.S. policy and U.S. interests in the region, and has achieved some important improvements in the country's security situation. It is important to recognize that, but to do so without repeating the tone of Defense Secretary Gates' April visit, in which he called Uribe a "great hero" and failed even to mention any concerns.

These concerns are of critical importance, and while the Secretary need not list them all, at least some deserve public acknowledgement – some recognition that it is important to the United States that Colombia, including the current government and its successor, show the necessary political will to deal with them:

- A sharp rise in alleged military killings of civilians. In many cases, these are so-called "false positives": non-combatants murdered and later presented as members of armed groups killed in combat. These, notes UN Special Rapporter for Extrajudicial Executions Philip Alston, "began occurring with a disturbing frequency across Colombia from 2004." Citing prosecutors' and NGOs' reports, Alston indicates that Colombia's security forces may have killed 1,486 civilians during the first six years of Álvaro Uribe's presidency. Alston notes that the Defense Ministry only began to address the situation after the media broke the story of the false-positives and the subsequent negative publicity and horrified public outcry.

  The prosecution of "false positives" is moving with excruciating slowness. In perhaps the most notorious case – the murders of about twenty young men from the poor Bogotá suburb of Soacha – nearly all of the accused soldiers and officers have been released from prison, pending trial, as deadlines for timely prosecution have run out. Since their arrest in late 2008, their case has been prolonged by numerous delaying tactics by the defense, including attempts to have their cases tried in the military court system as "acts of service." Alston reports that the impunity rate on these extrajudicial murders by security forces may be as high as 98.5 percent.

- Mounting allegations that the President's intelligence service, the DAS, was put at the service of paramilitary leaders and narcotraffickers; used to spy on and intimidate Supreme Court justices, opposition politicians, journalists and human rights defenders; and employed in a campaign of sabotage and smears against political opponents.

  Prosecutors are alleging that the orders to have the DAS carry out wiretaps, surveillance and "political warfare" came from high up in the Colombian presidency, though the question of "what President Uribe knew, and when he knew it" remains unanswered. Meanwhile efforts to reform or dissolve the DAS are stalled in Colombia's Congress.

- President Uribe's political coalition has also been hit by a scandal known in Colombia as "para-politics." This coalition has included dozens of political bosses from regions beyond the capital. Many are large landholders with ties to narcotrafficking, the same local leaders who created and fostered the brutal pro-government paramilitary groups that killed tens of thousands of non-combatants in the 1990s and early 2000s.

  Evidence, much of it from former paramilitary leaders, has brought about 300 criminal investigations against legislators, governors, mayors and other local officials, nearly all of them Álvaro Uribe's political supporters, who made common cause with the far-right warlords. To date, of the 278 congresspeople and senators elected in 2006, 68 are under official investigation, on trial, or convicted for paramilitary ties. Those embroiled in parapolitics include the President's cousin, Mario Uribe; the brother of his former foreign minister; and individuals whom the President had named to be Colombia's ambassadors to Chile, the Dominican Republic, and Canada.

The Colombian prosecutors, investigators, witnesses and non-governmental organizations trying to uncover the truth about these abuses are working under conditions of great personal risk. They, too, are heroes and would benefit greatly from a public expression of concern about the cases they are investigating, and a reminder that their work is legitimate and important to U.S. interests in Colombia.

At the same time, it is important to avoid appearing to endorse any candidate in the June 20 runoff elections. Between the first and second rounds of a country's presidential election is a politically awkward time for a high-level official visit. Though President Uribe's former defense minister, Juan Manuel Santos, is the overwhelming favorite given his margin of success in the May 30th first round of balloting over former Bogotá mayor Antanas Mockus, it is necessary at this stage to convey a sense of balance and a willingness to work closely with whoever wins. As a result, any kind words for one candidate should be balanced by praise for the other.

Finally, it would be helpful to remind the Colombian people that the United States supports a peaceful resolution of Bogotá's worsening differences with Venezuela. While President Chávez's behavior is a significant concern, it would be most unhelpful to be perceived on this trip as fanning the flames of conflict with Colombia – or playing into the Chavez rhetoric that the U.S. and Colombia have military aspirations in the region.

Hope this memo, along with last week's copy of the TLHRC letter to Assistant Secretary Posner, are helpful and useful materials for the Secretary as she plans her trip.

Very best wishes –

On behalf of Cong. Jim McGovern

Staff Contact: Cindy Buhl (202-225-6101 or cindy.buhl@mail.house.gov)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 3, 2010 8:41 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Call To Bongo on Iran Postponed by a Day

FYI.

---

From: Carson, Johnnie
Sent: Thursday, June 03, 2010 8:25 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Mull, Stephen D; Cook, Akunna E; Yamamoto, Donald Y
Subject: Call To Bongo on Iran Postponed by a Day

Jake: FYI: President Bongo was reportedly tied up in a marathon cabinet meeting today following his return from Nice, and could not speak with me as arranged. My call to Bongo has been rescheduled for Friday morning. I will provide you with feedback after I connect with him. Regards, Johnnie

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 6:47 AM
To: H
Subject: Calls confirmed

7:30 Ukranian Foreign Minister Gryshchenko
8 Greek Prime Minister Papandreou

RELEASE
IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 7:21 AM
To: H
Subject: Fyi

B5

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 7:43 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Fyi

I've already asked him. Waiting to hear back

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Jun 04 07:40:03 2010
Subject: Re: Fyi

What does Bill Burns think? I'd rather do it later so I can get ready to go.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jun 04 07:21:24 2010
Subject: Fyi

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 7:54 AM
To: H
Subject: Bill recommends that u talk to yang. I can see if he can do right after greek call? Give u a little more time.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 8:17 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Gaza

Roger - will do.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Jun 04 08:07:10 2010
Subject: Gaza

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | | B5 |
| | Pls see the memcon for details. | |

RELEASE
IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 9:29 AM
To: H
Subject: H: fyi. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo israel ideas 060110.docx; hrc memo israel ideas 060110.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

June 4, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Israel crisis

Some articles you may not have seen: 1. Anthony H. Cordesman's analysis, posted at CSIS, "Israel as a Strategy Liability?" is being widely discussed and circulated; 2. Max Blumenthal, who is now reporting from Israel, writing a book on the crisis of democracy there, details from the Israeli press how the raid was long planned and who approved it, how the Netanyahu government is stirring up support, and the internal consequences (see the detail on the Facebook page urging the assassination of an Israeli-Arab member of the Knesset, and the actions of Bibi's allies); 3. David Ignatius's column today in the Washington Post, with detail on how Turkey thought it was encouraged by Obama in its initiative with Brazil on Iran and then felt the limb was cut off, among other things. I myself picked this up earlier from chatter among diplomats from Arab countries in DC. True or not, distorted or accurate, it is what the Arabs believe. Their view is that Obama will be reelected and there will be no progress at all in the Middle East for six years and they are planning accordingly—US influence at ebb tide. Did any boys at the NSC encourage the Turks as reported? Better? Worse? It's around and accepted as truth to the point that Ignatius reports it. 4. Leon Wieseltier, literary editor at The New Republic, bellwether of the higher center-slightly right Zionist opinion, on the self-undermining Israeli approach; and 5. Letter to the NY Times by Dan Kurzman, biographer of Rabin and Ben Gurion.

Published on Center for Strategic and International Studies (http://csis.org)
Home > Publications > Content

Israel as a Strategic Liability?

Anthony H. Cordesman
Related Regions:

Israel/Palestine [1]
Related Regions:
Middle East [2]

America's ties to Israel are not based primarily on U.S. strategic interests. At the best of times, an Israeli government that pursues the path to peace provides some intelligence, some minor advances in military technology, and a potential source of stabilizing military power that could help Arab states like Jordan. Even then, however, any actual Israeli military intervention in an Arab state could prove as destabilizing as beneficial. The fact is that the real motives behind America's commitment to Israel are moral and ethical. They are a reaction to the horrors of the Holocaust, to the entire history of Western anti-Semitism, and to the United States' failure to help German and European Jews during the period before it entered World War II. They are a product of the fact that Israel is a democracy that shares virtually all of the same values as the United States. The U.S. commitment to Israel is not one that will be abandoned. The United States has made this repeatedly clear since it first recognized Israel as a state, and it has steadily strengthened the scale of its commitments since 1967. The United States has provided Israel with massive amounts of economic aid and still provides enough military assistance to preserve Israel's military superiority over its neighbors. The United States has made it clear that any U.S. support for Arab-Israeli peace efforts must be based on options that preserve Israel's security, and its recent announcements that it will consider "extended regional deterrence" are code words for a U.S. commitment that could guard Israel, as well as its neighbors, against an Iranian nuclear threat.

At the same time, the depth of America's moral commitment does not justify or excuse actions by an Israeli government that unnecessarily make Israel a strategic liability when it should remain an asset. It does not mean that the United States should extend support to an Israeli government when that government fails to credibly pursue peace with its neighbors. It does not mean that the United States has the slightest interest in supporting Israeli settlements in the West Bank, or that the United States should take a hard-line position on Jerusalem that would effectively make it a Jewish rather than a mixed city. It does not mean that the United States should be passive when Israel makes a series of major strategic blunders--such as persisting in the strategic bombing of Lebanon during the Israeli-Hezbollah conflict, escalating its attack on Gaza long after it had achieved its key objectives, embarrassing the U.S. president by announcing the expansion of Israeli building programs in east Jerusalem at a critical moment in U.S. efforts to put Israeli-Palestinian peace talks back on track, or sending commandos to seize a Turkish ship in a horribly mismanaged effort to halt the "peace flotilla" going to Gaza. It is time Israel realized that it has obligations to the United States, as well as the United States to Israel, and that it become far more careful about the extent to which it test the limits of U.S. patience and exploits the support of American Jews. This does not mean taking a single action that undercuts Israeli security, but it does mean realizing that Israel should show enough discretion to reflect the fact that it is a tertiary U.S. strategic interest in a complex and demanding world.

Israel's government should act on the understanding that the long-term nature of the U.S.-Israel strategic relationship will depend on Israel clearly and actively seeking peace with the Palestinians—the kind of peace that is in Israel's own strategic interests. Israelis should understand that the United States opposes expansion and retention of its settlements and its efforts to push Palestinians out of greater Jerusalem. Israeli governments should plan Israeli military actions that make it clear that Israel will use force only to the level actually required, that carefully consider humanitarian issues from the start, and that have a clear post-combat plan of action to limit the political and strategic impact of its use of force. And Israel should not conduct a high-risk attack on Iran in the face of the clear U.S. "red light" from both the Bush and Obama administrations. Israel should be sensitive to the fact that its actions directly affect U.S. strategic interests in the Arab and Muslim worlds, and it must be as sensitive to U.S. strategic concerns as the United States is to those of Israel.

The United States does not need unnecessary problems in one of the most troubled parts of the world, particularly when Israeli actions take a form that does not serve Israel's own strategic interests. This Israeli government in particular needs to realize that as strong as U.S.-Israel ties may be, it is time to return to the kind of strategic realism exemplified by leaders like Yitzhak Rabin. No aspect of what happened this week off the coast of Gaza can be blamed on Israeli commandos or the Israel Defense Forces. Israel's prime minister and defense minister had full warning about the situation, and they knew the flotilla was deliberately designed as a political provocation to capture the attention of the world's media in the most negative way possible. They personally are responsible for what happened, and they need to show far more care and pragmatism in the future.

Anthony H. Cordesman holds the Arleigh A. Burke Chair in Strategy at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C.

Commentaries* are produced by the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), a private, tax-exempt institution focusing on international public policy issues. Its research is nonpartisan and nonproprietary. CSIS does not take specific policy positions. Accordingly, all views, positions, and conclusions expressed in this publication should be understood to be solely those of the author(s).
© 2010 by the Center for Strategic and International Studies. All rights reserved.

- Defense and Security
- International Security

CSIS Center for Strategic and International Studies
1800 K Street, NW
Washington, DC 20006
Tel: 202-887-0200 begin_of_the_skype_highlighting 202-887-0200 end_of_the_skype_highlighting Fax: 202-775-3199
All content © copyright 2010 All rights reserved.

Source URL: http://csis.org/publication/israel-strategic-liability
Links:
[1] http://csis.org/region/israelpalestine
[2] http://csis.org/region/middle-east

http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/06/the-flotilla-raid-was-not-bungled-the-idf-detailed-its-violent-strategy-in-advance/

The Flotilla Raid Was Not "Bungled." The IDF Detailed Its Violent Strategy In Advance.

On 06.03.10, By Max Blumenthal

Tel Aviv-Israel Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his senior ministers have attempted to blame army commanders for "the bungled raid on a Gaza-bound flotilla," according to the UK's Daily Telegraph. The AP reported that "Israel's bloody, bungled takeover of a Gaza-bound Turkish aid vessel is complicating US-led Mideast peace efforts." And according to Reuters, "Israeli military admits errors in bungled boarding."

But was the raid really bungled? Did the Israeli military command and Netanyahu government have no clear strategy going in? Or was the violence they meted out against the flotilla activists deliberate and methodically planned?

Statements by senior Israeli military commanders made in the Hebrew media days before the massacre revealed that the raid was planned over a week in advance by the Israeli military and was personally approved by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Minister of Defense Ehud Barak. The elite Israeli commando unit known as Unit 13 was tasked with carrying out the mission and its role was known by the Israeli public well before the raid took place. Details of the plan show that the use of deadly force was authorized and calculated. The massacre of activists should not have been unexpected.

On May 28, three days before the raid, top Israeli military officials revealed details of their strategy to Maariv, Israel's most widely circulated paper. The caption of the Maariv article reflected the military command's plan to use force: "On the way to violence; one of the boats is on its way."

Here is a translation of relevant portions of the article:

Maariv, 5/28/10 P. 4

Title: Head to Head in the Heart of the Sea

Caption: On the way to violence; one of the boats is on its way."

Subhead: The sea encounter that will occur at the end of the weekend is already planned detail by detail. From the moment that the ships will pass the "red line" on their way to Gaza, the fighters of Unit 13 will take control and transfer 800 passengers from their boats back to where they came from. And special arrest units were set up.

From the body of article: This operation was approved by Prime Minister Netanyahu and Defense Minister Barak and will be led by the commander of the Navy, Lieutenant Colonel Eliezer Maron, who is nicknamed "Cheney." If the people aboard the boats will not agree to turn around, the operation will transfer to the stage of force. "We are afraid that there will be a terror attack by the boats," said a high ranking officer. "If terrorists have gotten on the boats or if there is an intention to use hot weapons against our forces, we will use full seriousness and caution. We want to avoid using force but as soon as there will be danger to the life of our forces we will be forced to use live fire as a last resort.

[...]
After our fighters take over the boats, OKETZ unit dogs and forces of the IHLM unit corps of engineers will inspect them looking for sabotage materials and fighting tools.

A Maariv article from 5/28/10, page 4, reveals the Israeli military command's flotilla raid plan

So the Israeli military broadcast its plan for violence, inciting the Israeli public and the soldiers of Unit 13 with fevered visions of a kill-or-be-killed encounter with a group of Arab "terrorists." The stated conditions for using live fire were arbitrary and poorly defined, giving the commandos little direction and lots of leeway to kill — at the very least the plan demanded force in some form.
After the initial violent stages, the plan called for the gathering of the activists' "fighting tools," an acknowledgment by the Israeli military that the activists might try to repel its commandos once they forced their way on the ships. The plan to search for "sabotage materials" also foreshadowed the IDF's post-raid propaganda campaign.
An alternative plan that would have been likely to avert violence could have been set into motion. The Israeli Navy could have done what it had in the past and hijacked the aid ships without boarding them, then towed them to shore. However, the Rambo-style plan concocted by Netanyahu, his top aides and the Naval commander with the unfortunate nickname of "Cheney" made the killing of activists likely, if not inevitable.
Why didn't Israel's leaders choose to deal with the flotilla in a more judicious fashion? Were they that stupid, or just crazy? From the details of the plan it appears that Netanyahu and his cohorts had envisioned Entebbe Part Deux, a daring anti-terror raid that would lift the sinking morale of the Israeli public while intimidating Iran and the Arab world. Though Israel may be more isolated than ever as a result of the massacre, the Netanyahu administration is reaping considerable political benefits at home.
The day after the massacre, spontaneous celebrations broke out in Ashdod, Tel Aviv, and throughout the country, bringing together right-wing elements with everyday Israelis. Over a thousand Israelis gathered tonight outside the Turkish embassy in Tel Aviv to rally against the Turkish government and express their support for the raid. Multiple demonstrators including one man who has lived in Israel for 60 years told me, "What Turkey [the sponsor of the Mavi Marmara boat] has done is great. I have never seen this country more united in my entire life. We are all standing together now." (Video coming soon).
Israeli newscasters are routinely using the term "mechabel," or terrorist, to refer to the flotilla activists, while the violence that broke out on the deck of the Mavi Marmara is called "the lynch." (Nevermind that zero commandos were hung and nine activists were killed, including an American citizen who was shot in the head four times.) No evidence is required to support claims in the Israeli media. The public desperately wants to believe that its government is right, so much so that Israel's media is not even making a token effort to challenge the increasingly hysterical press releases disseminated by the IDF press office every few hours.
Hanin Zoabi, a Palestinian-Israeli member of the Knesset who was on the Mavi Marmara, was physically accosted in the Knesset by fellow legislators for attempting to relate her experience aboard the flotilla. MK Miri Regev of Likud called her a "traitor," while Yoel Hasson of Kadima, a supposedly centrist party, denounced Zoabi as a "terrorist." An Israeli Facebook group devoted to inciting Zoabi's assassination has gathered 600 members in just a day and a half. In the meantime, Israel's Interior Minster Eli Yishai is "looking into" means of stripping Zoabi of her citizenship.
This Friday, anti-occupation activists expect to encounter intense violence from the Israeli Army and Border Police at the weekly demonstrations in Sheikh Jarrah and Nebi Salah. "In this atmosphere, you can expect with pretty reasonable certainty that the soldiers will go crazy," a veteran of the Sheikh Jarrah protest movement told me.
With two more ships on their way towards Gaza with aid for the besieged civilian population, the Israeli military and Netanyahu administration are not wasting time in hatching a new strategy to stop them. Once again, the plan calls for violence and possibly more death. "Next time we'll use more force," a top Naval commander told the Jerusalem Post. "We will have to come prepared in the future as if it was a war."

Washington Post

The U.S. needs to keep nudging Israel on a Gaza fix

By David Ignatius
Friday, June 4, 2010; A19

The Obama administration, caught between two allies during this week of crisis, has signaled Israel and Turkey that the blockade of Gaza should be loosened to allow more humanitarian aid to reach the Palestinian population there.
From the first news early Monday of the Israeli commando attack on a flotilla of Turkish relief ships, the White House has been trying to balance the interests of two prickly friends. The immediate aim, said a senior official, has been to "defuse the electricity of the moment" by freeing the ships' passengers and passing a U.N. resolution calling (in fuzzy language) for an investigation of the raid.

Beyond crisis management, administration officials have begun to urge Israel to use this incident to untangle the Gaza mess. U.S. officials hope Israel will take action on its own, before international condemnation grows any louder or another relief convoy tests the blockade. "The humanitarian aperture is not wide enough," argues the U.S. official. "We need to convince the Israelis that not everything can be made into a weapon."

The Obama team recognizes that Israel will act in its interests, but it wants Jerusalem to consider U.S. interests, as well. The administration has communicated at a senior level its fear that the Israelis sometimes "care about their equities, but not about ours."

This cautionary message -- that Israel must act as a more reliable and responsible partner -- may be the most important one conveyed this week.

One issue on which the administration believes Israel would benefit from a more farsighted view is the investigation of the incident. Israel has argued that this is a purely internal matter for the Israeli military, whose operations to enforce the Gaza blockade were lawful and appropriate.

But by defying calls for an international inquiry, the Israelis will compound their isolation. "They have an image problem, a perception problem," says the U.S. official. The White House hopes the Israelis will embrace some mechanism for an international probe -- perhaps a French proposal for an inquiry by the International Committee of the Red Cross. Such a move would be in Israel's interest, the administration believes.

The trickiest problem in the first hours of the crisis was dealing with Turkey, whose leaders treated the commando raid as a pirate attack on Turkish citizens. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and Gen. Jim Jones, the national security adviser, met with Turkish Foreign Minister Ahmet Davutoglu. Then came a lengthy phone call between President Obama and Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

Obama told Erdogan that "we need to find a solution" for the Gaza humanitarian problem, according to a U.S. official. Erdogan is said to have agreed with the president that a good relationship between Israel and Turkey was crucial for regional stability -- and that Turkey didn't want to see any further degradation.

The Obama administration deserves credit for its repair work in the first days after the Gaza attack. But this is another example where the administration has been reacting to events that it should have tried better to control. The Gaza confrontation has been developing for weeks; administration officials reportedly cautioned Israel about provocative moves, but not emphatically enough to make a difference. U.S. officials were blindsided about the commando operation partly because they don't spy on a key ally.

Similarly, the Obama White House has been too reactive in its relationship with Turkey. A glaring example of this diplomatic drift is the Turkish mediation effort with Iran to revive an October plan for enrichment of uranium abroad. Davutoglu thought he had Obama's blessing for his shuttle diplomacy, and the White House was given frequent updates. But when Turkey and Brazil announced they had clinched the deal, the administration did the diplomatic equivalent of shrugging its shoulders -- and went ahead with plans for U.N. sanctions.

One of the perverse secrets of Middle East diplomacy is the importance of riding several horses at once. In the heyday of Henry Kissinger's shuttle mediation, the Americans were the supreme masters of playing both sides of the street.

Obama has been talking about engagement and mediation but without much to show for it. Instead, the administration has been responding to events rather than driving them. That won't do. As former ambassador Chas. W. Freeman says in his collection of aphorisms, "The Diplomat's Dictionary": "If you're not at the table, you're on the menu."

Published on The New Republic (http://www.tnr.com)

Operation Make the World Hate Us

The assault on the 'Mavi Marmara' was wrong, and a gift to Israel's enemies.

- Leon Wieseltier
- June 3, 2010 |

Israel does not need enemies: it has itself. Or more precisely: it has its government. The Netanyahu-Barak government has somehow found a way to lose the moral high ground, the all-important war for symbols and meanings, to Hamas. That is quite an accomplishment. Operation Make the World Hate Us, it might have been called.

I leave it to others to make the operational criticisms of the Israeli action, and will say only that even my amateurish understanding of the tactical challenge posed by the interdiction of the boats suffices to suggest that there were other ways to do this. I also will not pretend to a perfect grasp of what happened on board the Mavi Marmara. I have pondered the videos that both sides have released, and concluded that the Israeli soldiers sliding down that rope had no intention of attacking the people on board and that the people on board had no way of being confident of this. I cannot expect Palestinians and their supporters to believe the best about the Israeli army. (This is what Israeli hardliners call "the restoration of deterrence.") I do not doubt that some of the activists on the ship welcomed a confrontation with Israel, but the Israelis should not have obliged them. In any event, what took place on that deck looks to me like a tragic misunderstanding. Yet there was no reason to think that anything else would have transpired.

The important point is that the killing of civilians on the Mavi Marmara—I understand that they were "armed" with metal bars and a knife, but still they were civilians, and soldiers are trained to respond unlethally to the recklessness of a mob—cannot be extenuated by reference to "asymmetrical warfare" and Israel's right to defend itself. This was not warfare, at least of the physical sort. Israel was not under attack. A headline in The Washington Post yesterday reported that "Israel says Free Gaza Movement poses threat to Jewish state." Such a claim is absurd. It is true that the movement has grown in recent years, and is now troublesome to Israel's policy in Gaza; and it is also true that the Turkish charity that sponsored the "Freedom Flotilla" has ties to Islamicist groups. But this is hardly what Israel likes to call, in the Iranian context, and there quite plausibly, an "existential threat." The extension of the definition of a security threat to include hostile activities that have little or no bearing upon security is an ominous development.

It is also the inevitable consequence of Benjamin Netanyahu's cunning pronouncement last year that Israel is now endangered by "the Iran threat, the missile threat, and the threat I call the Goldstone threat." The equivalence was morally misleading, and therefore dangerous. Ideological warfare is not military warfare. I have studied the entirety of the Goldstone Report, and whereas I do not doubt (and wrote in this magazine in the days before Goldstone) that Operation Cast Lead caused the unjustifiable death of non-combatants, I also do not doubt that the Goldstone Report, which was nastily indifferent to Israel's security predicament and to the ethical challenges of Israeli self-defense, was an instrument in a broad campaign of delegitimation against Israel—and yet the threat of delegitimation is not like the threat of destruction. It is different in kind. A commando operation is not an appropriate response to an idea. "This was no Love Boat," Netanyahu said yesterday. "It was a hate boat." He is right, but so what? The threat of delegitimation is not a military problem and it does not have a military solution. And the attempt to give it a military solution has now had the awful consequence of making the threat still greater. The assault on the Mavi Marmara was a stupid gift to the delegitimators.

You do not have to be a general to grasp these distinctions. In fact, judging by Israel's recent history, it might help not to be one. But the militarization of the Israeli government's understanding of Israel's situation—this has been the most sterile period for diplomacy in all of Israel's history—is not all that led to the debacle at sea. Rules of military engagement that allow soldiers to fire on political activists (I leave aside the question of their humanitarianism for a moment) may signify something still deeper and even more troubling. It is hard not to conclude from this Israeli action, and also from other Israeli actions in recent years, that the Israeli leadership simply does not care any longer about what anybody thinks. It does not seem to care about what even the United States—its only real friend, even in the choppy era of Obama—thinks. This is not defiance, it is despair. The Israeli leadership seems to have given up any expectation of fairness and sympathy from the world. It is behaving as if it believes, in the manner of the most perilous Jewish pessimism, that the whole world hates the Jews, and that is all there is to it. This is the very opposite of the measured and empirical attitude, the search for strategic opportunity, the enlistment of imagination in the service of ideals and interests, that is required for statecraft.

The complication—the one that deprives anybody who acknowledges it of membership in any of the gangs of commentary—is that there is a partial basis in the actually existing world for a degree of Israeli pessimism. There are leaders, states, organizations, and peoples whose hostility to the Jewish state is irrational and absolute and in some cases murderous. Things are said critically about Israel that wildly burst the bounds of thoughtful criticism. The language in which Israel is described by some governments and international organizations is lurid and grotesque and foul. Anti-Semitic tropes—the conspiracy theory about the Jews, most conspicuously—are regularly encountered in otherwise respectable places. The analysis of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict that absolves the Palestinians of any significant role in it is widespread. I do not see how any of this can be denied, or shunted aside, or explained entirely in terms of Israeli behavior. But it is emphatically not the whole picture, except for those Israelis and Jews whose political interests and ideological inclinations prefer it to be the whole picture. For there are forces in Israel, and in its government, that have a use for Jewish hopelessness.

There is a verse in Numbers that Jewish pessimists like to cite: "the people shall dwell alone, and not be reckoned among the nations." It is Balaam's divinely inspired description of the Israelites—Balaam, who came to curse and stayed to bless. But I have always regarded it as a curse, this promise of loneliness. I have heard it intoned lachrymosely and proudly—in our time Jewish pride has a disturbingly parasitic relationship with Jewish lachrymosity—all my life. It chills me to the bone. It is a locution for prophets, not prime ministers. The Jews cannot dwell alone. In fact, their history shows that they never did dwell alone. It is not a tale of insularity and isolation. The apartness of the Jews was never a complete secession from their environment. The engagement of the Jews with the world was a matter not only of practical necessity, but also of theological conviction. And not even the darkest and most dire adversity succeeded in driving them entirely into themselves.

When, in the modern era, the Zionists concluded, quite correctly, that the Jews must extract themselves from anti-Semitic societies and establish a society of their own, a sovereign one, in the land of Israel, it was in part to "normalize" them by making them "reckoned among the nations," and therefore like other nations. Zionism was a reversal of Balaam's phony blessing. The state was not supposed to be a bunker, even if it had enemies. But Netanyahu is a creature of the bunker. He talks about peace, but not like a man who hungers for it. He takes no steps toward peace except as the consequence of a crisis—a crisis not with the Palestinians but with the Americans. He liturgically intones his warnings, some of them true, about the external dangers facing Israel, and mistakes brutishness for toughness, and offers nothing. He is a gray, muddling, reactive figure. His preferred strategy for his country is: one quiet week after another unto eternity. His problem is that there are not many quiet weeks.

But about those activists: a great deal of bathetic rubbish has been written about them. Insofar as they were bringing food and medicine to Gaza, they were humanitarians; but insofar as they were striking a blow for the government of Gaza, they were anti-humanitarians. A real "Freedom Flotilla" would have sailed for Gaza to liberate it from its rulers. For Hamas stifles Gaza from within even as Israel stifles it from without. It oppresses the Palestininans who live under its sway and has brought them ruin. When did it become progressive to support a theocracy? Consider the case of Henning Mankell, the Swedish writer of thrillers (and the son-in-law of Ingmar Bergman) who was a passenger on one of the boats in the "Freedom Flotilla." In his youth he took part in anti-Vietnam and anti-apartheid demonstrations, presumably in the spirit of secular reason. For a while he lived in Norway and participated in the activities of a radical Maoist party: let us call that secular unreason. Now he does the work of Hamas and its mullahs. Last year Mankell attended the Palestine Festival of Literature in east Jerusalem—or would have attended it, if the Israeli authorities had not idiotically closed it down. When he returned to Sweden, he wrote that "there is a straight line between Soweto, Sharpeville, and what recently happened [I presume he was referring to the war] in Gaza." And: "Is it strange that some [Palestinians] in pure desperation, when they cannot see any other way out, decide to become suicide bombers? Not really. Maybe it is strange that there are not more of them." And: "The state of Israel in its current form has no future. Moreover, those who advocate a two-state solution have not got it right. ... The question is whether it will be possible to talk sense into the Israelis in order for them to willingly accept the end of their own apartheid state." This man has rights, at sea and on land, but he can hardly be lauded as a champion of peace and reconciliation. You are not for co-existence if you advocate the disappearance of one of the terms. (Consider, analogously, the recent adventures of Noam Chomsky in the region. It was widely noted that the Israelis, again idiotically, turned him away at the Allenby Bridge. It was less widely noted that a few days later a reporter for The New York Times accidentally discovered him in Lebanon at the home of Nabil Qaouk, the deputy head of Hezbollah, which is not what Voltaire had in mind.)

And yet the screw must be turned again: the anti-Israeli virulence of Henning Mankell and his maritime comrades does not make Israel's assault on the Mavi Marmara more just or more wise. Now the Israeli government may find it impossible not to modify or even to lift the blockade of Gaza—an outcome that no decent person can decry, as long as Hamas does not exploit the respite to acquire weapons or what it needs to make them, and the past is not encouraging in this regard. Netanyahu will do what he can to get past the mess, hoping that the approach of the midterm elections in the United States will rescue him from the pressure, and the deadening hand of the status quo will be back. And Israel will be known to more and more people—in a wounding misrepresentation—mainly for cruelty.

Leon Wieseltier is the literary editor of The New Republic.

For more TNR, become a fan on Facebook and follow us on Twitter.

---

Source URL: http://www.tnr.com/article/politics/75287/operation-make-the-world-hate-us http://www.nytimes.com/2010/06/04/opinion/l04mideast.html?ref=opinion

To the Editor:

Nicholas D. Kristof's column could have been written by the peacemaking Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin or Israel's founder and first prime minister, David Ben-Gurion, if they were alive today.

Mr. Rabin told me shortly before he was assassinated by a right-wing Israeli extremist that Israel, while pursuing peace, must never play into the hands of Palestinian terrorists, who would try to sabotage the talks with attacks intended to provoke disproportionate retaliation. Yes, Israel would fight the terrorists, but not the Palestinian people. And it would certainly not initiate bloody conflict.

Mr. Ben-Gurion told me that Israel would regret maintaining control of Arab-inhabited regions and another people after the 1967 Six-Day War. He said the war would never end as long as Israel occupied the area, an occupation he felt was both strategically and morally wrong.

And if succeeding right-wing governments had taken his advice, the war might well have been over years ago, preventing Hamas from ruling Gaza, giving Iran no excuse for threatening Israel with nuclear destruction, and making life much easier for the United States.

The Israeli assault on the pro-Palestinian flotilla is a symbolic result of the tragic survival-imperiling refutation by Israeli right-wingers of the visionary views of their country's two greatest leaders.

Dan Kurzman

North Bergen, N.J., June 3, 2010

The writer is the author of biographies of Yitzhak Rabin and David Ben-Gurion.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 11:39 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) South Korea seeks UN action against North Korea over ship

---

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-Korea
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Fri Jun 04 11:34:59 2010
Subject: (AP) South Korea seeks UN action against North Korea over ship

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - South Korea has handed over a letter officially referring North Korea to the UN Security Council over the ship sinking. South Korea's UN Ambassador Park In-kook said he presented a letter to Mexico's UN Ambassador Claude Heller, the current Security Council president, on June 4. He says the letter asks the council "to respond in a manner appropriate to the gravity of this situation."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 4:05 PM
To: H

Background on the Women Deliver Conference CONTEXT The second Women Deliver conference will take place in Washington, DC on June 7-9, 2010. This conference is an international gathering that focuses on maternal health and will include an estimated 3,000 representatives from governments, civil society, multilateral organizations, and the private sector. The aim of the conference is to generate political commitment and financial investment for fulfilling Millennium Development Goal 5, which pledges a three-quarter reduction in maternal mortality and universal access to reproductive health by 2015. The conference is one of several international gatherings this year that will include a focus on maternal and child health (MCH). As you know, this issue will also feature at the G-8, where the Canadians are offering a flagship initiative on MCH, and at the Millennium Development Goals Summit in September, where the UN Secretary General is sponsoring a Joint Effort on Women and Children's Health. The US will be represented at the Women Deliver conference by Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius, Undersecretary of State Maria Otero, Ambassador Melanne Verveer, and a host of other USG participants. Please note: You recently recorded a video message that will open the conference.
The full script is below.
SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS
· For too long and in too many places, women have received inadequate care when they give birth. As a result, childbirth remains a leading cause of death and injury to women worldwide. · The United States has elevated the issue of maternal health in our development work through the Global Health Initiative, a $63 billion dollar proposal to help countries improve health outcomes through strengthened health systems and integrated service delivery, with a particular focus on the health of women, newborns and children. · This conference—along with other international gatherings this year, including the G-8 and the Millennium Development Goals Summit in September—presents a unique opportunity to reinvigorate our commitment to maternal health. · When women prosper, their families and communities prosper. Women deliver for the world – now the world needs to deliver for them. ADDITIONAL BACKGROUND The theme of this year's Women Deliver conference is "Delivering Solutions for Girls and Women," with a focus on political, economic, social/cultural, and technological solutions. Conference organizers plan to emphasize the following messages:1) The Millennium Development Goals will not be achieved without investing in women.2) There is just enough time, if the world commits funding now, to achieve Millennium Development Goal 5—an additional US $10 billion annually by 2010 and US $20 billion by 2015.Women Deliver was launched at a conference in London in 2007. Jill Sheffield is the President of the organization.

FINAL VIDEO SCRIPT WOMEN DELIVER CONFERENCEWASHINGTON, DC

I am delighted to welcome all of you to this conference and to thank you for the work you are doing to put maternal health at the top of our development agenda. Your commitment to this issue has raised awareness and inspired action around the world. We know that women represent our greatest opportunity for progress in this century. If the potential of women is fully developed, everyone benefits. And this can't be done without improving maternal health. But for too long and in too many places, women have received inadequate care when they give birth. As a result, childbirth remains a leading cause of death and injury to women worldwide. The United States has elevated this issue in our development work through the Global Health Initiative, a 63 billion dollar proposal to help countries improve health outcomes through strengthened health systems, with a particular focus on the health of women, newborns and children. We commend the Canadian government for focusing much-needed attention to this issue by offering a flagship initiative on maternal and child health at the upcoming G-8 meeting in Muskoka. The US also congratulates the United Nations Secretary General for convening governments, civil society, multilateral organizations, foundations and corporations to engage in a much-needed global effort to promote women's and children's health. These efforts—and this conference—present a unique opportunity to reinvigorate our commitment to maternal health, because when women prosper, their families and communities prosper. Women deliver for the world – now the world needs to deliver for them. Thank you.

RELEASE
IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 5:20 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Civil claims in US courts based on flotilla incident

FYI per your question yesterday. [redacted] B5

---

From: Donoghue, Joan E
Sent: Friday, June 04, 2010 5:09 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Crocker, Bathsheba N; Cleveland, Sarah H; Harris, Robert K; Schwartz, Jonathan B
Subject: Civil claims in US courts based on flotilla incident

Dear Jake –

[redacted] B5

B5

Please let us know if you would like additional details.

Joan

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 4, 2010 9:11 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: [redacted] Back Operation B6

Fyi

B6

[redacted]

Sent: Fri Jun 04 20:33:43 2010
Subject: [redacted] Back Operation B6

B6

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Jake Sullivan
Sent: Saturday, June 5, 2010 3:16 PM
To: H
Subject: Oren

From Landler today, middle of the piece -- not too much to it:

Israel also took issue with the Obama administration's assertion that the United States had warned Israeli officials to exercise caution and restraint in intercepting the flotilla.

"I was not contacted by anyone in the administration about this," said Michael B. Oren, Israel's ambassador to the United States. Mr. Oren said he was not aware that anybody else in the Israeli government had been called and was seeking clarification from the administration.

A spokesman for the State Department, Philip J. Crowley, said the United States had "extensive contacts" with Israel and Turkey before the flotilla set sail. "We expressed to the Israelis the need for caution and restraint in dealing with civilians, including American citizens," he said.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 5, 2010 4:21 PM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Larger impact of hard work on Haiti

From an INR report just released:

Western Europe: Publics Credit U.S. for Relief to Haiti

Britons, French, Germans, Italians, and Spaniards say the United States has done more than other countries to assist Haiti following the devastating January earthquake. Though relief efforts in Haiti have not themselves directly impacted opinion of the United States, the belief that the United States generally assists disaster-stricken countries does positively affect U.S. image.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 5, 2010 6:33 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Merkel-Medvedev on Iran

Good stuff from Medvedev

----- Original Message -----
From: Burns, William J
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jun 05 18:27:30 2010
Subject: Fw: Merkel-Medvedev on Iran

As promised

----- Original Message -----
From: Mull, Stephen D
To: Burns, William J
Sent: Sat Jun 05 16:00:43 2010
Subject: Merkel-Medvedev on Iran

As definitive as I've ever seen the Russians in public...

Germany, Russia: We support new Iran nuke sanction By VERENA SCHMITT-ROSCHMANN, Associated Press Writer – 1 hr 58 mins ago

MESEBERG, Germany – Germany and Russia declared Saturday that the five world powers negotiating with Iran support a fresh set of international sanctions, and Chancellor Angela Merkel said they could pass soon.

Russian President Dmitry Medvedev said at a news conference with Merkel that "agreement on the sanctions exists," despite the fact that "nobody wants sanctions."

"We hope the voice of the international community will be heard by the Iranian leadership," Medvedev said through the official German translator.

Merkel said sanctions could be passed by the United Nations Security Council "in the near future."

Play Video

Play Video

"I am very happy, that we can stand here jointly today and say that this is a joint position not only of the European Union, the United States of America and Russia, but also of China," Merkel said. "That is an important step the international community has made here."

Moscow has recently joined the other four U.N. Security Council members — the United States, China, Britain and France — to tentatively back a draft fourth set of U.N. sanctions against Iran.

"We have always taken a two-way approach, making offers, on the one hand, but, as there are no qualitative changes, on the other hand now the time has come that such sanctions must be adopted," Merkel said.

Medvedev said it is unacceptable "that one continues to act irresponsibly. One has to move toward the partners of the international community and it is only in this way that complicated issues can be solved."

Russia's president arrived Friday for a two-day visit to Germany to discuss a range of issues with Merkel.

The West is against an expansion of nuclear nations and suspects Iran is enriching uranium to build a nuclear warhead. Tehran denies this and insists on its right to a peaceful nuclear power program, but has frustrated the West over its failure to prove it.

---

Associated Press Writer David Nowak contributed to this story from Moscow.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 5, 2010 7:09 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: tying up a couple of loose ends from this week

You mentioned at Thursday's 8:45 meeting that you had talked to Qureshi and that he thought he was not going to get any trade access to the EU. My EU contact writes that the Member States in the EU have been slowing up progress on trade concessions to Pakistan, although the draft language negotiated w/ Pakistan still leaves room for the Commission (which is pro-trade) to keep working on enhanced trade benefits for Pakistan. Still, the original timetable of 2011 will not be kept. Even more ominous, any agreement will have to go to the European Parliament, which is down on Pakistan for human rights reasons. B5

I have also read Esther's note to you on UN Security Council Reform. You are right that overall our best position for the moment is

Have a good trip!
AM

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 6:11 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Oscar/Navy

Will do.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(202) 647-9071 (direct)

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin <[redacted]> B6
Sent: Sun Feb 07 17:58:20 2010
Subject: Fw: Oscar/Navy

Pls note on calendar. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Oscar Flores
To: Doug Band; 'AbedinH@state.gov' <AbedinH@state.gov>; Justin Cooper; H; Hannah Richert
Sent: Wed Feb 03 08:17:10 2010
Subject: Oscar/Navy

FYI
I will not be around Feb 10-14
Have to drill in Syracuse four days cause I did not drill in Jan.

In March I'm scheduled for my 2 week AT (annual training) in Norfolk I'm away March 22-April 5th

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 6:14 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Schedule

Will follow up with Huma and report back.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(202) 647-9071 (direct)

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Feb 07 18:04:15 2010
Subject: Schedule

We need a date for the India Strat Dialogue in May per Bob Blake.

EUR wants me to meet w Greek and Turkish Cypriot leaders in February in DC

I asked Kurt Campbell to set up a mtg this week on China policy

Keep the Ukraine inaugural on radar--later Feb or early March

The Ken Feinberg request for April 14 should be optional

Billie Jean King is coming in to see Melanne and Maura on Feb 25. I'd like to drop by and see her

I'd like to see Jim Fallows. Can you reach out to him to discuss a visit?

Cheryl says the Haiti conf will be 3/31.

Tony Lake--I'd like to see him inthe next few weeks.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 6, 2010 10:41 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: important

Fyi

---

From: Holbrooke, Richard
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 06 09:12:17 2010
Subject: Fw: important

URGENT

---

From: Rina Amiri [redacted]
To: Holbrooke, Richard; Jones, Paul W; Pauli, Rosemarie; Feldman, Daniel F; Barnett Rubin [redacted]
Singh, Vikram J; Bommer, Ashley F
Sent: Sun Jun 06 09:04:16 2010
Subject: important

B6
B6

President Karzai has dismissed Amrullah Saleh and Hanif Atmar over the CPJ attacks. Engineer Ibrahim is said to be appointed as the head of NDS and Governor Mangal as the new Minister of Interior.

I will send you further details later.

Best,

Rina

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 7:03 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Followup

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Sun Feb 07 18:04:34 2010
Subject: Followup

Pls be sure Bill and I do a letter to [redacted] for his marriage in June. B6

And pls put the following on my call list:

Alston Johnson
Francis Collins
Derek Harvey (he came into see me in the Senate) Paul Charron Lisa Caputo Marty Edelman

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 7:57 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Costa Rican presidential election

----- Original Message -----
From: Kelly, Craig A
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Feb 07 18:53:12 2010
Subject: Costa Rican presidential election

Ruling party private exit polling shows Laura Chinchilla ahead with 44 percent. Two opponents in the 20s. If that holds (she has to get over 40 percent to avoid a runoff), we will have our fifth elected woman president in recent Latin American history. Chinchilla is same party as Arias. Will keep you posted. ck

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 8:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Praise from DFID

I'm planning on writing it up -- v useful for the QDDR.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Sun Feb 07 17:58:54 2010
Subject: Re: Praise from DFID

When the snow melts, I'd love to hear what he had to say!

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Feb 04 06:50:35 2010
Subject: Praise from DFID

I thought you both should hear the words of Andrew Stear, DG of policy at DFID, who told me yesterday that "throughout the development community around the world there is great relief that the US is back, and leading particularly in health and food security/agriculture. He said that we were once again the acknowledge "go to people" in both these areas. He also had lots to say that will b v useful in QDDR re relationship b/w development and diplomacy.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 6, 2010 11:46 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: Washington Post "Outlook" Article
Attachments: 2010.06.06.WashPost.Israeli Narrative.doc

You'll want to make sure you see this. AM

---

From: Daniel C. Kurtzer <[redacted] B6
Sent: Sun Jun 06 11:25:33 2010
Subject: Washington Post "Outlook" Article

I have attached, for your information, an article I wrote in today's Washington Post "Outlook" section. All the best. Dan

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 10:31 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Costa Rican presidential election

Yes went to 2
With nephews for till halftime
And dougs party for second half

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Feb 07 19:58:30 2010
Subject: Re: Costa Rican presidential election

Good on all counts! Are you at a Super Bowl party?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Feb 07 19:57:06 2010
Subject: Fw: Costa Rican presidential election

----- Original Message -----
From: Kelly, Craig A
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Feb 07 18:53:12 2010
Subject: Costa Rican presidential election

Ruling party private exit polling shows Laura Chinchilla ahead with 44 percent. Two opponents in the 20s. If that holds (she has to get over 40 percent to avoid a runoff), we will have our fifth elected woman president in recent Latin American history. Chinchilla is same party as Arias. Will keep you posted. ck

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 11:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Northern Ireland

Most observers seem confident that tomorrow will go smoothly. Shaun has indicated that he'd like to speak with you late morning or early afternoon. I'll check back in tomorrow am.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:06 AM
To: H
Subject: From Embassy London

This is from the political officer in London:

David Cameron will be given the right of reply after the PM's statement this afternoon -- followed by Q&A. UUP MP Sylvia Hermon is likely to be "unhelpful" during the Q&A.

The Conservatives are becoming exasperated by the rumors that appear in the press and elsewhere that they are unsupportive of the agreement. Our contacts say the Tories have been completely consistent in supporting the government on devolution, though they don't believe HMG handled the issue well (i.e. allowing the exclusion of the UUP and SDLP).

Reg Empey is scheduled to meet his MLAs tonight to review the document and prepare for the working group with SDLP's Margaret Ritchie.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:07 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: US-EU statement on human rights in Iran

FYI. They want to issue as USG. Are you comfortable with that?

---

From: Gordon, Philip H
To: Burns, William J; Mull, Stephen D; Sullivan, Jacob J; McEldowney, Nancy E; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Steinberg, James B
Sent: Mon Feb 08 07:35:44 2010
Subject: US-EU statement on human rights in Iran

The EU has agreed to issue the joint statement on human rights situation in Iran with support of all 27 member states. Text they approved is below. They will issue as European Union. Can we issue as "The USG" or "the United States"? (Had been discussion of HRC-Ashton but they want to put in names of EU and US.) Hope is to get it out today.

JOINT STATEMENT
BY THE EUROPEAN UNION AND THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
CALLING ON THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT
TO FULFIL ITS HUMAN RIGHTS OBLIGATIONS

The United States and the European Union condemn the continuing human rights violations in Iran since the June 12 election. The large scale detentions and mass trials, the threatened execution of protestors, the intimidation of family members of those detained and the continuing denial to its citizens of the right to peaceful expression are contrary to human rights norms.

Our concerns are based on our commitment to universal respect for human rights. We are particularly concerned by the potential for further violence and repression during the coming days, especially around the anniversary of the Islamic Republic's founding on 11 February. We call on the Government of Iran to live up to its international human rights obligations, to end its abuses against its own people, to hold accountable those who have committed the abuses and to release those who are exercising their rights.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:51 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: From Embassy London

It's true you've got to consider the source...

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Feb 08 08:38:18 2010
Subject: Re: From Embassy London

Not a surprising assessment from Embassy.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 08:05:36 2010
Subject: From Embassy London

This is from the political officer in London:

David Cameron will be given the right of reply after the PM's statement this afternoon -- followed by Q&A. UUP MP Sylvia Hermon is likely to be "unhelpful" during the Q&A.

The Conservatives are becoming exasperated by the rumors that appear in the press and elsewhere that they are unsupportive of the agreement. Our contacts say the Tories have been completely consistent in supporting the government on devolution, though they don't believe HMG handled the issue well (i.e. allowing the exclusion of the UUP and SDLP).

Reg Empey is scheduled to meet his MLAs tonight to review the document and prepare for the working group with SDLP's Margaret Ritchie.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 1:24 PM
To: H
Subject: You have this version as well fyi

The Secretary's Call Sheet for Russian Foreign Minister Lavrov
February 8, 2010

B5

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 1:49 PM
To: H
Subject: National security strategy

We should get you together with Jim, Jack, and Anne-Marie on the early side tomorrow, so that your guidance can be reflected in the BCL that Anne-Marie's shop is preparing for Jim and Jack for the 5:30 DC.

For what it's worth, my overall take on the document [redacted] B5

My other concern [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 1:54 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: National security strategy

Jim appears to be largely out-of-pocket, and it's critical that he be part of the conversation. So tomorrow might be most productive.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, February 08, 2010 1:53 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: National security strategy

Ok. I can also talk after the Lavrov call.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 13:49:03 2010
Subject: National security strategy

We should get you together with Jim, Jack, and Anne-Marie on the early side tomorrow, so that your guidance can be reflected in the BCL that Anne-Marie's shop is preparing for Jim and Jack for the 5:30 DC.

For what it's worth, my overall take on the document [redacted] B5

My other concern [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 2:54 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Rep. John Murtha of Pa. dies at 77

---

From: Deyo, Justin A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Mon Feb 08 14:53:30 2010
Subject: (AP) Rep. John Murtha of Pa. dies at 77

WASHINGTON (AP) - A spokesman says Democratic Rep. John Murtha of Pennsylvania, a retired Marine Corps officer who became an outspoken critic of the Iraq war, has died. He was 77. He had been suffering complications from gallbladder surgery. In 1974, Murtha became the first combat veteran of the Vietnam War elected to Congress. He wielded considerable clout for two decades as a leader of the House subcommittee that oversees Pentagon spending. But frustration over the Iraq war led him to call for an immediate pullout of U.S. troops in 2005. Murtha's congressional career was clouded by questions about his ethics from the Abscam corruption probe in 1980 to more recent investigations into the special-interest spending known as earmarks and the raising of cash for election campaigns.

Justin Deyo
S/ES-O Operations Specialist
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 3:11 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: S Calls

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Mon Feb 08 15:10:34 2010
Subject: Re: S Calls

If you can get Westerwelle I will be happy to talk but hold the other two.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 15:09:03 2010
Subject: Fw: S Calls

Did jake talk to you about below calls? I just sent westerwelle call sheet to house.
We could offer times tomorrow. Pls let me know.

---

From: Jones, Stuart
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: Gordon, Philip H; McEldowney, Nancy E
Sent: Mon Feb 08 14:06:58 2010
Subject: S Calls

Jake,

Thanks very much to you and S staff for getting S' signature on the joint letter to EP Parliament President Buzek.

At the risk of pressing my luck, I wonder if she would be willing to go ahead and make the three calls – Westerwelle, Papandreou + Miliband.

The German call is most important. The Ger EU commissioner is holding up Commission statement supporting the interim agreement.

I will send updated call sheet.

Stu

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 3:13 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: S Calls

We also have equadorant foreign minister that never happened sat if u want to make that one as well. Either today or tomorrow

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Mon Feb 08 15:10:34 2010
Subject: Re: S Calls

If you can get Westerwelle I will be happy to talk but hold the other two.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 15:09:03 2010
Subject: Fw: S Calls

Did jake talk to you about below calls? I just sent westerwelle call sheet to house.
We could offer times tomorrow. Pls let me know.

---

From: Jones, Stuart
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: Gordon, Philip H; McEldowney, Nancy E
Sent: Mon Feb 08 14:06:58 2010
Subject: S Calls

Jake,

Thanks very much to you and S staff for getting S' signature on the joint letter to EP Parliament President Buzek.

At the risk of pressing my luck, I wonder if she would be willing to go ahead and make the three calls – Westerwelle, Papandreou + Miliband.

The German call is most important. The Ger EU commissioner is holding up Commission statement supporting the interim agreement.

I will send updated call sheet.

Stu

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 3:24 PM
To: H
Subject: H: It worked. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo ni tactic 020810.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

February 8, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI/tactic works

The plan worked perfectly. Gordon made the speech in the late afternoon. Cameron felt compelled to support both the deal and the timing. Shaun called Lou Susman beforehand and Susman made a helpful call to Cameron "seeking clarification" an hour and a half before the event.

Now, Reg Empey is boxed in. He's considering his position. It may be that you will have to call him in a couple days.

Shaun will call you tomorrow at a time convenient to you.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769709 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

February 8, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI/tactic works

The plan worked perfectly. Gordon made the speech in the late afternoon. Cameron felt compelled to support both the deal and the timing. Shaun called Lou Susman beforehand and Susman made a helpful call to Cameron "seeking clarification" an hour and a half before the event.

Now, Reg Empey is boxed in. He's considering his position. It may be that you will have to call him in a couple days.

Shaun will call you tomorrow at a time convenient to you.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769709 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 3:54 PM
To: H
Subject: NI

Just saw the email from Sid - was working on the below report. Shaun apparently had a much more pessimistic view of what Cameron would do than all of our Parliament watchers, who felt confident from the get-go that he would support the deal.

PM Brown praised all parties involved; stressed the need to adhere to the dates laid out in the agreement several times; welcomed the supportive Westminster interventions during the Q and A of SDLP Mark Durkan and DUP Peter Robinson and Nigel Dods, but pointedly expressed hope that other parties (read UUP, whose MP was either not present or simply didn't speak) would express their support as soon as possible.

As expected, David Cameron praised the agreement and all parties; raised the desire that all parties (read SDLP and UUP) be given time to review the document; and pointedly asked the PM what issues that were not expressly mentioned in the agreement would be addressed by the Working Group -- to which Brown responded, "all the issues outstanding from St Andrew's."

Cameron and Brown praised the U.S. role, singling you out. Brown also twice referred to your offer to host an investment conference.

Overall, nothing concerning from the Tories...on the contrary, full support, a request that the minority parties have a chance to review and some questions on outstanding issues.

UUP MLAs meet tonight to review.

Note: DUP interventions were balanced...Dods raised parades and decommissioning as reminder of outstanding issues, but stressed desire of all parties "not to go back" to the bad old days. Minor dig at previous Sinn Fein "threats." Robinson stressed cooperation in the negotiations. Struck a statesmanlike tone.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 5:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Call list

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Mon Feb 08 17:07:25 2010
Subject: Call list

Pls remove the following:

Lobo
Lavrov
Talbott
Conyers
Murtha
Solis
Nagin
Stewart
Height

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769717 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE
IN FULL

The Washington Post

After the flotilla attack, it's time for a new, kinder Israeli narrative

By Daniel Kurtzer
Sunday, June 6, 2010

Of the many confounding aspects of Monday's flotilla fiasco, one of the most curious is the monotone quality of Israel's response. Within hours of the Israeli assault on an aid ship bound for Gaza, while the dead and wounded were still being evacuated from the scene, Israel's deputy foreign minister delivered a verbal broadside that became his nation's public line: The flotilla organizers are terrorist sympathizers, they ambushed Israeli forces, and they are responsible for what followed.

Even so adept a communicator as Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, in a prepared statement Wednesday that attacked Israel's critics as much as it defended Israel's actions, could manage only one sentence of regret for civilian casualties.

Why, even to its friends, has Israel sounded so shrill, even tone deaf? Where are the grief and sadness that Israelis ought to feel about a military operation gone awry? The French philosopher Bernard-Henri Levy expressed anger with the tendency of some Israeli leaders to believe that "they are alone in the world and will always be blamed, and to act accordingly."

Israel's friends know that the country has a case to make. But by hunkering down in self-justification, Israel has confused that case. And now the jury of world public opinion, comprising at least as many friends as foes, has stopped listening. At the United Nations, speaker after speaker condemned Israel's action, and even the United States joined in a harsh statement of condemnation. Normally pro-Israel editorial writers added to the chorus of ostracism.

Israel has long seen itself as the Alamo, a fortress under siege. Decades ago, a song titled "The Entire World is Against Us" hit the Israeli pop charts. At the time, there was some truth to the words: Arab states rejected Israel's existence. An Arab economic boycott persuaded major companies in Europe and Asia to decline to do business in Israel. Trade with many countries had to be conducted through third parties.

Indeed, Israel has faced recurring threats to its security and existence, a reality reflected in a maxim I heard often during my time as U.S. ambassador there early this decade: Israel goes to sleep with memories of the Holocaust and wakes up to the Arab-Israeli conflict. In this context, the nation's military power was seen as a necessary response. And in turn, Israel's narrative portrayed the country as a David facing an Arab Goliath.

Although the 1967 war changed this reality, Israel's narrative never really caught up. Newly demonstrated military superiority and deepening ties with the United States provided a measure of security the country had not enjoyed before. Egypt's President Anwar Sadat was the first Arab leader to recognize this new strategic reality, and in 1979, he made peace with Israel.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769717 Date: 08/31/2015

But even as the outdated David vs. Goliath theme lingered in the minds of many Israelis, among other segments of the population a new, religious-national narrative that centered on settling and holding all of Eretz Israel was taking hold. Even though settlements complicated Israel's relations with the Palestinians, and even though Israel had evacuated the Sinai settlements to make peace with Egypt -- a move that vitiated the argument that settlements were required for security -- activists such as Ariel Sharon continued to argue that they enhanced security.

For a while, conditions allowed this new narrative to take root: The Palestine Liberation Organization was busy attacking Israel from Jordan, Lebanon and the United Nations and pursuing a tactical moderation designed to lull Israel into complacency.

But soon this reality, too, began to change. The PLO decided in 1988 to officially support a two-state solution to the conflict and entered into dialogue with the United States. In 1991, Arab states participated in multilateral negotiations with Israel on water, the environment, economic development and regional security. Arab and Israeli business leaders met at international conferences. Israel's diplomatic isolation eased as China, India and others established formal ties, and Israeli liaison offices opened in Morocco and Arab states in the Persian Gulf. In 1994, Jordan made peace, removing the security justification for Israeli settlements in the West Bank. And in 2002, Arab states announced an "Arab peace initiative" offering peace and security in return for Israel's withdrawal from lands taken in the 1967 war.

But the Palestinian intifada put a brake on these developments, ushering in a decade of violence. As Palestinian terrorists attacked not only soldiers and settlers in the occupied territories, but also civilians in Israeli cities, the Israeli storyline of the 1950s -- David vs. Goliath -- revived.

I arrived in Israel as the U.S. ambassador in 2001, right after the first Palestinian suicide bombing, and discussed these issues often with then-Prime Minister Sharon, usually in the context of the choices Israel made in dealing with terrorism. Sharon believed that a strong and unyielding military response was all that was needed to persuade Palestinians to stop the intifada. A terrorist attack in Tel Aviv would often lead him to impose a closure on Gaza, preventing the movement of people and goods.

A typical conversation with Sharon on this subject went something as follows: I would suggest that the closure on Gaza would be seen by the media and even friendly governments as collective punishment, would shift the media's story line from Palestinian violence to Israel's reaction and could even drive Palestinians hurt by the closure into the terrorist camp. Sharon would reply that his responsibility was to protect Israelis, that the Gaza closure was designed to prevent further attacks and that the media were to blame for distorting reality.

His underlying point was clear: Any impact on Israel's image and on the long-term possibility of a widened conflict was outweighed by the need to prevent the next suicide bombing. Whatever the consequences of its actions, Israel would not apologize for defending itself.

Netanyahu would echo this refrain almost a decade later, after years marked not only by the intifada but by an Israeli decision to build a security barrier. The decade saw a brutal war in Lebanon in 2006, sparked by Hezbollah's kidnapping and killing of Israeli soldiers and ended by Israel's destruction of Lebanese civilian infrastructure and significant civilian casualties. The decade saw Hamas's election victory in 2006, its violent takeover of Gaza in 2007, its unrelenting rocket attacks against Israel in 2008 and Israel's massive response, again involving great numbers of civilian casualties and the destruction of infrastructure. By decade's end, a frustrated Israel had sealed off and blockaded Gaza to try to stem the flow of arms to Hamas, but because of the worsening humanitarian situation there, it was losing the battle for international legitimacy.

Narratives, as self-justifications, do little to explain the complexities, ironies and paradoxes of the Arab-Israeli conflict. In the early 1980s, while I was assigned to the American Embassy in Tel Aviv, I met a Palestinian nationalist figure in Gaza who was unrelentingly opposed to the Israeli occupation. He shocked me one day when he said he also admired Israel. After a near-fatal car accident in Gaza, his son had been evacuated to one of Israel's leading hospitals, where doctors saved his life. My Palestinian contact hated the Israel of the occupation, but he admired the Israel that was blind to the nationality of a boy in need of care.

When an Israeli military plan goes awry and civilians are killed -- as happened last week off the shores of Gaza -- should Israel's narrative take in the human dimension? Should it express empathy for those affected by the conflict and by Israeli military actions? Marla Braverman, an editor of Azure, an Israeli neoconservative journal, thinks not. In the current issue, she writes that despite a longtime tendency toward self-effacement, "Israel must learn to adopt a clear, unapologetic stance befitting a sovereign state."

The fact is, however, that sovereign states make mistakes, and they apologize. Sovereign states rely not only on military might and insistent rhetoric to defend their people, but also on diplomacy and values of empathy and understanding. Sovereign states can be strong while fostering a narrative of caring about the consequences of their policies.

In the aftermath of the flotilla fiasco, it is not just Israel's military tactics and its blockade of Gaza that need a thorough reexamination. Its narrative does, too. A dose of empathy might be a place to start. Israel will not break by military force and tough rhetoric alone the political and moral double standards by which the world judges its actions. But it can make its case better by tempering force with diplomacy, by caring as much about the humanitarian distress among Palestinians as it does about humanitarian causes elsewhere in the world, and by developing a storyline infused with the moral and ethical standards by which Israelis judge their own behavior.

Daniel Kurtzer, a former U.S. ambassador to Israel and Egypt, is a visiting professor at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 6, 2010 11:50 AM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I; Shah, Rajiv (AID/A); Ramamurthy, Pradeep; Rhodes, Benjamin J.; McDonough, Denis R.
Subject: FW: Opinion Analysis: Western Europe: Publics Credit U.S. for Relief to Haiti
Attachments: 06-04 Western Europe-Publics Credit US for Relief to Haiti.pdf

fyi

---

From: Selinger, Marta U
Sent: Friday, June 04, 2010 5:09 PM
To: McHale, Judith A
Cc: DiMartino, Kitty; Guimond, Gabrielle; Somerset, Ann D; Douglas, Walter T; Mellott, Joseph; Dickmeyer, James C; Castillo, Raymond A
Subject: Opinion Analysis: Western Europe: Publics Credit U.S. for Relief to Haiti

Dear Under Secretary McHale,

Attached please find the latest Opinion Analysis on West European views of U.S. assistance to Haiti. A synopsis follows:

Western Europe: Publics Credit U.S. for Relief to Haiti

Britons, French, Germans, Italians, and Spaniards say the United States has done more than other countries to assist Haiti following the devastating January earthquake. Though relief efforts in Haiti have not themselves directly impacted opinion of the United States, the belief that the United States generally assists disaster-stricken countries does positively affect U.S. image.

This report is For Official Use Only. For additional information on the survey or to make changes to the distribution list, please do not hesitate to contact me. Please forward to interested members of the USG.

Best regards,

Marta Selinger

Marta Selinger
Research Analyst for Central and Eastern Europe
Office of Opinion Research
U.S. Department of State
(202)736-4284
selingermu@state.gov

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769725 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

FOR OFFICIAL U.S. GOVERNMENT USE ONLY

Opinion Analysis

Office of Research

June 4, 2010

Western Europe: Publics Credit U.S. for Relief to Haiti

Britons, French, Germans, Italians, and Spaniards say the United States has done more than other countries to assist Haiti following the devastating January earthquake. Though relief efforts in Haiti have not themselves directly impacted opinion of the United States, the belief that the United States generally assists disaster-stricken countries does positively affect U.S. image.

Awareness of Haiti relief efforts is high in Europe: majorities of Britons (66%), French (92%), Germans (85%), Italians (85%), and Spaniards (70%) have heard at least a fair amount about the earthquake and relief effort in Haiti.

U.S. Credited For Relief Effort

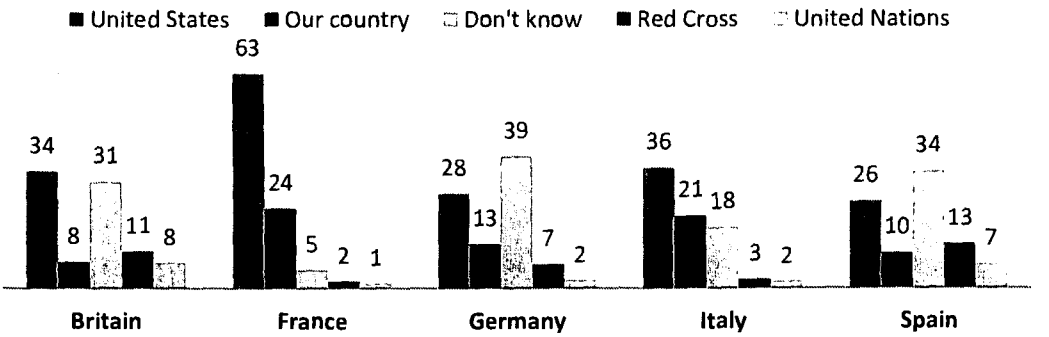
Though certain West European media, particularly in France and in Italy, were initially critical of the U.S. relief effort, editorials in leading media gave way to mostly positive commentary.[1] Public opinion among those who have heard about the Haiti earthquake reflects this more positive take. West Europeans with a definite opinion volunteer the United States as contributing the most to earthquake relief in Haiti, though a third or more in Britain, Spain, and Germany are unsure (Figure 1).

Few in these five countries say their own country contributed the most to earthquake relief. In France, where early editorials were most critical of the U.S., only a quarter say that their country has done the most to aid Haitian relief (Box, next page).



Among those who followed events in Haiti, majorities believe that the United States has done a good job in continuing to help Haitians after the earthquake. Western European publics also give their own countries and the Red Cross high marks for responding (see Appendix Table).

Haiti Aid Has Not Boosted U.S. Image

West Europeans remain generally positive toward the U.S. (Figure 2, next page), but their overall impressions are not significantly influenced by U.S. assistance to Haiti.

Figure 1. West Europeans Credit United States For Haiti Relief

Q. In your opinion, what one country or organization contributed most to earthquake relief in Haiti? [Open-ended]

Source: Office of Opinion Research surveys, Apr.-May 2010

1. See Media Analysis, "Europe: 'Pointless' Quarreling Won't Rebuild Haiti," January 22, 2010.

Methodological Note: This report is based on surveys commissioned by the Office of Opinion Research. Between April 19 and May 5, 2010, reputable firms interviewed 1,000 adults in each country (Britain, France, Germany, Italy, and Spain). See page 3 for further details. M-70-10

This publication summarizes and interprets recent polling data that does not reflect the views of the U.S Government.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769725 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769725 Date: 08/31/2015

While specific instances of Haiti relief may not move the needle of U.S. image in Western Europe, a broader perception that the United States provides disaster relief in general is a factor in more favorable views. Majorities in Great Britain (77%), Italy (79%), Germany (86%), and France (72%) and half of Spaniards (52%) think the United States aids in disaster relief around the world. West Europeans who perceive the U.S. as generous with its disaster aid are more likely to have a positive view of the U.S.

European Publics Satisfied with Their Own Country's Level of Aid

Among those aware of the Haiti earthquake, most are satisfied with their country's contributions to the earthquake relief effort in Haiti, but would be open to some additional financial assistance for the reconstruction effort. When asked if their government should contribute more money to Haiti, majorities in France (80%), Spain (74%), and Italy (60%) and half of Britons (53%) agree.

French Generous With Help for Haiti, Praise for U.S.

The French stand out in Europe in terms of being concerned and willing to help their former colony. An overwhelming majority (92%) have heard or read about the earthquake and the relief effort, including 65 percent who have heard a great deal. Large majorities also show a willingness to give more assistance funds and take in refugees. A majority (63%) recognizes the United States as the prime contributor to the relief effort and 80 percent say Washington has done a good job.

Helping refugees by allowing them to immigrate is much more controversial. Seven-in-ten French (72%) and Spanish (73%) say they would be willing to accept refugees, while majorities in Britain (63%) and Italy (71%) are unwilling to accept refugees.

Figure 2. West European Views of U.S. Improved After 2008 Vote, But Not Necessarily After Haiti Earthquake Relief

Q. Do you have a very favorable, somewhat favorable, somewhat unfavorable, or very unfavorable view of the United States?

Source: Office of Opinion Research surveys, 2005-2010

Prepared by Marta Selinger, (202)736-4284, SelingerMU@state.gov
Riane Harper, (202)736-4283, HarperSR@state.gov
Issued by the Office of Opinion Research, U.S. Department of State

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769725 Date: 08/31/2015

FOR OFFICIAL U.S. GOVERNMENT USE ONLY

How This Poll Was Conducted

This report is based on data from nationally representative telephone surveys conducted in Britain (n=1,002) April 21-26; France (n=1,002) April 19-23; Germany (n=1,000) April 23-May3; Italy (n=1,000) April 22-27; and Spain (n=1,000) April 26-May5 among adults age 18 and over. Local survey organizations carried out nationwide fieldwork. Questions were written by the Office of Opinion Research. The vernacular translations were prepared by the local firms and checked by the Office of Opinion Research. The margin of error for each country is approximately +/-4% for the overall sample.

Additional information on the methodology of the surveys may be obtained from the analysts.

FOR OFFICIAL U.S. GOVERNMENT USE ONLY

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:47 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: TFTP

Phil got a readout from Ops following the call. Memcon will be done tomorrow because of the snow day.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Feb 08 20:27:41 2010
Subject: TFTP

Did EUR get memcon of my call w Westerwelle?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 9:35 PM
To: H
Subject: Your example

Your staying home tomorrow will make lots of parents at higher levels feel ok about staying home with their kids. I may be one of them!

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 6, 2010 4:21 PM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

We are planning to find a careful but effective way to address progress on human rights issues and continuing challenges in your press avail. We will explain it to the Colombians and highlight it for Cindy. We can also read out your meetings to her.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Jun 06 16:15:37 2010
Subject: Re: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jun 03 13:48:20 2010
Subject: FW: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

fyi

From: Brownfield, William R
Sent: Thursday, June 03, 2010 10:41 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

Cheryl

B5

B5

Feel free to share if you wish.

WRB

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Thursday, June 03, 2010 7:33 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Posner, Michael H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Kelly, Craig A; Brownfield, William R; Fuchs, Michael H; Baer, Daniel B; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: FW: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

See b/l re travel to columbia

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 02, 2010 3:49 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: Brief memo for Cheryl Mills on Colombia - for Secretary Clinton

Dear Cheryl --

In my last email (Friday, 5/28), I attached the letter from the bipartisan Co-Chairs and Executive Committee members of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission sent to Assistant Secretary Mike Posner expressing grave concern about the recent rise in death threats, attacks and murders of Colombian human rights defenders, religious, community and other NGO leaders. Congressman McGovern also strongly encouraged the Secretary to meet with representatives of those organizations and individuals being threatened, with a particularly effort to reach out to and invite the Bishops of Tumaco (Nariño), Barrancabermeja/Medio Magdalena (Santander), and we would now add Putumayo, since the Colombian Catholic Church just advised us yesterday of increased death threats against religious workers there. In addition, we recommended inviting Monseñor Hector Fabio Henao, director of Pastoral Social, at the Archdiocese in Bogotá, who represents all the pastoral work of the Church throughout the country, as well as representatives from the Mennonite and Lutheran churches, in particular.

While in Colombia, the most important thing the Secretary can do is avoid effusive praise for President Álvaro Uribe, who leaves office in August. Inside Colombia, the visit by the Secretary is being described as focusing solely on the free trade agreement and continuing support of the counterdrug strategy/Plan Colombia. Without changes in the human rights situation and the culture of impunity, it is unlikely that anything the Secretary might say or do will alter the equation on Capitol Hill regarding the trade agreement. It should be noted that the October 2008 GAO report on the counter-drug operations in Colombia concluded that U.S. assistance was successful in increasing security in parts of the country, but a failure in the areas of counter-narcotics (GAO-09-71) , and a subsequent April 2009 USAID evaluation on U.S. aid for Plan Colombia for illegal crop reduction and Colombian counternarcotics policies actually contribute to increased coca production.

The Colombian president has been a solid backer of U.S. policy and U.S. interests in the region, and has achieved some important improvements in the country's security situation. It is important to recognize that, but to do so without repeating the tone of Defense Secretary Gates' April visit, in which he called Uribe a "great hero" <http://www.defense.gov/news/newsarticle.aspx?id=58754> and failed even to mention any concerns.

These concerns are of critical importance, and while the Secretary need not list them all, at least some deserve public acknowledgement – some recognition that it is important to the United States that Colombia, including the current government and its successor, show the necessary political will to deal with them:

· A sharp rise in alleged military killings of civilians. In many cases, these are so-called "false positives": non-combatants murdered and later presented as members of armed groups killed in combat. These, notes <http://www.extrajudicialexecutions.org/colombia> UN Special Rapporter for Extrajudicial Executions Philip Alston, "began occurring with a disturbing frequency across Colombia from 2004." Citing prosecutors' and NGOs' reports, Alston indicates that Colombia's security forces may have killed 1,486 civilians during the first six years of Álvaro Uribe's presidency. Alston notes that the Defense Ministry only began to address the situation after the media broke the story of the false-positives and the subsequent negative publicity and horrified public outcry.

The prosecution of "false positives" is moving with excruciating slowness. In perhaps the most notorious case – the murders of about twenty young men from the poor Bogotá suburb of Soacha – nearly all of the accused soldiers and officers have been released from prison <http://www.ipsnews.net/news.asp?idnews=49968> , pending trial, as deadlines for timely prosecution have run out. Since their arrest in late 2008, their case has been prolonged by numerous delaying tactics by the defense, including attempts to have their cases tried in the military court system as "acts of service." Alston reports that the impunity rate on these extrajudicial murders by security forces may be as high as 98.5 percent.

· Mounting allegations that the President's intelligence service, the DAS, was put at the service <http://www.cipcol.org/?p=1123> of paramilitary leaders and narcotraffickers; used to spy on and intimidate <http://www.cipcol.org/?p=752> Supreme Court justices, opposition politicians, journalists and human rights defenders; and employed in a campaign of sabotage and smears <http://www.cipcol.org/?p=1467> against political opponents.

Prosecutors are alleging that the orders to have the DAS carry out wiretaps, surveillance and "political warfare" came from high up in the Colombian presidency <http://www.caracoltv.com/noticias/justicia/articulo168592-tres-asesores-de-uribe-son-investigados-chuzadas-ilegales> , though the question of "what President Uribe knew, and when he knew it" remains unanswered. Meanwhile efforts to reform or dissolve the DAS are stalled in Colombia's Congress.

· President Uribe's political coalition has also been hit by a scandal known in Colombia as "para-politics." This coalition has included dozens of political bosses from regions beyond the capital. Many are large landholders with ties to narcotrafficking, the same local leaders who created and fostered the brutal pro-government paramilitary groups that killed tens of thousands of non-combatants in the 1990s and early 2000s.

Evidence, much of it from former paramilitary leaders, has brought about 300 criminal investigations against legislators, governors, mayors and other local officials, nearly all of them Álvaro Uribe's political supporters, who made common cause with the far-right warlords. To date, of the 278 congresspeople and senators elected in 2006, 68 <http://www.nuevoarcoiris.org.co/sac/?q=node/64> are under official investigation, on trial, or convicted for paramilitary ties. Those embroiled in parapolitics include the President's cousin, Mario Uribe; the brother of his former foreign minister; and individuals whom the President had named to be Colombia's ambassadors to Chile, the Dominican Republic, and Canada.

The Colombian prosecutors, investigators, witnesses and non-governmental organizations trying to uncover the truth about these abuses are working under conditions of great personal risk. They, too, are heroes and would benefit greatly from a public expression of concern about the cases they are investigating, and a reminder that their work is legitimate and important to U.S. interests in Colombia.

At the same time, it is important to avoid appearing to endorse any candidate in the June 20 runoff elections. Between the first and second rounds of a country's presidential election is a politically awkward time for a high-level official visit. Though President Uribe's former defense minister, Juan Manuel Santos, is the overwhelming favorite given his margin of success in the May 30th first round of balloting over former Bogotá mayor Antanas Mockus, it is necessary at this stage to convey a sense of balance and a willingness to work closely with whoever wins. As a result, any kind words for one candidate should be balanced by praise for the other.

Finally, it would be helpful to remind the Colombian people that the United States supports a peaceful resolution of Bogotá's worsening differences with Venezuela. While President Chávez's behavior is a significant concern, it would be most unhelpful to be perceived on this trip as fanning the flames of conflict with Colombia – or playing into the Chavez rhetoric that the U.S. and Colombia have military aspirations in the region.

Hope this memo, along with last week's copy of the TLHRC letter to Assistant Secretary Posner, are helpful and useful materials for the Secretary as she plans her trip.

Very best wishes –

On behalf of Cong. Jim McGovern

Staff Contact: Cindy Buhl (202-225-6101 or cindy.buhl@mail.house.gov <mailto:cindy.buhl@mail.house.gov> )

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D),B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 9:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

See traffic b/l

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/08/2025

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Koh, Harold Hongju; Merten, Kenneth H; Foote, Daniel L
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:44:29 2010
Subject: RE: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Cheryl, Bellerive hit me up before the beginning of a donors' meeting this morning to say that it's important that the US troops in country be covered by a bilateral agreement that defines, among other things, their immunities. [redacted] He noted that we have had SOFAs covering every military exercise in Haiti since he has been in government. [redacted] His critics have been on the radio daily accusing him and Préval of selling out Haiti's sovereignty by allowing foreign troops into the country. [redacted] From other statements he made today, [redacted] David

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, February 08, 2010 7:10 PM
To: Lindwall, David E; Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; [redacted]
Cc: [redacted] Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; [redacted]; Anderson, Gerald C; Koh, Harold Hongju
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

B6

Can you explain more on his goals for a SOFA given our joint communique

Adding harold koh

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; Trivelli, Paul A AMB USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L) [redacted]
Cc: 'Keen, Ken LTG USA USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L)' [redacted]; Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; '

; Anderson, Gerald C B6
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:01:51 2010
Subject: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I was in three meetings today with Prime Minister Jean Max Bellerive and he made the following points:

Donors' Confab: The GOH would like to hold the donors' pledging conference in New York on April 15. They have discounted their original date (March 22-23) because there is an IDB meeting in Mexico City on those same dates. There is a technical donors' meetings in Santo Domingo on April 14, and the GOH would like the pledging session to come after it. Bellerive said the GOH would also be open to doing the pledging session on March 31, though they prefer April 15.

Status of Forces Agreement: Bellerive asked me if we could propose to the GOH a SOFA covering US troops in Haiti. 1.4(D) B1
I told him we would consult and get back to him ASAP.

Adoptions: Bellerive signed the two lists of humanitarian parole letters I brought him, 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1 asking if we are close to finishing all the kids in the pipeline. In a later meeting with multiple donors Bellerive talked about the case of the ten Amcits being held for allegedly trying to take Haitian children out of the country without authorization. He said that this case is in the hands of the courts and that the Executive has no influence over the outcome, but said it is an example of the GOH's need to control the problem of child trafficking which he said has increased exponentially since the earthquake. He said the judge has three months to decide the case. He has already dropped the most serious charge of kidnapping, and now the charges "only carry a maximum of 15 years in prison." He said that the judge might determine that there isn't enough evidence in the case to try the Amcits. He said that the only power the Executive has in the case would be a presidential pardon in the event they are found guilty. He would not speculate on whether Préval would consider a pardon if the Amcits are found guilty.

Migrants: He approved the return to Haiti of 62 Haitian migrants detained on Great Exuma and said repatriations should continue as pre-earthquake normal.

Relations with Dominican Republic: On instructions, I asked Bellerive in private what the GOH believed would be the appropriate role of the Dominican Republic in donor coordination mechanisms. 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Political dilemma: The executive decree establishing a state of urgency expires on February 15 and can only be extended by Parliament. Parliament has been fiercely critical of the Préval/Bellerive government since the disaster, and This leaves the government with the dilemma of how to handle extraordinary disaster needs (such as declaring land of public utility) after February 15. UN SRSG Mullet encouraged Bellerive to seek a "full consensus" with the opposition as "nothing short of unanimity" would be required to address the enormous challenges Haiti is facing.
Bellerive told the donor community that the GOH may soon have to choose between becoming totally ineffective (which he said they will not do) or taking actions that exceed the authority given to the Executive by the law (which he implied they are prepared to do). The government is meeting with the private sector to get their approval of their reconstruction strategy, recognizing that they will have great difficulty getting a consensus with the political parties. Bellerive said that the GOH is also evaluating what to do about upcoming elections and constitutional reform, but implied that they have more time to reach a decision on these matters.

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Préval to address the nation: The government is going to designate February 12 (the month anniversary of the quake) as a day of national mourning and President Préval will make his first formal address to the nation since the disaster. They are drafting his speech to be part mourning and part the vision of the future. Préval wants to announce that all the ministries are up and running as usual.

Ministries: The PM said that the Primature and the Ministry of Planning will be moving into the old US Embassy building. The courts will move into the old USAID building. The plan to move a number of the ministries out to Croix des Bouquets has met with very little enthusiasm from the main line ministries. They prefer to clear the rubble off of their properties in downtown Port-au-Prince and either build new buildings (EU is offering to finance) or put up temporary structures (Canada is offering to finance).

David E. Lindwall
Chargé d'Affairs
U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti
(509) 2229-8132

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Community of Democracies

Welcome back to an unbelievable snowy mess in DC!

I wanted to tell you that I met with the Lithuanian official who is heading up the Community of Democracies. Lithuania has the lead for the next two years. They are extremely energetic and recognize that CD needs to be reinvigorated. It was not given much leadership from us during the Bush years and besides democracy got a bad name – among other reasons. Their plan is to create a few working groups focused on issues that are current and important with specific practical goals and tangible results – among them, one will be focused on women and their critical role. As you know, they have a female president, the EU has just established a Gender Institute in Vilnius and they remember Vital Voices when you headed up the conference in Iceland and the successor conference which was held in Lithuania in 2001. We talked about a more concerted commitment -- to advocating for women and the role they need to play in conflict resolution (1325), helping women in Afghanistan and working to help women in eastern Europe and the Caucuses where things appear to be going backwards in many ways (takes me back to our first-ever VV conference in Vienna).
I agreed that we would co-chair the gender working group with Lithuania.

The Lithuanians believe that in many ways the younger generation takes for granted what the older generation fought for (they remember being a "Captive Nation and how the US kept them going with an embassy when they was little likelihood at the time that they'd ever become a democracy), and that today democracies are struggling in too many places. It's as though we have to take back democracy's good name and focus it as a universal value to address the critical challenges.

Mike Posner has the lead on CD. I talked to him about all of this. He is all for our doing the gender working group as something tangible. He is concerned about where the Community of Democracies goes more broadly. Since this was a creation of the Clinton Administration and since democracy is under siege in so many places, I hope we will find a way to work with the Lithuanians and others who still want to see it make a difference. In some ways it may be more relevant today. They are planning the first ministerial in Krakow in July and hoping so much that you will be a part of it.

Assuming I can get there, I'm going to their embassy in the morning where several government reps of participating countries will be meeting to announce next steps, including the gender working group.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:22 PM
To: H; cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

I drove the roads - I live [redacted] lots of packed hard snow and two stuck cars. It's worse than it seems

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'cheryl.mills[redacted] <cheryl.mills[redacted]
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:08:04 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

I can't believe the govt is closed again. I guess I will work from home again but think this is silly.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:22 PM
To: H

Still haven't heard anything about funeral arrangements for Mr Murtha. I am planning to attend, wherever it will be (johnstown or arlington). Will let you know when I hear something. It's such a big loss for the community, the state and the country. PA officials are talking about a special election on May 18th.

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D),B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:28 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Am going to connect w/ bellerive in am

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/08/2025

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:04:44 2010
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I read all the way down and am very concerned but not surprised. Have you shared the content w Bill? What do you think should be done--and by whom--to address these issues?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 21:45:58 2010
Subject: Fw: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

See traffic b/l

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Koh, Harold Hongju; Merten, Kenneth H; Foote, Daniel L
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:44:29 2010
Subject: RE: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Cheryl, Bellerive hit me up before the beginning of a donors' meeting this morning to say that it's important that the US troops in country be covered by a bilateral agreement that defines, among other things, their immunities. [redacted] He noted that we have had SOFAs covering every military exercise in Haiti since he has been in government. [redacted] His critics have been on the radio daily accusing him and Préval of selling out Haiti's sovereignty by allowing foreign troops into the country. [redacted] From other statements he made today, [redacted]
David

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, February 08, 2010 7:10 PM
To: Lindwall, David E; Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]; Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; [redacted] Anderson, Gerald C; Koh, Harold Hongju
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Can you explain more on his goals for a SOFA given our joint communique

Adding harold koh

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; Trivelli, Paul A AMB USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L) [redacted] B6
Cc: 'Keen, Ken LTG USA USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L)' [redacted]; Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; [redacted] Anderson, Gerald C
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:01:51 2010
Subject: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I was in three meetings today with Prime Minister Jean Max Bellerive and he made the following points:

Donors' Confab: The GOH would like to hold the donors' pledging conference in New York on April 15. They have discounted their original date (March 22-23) because there is an IDB meeting in Mexico City on those same dates. There is a technical donors' meetings in Santo Domingo on April 14, and the GOH would like the pledging session to come after it. Bellerive said the GOH would also be open to doing the pledging session on March 31, though they prefer April 15.

Status of Forces Agreement: Bellerive asked me if we could propose to the GOH a SOFA covering US troops in Haiti. [redacted] 1.4(D) B1 [redacted] I told him we would consult and get back to him ASAP.

Adoptions: Bellerive signed the two lists of humanitarian parole letters I brought him, [redacted] 1.4(B) asking if we are close to finishing all the kids in the pipeline. In a later meeting with multiple donors Bellerive 1.4(D) talked about the case of the ten Amcits being held for allegedly trying to take Haitian children out of the country withou B1 authorization. He said that this case is in the hands of the courts and that the Executive has no influence over the outcome, but said it is an example of the GOH's need to control the problem of child trafficking which he said has increased exponentially since the earthquake. He said the judge has three months to decide the case. He has already dropped the most serious charge of kidnapping, and now the charges "only carry a maximum of 15 years in prison." He said that the judge might determine that there isn't enough evidence in the case to try the Amcits. He said that the only power the Executive has in the case would be a presidential pardon in the event they are found guilty. He would not speculate on whether Préval would consider a pardon if the Amcits are found guilty.

Migrants: He approved the return to Haiti of 62 Haitian migrants detained on Great Exuma and said repatriations should continue as pre-earthquake normal.

Relations with Dominican Republic: On instructions, I asked Bellerive in private what the GOH believed would be the appropriate role of the Dominican Republic in donor coordination mechanisms. [redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Political dilemma: The executive decree establishing a state of urgency expires on February 15 and can only be extended by Parliament. Parliament has been fiercely critical of the Préval/Bellerive government since the disaster, and [redacted] This leaves the 1.4(B) government with the dilemma of how to handle extraordinary disaster needs (such as declaring land of public utility) 1.4(D) after February 15. UN SRSG Mullet encouraged Bellerive to seek a "full consensus" with the opposition as "nothing B1 short of unanimity" would be required to address the enormous challenges Haiti is facing. [redacted] Bellerive told the donor community that the GOH may soon have to choose between becoming totally ineffective (which he said they will not do) or taking actions that exceed the authority given to the Executive by the law (which he implied they are prepared to do). The government is meeting with the private sector to get their approval of their reconstruction strategy, recognizing that they will have great difficulty getting a consensus with the political parties. Bellerive said that the GOH is also evaluating what to do about upcoming elections and constitutional reform, but implied that they have more time to reach a decision on these matters. [redacted]

Préval to address the nation: The government is going to designate February 12 (the month anniversary of the quake) as a day of national mourning and President Préval will make his first formal address to the nation since the disaster. They are drafting his speech to be part mourning and part the vision of the future. Préval wants to announce that all the ministries are up and running as usual.

Ministries: The PM said that the Primature and the Ministry of Planning will be moving into the old US Embassy building. The courts will move into the old USAID building. The plan to move a number of the ministries out to Croix des Bouquets has met with very little enthusiasm from the main line ministries. They prefer to clear the rubble off of their properties in downtown Port-au-Prince and either build new buildings (EU is offering to finance) or put up temporary structures (Canada is offering to finance).

David E. Lindwall

Chargé d'Affairs

U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti

(509) 2229-8132

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:39 PM
To: H
Subject: Murtha statement

You ok with this?
I was deeply saddened to hear of the passing of Congressman Jack Murtha. From the battlefields of Vietnam to the hills of Western Pennsylvania to the halls of Congress, Jack Murtha lived by the Marine Corps credo "Semper Fidelis," never wavering in his faithful commitment to the country he loved and the men and women who bravely defend her. In war and in peace, he fought for what he knew was right, even when it was unpopular. He was a fierce advocate for working families struggling with a changing economy and for better health care and equipment for servicemembers. And over the course of more than three decades in Congress, he became one of our nation's most respected voices on national security and foreign policy. Presidents of both parties sought his advice and generations of colleagues looked to him for leadership and wisdom. As Senator from New York serving on the Armed Services Committee, I was fortunate to call Jack a friend and mentor. And as Secretary of State, I continued to rely on his expertise and judgment. I knew that Jack would always shoot straight, like the Marine he was, and never shy away from a difficult question or a tough fight. Today our country has lost a decorated war hero and a distinguished public servant. The men and women of the our armed forces have lost a tireless champion. And the people of Pennsylvania's 12th district have lost a neighbor, an advocate, and a true friend. My thoughts and prayers are with them and with Jack's beloved wife Joyce and their family. He will be sorely missed.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:48 PM
To: H
Subject: Re:

The hearings on wednesday are off. The senate foreign relations committee moved its hearing to Thursday am. And house foreign ops is tentatively scheduled for thursday afternoon. Given the forecast, neither of these may actually occur.

Starting to hear that murtha funeral will be saturday in johnstown, but that is not confirmed yet. Will let you know.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:27:28 2010
Subject: Re:

I am so sorry we lost him. Ed Rendell told me he wants to hold a big memorial service in the State Capitol in Harrisburg but he hasn't spoken to Joyce yet. I haven't either. I'd like to go too wherever it is. Let me know what you hear.

Also, since the govt is closed again tomorrow and Congress cancelled too, and another big storm is expected tomorrow night, do you think Congress will even bother showing up for our hearings? I'm planning on working from home.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:22:20 2010
Subject:

Still haven't heard anything about funeral arrangements for Mr Murtha. I am planning to attend, wherever it will be (johnstown or arlington). Will let you know when I hear something. It's such a big loss for the community, the state and the country. PA officials are talking about a special election on May 18th.

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D),B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

If I can take a diff car I am going in; if not I'll work from here

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/08/2025

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:28:30 2010
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Are you going to stay home?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:27:49 2010
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Am going to connect w/ bellerive in am

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:04:44 2010
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I read all the way down and am very concerned but not surprised. Have you shared the content w Bill? What do you think should be done--and by whom--to address these issues?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 21:45:58 2010
Subject: Fw: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

See traffic b/l

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Koh, Harold Hongju; Merten, Kenneth H; Foote, Daniel L
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:44:29 2010
Subject: RE: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Cheryl, Bellerive hit me up before the beginning of a donors' meeting this morning to say that it's important that the US troops in country be covered by a bilateral agreement that defines, among other things, their immunities. He noted that we have had SOFAs covering every military exercise in Haiti since he has been in government. 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1 His critics have been on the radio daily accusing him and Préval of selling out Haiti's sovereignty by allowing foreign troops into the country. From other statements he made today, David

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, February 08, 2010 7:10 PM
To: Lindwall, David E; Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; B6
Cc: Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; Anderson, Gerald C; Koh, Harold Hongju
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Can you explain more on his goals for a SOFA given our joint communique

Adding harold koh

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; Trivelli, Paul A AMB USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L)
Cc: 'Keen, Ken LTG USA USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L)' Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; Anderson, Gerald C
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:01:51 2010
Subject: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I was in three meetings today with Prime Minister Jean Max Bellerive and he made the following points:

Donors' Confab: The GOH would like to hold the donors' pledging conference in New York on April 15. They have discounted their original date (March 22-23) because there is an IDB meeting in Mexico City on those same dates. There is a technical donors' meetings in Santo Domingo on April 14, and the GOH would like the pledging session to come after it. Bellerive said the GOH would also be open to doing the pledging session on March 31, though they prefer April 15.

Status of Forces Agreement: Bellerive asked me if we could propose to the GOH a SOFA covering US troops in Haiti. [redacted] 1.4(D) B1 [redacted] I told him we would consult and get back to him ASAP.

Adoptions: Bellerive signed the two lists of humanitarian parole letters I brought him, [redacted] 1.4(B) [redacted] asking if we are close to finishing all the kids in the pipeline. In a later meeting with multiple donors Bellerive 1.4(D) talked about the case of the ten Amcits being held for allegedly trying to take Haitian children out of the country withou B1 authorization. He said that this case is in the hands of the courts and that the Executive has no influence over the outcome, but said it is an example of the GOH's need to control the problem of child trafficking which he said has increased exponentially since the earthquake. He said the judge has three months to decide the case. He has already dropped the most serious charge of kidnapping, and now the charges "only carry a maximum of 15 years in prison." He said that the judge might determine that there isn't enough evidence in the case to try the Amcits. He said that the only power the Executive has in the case would be a presidential pardon in the event they are found guilty. He would not speculate on whether Préval would consider a pardon if the Amcits are found guilty.

Migrants: He approved the return to Haiti of 62 Haitian migrants detained on Great Exuma and said repatriations should continue as pre-earthquake normal.

Relations with Dominican Republic: On instructions, I asked Bellerive in private what the GOH believed would be the appropriate role of the Dominican Republic in donor coordination mechanisms. [redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1 [redacted]

Political dilemma: The executive decree establishing a state of urgency expires on February 15 and can only be extended by Parliament. Parliament has been fiercely critical of the Préval/Bellerive government since the disaster, and [redacted] This leaves the government with the dilemma of how to handle extraordinary disaster needs (such as declaring land of public utility) after February 15. UN SRSG Mullet encouraged Bellerive to seek a "full consensus" with the opposition as "nothing short of unanimity" would be required to address the enormous challenges Haiti is facing. [redacted] Bellerive told the donor community that the GOH may soon have to choose between becoming totally ineffective (which he said they will not do) or taking actions that exceed the authority given to the Executive by the law (which he implied they are prepared to do). The government is meeting with the private sector to get their approval of their reconstruction strategy, recognizing that they will have great difficulty getting a consensus with the political parties. Bellerive said that the GOH is also evaluating what to do about upcoming elections and constitutional reform, but implied that they have more time to reach a decision on these matters. 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Préval to address the nation: The government is going to designate February 12 (the month anniversary of the quake) as a day of national mourning and President Préval will make his first formal address to the nation since the disaster. They are drafting his speech to be part mourning and part the vision of the future. Préval wants to announce that all the ministries are up and running as usual.

Ministries: The PM said that the Primature and the Ministry of Planning will be moving into the old US Embassy building. The courts will move into the old USAID building. The plan to move a number of the ministries out to Croix des Bouquets has met with very little enthusiasm from the main line ministries. They prefer to clear the rubble off of their properties in downtown Port-au-Prince and either build new buildings (EU is offering to finance) or put up temporary structures (Canada is offering to finance).

David E. Lindwall

Chargé d'Affairs

U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti

(509) 2229-8132

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 9:45 AM
To: H
Cc: CDM; Huma Abedin; Jake Sullivan
Subject: Re: David Brooks

Not sure - but this is a good excuse to bring him in for an OTR with you. Lona mentioned you wanted to see Tom Friedman - with your ok, we could schedule both (separately) over the next month or so

I'd very much like to get back in the habit of bringing someone or a small group in every few weeks.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
Cc: CDM
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: David Brooks
Sent: Feb 9, 2010 7:39 AM

Took a shot at me in his column today. Any ideas what prompted it?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 10:50 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Sargsyan message to Gul

FYI.

---

From: Gordon, Philip H
Sent: Tuesday, February 09, 2010 10:09 AM
To: Steinberg, James B; Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Scanlon, Amy B
Subject: Sargsyan message to Gul

Jim: Sargsian sent this nice message to Gul as he crossed into Turkish airspace today. Understand Gul plans to reciprocate. Should at least help the atmosphere. Separately, the two sides have (more or less) agreed to enter the cone of silence starting today. Will see how long it lasts.
Jake – might want to share this with S.

09.02.2010
President Serzh Sargsyan sent a message to the President of the Republic of Turkey Abdullah Gul.

The message states,

"Excellency,

Passing through Turkish airspace, I send my greetings to you and the people of neighboring Turkey.

Our initiative, aimed at the normalization of the Armenian-Turkish relations, holds attention of the international community. This is a historic moment, indeed, and it is recognized not only by us, but also by the global community. Efforts of the countries engaged in the region, aimed at the improvement of bilateral relations, are indispensable. I am confident that it wouldn't be possible to move forward without their support. At the same time, I believe no matter how interested friendly states might be in a positive resolution of the impasse, there are certain things that can be done only by our two nations.

Mr. President,

I hope you will agree that the Armenian and Turkish peoples assign the main task of getting rid of the stereotypes regarding each other and establishment of the atmosphere of mutual trust to their respective governments. We can achieve results only if there are trust, resolve, and unfaltering stance. A situation when words are not supported by deeds gives rise to mistrust and skepticism, providing ample opportunities to counteract for those, who oppose the process. We should be mindful of the fact that in this particular case, the time is working not for but against the process.

If until now we have been able to bring our bilateral relations up to a level which made the prospects of building normal relations between our two countries more tangible and discernible, now the time has come to manifest determination to make next major step and leave to the coming generations a stable and secure region.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest esteem."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 10:53 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Sri Lanka president dissolves parliament, calls poll

---

From: Shelstad, Jeffrey
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA
Cc: Banks, Dana
Sent: Tue Feb 09 10:31:06 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Sri Lanka president dissolves parliament, calls poll

COLOMBO (Reuters) - Sri Lanka's newly re-elected President Mahinda Rajapaksa dissolved parliament with effect from February 10 and called legislative elections, a senior government official said. "The president dissolves the parliament with effect from midnight," said a senior government official.

Jeff Shelstad
Watch Officer
Department of State Operations Center (S/ES-O)
ShelstadJ@state.gov (202) 647-1512

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy [redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, June 7, 2010 9:30 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: Sad news

We cannot seem to change DCFS' decision and it looks as though it will close. You were the first recipient of their yearly honor. Where will these boys go?

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, June 06, 2010 3:19 PM
To: Ebeling, Betsy
Subject: Re: Sad news

That is a sad story and I hope it can be saved. Any updates about its fate?

----- Original Message -----
From: Ebeling, Betsy [redacted] B6
To: Bonnie Klehr [redacted] hsmoe [redacted] treerep [redacted] John Ryan [redacted] Susan Mcnamara [redacted]; Ernest Ricketts [redacted] Corrine Ebeling [redacted]; Delano, Omorinsola [redacted] Claps, Rocco [redacted]
Sent: Thu Jun 03 09:29:47 2010
Subject: Sad news

Boys home closing, but numbers don't tell full story

By Burt Constable | Daily Herald Columnist

Published: 6/3/2010 12:01 AM

When the goal is turning around lives of young abused and neglected boys, filling out the scoresheet is more complicated than simply marking wins or losses.

For the past 15 years, Ann G. Deuel has lived in Arlington Heights, but her heart has resided in Jamal Place, a three-story graystone at 1335 S. California Ave. in the North Lawndale neighborhood of Chicago. As a founder and executive director of Jamal Place, Deuel can tell countless stories about the boys, ages 11 to 17, who have spent time in the group home and about the army of suburbanites from St. Charles, Naperville, Lake Zurich and Lisle who have volunteered, donated and served on the board to help those kids. Lots of people in that field have good things to say about Deuel and Jamal Place.

But when the new fiscal year begins on July 1, the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services will not renew its contract with Jamal Place, forcing those kids to go to other facilities.

"To shut us down and deny kids this opportunity is unconscionable," says Deuel, as she takes a deep breath and dabs at her eyes in an attempt to keep her emotions in check.

She and her staff operated last year through a $1,041,000 contract with DCFS to provide a group home for 10 wards of the state. They've carved out a wonderful reputation in 15 years, so what happened?

The easy answer is that DCFS put the group home under a new performance-based contracting system that determined Jamal Place fell short of benchmarks for keeping kids from running away, requiring hospitalization or ending up in juvenile detention.

"Taxpayers expect and deserve positive results in the children we serve," says DCFS spokesman Kendall Marlowe. Jamal Place simply didn't measure up in the areas the state measures.

Because Illinois has trimmed the number of wards of the state from a high of 52,000 in 1997 to only 15,500, a much higher percentage of those kids have mental illnesses, substance abuse or other problems. Since the state measures an agency's performance by days that the kids are physically present in the home, Jamal Place, with its small population, got bad marks when a child was hospitalized for a mental-health issue or detained by a judge.

"We did what was clinically advisable for these children and we got dinged for it," says Brian Barclay, assistant executive director of Jamal Place. "We did what was in kids' best interest."

There is no consideration given for "incremental improvements in youth behavior, which occur as trusting relationships develop," Deuel notes. "I wish they could find a way to measure the individual aspects."

When compared with similar facilities, Jamal Place graded lower, Marlowe says, adding that it "isn't a happy day" when the state ends an agreement with a facility that has "good people" and has done "good work" in the past. He says DCFS did renew a contract with Deuel for a different transitional living facility that serves an older population.

One of Jamal Place's "unfavorable" outcomes involves a kid who already had a criminal record when he came to the group home at age 14. Now 17, he says he ended up in juvenile court after he made a mistake by hanging with the wrong people on the day when he stole a woman's purse.

"I've got a good relationship with the staff and residents. We did things as a family," says the teen, who now is living with a grandmother. "I love my grandmother, but I'd rather be at Jamal Place. I'm trying to do everything in my power to get back to Jamal Place."

Intangibles aren't part of the bureaucratic process. There isn't a place on an evaluation form to give credit to Deuel and her staff for leading the effort that closed a local "crack house." There's no way to measure the improvements in a former resident that led him for the first time to sign "love" before his name on the Mother's Day card he sent Deuel this year. There's no scoresheet for the local gang leader who stopped preying on Jamal kids when he was confronted by Deuel and recognized her as the woman who gave him a Christmas present a few years earlier. The interview for this story is interrupted when that man calls Deuel, who is helping him find a legitimate job.

"It is enormously frustrating to me that the attachment the boys develop with our staff members is not a 'measurable' outcome," Deuel says. "These are our children. Long after DCFS is done with these kids, our door is still open."

Last weekend, many former residents came back to explain how Jamal Place helped them. On June 26, Jamal Place will celebrate its 15th anniversary with a picnic and walkathon in Douglas Park, across the street from the home. Deuel and her staff are hoping DCFS finds a way to give them more time, another year to continue its mission.

"I've always maintained that God won't let us fail," says Deuel. "For 15 years, that's been the case, and now we've got this challenge."

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Jake Sullivan <
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 9:57 AM
To: preines(
Cc: H; CDM; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: David Brooks

Philippe and I had an offline conversation about this and I agree entirely. I think it makes sense for you to meet with influencers on a regular -- though not intrusive -- basis. An OTR conversation with you is the best way to help guys like Brooks "figure out" how things work.

On Tue, Feb 9, 2010 at 9:44 AM, PIR <preines > wrote:
Not sure - but this is a good excuse to bring him in for an OTR with you. Lona mentioned you wanted to see Tom Friedman - with your ok, we could schedule both (separately) over the next month or so

I'd very much like to get back in the habit of bringing someone or a small group in every few weeks.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
Cc: CDM
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: David Brooks
Sent: Feb 9, 2010 7:39 AM

Took a shot at me in his column today. Any ideas what prompted it?

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 3:48 PM
To: H
Subject: Romania/Moldova

Here is an assessment from EUR:

Re: [redacted]'s comments on Romania/Moldova

[redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D)
[redacted] In B1 2006, he said, "We are the only country, the only people, which remain still divided. Germany reunited its nation; Romania remains still divided into two countries. But, I repeat, our reunification will occur inside of the European Union and in no other way." In 2009, he said "Who can imagine that a head of Romanian state will sign a treaty to entrench the Molotov-von Ribbentrop Pact?"

During his late January trip to Chisinau, Basescu's message [redacted] on territorial integrity and supportive of EU integration. He said "Romania recognized the state borders of the Republic of Moldova inherited from the former Soviet Union. Romania agrees to sign an agreement in regards to the existent border regime, the way it was inherited from the USSR." Romania and Moldova, in fact, have good relations and no real border issues; the two governments are working on an agreement to make cross-border travel easier for Moldovans.

The biggest challenge to Moldova's territorial integrity is Transnistria, where de facto authorities rely on the long-term presence of Russian forces for political support. Moldova's leaders seek a transition to a multilateral presence and withdrawal of Russian troops, but this is not likely without a political settlement on Transnistria's reintegration. Moldovan and Transnistrian authorities are pursuing quiet confidence building measures and [redacted] (Russia, Moldova, Ukraine, Transnistria and the OSCE are the 5 parties and the US and EU are the 2 observers), but [redacted]

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/09/2030

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 3:48 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Update on Ukraine election situation

From EUR:

Update on Ukraine Election Situation

With over 99.9 percent of the vote in Ukraine counted, Yanukovych leads by 3.5 percent (almost 900,000 votes) and is the clear winner and next president. The Central Election Commission should complete its vote tabulation today and must certify the results within ten days; certification is expected as early as Friday. Tymoshenko, who has been silent publicly, plans to bring cases of alleged electoral fraud to the courts, but they will not change the result. Tymoshenko claims that she intends to work within the law and not to incite street protests.

Our recommendation is [redacted] B5
[redacted] EU Ambassadors in Kiev have recommended the same approach to Brussels, but want to revisit it if there is no progress by Friday. Medvedev called Yanukovych today with praise for the conduct of elections, but stopped short of congratulating him on his victory.

Following certification of the election, Tymoshenko is likely to appeal within the legal five-day period. This will likely push back an inauguration date until early March.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 4:04 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: FYI - Internet "Lack of Freedom" - Riyadh moves to regulate net news

FYI

---

From: Wittes, Tamara C
Sent: Tuesday, February 09, 2010 3:11 PM
To: Djerassi, Alexander M; Bennett, Virginia L; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I; Rooney, Megan; Steinfeld, Andrew W; Sanderson, Janet A; Harris, Joshua M; Wittes, Tamara C; Valmoro, Lona J; Crowley, Philip J; Merrill, Nicholas S; Adler, Caroline E; Yehl, Ashley C; Mills, Cheryl D; Pandith, Farah A; Chandler, Karen R; Nantongo, Mirembe L; Ziadeh, Susan L; Abedin, Huma
Subject: FYI - Internet "Lack of Freedom" - Riyadh moves to regulate net news

Given the proximity of this announcement to her internet freedom speech, she should probably be prepared to address it. I would hope that a way could be found to raise the issue.

Is Alec Ross going to be traveling with S to Saudi? If so, maybe he could do a meeting with a group of bloggers and/or online journalists.

Riyadh moves to regulate net news

http://www.thenational.ae/apps/pbcs.dll/article?AID=/20100209/FOREIGN/702089866/1042

Carlyle Murphy, Foreign correspondent

- Last Updated: February 08. 2010 11:46PM UAE / February 8. 2010 7:46PM GMT

Saudi Arabia is planning to introduce regulations that include licensing internet news sites in a bid to bring them under government control. Ali Jarekji / Reuters

RIYADH // Saudi Arabia is planning to introduce regulations, including a licensing requirement, for its indigenous internet news sites, which have become a key fixture in the kingdom's active online community.

The draft regulations, still under study, would require internet-based news sites to request a government licence and to respond to complaints about their content that are received by the ministry of culture and information.

"We want them to feel that they are under our umbrella," Abdul Rahman al Hazza, spokesman for the ministry, said in a phone interview yesterday.

Mr al Hazza referred to the new rules as "guidelines for the e-press", and said the idea is to help the electronic media with staffing and financing and give them "somebody to talk to" if they have problems. "It's going to be simple and easy."

Asked if the new rules would involve censorship, Mr al Hazza replied: "Not that much." Mainly, he added, if there are complaints about something written at an online news site, "we just look at it".

A report last year in the Saudi Gazette said the draft regulations also cover "appointment conditions for editors-in-chief, granting permits to journalists, and invitations to cover news events".

A 2007 law already subjects online writers to criminal penalties for such things as defamation.

The planned regulations, which Mr al Hazza said are still two to three months away from being finalised by the ministry, are an effort to bring online news sites such as Sabq, Alweeam and A'ajel under government control in much the same way that the country's traditional daily newspapers are regulated.

It is not clear if news sites like Elaph.com, which is London-based but has a Riyadh office, would also have to get a licence.

Saudi newspapers are licensed by the government and can be temporarily stopped from publishing if they print something upsetting to a government official. But this has been rare in recent years, during which the Saudi print media has been encouraged to report more critically on social and economic problems. There is considerable self-censorship, however, as the media stay away from sensitive issues.

Although the draft regulations under consideration do not apply to bloggers, there are concerns that the government eventually will try to regulate them as well.

"They are not talking about blogs" right now, observed one veteran Saudi blogger, Ahmed Ba-Aboud. "But eventually they will get to us. It is a concern."

Mr Ba-Aboud, 38, a management consultant in the kingdom's Eastern Province city of Dhahran, said the government does not understand that online media are attracting readers because they are not controlled like traditional newspapers. "There's no way I'd send anything I write to the government to censor it," he said. "That's not how the internet works."

Ahmed al Omran, who blogs at www.saudijeans.org, was caustic about what he called the ministry's "dumb idea to regulate so-called electronic media".

"Ironically, some owners of news websites are actually pushing for this law," Mr Omran lamented in a posting last month.

"They argue that it would make it easier for them to get funding and make money from advertising. What about their independence and freedom that could be threatened by the new law? Well, apparently these things are not high on their agenda."

Saudi Arabia's sprightly blogging community includes both Saudis and foreigners writing in both Arabic and English. It also boasts one of the region's highest proportion of female bloggers – about 46 per cent, according to a 2009 study by Harvard University's Berkman Center for Internet and Society. About one-third of the kingdom's population regularly goes online.

The community's latest arrival showed up February 2, when Mr Ba-Aboud launched a new English-language blog so that outsiders can learn more about "regular people like myself".

Most foreigners know certain kinds of Saudis, Mr Ba-Aboud said in an interview, including "extremists like Osama bin Laden", "rich people" and "people related to the government".

But the voice of ordinary Saudis "does not reach around the globe in a similar magnitude", he wrote at the new site, http://alternativesaudivoices.wordpress.com.

It will be a sort of communal blog in that Mr Ba-Aboud has invited anyone to contribute a posting, and as co-ordinator, he will post them on the site. Only those that "call for hate or violence" will be rejected, he added.

In an interview last November, Mr al Hazza, the ministry spokesman, said the new regulations arose partly because ordinary citizens "don't know where to go" to complain about something written at an online news site.

"The problem we have is that there is no government department to refer to ... Nobody to evaluate their job to see if they are doing wrong or right."

Censorship "is not the idea" behind the new rules, he said. "The idea is to regulate."

Mr al Hazza said a decision will probably be made in the next couple of weeks about whether the new regulations shall be issued by the minister of culture and information, Abdel Aziz al Khoja, or be sent to the Shoura Council for action.

Meanwhile, anyone wanting to send Mr al Khoja a comment on the new rules can reach him at his personal page at Facebook

---

Helmi Noman
Program Specialist
Middle East Partnership Initiative (MEPI)
Regional Office, Abu Dhabi
Tel. +971-2-414-2541
Fax. +971-2-414-2576
abudhabi.mepi.state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 4:22 PM
To: H
Subject: Belarus

Phil believes he has nailed down where things are on Belarus. Note is coming your way spelling out state of play and proposing a cable, which they will prepare.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Cherie Blair <
Sent: Monday, June 7, 2010 9:57 AM
To: H
Subject: confidential

As you know I have good links to the Qataris. Sheikha Mosah's son is the 31/32 year old Crown Prince and she is keen that he starts to build a wider international profile. He has been appointed head of the Qatar National Food Security Programme which is designed to deal with Qatar's food security issues its a $30 billion programme. He is aware that food security is an issue you are majoring on and would love to meet with you in person to discuss this and to explore potential partnership areas between US and Qatar including possible participation in the US/World Bank Food Security Fund. He is also keen to talk more generally about US/Qatari cooperation and even suggested they could help out with the Oil spill problem. There is apparently a Arab Food Security Summit in October 2010 and he would like to discuss Us participation in that too.
IS a meeting possible he is more flexible on place and times than his mother! Or maybe we could set up an initial phone call.
Can you let me know if this appeals to you at all?

Cherie Blair

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Koh, Harold Hongju <KohHH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 5:45 PM
To: H
Subject: Options regarding 10 Haiti Amcits
Attachments: 2010 Haiti Amcits memo.doc

Importance: High

Madame Secretary:

You have asked about the USG's options regarding the 10 Amcits from Idaho in Haiti, from the New Life Children's Refuge, who are currently being charged with child abduction and criminal association crimes under Haitian law. Depending on the GOH's intent, we believe the USG would have the following basic options:

B5

Page Denied

B5

Please let us know if you need more information, and especially if you would like us to contact DOJ to inquire further.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

MEMORANDUM

TO: The Secretary

CC: Counselor Mills
Deputy Chief of Staff Sullivan
Assistant Secretary Crowley

FROM: Harold Hongju Koh, Legal Adviser

DATE: February 9, 2010

RE: 10 Amcits in Haiti

You have asked about the USG's options regarding the 10 Amcits from Idaho in Haiti, from the New Life Children's Refuge, who are currently being charged with child abduction and criminal association crimes under Haitian law. Depending on the GOH's intent, we believe the USG would have the following basic options:

B5

Page Denied

B5

Please let us know if you need more information, and especially if you would like us to contact DOJ to inquire further.

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Tuesday, February 09, 2010 1:47 PM
To: Torres, Susan; Johnson, Clifton M; Townley, Stephen G; Hooke, Kathleen H; Eichensehr, Kristen E; Osborn, Judith L; Mathias, Stephen; Thessin, James H
Subject: FW: 10 AmCits and you FW: one Texan who is being detained in Haiti is

As I told Susan, Cheryl asked for a memo from L for S BY TOMW AM outlining S's options re the Amcits. Her questions:

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 7, 2010 11:42 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Turkey-Azerbaijan Agreement signed

Fyi

---

From: Morningstar, Richard L
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Stein, Daniel D; O'Brien, Vincent J; Parris, Mark
Sent: Mon Jun 07 11:30:50 2010
Subject: Turkey-Azerbaijan Agreement signed

Hi Jake- You might let S know that the Turkey-Azerbaijan Agreement was signed today by the Ministers in the presence of Aliyev and Erdogan. I spent last week in Baku. During the week I met for an hour and a half with Aliyev on the agreement and a 45 minute one-on-one on our overall issues. I felt a bit like Dr. Phil. I told him what a big deal the FSN issue was and how important it was to get resolved. I will forward on the high side an e-mail describing the meeting. This was all fully coordinated with Phil Gordon. On the gas agreement, I am sending congratulatory letters to Aliyev and Erdogan, both of whom I have worked with directly on these issues. If you think it a good idea for S to send letters, I can send you drafts. Thanks...Dick

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 9:18 PM
To: H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: FW: Funeral Update

From the Murtha office below....still checking on whether there will be something in D.C. on Friday.

---

From: Mazonkey, Matthew <Matthew.Mazonkey@mail.house.gov>
To: PA12 - All Staff <PA12-AllStaff@housemail.house.gov>; Colette Marchesini: [redacted] Juola, Paul <Paul.Juola@mail.house.gov>; [redacted] B6
Sent: Tue Feb 09 19:20:03 2010
Subject: Funeral Update

At this time, the family would like to announce the following -

Viewing will be Sunday and Monday at Duca's Funeral Home on Menhoer Boulevard in Westmont (Johnstown, PA).

Burial will take place Tuesday at Grandview Cemetery, in Westmont.

Further details (i.e. time) will be forthcoming.

Matt

---

Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 7, 2010 2:47 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: not helping...

---

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Monday, June 07, 2010 2:44 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: not helping...

•Rep. Charlie Rangel (D-NY) "compared" Obama to Dick Cheney "for their shared commitment to the Iraq War," which he said is "because of the oil" (New York Daily News).

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 10:07 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: USG Options regarding 10 Haiti Amcits
Attachments: 2010 Haiti Amcits memo.doc

Importance: High

FYI

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Tuesday, February 09, 2010 5:47 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Crowley, Philip J; Smith, Daniel B; Klevorick, Caitlin B; Reines, Philippe I; Campbell, Piper
Subject: USG Options regarding 10 Haiti Amcits
Importance: High

Sent to S

Madame Secretary:

You have asked about the USG's options regarding the 10 Amcits from Idaho in Haiti, from the New Life Children's Refuge, who are currently being charged with child abduction and criminal association crimes under Haitian law. Depending on the GOH's intent, we believe the USG would have the following basic options:

B5

Page Denied

B5

Please let us know if you need more information, and especially if you would like us to contact DOJ to inquire further.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

MEMORANDUM

TO: The Secretary

CC: Counselor Mills
Deputy Chief of Staff Sullivan
Assistant Secretary Crowley

FROM: Harold Hongju Koh, Legal Adviser

DATE: February 9, 2010

RE: 10 Amcits in Haiti

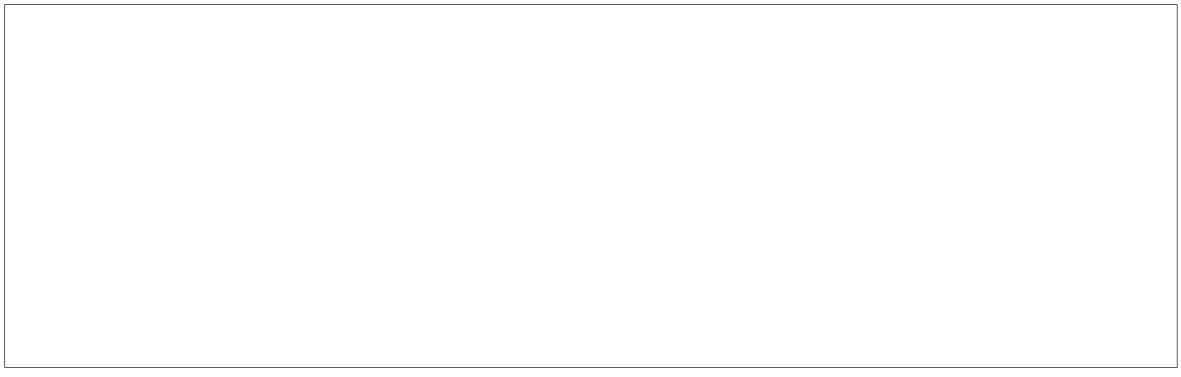
You have asked about the USG's options regarding the 10 Amcits from Idaho in Haiti, from the New Life Children's Refuge, who are currently being charged with child abduction and criminal association crimes under Haitian law. Depending on the GOH's intent, we believe the USG would have the following basic options:

B5

Page Denied



B5

Please let us know if you need more information, and especially if you would like us to contact DOJ to inquire further.

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Tuesday, February 09, 2010 1:47 PM
To: Torres, Susan; Johnson, Clifton M; Townley, Stephen G; Hooke, Kathleen H; Eichensehr, Kristen E; Osborn, Judith L; Mathias, Stephen; Thessin, James H
Subject: FW: 10 AmCits and you FW: one Texan who is being detained in Haiti is

As I told Susan, Cheryl asked for a memo from L for S BY TOMW AM outlining S's options re the Amcits. Her questions:

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 10:26 PM
To: H
Subject: Brazil-Iran

FYI:

Brazilian FM defends dialogue with Iran

BRASILIA, Feb. 9 (Xinhua) -- Brazilian Foreign Minister Celso Amorim said Tuesday Brazil would maintain negotiations with Iran on uranium enrichment and oppose any sanctions against Iran.

Amorim said Brazil was against the production of nuclear weapons, but Iran had the right to carry out a peaceful nuclear program.

"Dialogue is still possible. What we want is to make sure (that the uranium will not be used to make weapons) through peaceful ways and dialogue," Amorim told reporters.

Under a draft deal brokered by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the UN nuclear watchdog, most of Iran's existing low-grade enriched uranium should be shipped to Russia and France, where it would be processed into fuel rods with a purity of 20 percent.

Iran declared on Tuesday it had started the process of producing 20-percent enriched uranium inside the country.

In response to Iran's announcement, the U.S.-led Western countries have warned to take political and economic sanctions against Iran.

For his part, Amorim said he considered any kind of sanctions ineffective and dangerous because they might cross a limit and jeopardize peace.

Iran's president made an official visit to Brazil in November, during which the Brazilian government defended Iran's right to have its own peaceful nuclear program including uranium enrichment similar to Brazil's, following international standards.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 10:26 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Phil Goldberg

---

From: Verma, Richard R
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Steinberg, James B; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Feb 09 21:41:02 2010
Subject: Phil Goldberg

Was confirmed by the Senate tonight.

He was one of two noms confirmed. Still upwards of 70 noms being held, including 3 State dept noms held by Jon Kyl. Thought we had a breakthrough today, but we did not and will keep trying when the Senate comes back on Thursday.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 10:32 PM
To: H

Mitchell/mara/jake agree best thing for mohlo to be told that you got full debrief on their meeting and given the schedule challenges for tomorrow, would not be able to do mtg.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 10:39 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Bloomberg-South America Leaders Propose Haiti Aid, Avoid Strife (Update3)

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Laszczych, Joanne
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Feb 09 19:44:14 2010
Subject: Fw: Bloomberg-South America Leaders Propose Haiti Aid, Avoid Strife (Update3)

----- Original Message -----
From: Santos-Velasquez, Adriana [redacted] B6
To: Laszczych, Joanne
Sent: Tue Feb 09 19:20:37 2010
Subject: Bloomberg-South America Leaders Propose Haiti Aid, Avoid Strife (Update3)

Joanne,

President Moreno asked me to forward this to you in that way Mrs Cheryl Mills gets this info.

Thanks,

Adriana

Subject: Bloomberg-South America Leaders Propose Haiti Aid, Avoid Strife (Update3)

By Alexander Cuadros

Feb. 9 (Bloomberg) -- South American leaders agreed to provide $300 million in aid to Haiti at a summit in Ecuador after skirting regional disputes that have undermined relations on the continent since 2008.

The 12 members of the Union of South American Nations, or Unasur, endorsed an accord today calling for a $100 million fund as well as a $200 million "preferential" credit from the Inter-American Development Bank. The money would be channeled to programs benefiting Haiti's reconstruction in areas such as agriculture, electricity infrastructure, health and education.

"Latin America has stood up," Ecuadorean President Rafael Correa said, addressing the summit at his presidential palace. "The time has come to create a new kind of south-south aid."

The meeting marks Colombian President Alvaro Uribe's first visit to Ecuador since his armed forces staged a cross-border raid on a guerrilla camp there almost two years ago. The attack killed rebel leader Raul Reyes, prompted Correa to break off ties with his northern neighbor and led Venezuela's Hugo Chavez to order tanks to his country's border with Colombia.

Leaders including Organization of American States Secretary General Jose Miguel Insulza said today aid efforts should follow instructions from the government of Haitian President Rene Preval, who attended the meeting. Correa said member nations should scrap tariffs on Haitian imports and consider subsidizing natural gas exports to the Caribbean nation.

IDB Support

Carlos Melo, the IDB's representative in Ecuador, said he spoke to bank chief Luis Alberto Moreno, who supported a 15- to 20-year $200 million credit to be taken on by Unasur. Correa said member countries should consider contributing 25 cents per inhabitant to the $100 million fund.

Chavez canceled his attendance because of an electricity crisis he's facing at home, Ecuadorean Foreign Minister Ricardo Patino told reporters today. At a gathering in Argentina last August, Chavez assailed a deal allowing the U.S. access to seven Colombian military bases, saying it was part of a strategy to dominate the region.

About 100 protesters gathered today outside the presidential palace, carrying signs reading "Uribe equals the threat of war" and chanting criticisms of Correa for receiving his Colombian counterpart.

Regional Integration

Unasur was formed two years ago in a bid to promote regional integration. In 2008, at a summit in Santiago, the group provided political backing to Bolivian President Evo Morales after clashes between his supporters and government opponents over a new constitution left 30 people dead.

The leaders of the continent's two biggest economies skipped today's talks. Argentine President Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner has canceled foreign travel amid a political dispute over control of the central bank's reserves.

Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva isn't attending because of conflicts in his agenda, according to his press office. He sent his top foreign policy adviser, Marco Aurelio Garcia, to represent him.

No bilateral meeting is planned between Correa and Uribe, Ecuador's state news agency cited Patino as saying Feb. 4.

Unasur countries rushed doctors, food and emergency supplies to Haiti, the hemisphere's poorest country, in the aftermath of the Jan. 12 earthquake. At least 200,000 people died in the quake, Haiti's government said Feb. 6.

Brazil Aid

Lula signed a decree Jan. 26 providing 375 million reais ($200 million) in aid to Haiti. Brazil, which leads a United Nations peacekeeping contingent in Haiti, had already pledged about $17 million to the country, the most among Latin American nations, according to UN data.

Venezuela forgave Haiti's oil-related debt and donated 225,000 barrels of fuel, while Colombia sent more than 200 search-and-rescue personnel and committed hundreds of tons of humanitarian supplies. Ecuador has sent rescue teams and donated several tons of food, UN data show. Peruvian President Alan Garcia, speaking at the summit today, said Peru was willing to contribute $10 million.

Colombia and Ecuador began taking steps late last year to restore full relations. The neighbors named diplomatic envoys and re-established military ties in November. Ecuador this month also eliminated the last of the tariffs it imposed on Colombian goods in 2009.

To contact the reporter on this story: Alexander Cuadros in Quito at acuadros@bloomberg.net

Last Updated: February 9, 2010 15:20 EST

RELEASE
IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 8, 2010 7:16 AM
To: H

Saw that you are on phone
Let me know if u need anything.

B6

RELEASE
IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 8, 2010 7:24 AM
To: H
Subject: Re:

Ordering now.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Jun 08 07:20:35 2010
Subject: Re:

[redacted] You can come in--I'm up. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jun 08 07:16:01 2010
Subject:

Saw that you are on phone
Let me know if u need anything. [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 8:57 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Suicide attack kills 10 in NW Pakistan

---

From: Riggs, Susan J
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-Pakistan
Sent: Wed Feb 10 07:49:05 2010
Subject: Suicide attack kills 10 in NW Pakistan

PESHAWAR (AP) - A local government official said a suicide car bomber attacked a tribal police patrol in northwestern Pakistan, killing 10 policemen. Rasheed Khan says the attacker rammed his car into a vehicle carrying the police on a main highway in the Khyber tribal area near the Afghan border. Another 15 people were injured in the attack. No group has claimed responsibility for the attack, but Taliban militants often target Pakistani security forces.

Regards,

Susan Riggs
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 8:57 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: India says ready to test new nuclear missile within year

---

From: Riggs, Susan J
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-Pakistan
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Wed Feb 10 08:08:51 2010
Subject: India says ready to test new nuclear missile within year

NEW DELHI (Reuters) - India aims to test a new nuclear-capable missile with a range of more than 5000-km (3,100-miles), a top military scientist said, a move that could complicate security in a volatile region. "Agni-V is out of the drawing board. We are aiming for a flight trial within a year," V.K. Saraswat, India's chief military scientist told reporters.

Regards,

Susan Riggs
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, June 8, 2010 9:40 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Letter from Hillary

Thanks, Gertie, for the very sweet effort. I know such great women, lucky me.

---

From: Dee Delaney [mailto[redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, June 08, 2010 8:35 AM
To: Ebeling, Betsy
Cc: 'Dan Delaney Jr.'; [redacted] B6
Subject: RE: Letter from Hillary

Hillary even put a hand written note at the bottom. Very nice.

---

From: Ebeling, Betsy [mailto[redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, June 08, 2010 9:29 AM
To: Dee Delaney
Cc: Dan Delaney Jr.; [redacted] B6
Subject: RE: Letter from Hillary

I sent the news about your retirement to HRC and she suggested the letter. She was, as well she should be, impressed with your accomplishments, Dee. And now 108 meetings without an absence—amazing.

---

From: Dee Delaney [mailto:[redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, June 08, 2010 8:25 AM
To: Ebeling, Betsy
Cc: Dan Delaney Jr.; [redacted] B6
Subject: Letter from Hillary

Betsy,

Hillary's letter of congratulations upon my retirement arrived in yesterday's mail. You are SO thoughtful. Thanks for thinking of me. I will frame it and hang it in my new home office and think of both of you when I see it. Please extend my appreciation to Hillary when you talk to her. I'm going to share the letter with our board members tomorrow during my last board meeting. (As an aside, I have never missed a board meeting and there have been 108 of them since the Foundation was started in 1996!)

Love,
Dee

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 10:48 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Fw: Insulza

See below from Tom. We can put together a conference call at your convenience with Arturo, Craig, Carmen, CDM, me, and perhaps Jim.

On the Mitchell material, for reasons that elude me, the two versions of the Blair statement were done on the classified system. Ops will get the statement and the other document to you ASAP. I've also asked them to convert the statement so that it can be emailed to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: Shannon, Thomas A
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 09:33:26 2010
Subject: RE: Insulza

B5

B5

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED-----Original Message-----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:49 AM
To: Shannon, Thomas A
Subject: Insulza

Tomorrow's wapo editorial makes a pretty good case about insulza and the oas. What are your thoughts on how to proceed?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 11:17 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Insulza

Trust me, I share your exasperation. But until ops converts it to the unclassified email system, there is no physical way for me to email it. I can't even access it.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 10:50:17 2010
Subject: Re: Insulza

It's a public statement! Just email it.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Feb 10 10:48:14 2010
Subject: Fw: Insulza

See below from Tom. We can put together a conference call at your convenience with Arturo, Craig, Carmen, CDM, me, and perhaps Jim.

On the Mitchell material, for reasons that elude me, the two versions of the Blair statement were done on the classified system. Ops will get the statement and the other document to you ASAP. I've also asked them to convert the statement so that it can be emailed to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: Shannon, Thomas A
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 09:33:26 2010
Subject: RE: Insulza

B5

B5

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED-----Original Message-----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:49 AM
To: Shannon, Thomas A
Subject: Insulza

Tomorrow's wapo editorial makes a pretty good case about insulza and the oas. What are your thoughts on how to proceed?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 11:26 AM
To: H
Subject: Blair statement

The first has Mitchell's edits, the second is original from Blair's guy to Mara:

Draft Statement by the Secretary as Revised by Senator Mitchell

[redacted] B5

Original Draft Statement by the Secretary Submitted by Tony Blair

The United States is determined to bring about a two-state solution. Believes there is a strong basis for doing so. Believes it can be done by combining a renewed political negotiation with change on the ground, bottom up, as set out in Prime Minister Fayyad's plan for a Palestinian state.

To this end, Tony Blair, as Quartet Representative, will work in partnership with Senator Mitchell to suppor t the political negotiation by mobilizing the efforts of the international community: (1) to build support for the institutional capacity and future governance of a future Palestinian state; (2) to improve freedom of movement and access for Palestinians; (3) to encourage further private sector investment; and (4) to bring change in the living conditions of the people in Gaza.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 12:22 PM
To: H
Subject: Just got the Blair thing for whatever reason

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 12:34 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Fw: Insulza

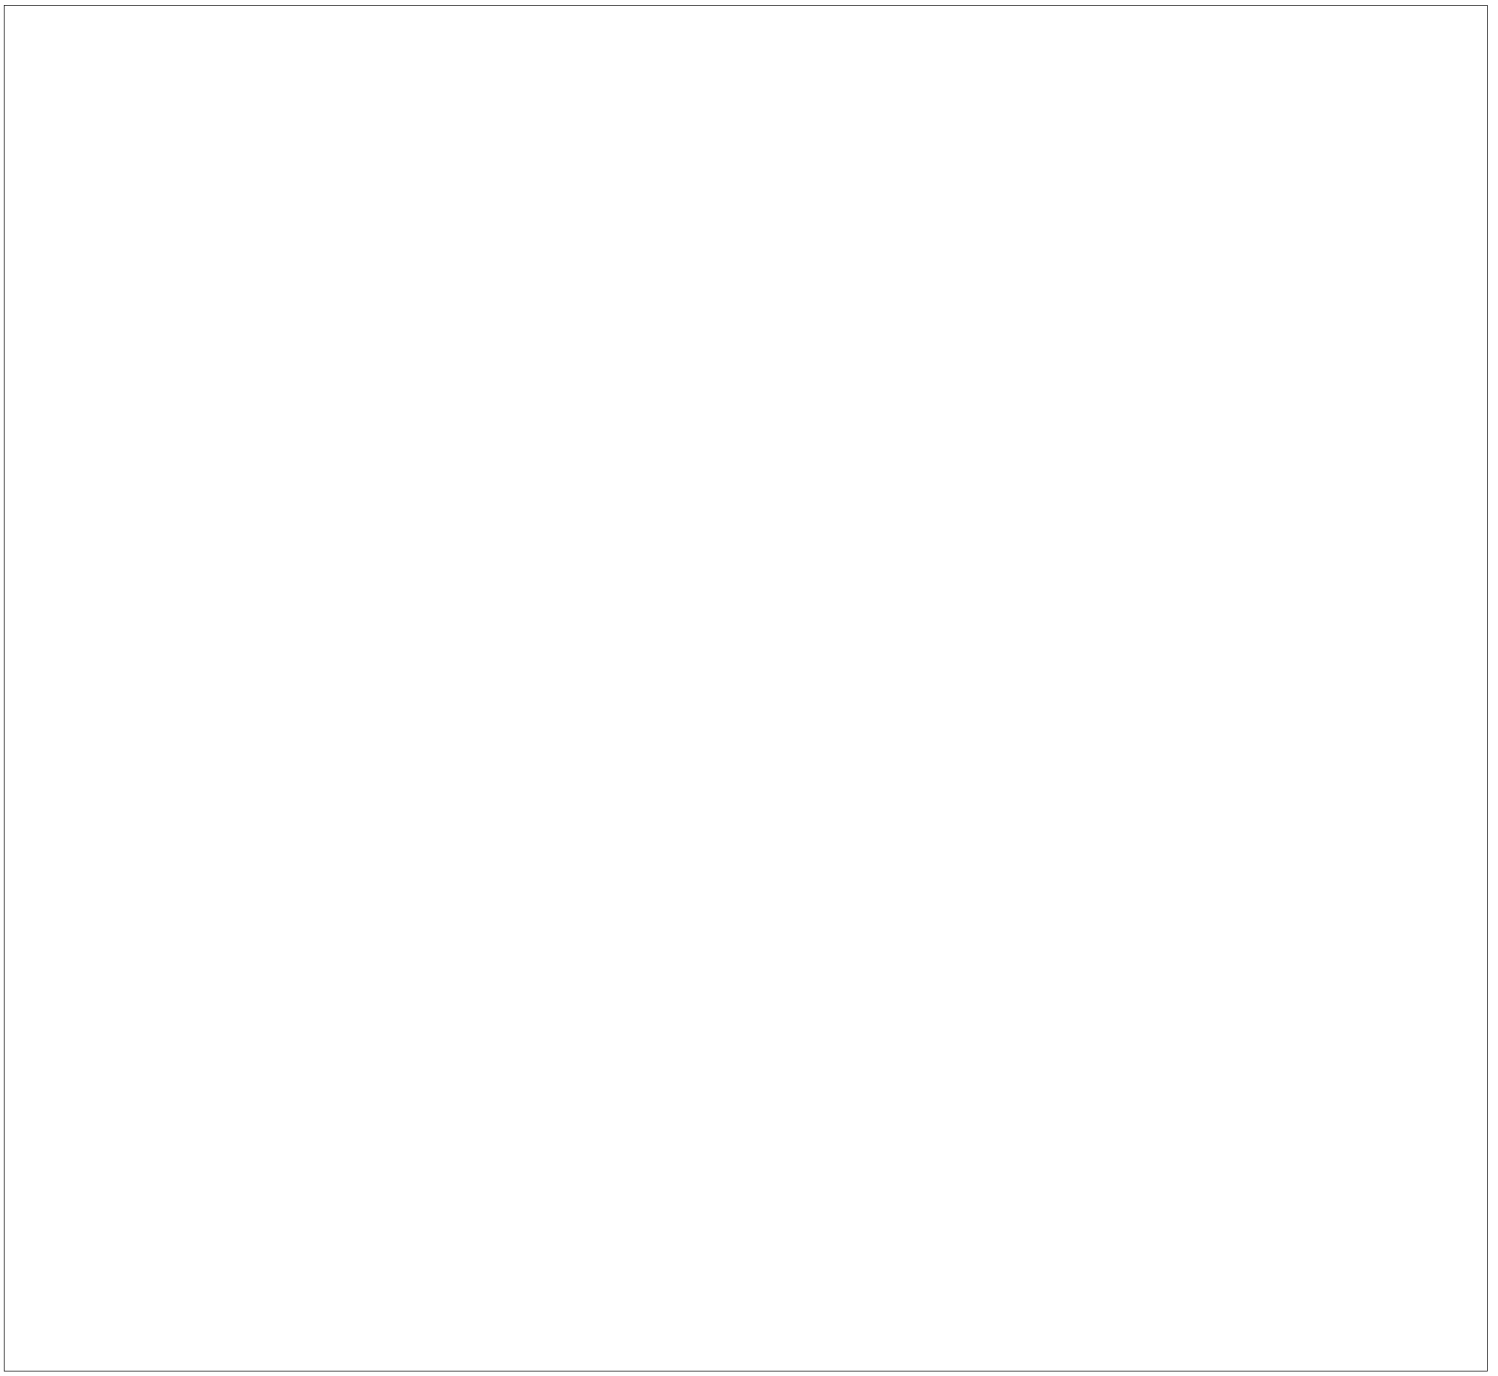
More from Tom.



----- Original Message -----
From: Shannon, Thomas A
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 11:06:26 2010
Subject: RE: Insulza

B5

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED

-----Original Message-----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 12:52 PM
To: Shannon, Thomas A
Subject: Re: Insulza

----- Original Message -----
From: Shannon, Thomas A
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 09:33:26 2010
Subject: RE: Insulza

B5

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED-----Original Message-----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:49 AM
To: Shannon, Thomas A

Subject: Insulza

Tomorrow's wapo editorial makes a pretty good case about insulza and the oas. What are your thoughts on how to proceed?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:16 PM
To: H
Cc: CDM; Huma Abedin; Jake Sullivan
Subject: FLOTUS re XFLOTUS

From Larry King last night:

LARRY KING: How is the -- it was so bitter -- well, rather bitter in the campaign with Hillary, when they were going at each other.

MICHELLE OBAMA: Yes, it seems so long ago.

KING: Yes. How are they doing now together?
OBAMA: They're great. Hillary Clinton is an amazing secretary of State. I mean she would have been an amazing president. She was an amazing attorney. She's a phenomenal professional. And she's proven to be a tremendous asset in -- in so many ways. So the relationship is -- is -- is strong. They share the same views in terms of international policy and approach. And we're seeing the outcome of that on the international stage. I think, you know, we can say pretty clearly that the United States -- the -- the view of this nation around the world has changed. People are enthusiastic about the potential. Things aren't perfect. We're still a nation fighting two wars. But when we travel around the country, the excitement and the possibility are palpable. And I think that's because of the president, but I think it's also because of our secretary of State.

http://transcripts.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1002/09/lkl.01.html

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:57 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Iran

I called Bill about that this morning when I saw the stories. [redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1 B5

[redacted]

[redacted]

In short, he thinks this is all playing out in Moscow, not in Geneva.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:22:32 2010
Subject: Iran

In stories today PJ suggests we're open to alternatives to our TRR proposal. The WSJ says it's a reversal of position. What gives?

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL
~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/10/2025

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:00 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Tftp

Troubling news from Europe. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Jones, Stuart
To: Gordon, Philip H; McEldowney, Nancy E; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:40:36 2010
Subject: Tftp

Jake, we just got off conf call re status of ep vote on tftp. The debate this aft was dramatic. The council + commission apologized for mishandling the issue + begged mep's not to take out their frustration on interim agreement which is saving lives. Both epp leader ver hofstadt + socialist leader schultz responded by openly advocating postponement.

After debate party leaders met but failed to achieve consensus on postponement. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

We are now working on contingency press guidance. [redacted]

[redacted]

Stu

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 8, 2010 1:41 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) UN council to vote June 9 on Iran

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Iran; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Tue Jun 08 13:30:25 2010
Subject: (Reuters) UN council to vote June 9 on Iran

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) - The UN Security Council will vote the morning of June 9 on a resolution imposing a fresh round of sanctions on Iran over its nuclear program, France's UN Ambassador Gerard Araud said.

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/10/2025

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:37 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:35:07 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:57:13 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

I called Bill about that this morning when I saw the stories. [redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1 B5

[redacted]

In short, he thinks this is all playing out in Moscow, not in Geneva.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:22:32 2010
Subject: Iran

In stories today PJ suggests we're open to alternatives to our TRR proposal. The WSJ says it's a reversal of position. What gives?

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/10/2025

RELEASE IN PART 1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:02 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:00:02 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:37:23 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:35:07 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:57:13 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

I called Bill about that this morning when I saw the stories. [redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1 B5

[redacted]

[redacted]

1.4(D)
B1
B5

In short, he thinks this is all playing out in Moscow, not in Geneva.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:22:32 2010
Subject: Iran

In stories today PJ suggests we're open to alternatives to our TRR proposal. The WSJ says it's a reversal of position. What gives?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:07 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

sigh

---

From: Banks, Dana
To: SES_DutyDeputies
Cc: SES-O_SWO-Only
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:51:27 2010
Subject: FW: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

Dan,
Wanted to bring this to your attention. Gov. Bill Richardson called the taskforce today to inquiring about travel to Haiti. His specific concerns were:

- An update on the court proceedings of the missionaries, particularly whether or not a Haitian court decision is imminent;
- Information on whether or not he could travel to Haiti and how to set up a trip;
- Information on whether or not he could travel by private plane;
- A list of what supplies are needed in Haiti; and
- Direction on how to deliver those supplies.

He said he may not travel if he receives an indication that the case of the Amcit missionaries would be decided sometime in the next few days.

H has been informed. Please let us know if you would like us to forward to C or M.

Dana

---

From: Haiti TaskForce1D-DepCoordinator
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:41 PM
To: TaskForce-1; Cleveland, Charlena A; Elder, Christine A; [redacted] Christman, Kim N; [redacted] Psyhos, Nicholas A; Bulgrin, Julie K; Hall, Suzanne K; Tomlinson, Daniel W; Van Buskirk, Raymond M; Kim, Haelee (LAC/AA/CUBA); Finnegan, Joseph P; Youmans, Frances; Dubois, Kim F; Bradford, Qiana; SES-O_Shift-II
Cc: xHaiti File Mail
Subject: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

B6

New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson called the Haiti Task Force at 1300 EST on February 10 to inquire about
1) the status of the missionaries;
2) how to get to Haiti; and
3) how to deliver supplies needed on the ground.

[redacted] The three missionaries in question - [redacted] and [redacted] - [redacted] The [redacted] are now [redacted] The three all have relatives living in [redacted] who have contacted Governor Richardson to intervene in the case.

Governor Richardson understood that a Haitian court would decide the missionaries' case on February 10 and said there was some speculation that the missionaries would be released. If they are not going to be released, then Governor Richardson is considering traveling to Haiti to inquire about the status of the missionaries, deliver needed supplies to Haitians, and meet with President Preval [redacted]. Governor Richardson emphasized that the trip plans could be eliminated if he received some indication that the case would be decided sometime in the next few days.

Governor Richardson specifically requested:

- An update on the court proceedings of the missionaries, particularly whether or not a Haitian court decision is imminent;
- Information on whether or not he could travel to Haiti and how to set up a trip;
- Information on whether or not he could travel by private plane;
- A list of what supplies are needed in Haiti; and
- Direction on how to deliver those supplies.

The answers to the questions above can be sent to:
Alarie Ray
Communications Director
New Mexico Governor's Office
Office: (505) 476-2248
Cell: [redacted] B6

Also, his secretary's contact information is:
Janis Hartley
[redacted]
Office: (505) 476-2245
Cell: [redacted]

Thank you,
Oni
Oni Blair
Haiti Task Force Deputy Coordinator

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:11 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Diane Watson to retire

---

From: Dan Schwerin [redacted] B6
To: Balderston, Kris M; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:49:29 2010
Subject: Diane Watson to retire

Rep. Watson to retire

By Aaron Blake - 02/10/10 11:51 AM ET

Rep. Diane Watson (D-Calif.) is set to announce her retirement, according to Democratic sources.

Watson's central Los Angeles district isn't expected to be competitive in the general election, as it carries a distinct Democratic advantage as a majority-minority district. President Barack Obama won it 87-12 in 2008.

Former California State Assembly Speaker Karen Bass is thought to be an early front-runner to replace Watson.

Watson, 76, has served in Congress since 2001. Prior to that, President Bill Clinton appointed her ambassador to Micronesia.

Source:
http://thehill.com/blogs/blog-briefing-room/news/80575-watson-to-retire

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:16 PM
To: H
Subject: 4pm oas call confirmed

Jake Sullivan
Cheryl Mills
Mike Fuchs
Carmen Lomellin
Craig Kelly
Jim Steinberg (tentative)
Arturo Valenzuela
Anne-Marie Slaughter
Ops will connect to you.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:24 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

Will call when I get off call before 4pm

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:10 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

When can you talk? I'm free until 4 and after 7.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:06:45 2010
Subject: FW: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

sigh

---

From: Banks, Dana
To: SES_DutyDeputies
Cc: SES-O_SWO-Only
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:51:27 2010
Subject: FW: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

Dan,

Wanted to bring this to your attention. Gov. Bill Richardson called the taskforce today to inquiring about travel to Haiti. His specific concerns were:

- An update on the court proceedings of the missionaries, particularly whether or not a Haitian court decision is imminent;
- Information on whether or not he could travel to Haiti and how to set up a trip;
- Information on whether or not he could travel by private plane;
- A list of what supplies are needed in Haiti; and
- Direction on how to deliver those supplies.

He said he may not travel if he receives an indication that the case of the Amcit missionaries would be decided sometime in the next few days.

H has been informed. Please let us know if you would like us to forward to C or M.

Dana

From: Haiti TaskForce1D-DepCoordinator
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:41 PM
To: TaskForce-1; Cleveland, Charlena A; Elder, Christine A; [redacted] Christman, Kim N; [redacted] Psyhos, Nicholas A; Bulgrin, Julie K; Hall, Suzanne K; Tomlinson, Daniel W; Van Buskirk, Raymond M; Kim, Haelee (LAC/AA/CUBA); Finnegan, Joseph P; Youmans, Frances; Dubois, Kim F; Bradford, Qiana; SES-O_Shift-II B6
Cc: xHaiti File Mail
Subject: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson called the Haiti Task Force at 1300 EST on February 10 to inquire about

1) the status of the missionaries;

2) how to get to Haiti; and

3) how to deliver supplies needed on the ground.

[redacted] The three missionaries in question - [redacted] and [redacted] - [redacted] The [redacted], are now [redacted] The three all have relatives living in [redacted] who have contacted Governor Richardson to intervene in the case.

Governor Richardson understood that a Haitian court would decide the missionaries' case on February 10 and said there was some speculation that the missionaries would be released. If they are not going to be released, then Governor Richardson is considering traveling to Haiti to inquire about the status of the missionaries, deliver needed supplies to Haitians, and meet with President Preval [redacted] Governor Richardson emphasized that the trip plans could be eliminated if he received some indication that the case would be decided sometime in the next few days.

Governor Richardson specifically requested:

- An update on the court proceedings of the missionaries, particularly whether or not a Haitian court decision is imminent;
- Information on whether or not he could travel to Haiti and how to set up a trip;
- Information on whether or not he could travel by private plane;
- A list of what supplies are needed in Haiti; and
- Direction on how to deliver those supplies.

The answers to the questions above can be sent to:

Alarie Ray

Communications Director

New Mexico Governor's Office

Office: (505) 476-2248

Cell: [redacted] B6

Also, his secretary's contact information is:

Janis Hartley

[redacted]

Office: (505) 476-2245

Cell: [redacted]

Thank you,

Oni

Oni Blair

Haiti Task Force Deputy Coordinator

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR [redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:33 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Mother Teresa

Just FYI on the below, from one of those crazy right "magazines" - notes that the home you referenced in your Prayer Breakfast remarks has since closed.

I checked in with Lissa & Melanne, they didn't know it closed, which makes sense since it happened in 2002 after you left the White House.

I made it clear that your longtime commitment to this issue - throughout your public career - is well known, and you remain very proud of your work with Mother Teresa in opening this home in 1995. And that your partnership is a success story to be emulated.

Again, this is just FYI

http://www.worldmag.com/webextra/16398

ADOPTION | Hillary Clinton continues to hail an adoption home she helped open with Mother Teresa that has since closed its doors By Emily Belz

WASHINGTON—An adoption ministry Secretary of State Hillary Clinton hailed as a home she helped open with Mother Teresa no longer handles adoptions and its phone line has been disconnected, though at last week's National Prayer Breakfast Clinton spent five minutes of her 30-minute speech relating the story of its opening. Last Thursday Clinton described Mother Teresa "beaming about what this meant for children and their futures," seemingly oblivious that the Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children in northwest Washington, D.C., is now defunct. She said she worked tirelessly to "cut through all the red tape," although it appears that red tape prevented the work from continuing. According to a pastor at the church next door to the home's former location, the adoption ministry failed to take off because the Roman Catholic nuns who ran it weren't allowed to care for babies without medical personnel on site. "I'm not sure the legal thing that came down upon them, but they realized they needed to expend their energies in another way," said Maureen Freshour, who along with her husband, David, pastors Chevy Chase Baptist Church and lives nearby. Freshour has stayed in touch with the nuns from the Missionaries of Charity order who ran the home and said that the remaining three or four sisters have moved to another house in Washington, where they are ministering to the homeless."This has been a core issue—adoption—whether the home [Clinton] talked about survived or not," said Chuck Johnson, chief operating officer of the National Council for Adoption. "It's an issue she's been consistent on."During her speech on Thursday, Clinton reminisced about the 1994 National Prayer Breakfast when she attended as first lady and Mother Teresa was the speaker. The Roman Catholic nun delivered a blistering speech about abortion, saying, "Any country that accepts abortion is not teaching its people to love, but to use any violence to get what they want." Mother Teresa then called on attendees to fight abortion through adoption: "Please don't kill the child. I want the child. Please give me the child."The audience that day gave her a standing ovation—but President and Mrs. Clinton, both pro-abortion, did not stand. Afterward, Mother Teresa asked to meet with Hillary Clinton and they went to talk behind a curtain on the stage, sitting on folding chairs, Mother Teresa in sandals even though it was winter."She told me that she knew that we had a shared conviction about adoption being vastly better as a choice for unplanned or unwanted babies," Clinton related last Thursday. "And she asked me—or more properly, she directed me—to work with her to create a home for such babies here in Washington."Clinton followed through and set up a home for unwanted babies in Washington in just over a year, no small feat in a city that was known then for its inefficient and corrupt bureaucracy. The Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children opened in June 1995 in the district's affluent Chevy Chase neighborhood to house eight pregnant mothers and their babies—but it remains unclear whether it facilitated any adoptions.I called the Missionaries of Charity in Washington, a worldwide Roman Catholic order established by Mother Teresa. The nun who answered the phone said she couldn't give her name because they aren't allowed to talk to the press. She did say, however, that the sisters who are in the order now were not in the order when the adoption home opened, so she wasn't sure why it closed. She added that the order sold the Chevy Chase house in 2002. "We work with the poor and we didn't have any work there because it's a rich neighborhood," she said. The sisters, she added, are now working with the homeless and those with AIDS in a more transitional neighborhood in the northeast section of town on Otis Street.

###

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 9, 2010 9:15 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: S calls on Iran vote?

From: Feltman, Jeffrey D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Jun 09 08:38:52 2010
Subject: S calls on Iran vote?

Hi. Realize you guys are traveling (as well as responding to my other requests!). But we're coming down to the wire with the Iran vote

B5

Jeffrey Feltman

Assistant Secretary
Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs
Department of State

202-647-7209

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:44 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Mother Teresa

I will look into what happened to it after 2002 (LH was released 6/03, so better than 04)

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Wed, 10 Feb 2010 15:42:08
To: 'preines <preines
Subject: Re: Mother Teresa

Also, I wrote about it in Living History and no one said a word. Was it still open in some form in 2004?

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines B6
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:33:21 2010
Subject: Mother Teresa

Just FYI on the below, from one of those crazy right "magazines" - notes that the home you referenced in your Prayer Breakfast remarks has since closed.

I checked in with Lissa & Melanne, they didn't know it closed, which makes sense since it happened in 2002 after you left the White House.

I made it clear that your longtime commitment to this issue - throughout your public career - is well known, and you remain very proud of your work with Mother Teresa in opening this home in 1995. And that your partnership is a success story to be emulated.

Again, this is just FYI

http://www.worldmag.com/webextra/16398

ADOPTION | Hillary Clinton continues to hail an adoption home she helped open with Mother Teresa that has since closed its doors By Emily Belz

WASHINGTON—An adoption ministry Secretary of State Hillary Clinton hailed as a home she helped open with Mother Teresa no longer handles adoptions and its phone line has been disconnected, though at last week's National Prayer Breakfast Clinton spent five minutes of her 30-minute speech relating the story of its opening. Last Thursday Clinton described Mother Teresa "beaming about what this meant for children and their futures," seemingly oblivious that the Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children in northwest Washington, D.C., is now defunct. She said she worked tirelessly to "cut through all the red tape," although it appears that red tape prevented the work from continuing. According to a pastor at the church next door to the home's former location, the adoption ministry failed to take off because the Roman Catholic nuns who ran it weren't allowed to care for babies without medical personnel on site. "I'm not sure the legal thing that came down upon them, but they realized they needed to expend their energies in another way," said Maureen Freshour, who along with her husband, David, pastors Chevy Chase Baptist Church and lives nearby. Freshour has stayed in touch with the nuns from the Missionaries of Charity order who ran the home and said that the remaining three or four sisters have moved to another house in Washington, where they are ministering to the homeless."This has been a core issue—adoption—whether the home [Clinton] talked about survived or not," said Chuck Johnson, chief operating officer of the National Council for Adoption. "It's an issue she's been consistent on."During her speech on Thursday, Clinton reminisced about the 1994 National Prayer Breakfast when she attended as first lady and Mother Teresa was the speaker. The Roman Catholic nun delivered a blistering speech about abortion, saying, "Any country that accepts abortion is not teaching its people to love, but to use any violence to get what they want." Mother Teresa then called on attendees to fight abortion through adoption: "Please don't kill the child. I want the child. Please give me the child."The audience that day gave her a standing ovation—but President and Mrs. Clinton, both pro-abortion, did not stand. Afterward, Mother Teresa asked to meet with Hillary Clinton and they went to talk behind a curtain on the stage, sitting on folding chairs, Mother Teresa in sandals even though it was winter."She told me that she knew that we had a shared conviction about adoption being vastly better as a choice for unplanned or unwanted babies," Clinton related last Thursday. "And she asked me—or more properly, she directed me—to work with her to create a home for such babies here in Washington."Clinton followed through and set up a home for unwanted babies in Washington in just over a year, no small feat in a city that was known then for its inefficient and corrupt bureaucracy. The Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children opened in June 1995 in the district's affluent Chevy Chase neighborhood to house eight pregnant mothers and their babies—but it remains unclear whether it facilitated any adoptions.I called the Missionaries of Charity in Washington, a worldwide Roman Catholic order established by Mother Teresa. The nun who answered the phone said she couldn't give her name because they aren't allowed to talk to the press. She did say, however, that the sisters who are in the order now were not in the order when the adoption home opened, so she wasn't sure why it closed. She added that the order sold the Chevy Chase house in 2002. "We work with the poor and we didn't have any work there because it's a rich neighborhood," she said. The sisters, she added, are now working with the homeless and those with AIDS in a more transitional neighborhood in the northeast section of town on Otis Street.

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: messsage from fm for s

See message below from your friend the egyptian foreign minister....

---

From: Feltman, Jeffrey D
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:34:09 2010
Subject: Fw: messsage from fm for s

Fun message from Aboul-Gheit!
Jeffrey Feltman

---

From: Scobey, Margaret
To: Feltman, Jeffrey D; Schlicher, Ronald L; Connelly, Maura
Cc: Shampaine, Nicole D; Tueller, Matthew H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:31:08 2010
Subject: messsage from fm for s

Sensitive but not classified

Jeff:

While speaking on phone today with FM regarding upcoming VIP travel to Egypt, he asked that I convey to the Secretary that he is "amazed". . .tell the Secretary that "Ahmed is amazed" that she is going to Qatar and the Kingdom and flying right over Egypt. I pointed out that S has been here twice and that they just met in the US last month. . .but he was having none of it. . ."just tell her 'Ahmed is amazed' that she would not stop here."

May I ask that you find way to convey this to S appropriately?

He also asked for detailed info on measures to be taken at our points of entry for incoming travelers—key ministers very upset at what they have heard, that there will be "no exceptions." We'll work with consular to convey the correct info and try to calm this issue.

Cheers, margaret

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 4:02 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: New Mexico

fyi

---

From: Kennedy, Patrick F
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:53 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: New Mexico

Cheryl

Spoke to him

Feels pressure to do something

Made it clear that now was not the time – would potentially work against

Said he could tell the families that he had spoken to me and that State Department was working this issue as it concerned about any AmCit world-wide who is in custody

He agreed to hold off for a while

And I promised to keep in touch

[he remembered me from previous time at State so that may have helped a bit]

Regards

pat

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 4:09 PM
To: H
Subject: Fyi - steinberg is on the call.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 9, 2010 10:56 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Pls Clear: Congratulations to President-Elect Aquino of the Philippines

Fyi

---

From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I; Fuchs, Michael H; Adler, Caroline E
Sent: Wed Jun 09 10:49:37 2010
Subject: Pls Clear: Congratulations to President-Elect Aquino of the Philippines

This would be released after the WH does their statement.

STATEMENT BY THE SECRETARY

Congratulations to President-Elect Aquino of the Philippines

I join President Obama in congratulating President-elect Benigno "Noynoy" Aquino III, whom the Filipino people have chosen to lead their nation. The Philippines' successful election exemplified the vitality of the country's democratic institutions and should be a point of pride for Filipinos everywhere. The Filipino people now look to President-elect Aquino to carry forward the democratic traditions that his parents did so much to champion. The United States has long stood with the Philippines as a trusted ally and friend and we will continue to support the ongoing efforts of the Filipino people to build a secure and prosperous country.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Drafted: | K Burgwinkle | |
| Approved: | EAP/FO DAS Marciel | ok |
| Cleared: | EAP/MTS: J Yun | ok |
| | EAP/MTS: P Richhart | ok |
| | D(S): P Park | ok |
| | P: L Rosenberger | ok |
| | S/P: J Wright | ok |
| | EAP/P: K McKellogg | ok |
| | NSC: D Walton | ok |
| | PA: | |
| | S: | |

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 4:11 PM
To: H
Subject: I believe Jim is on call -- not certain

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 4:40 PM
To: H
Subject: Calling u on 3rd floor phone with dennis ross as you requested

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 5:11 PM
To: H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Fw: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

More details...

---

From: Patrick Justin Alwine [redacted] B6
To: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:17:50 2010
Subject: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

----- Original Message -----
From: Mazonkey, Matthew
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:48:55 2010
Subject: Murtha Funeral Update

The Murtha Family has announced further details regarding funeral services for the late Congressman John P. Murtha -

A public viewing will take place at Duca Funeral Home from 3:00-7:00 p.m. on Sunday, February 14, 2010, and Monday, February 15, 2010. The funeral home is located at 1622 Menoher Boulevard in Johnstown, PA.

A private funeral service will be held at the Westmont Presbyterian Church at 11:00 a.m. on Tuesday, February 16, 2010. The church is located at 601 Luzerne Street in Johnstown, PA. A private internment will follow at Grandview Cemetery, also in Johnstown.

The family is also working with the Office of the Speaker of the House to hold a public memorial in the U.S. Capitol in the coming weeks. Details will be forthcoming. An official Congressional Delegation is also expected to be present for the private funeral service on Tuesday.

In lieu of flowers, the Murtha family suggests contributions be made to the UPMC John P. Murtha Cancer Pavilion (337 Somerset Street, Johnstown, PA 15901) or the Joyce Murtha Breast Care Center (600 Somerset Avenue, Windber, PA 15963).

Further details about media coverage will be forthcoming.

---
Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 5:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

I suspect they want him in Johnstown, but I will double check.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Feb 10 17:21:17 2010
Subject: Re: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

Does this mean Bill should not plan on going and we just wait for the public memorial service?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Feb 10 17:10:48 2010
Subject: Fw: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

More details...

---

From: Patrick Justin Alwine [redacted] B6
To: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:17:50 2010
Subject: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

----- Original Message -----
From: Mazonkey, Matthew
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:48:55 2010
Subject: Murtha Funeral Update

The Murtha Family has announced further details regarding funeral services for the late Congressman John P. Murtha -

A public viewing will take place at Duca Funeral Home from 3:00-7:00 p.m. on Sunday, February 14, 2010, and Monday, February 15, 2010. The funeral home is located at 1622 Menoher Boulevard in Johnstown, PA.

A private funeral service will be held at the Westmont Presbyterian Church at 11:00 a.m. on Tuesday, February 16, 2010. The church is located at 601 Luzerne Street in Johnstown, PA. A private internment will follow at Grandview Cemetery, also in Johnstown.

The family is also working with the Office of the Speaker of the House to hold a public memorial in the U.S. Capitol in the coming weeks. Details will be forthcoming. An official Congressional Delegation is also expected to be present for the private funeral service on Tuesday.

In lieu of flowers, the Murtha family suggests contributions be made to the UPMC John P. Murtha Cancer Pavilion (337 Somerset Street, Johnstown, PA 15901) or the Joyce Murtha Breast Care Center (600 Somerset Avenue, Windber, PA 15963).

Further details about media coverage will be forthcoming.

---

Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 6:03 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Calls

Will do

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Wed Feb 10 17:55:25 2010
Subject: Calls

I called and talked w INR DAS Jim Buchanan at John Dinger's request. Pls let John know.

I called Marty Edelman and LM.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 7:44 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: S saw reports

Checking

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Lindwall, David E
Cc: Kennedy, Patrick F; Mills, Cheryl D; Moore, Donald L; Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wed Feb 10 19:43:27 2010
Subject: S saw reports

Saying they we being released - not sure that is accurate - do you have an update?

Cdm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 10, 2010 8:40 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Russia says Iran sanctions do not bar missile deal

From: Pearce, Jennifer
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-EUR; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Thu Jun 10 08:15:48 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Russia says Iran sanctions do not bar missile deal

MOSCOW – The Foreign Ministry said the new UN sanctions against Tehran over its nuclear program do not oblige Moscow to scrap a controversial deal to deliver surface-to-air missiles to Iran. Ministry spokesman Andrei Nesterenko spoke after the Interfax news agency cited a Russian arms industry source as saying Russia would freeze its unfulfilled contract to sell S-300 missiles to Iran because of the sanctions.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 10, 2010 12:40 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: European Parliament

Fyi

From: Kennard, William E
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: McEldowney, Nancy E; Jones, Stuart; Sommers, Scott E; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thu Jun 10 12:17:26 2010
Subject: European Parliament

Dear Madam Secretary:

I greatly appreciate your support of our efforts to improve USG outreach to the European Parliament (EP) and wanted to provide you with a brief update on our progress. We have worked very hard at USEU to deepen and intensify our relationship with the EP over the past several months. Specifically, we have,

(1) Increased the flow of high-level USG visitors to the EP. Recent visitors include Janet Napolitano, Dick Holbrooke, George Mitchell, Dick Morningstar and Ron Kirk. These visits culminated last month in a highly successful address by VP Biden to a Plenary Session of the EP. I hope that you will also address a Plenary Session of the EP in the near term. (Your town hall meeting at the EP with young leaders last year was well-received here.)

(2) Increased the flow and quality of EP interactions in Washington. We have facilitated a dramatic increase in the number of EP delegations visiting Washington and a significant improvement in the level of their access to high-level USG officials.

(3) Increased USEU outreach to the EP at every level. At the Mission, we are restructuring the way in which we interact with EP leaders by institutionalizing responsibility for key relationships and enhancing accountability. In the coming months, we expect to receive two additional FTEs at the Mission to improve our ability to cover the EP. We have also encouraged our Embassies in member State capitals to meet with European Parliament members.

B5

Again, thank you for your interest and support for our efforts.

Bill Kennard

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 10, 2010 10:13 PM
To: H

Welcome back. I sent to your house a small binder of material in preparation for the Dodd/Berman meeting tomorrow morning. I am happy to walk you through any part of it or answer any questions tonight or first thing in the morning.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 8:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Rich wants to talk before u see dodd/berman

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 2:32 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Cultural diplomacy at NMAA!

FYI

---

From: Pally, Maura M.
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 2:16 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Toiv, Nora F
Subject: FW: Cultural diplomacy at NMAA!

Everyone is excited!

---

From: Cole, Johnnetta [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 1:58 PM
To: Pally, Maura M.; Henri, Anita
Subject: RE: Cultural diplomacy at NMAA!

Dear Deputy Assistant Secretary Pally,

My colleague, Anita Henri, and I enjoyed the rich conversation we had with you and Ms. Cheryl Mills as we explored ways that the Smithsonian National Museum of African Art can partner with the State Department in the area of cultural diplomacy.

We look forward to working with you. And of course it is with great anticipation that we await news on the idea of the Secretary delivering a cultural diplomacy speech at our museum.

Best regards,
Johnnetta Betsch Cole

---

From: Pally, Maura M. [mailto:PallyMM@state.gov]
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 11:47 AM
To: Cole, Johnnetta; Henri, Anita
Subject: Cultural diplomacy at NMAA!

It was wonderful to meet you both this morning. I am so pleased to know we have such a wonderful resource to draw upon. I am going to share Anita's contact info with some people here whom I hope can use you as resources so you should expect to hear from them.

I am also thrilled with the idea of the Secretary delivering a cultural diplomacy speech at the National Museum of African Art! I could not think of a better place for her to deliver that important message.

In the mean time please let me know if I can be of any further assistance.
Best,

Maura Pally
Deputy Assistant Secretary
Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 4:05 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: A clarification on Turkey/Brazil

B5

AM

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Philippe Reines <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 7:44 PM
To: H
Cc: CDM; Huma Abedin; Jake Sullivan
Subject: FT

Our clips service doesn't have the license necessary to provide FT (or Reuters) content, so here's the long awaited FT profile – you'll be especially interested in the guest column David Milliband wrote:

An FT interview with Hillary Clinton
By Daniel Dombey
FT
June 11 2010 22:21

This is what it is like to be Hillary Clinton. The motorcade, twisting and skidding through rain-splashed streets for more than an hour; the public meetings and camera lights at journey's end; the spotlight that has not let up for two decades. It is almost as if the 2008 US presidential election – hailed as the most exciting for a generation – had never ended.

But this is a campaign without a vote. Today, Clinton's convoy is snaking through São Paulo, Brazil, not South Hampton, New Hampshire. She herself is no longer an aspirant for the White House, despite what the overnight flights, town hall meetings and strategy sessions that make up her gruelling schedule might suggest. Instead, she is in Latin America to shore up relations with the region and promote a new idea of US leadership, one very much built around herself.

She's had bigger and more ecstatic audiences than the 700-odd students and staff crammed into the hall tonight at Zumbi dos Pradares, an Afro-Brazilian university, but she's still greeted by a wave of raised arms as the audience snaps away at her with their mobile phones.

In the convoy moments before, she was wrapped in a shawl, suffering from a cold and angry at the delays that pushed us into the side streets speckled with box-like bars, warehouses and love hotels while Brazilian motorists sought to cut into our path. There is no sign of that now. With the metabolism of a born politician, she feeds off the energy of her audience and takes questions from students, teachers and local celebrities for an hour. Hillary Clinton never looks happier than when she is centre stage.

Most US secretaries of state wouldn't bother with this sort of event, much less initiate it and arrange for it to be screened on the biggest local channel. Yet this is what Clinton does on almost every foreign trip – and she seems to spend half her life on her official 727, crammed with long-time aides and armed bodyguards. The schedule is backbreaking and constantly shifting. She has notched up more than a quarter of a million miles since taking office.

On this Latin America trip, thrown into confusion by an earthquake in Chile, we have already visited four countries in 24 hours. We go to tiny Uruguay, where our stay is so brief we check into a hotel just for a shower; Argentina, where we spend almost all our time at the presidential palace; Chile itself, where we don't leave the airport; and Brazil, where we spend almost a full day.

So what exactly is Clinton trying to do on this never-ending world tour? Travelling with her for a week, talking to people inside and outside the administration, I tried to find out.

. . .

"We now have a case to make and it is not just a case that is made to the president or the prime minister or the foreign minister or an ambassador," she tells me a few weeks later, as she perches on a sofa in her expansive office, with its view of the Lincoln Memorial. "People now have a voice and an opinion and a vote in many instances on the direction that their own societies take ... I want to model a different kind of leadership that is open and willing to listen but [also] to stand our ground if necessary."

She argues that these trips of hers help to restore the US's image in the wake of the Bush administration – by making contact with public opinion abroad, and so boosting American power. Her aides say that, as a battle-hardened politician who also happens to be one of the most famous women in the world, she is ideally placed to carry out the task. But the deeper question is whether she is merely implementing the foreign policy crafted by Barack Obama, her boss and former rival, or whether her role – and ambitions – go beyond that.

Is she a kind of saleswoman-in-chief for the US, I ask? "Well, I think that is part of the job," she replies, toying with the napkin underneath her glass of water. "If you are making a case for American values and for American leadership, you have to make it where people now get information ... Given the bridges we had to build and some of the repair work we had to do, we had to travel."

As in São Paulo, her system is under strain – "I've been fighting this all day," she says as she masks a cough set off by her allergies (Washington's cherry blossom trees are shedding their flowers). Life is still hectic – the volcanic ash cloud has just all but paralysed Europe and televisions throughout the State Department are showing the first British election debate. But Clinton remains enthusiastic, affable and unhurried, her speech peppered with exclamations such as "oh my gosh", even as she discusses issues of state. She politely asks if I have any updates for her about Europe's airspace shutdown and tells me she's been talking to Norway's foreign minister about it.

"He said that this dust gets into engines of any size, even Air Force One – it's chunky! I don't know how else to describe it," she says, an odd note of hilarity entering her voice as she pronounces the word "chunky".

Clinton often speaks in this eager, unvarnished way – a world away from the clipped, on-message manner of her immediate predecessor in the post, Condoleezza Rice. If anything, she is an undiplomat – known less for calibrated circumlocutions than for her plain speaking and sometimes her gaffes, a woman who retains both a formidable political constituency and a laugh she once admitted can send cats scurrying from a room.

Her staff point out she is only the third elected politician in 60 years to have served as secretary of state, and the first to come from outside the foreign policy establishment since James Baker, George H.W. Bush's right-hand man and perhaps her most illustrious recent predecessor. She may be the most substantive politician in the office since William Jennings Bryan, the three-time presidential candidate who served as secretary almost a century ago. "Her stature on the world stage, her almost presidential stature, has set her apart," Bill Burns, the top career diplomat at the State Department, tells me. "Leaders want to meet her. And the town hall meetings do make a difference with public opinion."

. . .

State visitor Hillary Clinton is greeted by Air Force Base Commander Colonel Celso de Araujo at São Paulo airport in March

Back in São Paulo, the meeting at the university ranges far from the confines and dramatis personae of traditional diplomacy. Annie, a young woman with red and blue dreadlocked hair, tells Clinton about her dance and percussion classes and asks how to study in the US without paying college fees. A nervous young man confesses himself lost halfway through an abstruse question about tariff policy; Clinton, smiling and nodding in that vaguely automatic way of hers, bears with him all the same. Another female student asks for an autograph. When answering, Clinton sometimes opens her eyes wide as she emphasises a phrase; at other moments, seemingly at random, she pulls her hands apart as if demonstrating the size of a fish.

Then a law student called Marina asks about abortion – which is illegal in Brazil – and Clinton moves into treacherous terrain. She speaks of the Brazilian hospital she visited in the 1990s that treated not just expectant mothers but women suffering from the consequences of backstreet abortions. "Wealthy women have rights in every country," she says. "And poor women don't." Her strength of feeling can't be hidden as she denounces "the great toll that illegal abortions take and the denial of women being able to exercise such a fundamental personal right".

Tom Shannon, the US ambassador to Brazil, tells me later: "I understand the possible concern that we might have come close to domestic issues. But she wasn't laying out a prescription for Brazil. She was sharing her experience as a woman in American politics and as secretary of state." It's true: Clinton doesn't quite cross the line. Onstage, she is controlled without seeming artificial, convivial without appearing over-effusive, what a previous age would call a real trouper. At the podium she looks straight ahead, her lips carefully expressionless. Still, the old competitive instincts haven't left her. Perhaps it is the lecterns at press conferences, reminiscent of the Democratic presidential debates, but on exiting the podium at a joint appearance with Argentina's president Cristina Fernández, Clinton makes clear her satisfaction at having had the last word. The expert debater who usually bested Obama has not left the stage.

Yet that competitive urge coexists with what one insider describes as her "almost inhuman loyalty" towards Obama. Her mastery of the facts – an "information carnivore" one of her officials calls her – comes despite the consensus in much of Washington that her role consists largely of implementing the foreign policy Obama and his inner circle have framed, rather than helping frame it herself.

In São Paulo, she shows her loyalty in striking fashion when she is asked repeatedly about positive discrimination – another sensitive topic in Brazil – not least because, Clinton herself observes, Afro-Brazilians account for more than half the country's population but only 2 per cent of university students. "That suggests to me that some special steps need to be taken [in] recruiting and admitting students so that they can have a chance to succeed," she tells the hall, again inching towards domestic politics, before speaking of her pride in the progress the US civil rights movement has made in the past half-century. She says: "The election of Barack Obama, many believe, was the greatest accomplishment of all because it demonstrated that an African-American could be elected president of the United States."

Among the crowd, I catch my breath and scribble down her words. It's hard to think of a more fulsome statement from the woman who fought so hard against Obama – and who squandered a huge poll lead and millions of dollars in the struggle against him.

. . .

The great collaborator Clinton has established strong working relationships within the Obama administration

When I ask Clinton later about how she managed to move from the antagonism of the primary race to the obedience of office, she dismisses my question with an anodyne "that's politics". She adds: "We're working really hard and well together ... It just never comes up any more, it seems like ancient history to me." Not so ancient, I think, that she is willing to admit the failings of her campaign. "I always run inclusive and successful organisations," she retorts when I ask her whether she'd applied any lessons from that searing experience to her new post.

She admits she didn't want the job at State – she says she was exhausted by the election and missed the Senate – "but at the end of the day, I'm pretty old-fashioned and if the president asks you to do something, you'd better have a really good reason why you can't." Also, she adds: "Suppose I had won and I were asking him to be in my cabinet ... I would have wanted him to say yes."

Others say the relationship is more complex, that by dint of her loyalty and unflagging hard work, Clinton has moved closer to the charmed circle and made herself an even more formidable political force than before. "Quite simply, she gives good advice and the president over a year and a half has recognised that," says Anne-Marie Slaughter, head of the State Department policy planning unit. "The relationship is based on her performance in the job."

By all accounts, it's a collaborative partnership, though not perhaps a warm one. Clinton boasts a good working relationship with the main players of the administration – and has formed something of an alliance with defence secretary Robert Gates, although on life-and-death issues such as Afghanistan, it is

Gates, not her, who has taken the lead. As one official told me, secretaries of state have often either been popular with their own department – Colin Powell comes to mind – or with the rest of the administration – as was Condoleezza Rice – but Clinton has managed to be both.

In truth, Clinton's language remains harder-edged than Obama's – she recently claimed that Iran's Revolutionary Guard had staged a slow-motion coup – and she has sometimes been more willing than he is to hint at using the military. "She seems to step up with a bit of spine just at the right time," says Kurt Volker, a US ambassador to Nato under George W. Bush.

She has also assumed an ever more prominent role in talking to leaders such as Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel and Hamid Karzai of Afghanistan – apparently because she is trusted both by them and Obama. Meanwhile, she has been careful to keep her husband, the former US president, in the background. Aides say they have barely seen him in the building – though Clinton herself says that behind the scenes Bill Clinton gives her strategic advice. "One of his favourite sayings, that I remind myself of all the time, is a kind of baseball saying," she says: "Don't major in the minors; keep your eye on not just the headlines but the trend lines."

It is her co-operative stance rather than any notable effort to set out a grand vision of her own that is the chief theme of her time so far at State. When I ask Clinton to name her proudest achievement in office, she replies "the effective and collaborative approach that this administration has taken towards identifying and solving problems." A more process-oriented, less provocative answer would be hard to imagine.

. . .

But maybe, I think, the US has less scope for grand strategy than it did in the past couple of decades, when the country seemed to bestride the world colossus-style. Clinton herself suggests that so formidable are the tasks confronting the US that the administration has little scope to enter into internecine fights but needs instead to focus on the challenges to hand. Whatever the reason for her stance, it seems to be a smart decision – by all accounts she's overcome many of the suspicions the White House retinue had towards her.

"It's fair to say that she was not born into the administration's inner circle but slowly but surely, for the most consequential decisions, she now has a prime seat at the table," says one official. Praising what he calls her "Terminator-quality durability and determination," he adds: "She's done an amazing amount of work, judging that the way to build a strategic vision is bottom up, by mastering the details."

Indeed, Clinton's ability to master the most arcane foreign policy briefs is the marvel of her building. She has dropped into obscure working groups and shown an unnerving knowledge of their details. At her confirmation hearings last year she exchanged facts about the arctic with an Alaskan senator; at the meeting in São Paulo she becomes enthused about freight transport policy both in Brazil and the US. She herself acknowledges that finding her feet on foreign policy was something of a struggle, despite her campaign claims of expertise in the field. "It was so intellectually challenging, just to get our arms around all of these issues," she says. During her first year, she was criticised for apparent gaffes – including the way she called for Israel to halt all building of settlements on occupied territory only to hail a partial freeze a few months later as unprecedented. On an election campaign, she says, "you may be in a different city four times a day but you have a message you're trying to deliver that is repetitive and aimed at your audience. But here you might deal with 10 different countries' problems, six different regional or global challenges in the course of a day."

As the Latin America tour shows, she is now trying to do both – travel incessantly and solve an array of international issues. She is at the forefront of the US's efforts to consolidate relations with a number of important countries – predominantly Russia and China, but also rising powers such as Brazil, Turkey, Indonesia and South Africa – and to cool down anti-American feeling in hotspots, notably Pakistan. She says the push is working, hailing a "change in public opinion in places that were pretty negative about the US" – a reference to Russia and Pakistan. But it is far from smooth sailing. Differences about Iran and over Israel's raid on aid-bearing ships off Gaza have stoked tensions with Turkey and Brazil recently, amid questioning of the effectiveness of the Obama administration's policies.

During my time with her on the road, the stop in Brazil is the focal point – not surprising given the country's increased profile as Latin America leader. Clinton is now heading the administration's push to secure sanctions on Iran, and in Brasilia she tries and fails to win President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva to her cause. She employs an almost combative tone at a press conference with Celso Amorim, Brazil's foreign minister. At moments she appears to barely contain her irritation, as she denounces "an Iran that runs to Brazil" as well as other countries such as Turkey and China "telling different things to different people to avoid international sanctions". Amorim is spiky in his own way – drawing parallels to the 1990s sanctions on Iraq and the claims about weapons of mass destruction before the 2003 war. "Of course, I don't agree with everything the Secretary said," he says.

It is not a happy experience - indeed this past week both Brazil and Turkey voted against sanctions at the United Nations - yet Hillary Clinton is nowhere near giving up. Years ago, one of Bill Clinton's biographers described his approach to government as a "permanent campaign", and it appears to be his wife's preferred form of existence as well. If there is one constant in Clinton's life, it is that she never throws in her cards, whether what motivates her is power or public service.

"Never, never!" she exclaims, when I ask whether she ever thought of walking off into the wings after the frustrations and indignities of her time at the White House. "I have a very realistic sense of what high-stakes politics requires and it took me a while to get there because it's shocking when you are in the arena ... but once you figure it out, you can take it seriously for purposes of analysis and understanding, but you can't take it personally." Such treatment seems to rankle all the same. She's been listening to coverage ahead of the British debate and is plainly irritated by the coverage of the leaders' wives. "Whether a woman's running for office or she's supporting her husband who's running for office and she gets criticised for wearing open-toed shoes or for the colour of her coat, there's just a lot of history that you bear if you are a woman who puts herself out in the political arena," she says.

. . .

Another country Clinton boards her official 727 to fly from São Paulo to Costa Rica
Injustice towards women appears to be the issue that most enthuses Clinton in this job – as in her many other incarnations in American public life, whether as First Lady or before. "I feel passionately it is in not just the American national security interests but the world's, that women be given the opportunities and the tools to make the most out of their own lives," she says.

In the 1990s she steered clear of reading the newspapers because of the way she was treated. Today, she says, "I certainly don't read coverage of me, I read what else is going on that I need to know about to do my job." "It's all baloney," says Philippe Reines, her press adviser, who set up the meeting with her and is sitting to one side in her office.

"Yeah, yeah, right, that's what he tells me," Clinton responds.

I wonder. She may not read the stories about her, but she has boosted her domestic profile still further by talking to American magazines such as Esquire, Vogue and Parade. To what end? Clinton has said she will only serve one four-year term as secretary of state – understandable, given the grind of the job. When I ask whether she expects a woman president in the next decade or so, she responds: "I'd love that, obviously I would love that. I want to be front and centre when it happens."

"Any chance it would be you?" I ask.

"No, no, I don't think that's in the cards," Clinton says. She's given more categoric denials in the past. "I think that there's a whole generation of young women and not so young, but mature, seasoned women who are earning their stripes and recognising how tough it is out there. It is not for the faint of heart to run for president, and I believe it is harder for women, it just is, and that's just a fact." But, says one US official, "all the profiles and all this media treatment undercut the argument that she is finished with electoral politics. Why do all this stuff? She's already Hillary Clinton. You have to ask: 'What's the idea behind raising her domestic profile still further?'"

Indeed she is now, by some counts, the most popular politician in America and some in Washington say she could be a good fit for the vice-presidential slot in the 2012 elections.

Back in São Paulo, once the town hall meeting is over, Clinton faces a seven-hour flight to Costa Rica. The journey goes on and on, and as saleswoman-in-chief for the US in an unruly world, she faces a long, hard road. Today the US sometimes struggles to assert itself on the world stage. But the obstacles are rather fewer if the product she is pitching is herself. A secretary of state like none before her, Hillary Clinton, long one of the most formidable figures in US politics, is looking stronger than ever.

Daniel Dombey is the FT's US diplomatic correspondent

.....

David Miliband: "Hillary is a rock star ... she has a great sense of fun, and a great sense of humour"

It's too early to start chalking up a scorecard because Hillary Clinton, and the Obama administration, is laying the foundations for long-term change in America's foreign policy. The challenges are immense – probably more difficult than the inheritance of any previous administration. But American leadership is essential and a commitment to multilateralism – in fact multi, multilateralism using different and overlapping forums – is real and right.

You also have to remember that Hillary is a rock star. When I arrived at the Nato Foreign Ministers meeting in March 2009, it was a nice surprise that all the staff, never mind the press, seemed to have turned out in droves for my arrival. Then I realised that Hillary was 10 minutes behind me.

That said, the thing that most surprised me about working with Clinton was not her intelligence or her hard work, all of which are well known, but that behind the serious exterior is someone who has a great sense of fun, and a great sense of humour. She has seen politics from all sides, and can laugh at herself as well as at others.

She's a remarkably good listener, always synthesising ideas and opinions to develop her own. She thinks strategically as well as tactically. She's also very, very unpompous. Hillary is a very political person but in a particular way, she honours politics and public service and believes that democratic politics is not a necessary evil, but a calling of value and vocation. She knows you win some and you lose some, but it's essential to take part.

There's one other thing. Hillary is a people person in that she thinks deeply about the psychology of the people she's dealing with. Their motivation, their loyalties, their culture. It's real emotional intelligence in trying to understand why people disagree and how you can get them to agree. I think that must be why so many other members of the administration say she is a very good colleague.

David Miliband is shadow foreign secretary

.....

Gideon Rachman: "Relations between the White House and the State Department are not particularly close"

A school teacher asked to write a report on Hillary Clinton's stint as secretary of state would have to give her 10/10 for effort but a rather more modest mark for actual achievements – maybe a six or a seven.

Secretaries of state are generally judged on two criteria. First, how have they done in the endless bureaucratic turf wars that characterise Washington politics? Second, how effective have they been in promoting US foreign policy in the wider world? Success in one area usually helps in the other. Henry Kissinger was a superb Washington infighter – and his close relationship with President Nixon made him all the more effective overseas. Colin Powell, George W. Bush's first secretary of state, was widely admired outside the US – but came out on the wrong side of many of the Washington battles, which limited his ability to get things done in the wider world.

Hillary Clinton has skilfully avoided being sucked into the debilitating Washington struggles that so damaged Powell. Despite the often poisonous rivalry between the Obama and Clinton camps during the campaign, Clinton has a good working relationship with the president. But while relations between the White House and the State Department are cordial, they do not seem to be particularly close. Clinton appointed many loyalists from her own campaign to the State Department, with the result that State is rather detached from Obama's inner circle. Obama's penchant for making high-profile speeches in foreign capitals such as Cairo, Prague, Tokyo and Istanbul means that the president himself has done more than anyone else to define his administration's approach to the world.

That still leaves a role for Clinton to fill in the crucial details of policy. But special representatives have been appointed to deal with Afghanistan and the Middle East – and the Treasury is critical to China policy. Asked about Clinton's impact as secretary of state, one senior European policymaker purses his lips and says: "She's done some great trips, and she's highly professional. But it's hard to see any particular area where she has really driven policy."

Gideon Rachman is the FT's chief foreign affairs columnist

.....

David Rothkopf: "When she has been asked to deliver tough messages, she has done so unflinchingly"

Hillary Clinton has been a cautious secretary of state: she has protected the president well and pursued his agenda without upstaging him – an early concern, given her stature. She has worked very well with other members of the cabinet, and is reconsidering the role and structure of the State Department.

That includes a review of the role of diplomacy going forward. Clinton has not only acknowledged the rise of new powers and a changing global power structure but has taken steps to reshape US foreign policy structure accordingly. An important part of that has been recognising the importance of co-operating with private and non-state actors such as NGOs, as well as dealing with non-state threats.

When the administration has called upon her to deliver tough messages, she has done so unflinchingly. This has allowed the president to articulate a strategic vision which Clinton then goes about implementing. Still, neither the secretary of state nor the president determines the global situation. The US may be the most powerful country in the world but it is one among many powerful countries, and many aspects of the situation we face today are beyond our control. The Obama administration has been dealt an extremely difficult hand: not only Iraq and Afghanistan, but Iran and North Korea's nuclear programmes, the rise of emerging powers and a complex and still unfolding series of financial crises.

We have gone from a world in which the US thought it had limitless resources and unbounded options to one where the limits are clear; from a world in which you could work in the G8 to one where you have to work in the context of the G20; a world where new technologies and new powers play a bigger role. All of those things would dictate a change in foreign policy regardless of who is in office.

Hillary Clinton has established a very solid foundation. The next step is to identify a couple of signature issues – and have a couple of signature successes. That will take her to the next level.

David Rothkopf is a visiting scholar at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace with expertise in national security

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Friday, June 11, 2010 9:24 PM
To: Philippe Reines; H
Cc: CDM; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: FT

I dont know what others think, but I quite enjoyed this. Go Dan.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

---

From: Philippe Reines <
Date: Fri, 11 Jun 2010 19:44:24 -0400
To: Evergreen<Hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: CDM<cheryl.mills ; Huma Abedin<Huma@clintonemail.com>; Jake Sullivan<jake.sullivan
Subject: FT

Our clips service doesn't have the license necessary to provide FT (or Reuters) content, so here's the long awaited FT profile – you'll be especially interested in the guest column David Milliband wrote:

An FT interview with Hillary Clinton
By Daniel Dombey
FT
June 11 2010 22:21

This is what it is like to be Hillary Clinton. The motorcade, twisting and skidding through rain-splashed streets for more than an hour; the public meetings and camera lights at journey's end; the spotlight that has not let up for two decades. It is almost as if the 2008 US presidential election – hailed as the most exciting for a generation – had never ended.

But this is a campaign without a vote. Today, Clinton's convoy is snaking through São Paulo, Brazil, not South Hampton, New Hampshire. She herself is no longer an aspirant for the White House, despite what the overnight flights, town hall meetings and strategy sessions that make up her gruelling schedule might suggest. Instead, she is in Latin America to shore up relations with the region and promote a new idea of US leadership, one very much built around herself.

She's had bigger and more ecstatic audiences than the 700-odd students and staff crammed into the hall tonight at Zumbi dos Pradares, an Afro-Brazilian university, but she's still greeted by a wave of raised arms as the audience snaps away at her with their mobile phones.

In the convoy moments before, she was wrapped in a shawl, suffering from a cold and angry at the delays that pushed us into the side streets speckled with box-like bars, warehouses and love hotels while Brazilian motorists sought to cut into our path. There is no sign of that now. With the metabolism of a born politician, she feeds off the energy of her audience and takes questions from students, teachers and local celebrities for an hour. Hillary Clinton never looks happier than when she is centre stage.

Most US secretaries of state wouldn't bother with this sort of event, much less initiate it and arrange for it to be screened on the biggest local channel. Yet this is what Clinton does on almost every foreign trip – and she seems to spend half her life on her official 727, crammed with long-time aides and armed bodyguards. The schedule is backbreaking and constantly shifting. She has notched up more than a quarter of a million miles since taking office.

On this Latin America trip, thrown into confusion by an earthquake in Chile, we have already visited four countries in 24 hours. We go to tiny Uruguay, where our stay is so brief we check into a hotel just for a shower; Argentina, where we spend almost all our time at the presidential palace; Chile itself, where we don't leave the airport; and Brazil, where we spend almost a full day.

So what exactly is Clinton trying to do on this never-ending world tour? Travelling with her for a week, talking to people inside and outside the administration, I tried to find out.

. . .

"We now have a case to make and it is not just a case that is made to the president or the prime minister or the foreign minister or an ambassador," she tells me a few weeks later, as she perches on a sofa in her expansive office, with its view of the Lincoln Memorial. "People now have a voice and an opinion and a vote in many instances on the direction that their own societies take ... I want to model a different kind of leadership that is open and willing to listen but [also] to stand our ground if necessary."

She argues that these trips of hers help to restore the US's image in the wake of the Bush administration – by making contact with public opinion abroad, and so boosting American power. Her aides say that, as a battle-hardened politician who also happens to be one of the most famous women in the world, she is ideally placed to carry out the task. But the deeper question is whether she is merely implementing the foreign policy crafted by Barack Obama, her boss and former rival, or whether her role – and ambitions – go beyond that.

Is she a kind of saleswoman-in-chief for the US, I ask? "Well, I think that is part of the job," she replies, toying with the napkin underneath her glass of water. "If you are making a case for American values and for American leadership, you have to make it where people now get information ... Given the bridges we had to build and some of the repair work we had to do, we had to travel."

As in São Paulo, her system is under strain – "I've been fighting this all day," she says as she masks a cough set off by her allergies (Washington's cherry blossom trees are shedding their flowers). Life is still hectic – the volcanic ash cloud has just all but paralysed Europe and televisions throughout the State Department are showing the first British election debate. But Clinton remains enthusiastic, affable and unhurried, her speech peppered with exclamations such as "oh my gosh", even as she discusses issues of state. She politely asks if I have any updates for her about Europe's airspace shutdown and tells me she's been talking to Norway's foreign minister about it.

"He said that this dust gets into engines of any size, even Air Force One – it's chunky! I don't know how else to describe it," she says, an odd note of hilarity entering her voice as she pronounces the word "chunky".

Clinton often speaks in this eager, unvarnished way – a world away from the clipped, on-message manner of her immediate predecessor in the post, Condoleezza Rice. If anything, she is an undiplomat – known less for calibrated circumlocutions than for her plain speaking and sometimes her gaffes, a woman who retains both a formidable political constituency and a laugh she once admitted can send cats scurrying from a room.

Her staff point out she is only the third elected politician in 60 years to have served as secretary of state, and the first to come from outside the foreign policy establishment since James Baker, George H.W. Bush's right-hand man and perhaps her most illustrious recent predecessor. She may be the most substantive politician in the office since William Jennings Bryan, the three-time presidential candidate who served as secretary almost a century ago. "Her stature on the world stage, her almost presidential stature, has set her apart," Bill Burns, the top career diplomat at the State Department, tells me. "Leaders want to meet her. And the town hall meetings do make a difference with public opinion."

. . .

State visitor Hillary Clinton is greeted by Air Force Base Commander Colonel Celso de Araujo at São Paulo airport in March

Back in São Paulo, the meeting at the university ranges far from the confines and dramatis personae of traditional diplomacy. Annie, a young woman with red and blue dreadlocked hair, tells Clinton about her dance and percussion classes and asks how to study in the US without paying college fees. A nervous young man confesses himself lost halfway through an abstruse question about tariff policy; Clinton, smiling and nodding in that vaguely automatic way of hers, bears with him all the same. Another female student asks for an autograph. When answering, Clinton sometimes opens her eyes wide as she emphasises a phrase; at other moments, seemingly at random, she pulls her hands apart as if demonstrating the size of a fish.

Then a law student called Marina asks about abortion – which is illegal in Brazil – and Clinton moves into treacherous terrain. She speaks of the Brazilian hospital she visited in the 1990s that treated not just expectant mothers but women suffering from the consequences of backstreet abortions. "Wealthy women have rights in every country," she says. "And poor women don't." Her strength of feeling can't be hidden as she denounces "the great toll that illegal abortions take and the denial of women being able to exercise such a fundamental personal right".

Tom Shannon, the US ambassador to Brazil, tells me later: "I understand the possible concern that we might have come close to domestic issues. But she wasn't laying out a prescription for Brazil. She was sharing her experience as a woman in American politics and as secretary of state." It's true: Clinton doesn't quite cross the line. Onstage, she is controlled without seeming artificial, convivial without appearing over-effusive, what a previous age would call a real trouper. At the podium she looks straight ahead, her lips carefully expressionless. Still, the old competitive instincts haven't left her. Perhaps it is the lecterns at press conferences, reminiscent of the Democratic presidential debates, but on exiting the podium at a joint appearance with Argentina's president Cristina Fernández, Clinton makes clear her satisfaction at having had the last word. The expert debater who usually bested Obama has not left the stage.

Yet that competitive urge coexists with what one insider describes as her "almost inhuman loyalty" towards Obama. Her mastery of the facts – an "information carnivore" one of her officials calls her – comes despite the consensus in much of Washington that her role consists largely of implementing the foreign policy Obama and his inner circle have framed, rather than helping frame it herself.

In São Paulo, she shows her loyalty in striking fashion when she is asked repeatedly about positive discrimination – another sensitive topic in Brazil – not least because, Clinton herself observes, Afro-Brazilians account for more than half the country's population but only 2 per cent of university students. "That suggests to me that some special steps need to be taken [in] recruiting and admitting students so that they can have a chance to succeed," she tells the hall, again inching towards domestic politics, before speaking of her pride in the progress the US civil rights movement has made in the past half-century. She says: "The election of Barack Obama, many believe, was the greatest accomplishment of all because it demonstrated that an African-American could be elected president of the United States."

Among the crowd, I catch my breath and scribble down her words. It's hard to think of a more fulsome statement from the woman who fought so hard against Obama – and who squandered a huge poll lead and millions of dollars in the struggle against him.

. . .

The great collaborator Clinton has established strong working relationships within the Obama administration

When I ask Clinton later about how she managed to move from the antagonism of the primary race to the obedience of office, she dismisses my question with an anodyne "that's politics". She adds: "We're working really hard and well together ... It just never comes up any more, it seems like ancient history to me." Not so ancient, I think, that she is willing to admit the failings of her campaign. "I always run inclusive and successful organisations," she retorts when I ask her whether she'd applied any lessons from that searing experience to her new post.

She admits she didn't want the job at State – she says she was exhausted by the election and missed the Senate – "but at the end of the day, I'm pretty old-fashioned and if the president asks you to do something, you'd better have a really good reason why you can't." Also, she adds: "Suppose I had won and I were asking him to be in my cabinet ... I would have wanted him to say yes."

Others say the relationship is more complex, that by dint of her loyalty and unflagging hard work, Clinton has moved closer to the charmed circle and made herself an even more formidable political force than before. "Quite simply, she gives good advice and the president over a year and a half has recognised that," says Anne-Marie Slaughter, head of the State Department policy planning unit. "The relationship is based on her performance in the job."

By all accounts, it's a collaborative partnership, though not perhaps a warm one. Clinton boasts a good working relationship with the main players of the administration – and has formed something of an alliance with defence secretary Robert Gates, although on life-and-death issues such as Afghanistan, it is Gates, not her, who has taken the lead. As one official told me, secretaries of state have often either been popular with their own department – Colin Powell comes to mind – or with the rest of the administration – as was Condoleezza Rice – but Clinton has managed to be both.

In truth, Clinton's language remains harder-edged than Obama's – she recently claimed that Iran's Revolutionary Guard had staged a slow-motion coup – and she has sometimes been more willing than he is to hint at using the military. "She seems to step up with a bit of spine just at the right time," says Kurt Volker, a US ambassador to Nato under George W. Bush.

She has also assumed an ever more prominent role in talking to leaders such as Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel and Hamid Karzai of Afghanistan – apparently because she is trusted both by them and Obama. Meanwhile, she has been careful to keep her husband, the former US president, in the background. Aides say they have barely seen him in the building – though Clinton herself says that behind the scenes Bill Clinton gives her strategic advice. "One of his favourite sayings, that I remind myself of all the time, is a kind of baseball saying," she says: "Don't major in the minors; keep your eye on not just the headlines but the trend lines."

It is her co-operative stance rather than any notable effort to set out a grand vision of her own that is the chief theme of her time so far at State. When I ask Clinton to name her proudest achievement in office, she replies "the effective and collaborative approach that this administration has taken towards identifying and solving problems." A more process-oriented, less provocative answer would be hard to imagine.

. . .

But maybe, I think, the US has less scope for grand strategy than it did in the past couple of decades, when the country seemed to bestride the world colossus-style. Clinton herself suggests that so formidable are the tasks confronting the US that the administration has little scope to enter into internecine fights but needs instead to focus on the challenges to hand. Whatever the reason for her stance, it seems to be a smart decision – by all accounts she's overcome many of the suspicions the White House retinue had towards her.

"It's fair to say that she was not born into the administration's inner circle but slowly but surely, for the most consequential decisions, she now has a prime seat at the table," says one official. Praising what he calls her "Terminator-quality durability and determination," he adds: "She's done an amazing amount of work, judging that the way to build a strategic vision is bottom up, by mastering the details."

Indeed, Clinton's ability to master the most arcane foreign policy briefs is the marvel of her building. She has dropped into obscure working groups and shown an unnerving knowledge of their details. At her confirmation hearings last year she exchanged facts about the arctic with an Alaskan senator; at the meeting in São Paulo she becomes enthused about freight transport policy both in Brazil and the US. She herself acknowledges that finding her feet on foreign policy was something of a struggle, despite her campaign claims of expertise in the field. "It was so intellectually challenging, just to get our arms around all of these issues," she says. During her first year, she was criticised for apparent gaffes – including the way she called for Israel to halt all building of settlements on occupied territory only to hail a partial freeze a few months later as unprecedented. On an election campaign, she says, "you may be in a different city four times a day but you have a message you're trying to deliver that is repetitive and aimed at your audience. But here you might deal with 10 different countries' problems, six different regional or global challenges in the course of a day."

As the Latin America tour shows, she is now trying to do both – travel incessantly and solve an array of international issues. She is at the forefront of the US's efforts to consolidate relations with a number of important countries – predominantly Russia and China, but also rising powers such as Brazil, Turkey, Indonesia and South Africa – and to cool down anti-American feeling in hotspots, notably Pakistan. She says the push is working, hailing a "change in public opinion in places that were pretty negative about the US" – a reference to Russia and Pakistan. But it is far from smooth sailing. Differences about Iran and over Israel's raid on aid-bearing ships off Gaza have stoked tensions with Turkey and Brazil recently, amid questioning of the effectiveness of the Obama administration's policies.

During my time with her on the road, the stop in Brazil is the focal point – not surprising given the country's increased profile as Latin America leader. Clinton is now heading the administration's push to secure sanctions on Iran, and in Brasilia she tries and fails to win President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva to her cause. She employs an almost combative tone at a press conference with Celso Amorim, Brazil's foreign minister. At moments she appears to barely contain her irritation, as she denounces "an Iran that runs to Brazil" as well as other countries such as Turkey and China "telling different things to different people to avoid international sanctions". Amorim is spiky in his own way – drawing parallels to the 1990s sanctions on Iraq and the claims about weapons of mass destruction before the 2003 war. "Of course, I don't agree with everything the Secretary said," he says.

It is not a happy experience - indeed this past week both Brazil and Turkey voted against sanctions at the United Nations - yet Hillary Clinton is nowhere near giving up. Years ago, one of Bill Clinton's biographers described his approach to government as a "permanent campaign", and it appears to be his wife's preferred form of existence as well. If there is one constant in Clinton's life, it is that she never throws in her cards, whether what motivates her is power or public service.

"Never, never!" she exclaims, when I ask whether she ever thought of walking off into the wings after the frustrations and indignities of her time at the White House. "I have a very realistic sense of what high-stakes politics requires and it took me a while to get there because it's shocking when you are in the arena ... but once you figure it out, you can take it seriously for purposes of analysis and understanding, but you can't take it personally." Such treatment seems to rankle all the same. She's been listening to coverage ahead of the British debate and is plainly irritated by the coverage of the leaders' wives. "Whether a woman's running for office or she's supporting her husband who's running for office and she gets criticised for wearing open-toed shoes or for the colour of her coat, there's just a lot of history that you bear if you are a woman who puts herself out in the political arena," she says.

. . .

Another country Clinton boards her official 727 to fly from São Paulo to Costa Rica
Injustice towards women appears to be the issue that most enthuses Clinton in this job – as in her many other incarnations in American public life, whether as First Lady or before. "I feel passionately it is in not just the American national security interests but the world's, that women be given the opportunities and the tools to make the most out of their own lives," she says.

In the 1990s she steered clear of reading the newspapers because of the way she was treated. Today, she says, "I certainly don't read coverage of me, I read what else is going on that I need to know about to do my job." "It's all baloney," says Philippe Reines, her press adviser, who set up the meeting with her and is sitting to one side in her office.

"Yeah, yeah, right, that's what he tells me," Clinton responds.

I wonder. She may not read the stories about her, but she has boosted her domestic profile still further by talking to American magazines such as Esquire, Vogue and Parade. To what end? Clinton has said she will only serve one four-year term as secretary of state – understandable, given the grind of the job. When I ask whether she expects a woman president in the next decade or so, she responds: "I'd love that, obviously I would love that. I want to be front and centre when it happens."

"Any chance it would be you?" I ask.

"No, no, I don't think that's in the cards," Clinton says. She's given more categoric denials in the past. "I think that there's a whole generation of young women and not so young, but mature, seasoned women who are earning their stripes and recognising how tough it is out there. It is not for the faint of heart to run for president, and I believe it is harder for women, it just is, and that's just a fact." But, says one US official, "all the profiles and all this media treatment undercut the argument that she is finished with electoral politics. Why do all this stuff? She's already Hillary Clinton. You have to ask: 'What's the idea behind raising her domestic profile still further?'"

Indeed she is now, by some counts, the most popular politician in America and some in Washington say she could be a good fit for the vice-presidential slot in the 2012 elections.

Back in São Paulo, once the town hall meeting is over, Clinton faces a seven-hour flight to Costa Rica. The journey goes on and on, and as saleswoman-in-chief for the US in an unruly world, she faces a long, hard road. Today the US sometimes struggles to assert itself on the world stage. But the obstacles are rather fewer if the product she is pitching is herself. A secretary of state like none before her, Hillary Clinton, long one of the most formidable figures in US politics, is looking stronger than ever.

Daniel Dombey is the FT's US diplomatic correspondent

.....

David Miliband: "Hillary is a rock star ... she has a great sense of fun, and a great sense of humour"

It's too early to start chalking up a scorecard because Hillary Clinton, and the Obama administration, is laying the foundations for long-term change in America's foreign policy. The challenges are immense – probably more difficult than the inheritance of any previous administration. But American leadership is essential and a commitment to multilateralism – in fact multi, multilateralism using different and overlapping forums – is real and right.

You also have to remember that Hillary is a rock star. When I arrived at the Nato Foreign Ministers meeting in March 2009, it was a nice surprise that all the staff, never mind the press, seemed to have turned out in droves for my arrival. Then I realised that Hillary was 10 minutes behind me.

That said, the thing that most surprised me about working with Clinton was not her intelligence or her hard work, all of which are well known, but that behind the serious exterior is someone who has a great sense of fun, and a great sense of humour. She has seen politics from all sides, and can laugh at herself as well as at others.

She's a remarkably good listener, always synthesising ideas and opinions to develop her own. She thinks strategically as well as tactically. She's also very, very unpompous. Hillary is a very political person but in a particular way, she honours politics and public service and believes that democratic politics is not a necessary evil, but a calling of value and vocation. She knows you win some and you lose some, but it's essential to take part.

There's one other thing. Hillary is a people person in that she thinks deeply about the psychology of the people she's dealing with. Their motivation, their loyalties, their culture. It's real emotional intelligence in trying to understand why people disagree and how you can get them to agree. I think that must be why so many other members of the administration say she is a very good colleague.

David Miliband is shadow foreign secretary

.....

Gideon Rachman: "Relations between the White House and the State Department are not particularly close"

A school teacher asked to write a report on Hillary Clinton's stint as secretary of state would have to give her 10/10 for effort but a rather more modest mark for actual achievements – maybe a six or a seven.

Secretaries of state are generally judged on two criteria. First, how have they done in the endless bureaucratic turf wars that characterise Washington politics? Second, how effective have they been in promoting US foreign policy in the wider world? Success in one area usually helps in the other. Henry Kissinger was a superb Washington infighter – and his close relationship with President Nixon made him all the more effective overseas. Colin Powell, George W. Bush's first secretary of state, was widely admired outside the US – but came out on the wrong side of many of the Washington battles, which limited his ability to get things done in the wider world.

Hillary Clinton has skilfully avoided being sucked into the debilitating Washington struggles that so damaged Powell. Despite the often poisonous rivalry between the Obama and Clinton camps during the campaign, Clinton has a good working relationship with the president. But while relations between the White House and the State Department are cordial, they do not seem to be particularly close. Clinton appointed many loyalists from her own campaign to the State Department, with the result that State is rather detached from Obama's inner circle. Obama's penchant for making high-profile speeches in foreign capitals such as Cairo, Prague, Tokyo and Istanbul means that the president himself has done more than anyone else to define his administration's approach to the world.

That still leaves a role for Clinton to fill in the crucial details of policy. But special representatives have been appointed to deal with Afghanistan and the Middle East – and the Treasury is critical to China policy. Asked about Clinton's impact as secretary of state, one senior European policymaker purses his lips and says: "She's done some great trips, and she's highly professional. But it's hard to see any particular area where she has really driven policy."

Gideon Rachman is the FT's chief foreign affairs columnist

.....

David Rothkopf: "When she has been asked to deliver tough messages, she has done so unflinchingly"

Hillary Clinton has been a cautious secretary of state: she has protected the president well and pursued his agenda without upstaging him – an early concern, given her stature. She has worked very well with other members of the cabinet, and is reconsidering the role and structure of the State Department.

That includes a review of the role of diplomacy going forward. Clinton has not only acknowledged the rise of new powers and a changing global power structure but has taken steps to reshape US foreign policy structure accordingly. An important part of that has been recognising the importance of co-operating with private and non-state actors such as NGOs, as well as dealing with non-state threats.

When the administration has called upon her to deliver tough messages, she has done so unflinchingly. This has allowed the president to articulate a strategic vision which Clinton then goes about implementing. Still, neither the secretary of state nor the president determines the global situation. The US may be the most powerful country in the world but it is one among many powerful countries, and many aspects of the situation we face today are beyond our control. The Obama administration has been dealt an extremely difficult hand: not only Iraq and Afghanistan, but Iran and North Korea's nuclear programmes, the rise of emerging powers and a complex and still unfolding series of financial crises.

We have gone from a world in which the US thought it had limitless resources and unbounded options to one where the limits are clear; from a world in which you could work in the G8 to one where you have to work in the context of the G20; a world where new technologies and new powers play a bigger role. All of those things would dictate a change in foreign policy regardless of who is in office.

Hillary Clinton has established a very solid foundation. The next step is to identify a couple of signature issues – and have a couple of signature successes. That will take her to the next level.

David Rothkopf is a visiting scholar at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace with expertise in national security

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 9:44 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Kyrgyzstan asks Russia to help quell ethnic clashes

From: Pearce, Jennifer
To: NEWS-SCA; NEWS-EUR; NEWS-Mahogany; S_SpecialAssistants
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Jun 12 07:53:56 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Kyrgyzstan asks Russia to help quell ethnic clashes

OSH - Kyrgyzstan appealed for Russian help to stop ethnic fighting that has killed at least 62 and left parts of its second-largest city in flames, the worst violence since the president was toppled in April. The interim government in Kyrgyzstan, which hosts U.S. and Russian military bases, said it was powerless to stop armed gangs from burning down the homes and businesses of ethnic Uzbeks in parts of Osh. Gun battles raged throughout the night.

"We need the entry of outside armed forces to calm the situation down," interim government leader Roza Otunbayeva told reporters. "We have appealed to Russia for help and I have already signed such a letter for President Dmitry Medvedev."

Russian PM Putin and Otunbayeva discussed the situation in a telephone call on June 12, the Russian government's press service said, without giving details.
A Reuters correspondent in Osh said gun battles had taken place through the night in an Uzbek neighbourhood. Gas was shut off to Osh and some neighborhoods have no electricity. "Entire streets are on fire," Interior Ministry spokesman Rakhmatillo Akhmedov said. "The situation is very bad. There is no sign of it stopping. Homes have been set ablaze."

Otunbayeva said Osh was also facing a humanitarian crisis as food was running out. She said her government had decided to open the border to Uzbekistan to allow fleeing Uzbeks to escape, although it was not clear who controlled the frontier. One witness said some women and children had made it across to the Uzbek town of Marhamat, 638 miles from Osh, and camps had been set up for those without family in Uzbekistan. A spokeswoman for the Kyrgyz Health Ministry said at least 62 people had been killed and 790 wounded in the violence, which is taking place in the southerly power base of former president Kurmanbek Bakiyev, deposed in April by a popular revolt.

"Everywhere is burning: Uzbek homes, restaurants and cafes. The whole town is covered in smoke," local human rights worker Dilmurad Ishanov, an ethnic Uzbek, said by telephone from Osh. "We don't need the Kyrgyz authorities. We need Russia. We need troops. We need help."

wf

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 11:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Pls Clear: Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

Are you okay w the below?

Go U.S.!

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I; Fuchs, Michael H; Adler, Caroline E
Sent: Sat Jun 12 11:24:33 2010
Subject: Pls Clear: Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

D and P have cleared on this:

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

B5

###

Drafted:NEA/IR: Cash McCracken ext 7-2569

Cleared:NEA/IRJBurns/SHorner ok
NEA/FOJLimbert ok
DRLJHutchings ok
D(S)GRana ok
PECatalano ok
S/PELacey ok
NSCK Magsamen info

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Koh, Harold Hongju <KohHH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 11:32 AM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Icc review conference

Madame Secretary:
On flight home from Kampala, which was exhausting [redacted] I am sending Info memo Monday, but whatever you hear, the big picture is this: B5

To become operational, any crimes of aggression
1 must still be affirmatively revoted by two thirds votes of states parties
2 no earlier than 2017
3 there will be another review conf probably before this goes into effect 4of the two ways of referring crime one goes through an exclusive sc trigger;
5 the other branch has
A a prior sc filter and
B an ex post sc red light plus
C requires full vote of 9 judges of pretrial division and D nonconsenting aggressor states can opt out and E prosecutor must have reasonable basis for investigation under definition which F has now been significantly narrowed [redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

I can elaborate Monday
Best
Harold

Harold Hongju Koh
The Legal Adviser
U.S. Department of State
Suite 6421
2201 C St. NW
Washington, DC 20520-6421
202 647 9598 office

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 11:45 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Pls Clear: Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jun 12 11:41:06 2010
Subject: Re: Pls Clear: Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jun 12 11:27:02 2010
Subject: Fw: Pls Clear: Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

Are you okay w the below?

Go U.S.!

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I; Fuchs, Michael H; Adler, Caroline E
Sent: Sat Jun 12 11:24:33 2010
Subject: Pls Clear: Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

D and P have cleared on this:

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Anniversary of Iran's Disputed Presidential Election

[redacted] B5

B5

###

Drafted:NEA/IR: Cash McCracken ext 7-2569

Cleared:NEA/IRJBurns/SHorner ok
NEA/FOJLimbert ok
DRLJHutchings ok
D(S)GRana ok
PECatalano ok
S/PELacey ok
NSCK Magsamen info

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 1:15 PM
To: H
Subject: Flotilla investigation

Word is that we're going to announce our response to the Israeli flotilla investigation today. Did Jones or Ross speak with you about it?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 6:55 PM
To: H
Subject: Calls tomorrow

We have scheduled calls tomorrow with:
- Swedish Foreign Minister Bildt at 9:00 am
- Norwegian Foreign Minister Stoere at 10:45 am You have call sheets for both.
Ok?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 9:50 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Fw: S-Saudabayev call

Fyi. I think this call makes sense.

----- Original Message -----
From: Wells, Alice G
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Krol, George A
Cc: Holmes, David A
Sent: Sat Jun 12 20:30:36 2010
Subject: S-Saudabayev call

Jake- [redacted] B5

[redacted]

[redacted] Thx

Alice G. Wells

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 9:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Calls tomorrow

We will connect calls to whitehaven. Unless u want to cancel?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 19:29:58 2010
Subject: Re: Calls tomorrow

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jun 12 18:54:41 2010
Subject: Calls tomorrow

We have scheduled calls tomorrow with:
- Swedish Foreign Minister Bildt at 9:00 am
- Norwegian Foreign Minister Stoere at 10:45 am You have call sheets for both.
Ok?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 9:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Calls tomorrow

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 21:52:42 2010
Subject: Re: Calls tomorrow

I may have to do on blackberry [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jun 12 21:50:30 2010
Subject: Re: Calls tomorrow

We will connect calls to whitehaven. Unless u want to cancel?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 19:29:58 2010
Subject: Re: Calls tomorrow

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jun 12 18:54:41 2010
Subject: Calls tomorrow

We have scheduled calls tomorrow with:
- Swedish Foreign Minister Bildt at 9:00 am
- Norwegian Foreign Minister Stoere at 10:45 am You have call sheets for both.
Ok?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 10:35 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Sean Wilentz

He was with me last weekend. He's left for a week in Greece yesterday on erratic email. What's up?

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop
Sent: Sat, Jun 12, 2010 10:31 pm
Subject: Sean Wilentz

B6

Is he at your house this weekend?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 9:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: McChrystal in Rolling Stone
Attachments: R1109McChrystal.pdf

Attached is the doc, in pdf. I will have it faxed to your house.

It's for the NEXT issue of Rolling Stone, but AP has a copy. We'll need [redacted] B5

Some choice quotes below.

---

From: Singh, Vikram J
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Jun 21 21:34:17 2010
Subject: FW: McChrystal in Rolling Stone

"Part of the problem is structural: The Defense Department budget exceeds $600 billion a year, while the State Department receives only $50 billion. But part of the problem is personal: In private, Team McChrystal likes to talk shit about many of Obama's top people on the diplomatic side. One aide calls Jim Jones, a retired four-star general and veteran of the Cold War, a "clown" who remains "stuck in 1985." Politicians like McCain and Kerry, says another aide, "turn up, have a meeting with Karzai, criticize him at the airport press conference, then get back for the Sunday talk shows. Frankly, it's not very helpful." Only Hillary Clinton receives good reviews from McChrystal's inner circle. "Hillary had Stan's back during the strategic review," says an adviser. "She said, 'If Stan wants it, give him what he needs.' "

"McChrystal reserves special skepticism for Holbrooke, the official in charge of reintegrating the Taliban. "The Boss says he's like a wounded animal," says a member of the general's team. "Holbrooke keeps hearing rumors that he's going to get fired, so that makes him dangerous. He's a brilliant guy, but he just comes in, pulls on a lever, whatever he can grasp onto. But this is COIN, and you can't just have someone yanking on shit."
At one point on his trip to Paris, McChrystal checks his BlackBerry. "Oh, not another e-mail from Holbrooke," he groans. "I don't even want to open it." He clicks on the message and reads the salutation out loud, then stuffs the BlackBerry back in his pocket, not bothering to conceal his annoyance.

"Make sure you don't get any of that on your leg," an aide jokes, referring to the e-mail

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 11:05 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

Roger

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 22:33:53 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

I'll do [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Jun 12 21:49:40 2010
Subject: Fw: S-Saudabayev call

Fyi. I think this call makes sense.

----- Original Message -----
From: Wells, Alice G
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Krol, George A
Cc: Holmes, David A
Sent: Sat Jun 12 20:30:36 2010
Subject: S-Saudabayev call

Jake- [redacted] B5

Thx

Alice G. Wells

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 10:51 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

B5

Will keep you posted.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 22:33:53 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

I'll do

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Jun 12 21:49:40 2010
Subject: Fw: S-Saudabayev call

Fyi. I think this call makes sense.

----- Original Message -----
From: Wells, Alice G
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Krol, George A
Cc: Holmes, David A
Sent: Sat Jun 12 20:30:36 2010
Subject: S-Saudabayev call

Jake-

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <preines [redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 10:06 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Aye

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Huma Abedin
Subject: Rolling Stone
Sent: Jun 21, 2010 7:01 PM

Can you get me copy of article about McChrystal that is coming out?

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 11:18 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

From John Beyerle ... Perhaps the Russians won't send troops:

I just called Karasin. He agreed that the situation had gotten worse in Osh and Jalalabad today but said the Russian position is still that sending in foreign troops, whether Russian or CSTO, will be counterproductive and lead to more violence and bloodshed.

The IL-76s that flew in to Kant today were the EMERCOM/МЧС planes he told me about yesterday; they have humanitarian cargo, primarily doctors and medical equipment. I cited the news reports that a battalion of paratroopers had gone in -- he said there may be some troops on board to guard the plane or beef up security at Kant, but he was firm that at this point Russia has no plans to introduce its own forces in the south. The main objective was to stop the violence through peaceful means; Russia had provided the Kyrgyz forces with additional "technical means" for accomplishing that. He said they hoped this would help Kyrgyz forces get control of the situation, which was their main goal.

I asked about CSTO planning, and possible UN or OSCE PKFs. He said there is no formal CSTO meeting planned, although people are consulting via phone. He repeated their hesitation to see any CSTO deployments. They have not yet considered UN or OSCE PKFs, but if the situation continues to deteriorate, he wouldn't exclude the possibility.

Rushailo is currently in Moscow, but may be sent to Bishkek tomorrow or Tuesday. He agreed to call me if there is any major change in the situation on the ground, or regarding force deployments. Tomorrow is a Russian holiday but he'll have his cell phone on.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Jun 13 10:50:39 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

B5

Will keep you posted.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J

Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 22:33:53 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

I'll do [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Jun 12 21:49:40 2010
Subject: Fw: S-Saudabayev call

Fyi. I think this call makes sense.

----- Original Message -----
From: Wells, Alice G
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Krol, George A
Cc: Holmes, David A
Sent: Sat Jun 12 20:30:36 2010
Subject: S-Saudabayev call

Jake- [redacted] B5

Thx

Alice G. Wells

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 11:26 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Thousands flee ethnic riots in Kyrgyzstan; Russia sends troops to base

From: Deyo, Justin A
To: SES-O_Shift-II
Cc: NEWS-SCA; NEWS-Russia; NEWS-Mahogany
Sent: Sun Jun 13 11:17:20 2010
Subject: (AP) Thousands flee ethnic riots in Kyrgyzstan; Russia sends troops to base

BISHKEK, Kyrgyzstan (AP) - As minority Uzbeks flee the Central Asian nation of Kyrgyzstan by the thousands, Russia is sending in a battalion of paratroopers to protect its air base in the country. More than 100 people have been killed and about 1250 wounded in four days of ethnic violence spreading across southern Kyrgyzstan. Doctors and rights activists say the actual toll is likely far higher than that official count, because wounded Uzbeks are too afraid of being attacked again to go to hospitals. Mobs of ethnic Kyrgyz have been reportedly torching Uzbek villages and neighborhoods, slaughtering residents. Authorities in Uzbekistan says more than 75,000 refugees have fled its neighbor. Most are said to be women, children and the elderly, and many have gunshot wounds. While the Kremlin has refused Kyrgyzstan's request for military help quelling the violence, the Interfax news agency reports Russia has sent about 300 paratroopers to reinforce security at its air base. Kyrgyzstan hosts both U.S. and Russian military air bases, but they are in the north, away from the ethnic rioting.

Justin Deyo
U.S. Department of State
Operations Center (S/ES-O)
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 12:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

I can talk tonight - whenever is convenient for you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 13 11:50:23 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

Ok. I'll plan for cal tomorrow.

Also, I'd like to talk w you before your mtg w Denis and Ben about future ideas. Can you talk tonight? what times would be best?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jun 13 10:50:39 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

B5

Will keep you posted.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 22:33:53 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

I'll do

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H

Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Jun 12 21:49:40 2010
Subject: Fw: S-Saudabayev call

Fyi. I think this call makes sense.

----- Original Message -----
From: Wells, Alice G
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Krol, George A
Cc: Holmes, David A
Sent: Sat Jun 12 20:30:36 2010
Subject: S-Saudabayev call

Jake-

B5

Thx

Alice G. Wells

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 1:18 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

Sure could, if it works for you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 13 13:08:35 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

Could you talk now?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jun 13 12:56:17 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

I can talk tonight - whenever is convenient for you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Jun 13 11:50:23 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

Ok. I'll plan for cal tomorrow.

Also, I'd like to talk w you before your mtg w Denis and Ben about future ideas. Can you talk tonight? what times would be best?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jun 13 10:50:39 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

B5

B5

Will keep you posted.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Jun 12 22:33:53 2010
Subject: Re: S-Saudabayev call

I'll do

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Jun 12 21:49:40 2010
Subject: Fw: S-Saudabayev call

Fyi. I think this call makes sense.

----- Original Message -----
From: Wells, Alice G
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Krol, George A
Cc: Holmes, David A
Sent: Sat Jun 12 20:30:36 2010
Subject: S-Saudabayev call

Jake-

B5

Thx

Alice G. Wells

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 3:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Just leaving the pool and seeing your mssges - can you talk at 430pm?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 4:03 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Just leaving the pool and seeing your mssges - can you talk at 430pm?

Yep - speak w/ you then

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Jun 13 15:34:33 2010
Subject: Re: Just leaving the pool and seeing your mssges - can you talk at 430pm?

No. Are you free after 9pm?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jun 13 15:23:53 2010
Subject: Just leaving the pool and seeing your mssges - can you talk at 430pm?

RELEASE IN PART
B5, B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, May 5, 2010 1:08 PM
To: H
Subject: FW:

From: Bagley, Elizabeth F
Sent: Wednesday, May 05, 2010 12:13 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject:

Dear Cheryl,

[redacted] B5 B6

Best regards,

Elizabeth

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, May 5, 2010 1:52 PM
To: H
Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid
Attachments: hrc memo British election 050510.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 6:19 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Strategy sessions

I talked to CDM about doing some strategy sessions this week. We discussed trying to do three:

B5

There are obviously a dozen different ways to do this, and a dozen different configurations. So consider this a strawman - we're eager to hear your reactions.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 10:25 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

I hadn't heard about this piece until you emailed. It comes out later this week but what's leaked so far is definitely a doozie

Unclear to me why anyone ever cooperate with Rolling Stone

-----Original Message-----
From: "PIR" <preines
Date: Tue, 22 Jun 2010 02:05:34
To: Evergreen<HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Huma Abedin<Huma@clintonemail.com>
Reply-To: preines
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Aye

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Huma Abedin
Subject: Rolling Stone
Sent: Jun 21, 2010 7:01 PM

Can you get me copy of article about McChrystal that is coming out?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 10:35 PM
To: H
Subject: Rolling Stone

Talked to Ben. Much to report.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Jake Sullivan
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 10:53 PM
To: H
Subject: early news accounts

Below is McC's statement and some early articles:

McC Statement:

I extend my sincerest apology for this profile. It was a mistake reflecting poor judgment and should never have happened.

Throughout my career, I have lived by the principles of personal honor and professional integrity. What is reflected in this article falls far short of that standard.

I have enormous respect and admiration for President Obama and his national security team, and for the civilian leaders and troops fighting this war and I remain committed to ensuring its successful outcome.

Aides to U.S. general in Afghanistan slam Obama: report

20 mins ago

WASHINGTON (Reuters) – Aides to the top U.S. general in Afghanistan insulted some of President Barack Obama's closest advisers, calling one a "clown" and another a "wounded animal," in an article to be published Friday in Rolling Stone magazine.

The article also quotes an aide describing the commander of U.S. and NATO forces in Afghanistan General Stanley McChrystal's "disappointment" with his initial one-on-one meeting with Obama last year.

Quoting all the McChrystal aides anonymously, the article portrays a split between the U.S. military and Obama's advisers at an extremely sensitive moment for the Pentagon, which is fending off criticism of its strategy to turn around the nearly nine-year-old Afghan war.

The Pentagon had no immediate comment about the article, which has been brought to the attention of senior officials.

It quotes a member of McChrystal's team making jokes about Vice President Joe Biden, who was seen as critical of the general's efforts to escalate the conflict and who had favored a more limited counter-terrorism approach.

"Biden?" the aide was quoted as saying. "Did you say: Bite me?"

Another aide called White House National Security Adviser Jim Jones, a retired four star general, a "clown" who was "stuck in 1985." It quoted an adviser to McChrystal dismissing an early meeting with Obama as a "10-minute photo op."

"Obama clearly didn't know anything about him, who he was. The boss was pretty disappointed," the adviser told the magazine.

McChrystal, a famous workaholic said to sleep just four hours a day, was brought into Afghanistan a year ago after his predecessor was pushed out.

The article portrays his teams as disapproving of the Obama administration, with the exception of Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who backed McCrystal's request for additional troops in Afghanistan.

Some of the strongest criticism was reserved for Richard Holbrooke, Obama's special envoy to Afghanistan and Pakistan.

"The boss says he's like a wounded animal," a member of the general's team is quoted as saying. "Holbrooke keeps hearing rumors that he's going to get fired, so that makes him dangerous."

McChrystal was quoted as saying he felt "betrayed" by the leak of a classified cable from U.S. Ambassador to Afghanistan Karl Eikenberry last year. The cable raised doubts about sending more troops to shore up an Afghan government already lacking in credibility.

"I like Karl, I've known him for years, but they'd never said anything like that to us before," McChrystal was quoted as saying in the article.

"Here's one that covers his flank for the history books. Now if we fail, they can say, 'I told you so.'"
(Editing by Washington World Desk)

Copyright © 2010 Yahoo! Inc. All rights reserved.

And from the WSJ:

- JUNE 21, 2010, 6:55 PM ET

McChrystal's Next Offensive?

Relations between the U.S. military and civilians in the Obama administration have been tense since last year's three-month review of Afghan war strategy, a state of affairs unlikely to be helped by a new profile of Gen. Stanley McChrystal, the overall commander in Afghanistan, that will appear in Rolling Stone magazine on Friday.

In the eight-page article, released to reporters on Monday ahead of publication, McChrystal appears to belittle Vice President Joe Biden and accuses Karl Eikenberry, the U.S. ambassador to Kabul, of undermining his war plan within the administration.

Asked by the Rolling Stone reporter about what he now feels of the war strategy advocated by Biden last fall – fewer troops, more drone attacks – the article reports that McChrystal and his aides attempted to come up with a good one-liner to dismiss the question. "Are you asking about Vice President Biden?" McChrystal reportedly jokes. "Who's that?"

Later in the article, McChrystal turns more serious when asked about cables sent last fall to Washington by Eikenberry. The cables called into question the major troop increase advocated by McChrystal's team and the U.S.'s backing of Afghan President Hamid Karzai – views that the ambassador had not previously raised with McChrystal or his staff.

"I like Karl, I've known him for years, but they'd never said anything like that to us before," McChrystal is quoted as saying. "Here's one that covers his flank for the history books. Now if we fail, they can say, 'I told you so.'"

The article, titled "The Runaway General," has already caused nervousness inside the Pentagon, where memories are still fresh of another blistering profile that got a top commander in hot water: an August 2008 cover story in Esquire <http://www.esquire.com/features/fox-fallon > on Adm. William "Fox" Fallon, then commander of all U.S. forces in the Middle East and Central Asia. The article eventually played a part in Fallon's resignation two years ago.

In that Esquire piece, however, Fallon appeared to directly contradict White House policy on Iran and other parts of the Middle East; the Rolling Stone article makes no such allegation, but rather is full of jokey put-downs of important Washington players.

Comments in the article attributed to anonymous McChrystal aides are particularly harsh towards some senior members of the Obama administration, including National Security Adviser James Jones, and other leading politicians, like Sens. John Kerry (D., Mass.) and John McCain (R., Ariz). They also make some unflattering references to PresidentBarack Obama himself, saying the president didn't seem to know who McChrystal was when he appointed him to run the war early last year.

Only Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who is portrayed as having strongly backed McChrystal's plan for Afghanistan, is singled out for praise by the anonymous McChrystal aides.

A spokesman for McChrystal did not immediately respond to a request for comment late Monday.
Copyright 2008 Dow Jones & Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved

This copy is for your personal, non-commercial use only. Distribution and use of this material are governed by our Subscriber Agreement <http://online.wsj.com/public/page/subscriber_agreement.html> and by copyright law. For non-personal use or to order multiple copies, please contact Dow Jones Reprints at 1-800-843-0008 or visit www.djreprints.com <http://www.djreprints.com>

Top US Afghan commander mocks Biden: report

(AFP) – 1 hour ago

WASHINGTON — The US commander in Afghanistan mocks the vice president and denounces a top diplomat in a magazine interview, while his aides speak dismissively of President Barack Obama.

Tensions between General Stanley McChrystal and the White House are on full display in an unflattering profile in Rolling Stone of the commander of US and NATO forces in the Afghan war.

McChrystal jokes sarcastically about preparing to answer a question referring to Vice President Joe Biden, known as a skeptic of the commander's war strategy.

"'Are you asking about Vice President Biden?' McChrystal says with a laugh. 'Who's that?'" the article quotes him as saying.

"'Biden?' suggests a top adviser. 'Did you say: Bite Me?'"

McChrystal tells the magazine that he felt "betrayed" by the US ambassador to Kabul, Karl Eikenberry, in a White House debate over war strategy last year.

Referring to a leaked internal memo from Eikenberry that questioned McChrystal's request for more troops, the commander suggested the ambassador had tried to protect himself for history's sake.

"I like Karl, I've known him for years, but they'd never said anything like that to us before," McChrystal tells the magazine.

"Here's one that covers his flank for the history books. Now if we fail, they can say, ?I told you so.'"

Eikenberry, himself a former commander in Afghanisan, had written to the White House saying Afghan President Hamid Karzai was an unreliable partner and that a surge of troops could draw the United States into a open-ended quagmire.

The article revisits the friction between the White House and the military last fall as Obama debated whether to grant McChrystal's request for tens of thousands of reinforcements.

Although Obama in the end granted most of what McChrystal asked for, the strategy review was a difficult time, the general tells the magazine.

"I found that time painful," McChrystal says. "I was selling an unsellable position."

An unnamed adviser to McChrystal alleges the general came away unimpressed after a meeting with Obama in the Oval Office a year ago, just after the president named him to take over in Afghanistan.

"It was a 10-minute photo op," the general's adviser says.

"Obama clearly didn?t know anything about him, who he was... he didn?t seem very engaged.

"The boss was pretty disappointed," says the adviser.

The profile, titled "The Runaway General," portrays his aides as profane and intensely loyal to McChrystal, while arguing the general has seized control over the war on the military and diplomatic fronts.

The four-star general also derides the hard-charging top US envoy to the region, Richard Holbrooke, and complains about a dinner with an unnamed French minister during a visit to Paris.

"Oh, not another e-mail from Holbrooke," McChrystal says, looking at his messages on a mobile phone. "I don't even want to open it."

In a hotel room in Paris getting ready for a dinner with a French official, McChrystal says: "How'd I get screwed into going to this dinner?"

"The dinner comes with the position, sir," says his aide, Colonel Charlie Flynn.

"Hey, Charlie," McChrystal says, "does this come with the position?"

McChrystal gives him the middle finger.

Copyright © 2010 AFP. All rights reserved

RELEASE IN FULL

Top General In Afghan War: US Envoy Betrayed Me

ANNE GEARAN, AP National Security Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top U.S. war commander in Afghanistan told an interviewer he felt betrayed by the man the White House chose to be his diplomatic partner, Ambassador Karl Eikenberry.

An article out this week in "Rolling Stone" magazine depicts Gen. Stanley McChrystal as a lone wolf on the outs with many important figures in the Obama administration and unable to convince even some of his own soldiers that his strategy can win the war.

A band of McChrystal's profane, irreverent aides are quoted mocking Vice President Joe Biden and Richard Holbrooke, the special U.S. representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan.

McChrystal himself is described by an aide as "disappointed" in his first Oval Office meeting with an unprepared President Barack Obama. The article says that although McChrystal voted for Obama, the two failed to connect from the start. Obama called McChrystal on the carpet last fall for speaking too bluntly about his desire for more troops.

"I found that time painful," McChrystal said in the article, on newsstands Friday. "I was selling an unsellable position."

Obama agreed to dispatch an additional 30,000 U.S. troops to Afghanistan only after months of study that many in the military found frustrating. And the White House's troop commitment was coupled with a pledge to begin bringing them home in July 2011, in what counterinsurgency strategists advising McChrystal regarded as an arbitrary deadline.

The profile, titled "The Runaway General" emerged from several weeks of interviews and travel with McChrystal's tight circle of aides this spring.

It includes a list of administration figures said to back McChrystal, including Defense Secretary Robert Gates and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, and puts Biden at the top of a list of those who don't.

The article claims McChrystal has seized control of the war "by never taking his eye off the real enemy: The wimps in the White House."

Biden initially opposed McChrystal's proposal for additional forces last year. He favored a narrower focus on hunting terrorists.

If Eikenberry had the same doubts, McChrystal said he never expressed them until a leaked internal document threw a wild card into the debate over whether to add more troops last November. In the document, Eikenberry said Afghan President Hamid Karzai was not a reliable partner for the counterinsurgency strategy McChrystal was hired to execute.

McChrystal said he felt "betrayed" and accused the ambassador of giving himself cover.

"Here's one that covers his flank for the history books," McChrystal told the magazine. "Now, if we fail, they can say 'I told you so.'"

There was no immediate response from Eikenberry. The Associated Press requested comment through an aide after business hours on Monday in Kabul.

Eikenberry remains in his post in Kabul, and although both men publicly say they are friends, their rift is on full display.

McChrystal and Eikenberry, himself a retired Army general, stood as far apart as the speakers' platform would allow during a White House news conference last month.

"Rolling Stone" interviewed troops frustrated by McChrystal's strict rules for combat that are intended to reduce the number of civilian casualties.

At one outpost, a soldier McChrystal had met earlier was killed in a house that the local U.S. commander had repeatedly asked to destroy. The request was denied, apparently out of concern that razing the house would anger locals whose allegiance the U.S. is trying to win.

"Does that make any (expletive) sense?" Pfc. Jared Pautsch asks. "We should just drop a (expletive) bomb on this place. You sit and ask yourself, 'What are we doing here?'"

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Philippe Reines
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 11:25 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin; Jake Sullivan
Subject: Rolling Stone: "The Runaway General"
Attachments: R1109McChrystal.pdf

Attached is the story in scanned form. Not sure if you can open/read on your berry, so will make sure Lauren has too

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 11:58 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

Oh darn it - sorry I missed your message - I was engrossed in the PSD script.

If you're still up please call.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Jun 21 23:16:02 2010
Subject: Re: Rolling Stone

can you talk now?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jun 21 22:34:49 2010
Subject: Rolling Stone

Talked to Ben. Much to report.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 13, 2010 9:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Just tried you. Am on cell [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 7:20 AM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Schedule

Will do.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Tue Jun 22 07:07:24 2010
Subject: Schedule

I will need to see [redacted] sometime in next week and pls find out when [redacted] I'd like to aim for July 7 or 8. Thx. B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 7:24 AM
To: H
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Schedule

Will set up
I'm seeing [redacted] next week and she's flexible so we can do any morning. B6
Think [redacted] may be traveling but will check.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov' <hanleymr@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jun 22 07:07:24 2010
Subject: Schedule

I will need to see [redacted] sometime in next week and pls find out when [redacted] I'd like to aim for July 7 or 8. Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 7:27 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 6/14/10 Monday

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence *En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:15 am MONDAY MEETING w/ASSISTANT SECRETARIES
10:00 am Principals Conference Room 7516

10:05 am DROP-BY U/S BURNS' MEETING w/UAE TRADE MINISTER
10:10 am SHEIKHA LUBNA al QASIMI Secretary's Conference Room *Official photo at top.

10:15 am PRE-BRIEF w/AMBASSADOR CdeBACA AND U/S OTERO
10:25 am Secretary's Office

10:30 am RELEASE OF 10TH ANNUAL TRAFFICKING IN PERSONS REPORT
10:50 am Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor

11:00 am OFFICE TIME
3:15 pm Secretary's Office

3:20 pm PHOTO w/ZIA SYED AND FAMILY
3:30 pm Secretary's Outer Office

3:40 pm REMARKS TO THE DIPLOMACY CONFERENCE ON SUB-SAHARAN
4:20 pm AFRICA Loy Henderson Conference Room

4:30 pm OFFICE TIME
5:15 pm Secretary's Office

5:20 pm MEETING w/UNDERSECRETARY BURNS
6:00 pm Secretary's Office

6:00 pm DEPART State Department *En route Private Residence

6:10 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 7:28 AM
To: H
Subject: Mack McLarty

Today, June 14th, is his birthday

[redacted] c
h
202-419-1420 w main
[redacted] Asst: Katie
[redacted] Asst. Ali cell
**###

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 7:41 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Dianne Feinstein

Today [redacted] B6
[redacted] (DC)

[redacted] w Asst: Daniel
###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 8:14 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Rahm's long goodbye

Rahm's long goodbye

By: Glenn Thrush
June 22, 2010 04:34 AM EDT

For all the talk about Rahm Emanuel reaching for the "eject" button, the fiery White House chief of staff isn't leaving in the immediate future — and could serve well into 2011, according to people close to him.

"It's the opinion in the top levels of the White House that Rahm is going to be here longer than many people think," said a senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Speculation about Emanuel's departure has been a favorite parlor game for nearly a year — stoked by Emanuel's admission that he'd love to run for Chicago mayor (should current Mayor Richard Daley retire, of course), his own kvetching about the rigors of the job, withering attacks on him from the left and the right and the fact that the average expiration date on a chief of staff is 18 months.

Emanuel is leaving, but his departure date has proved to be profoundly elastic. Friends and co-workers said he vacillates from day to day, sometimes minute to minute. He might leave in December after the midterms; or he might stay until next summer, depending on whether Daley runs or President Barack Obama asks him to stick around, they said.

And even as he pines for his native Chicago, Emanuel continues to put down real roots in D.C., recently writing the check to enroll his children in the exclusive Maret School in Washington through the 2011 school year, according to a person close to Emanuel.

He's shown few signs of loosening his grip on the tiller — bombarding White House staffers with long-distance calls during the first days of the Gulf oil spill even as he traveled in Israel for his son's bar mitzvah.

And in a broader sense, it's hard to imagine Emanuel's huge personality extracted from the political, journalistic and bar stool life of Obama's Washington.

Take the last game of last week's NBA Finals, when any American voter could wander into Tunnicliff's Tavern on Capitol Hill and witness one of the most powerful men in the nation egging on the Boston Celtics — screaming at the flat-screen TV, actually — joined by a merry band that included Sen. Max Baucus (D-Mont.); Sen. Chris Dodd (D-Conn.); Jim Manley, spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.); and a pair of favorite reporters from The New York Times and The Washington Post.

Despite a British tabloid story asserting that Emanuel is sick of Obama's "idealism" and is racing for the exit, the former Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee chairman still loves the attention and power of his current job and hasn't made up his mind when he's leaving, people who know him said.

"This is BS. And if you need it for translation, it is baseless," Emanuel said in a statement pushing back against a story in the U.K.'s Daily Telegraph portraying Emanuel as restless and fed up.

Replacing Emanuel, when he eventually goes, will be no easy task for Obama and the small clique of close advisers led by Pete Rouse, David Axelrod and Valerie Jarrett.

For one thing, Obama and company need to know what the post-November political landscape looks like before picking a successor: If Republicans take back one or more house of Congress, the new chief of staff will need to know how to leverage executive power against a hostile Hill; if Democrats retain their majorities, Emanuel's successor will need some of his legislative skills.

Barring a major course correction, Obama, who prizes loyalty and familiarity, isn't likely to reach too far outside his inner circle, advisers said.

Still, the president is increasingly cognizant of his reputation for insularity and would quite likely give a serious look at respected former Clinton chiefs of staff Leon Panetta, currently head of the CIA, or John Podesta, who runs the Center for American Progress, a major liberal think tank with close ties to the administration.

Rouse, a senior adviser who served as Obama's Senate chief of staff, is considered the best pure manager in the White House and a logical choice to replace Emanuel, according to a half-dozen administration officials and consultants.

But Rouse's colleagues say the quiet 60-year-old insider loves his work, the Grateful Dead and his cats — but despises the spotlight and would most likely turn down the job unless Obama insisted.

"The key thing about Pete is that the president trusts him and would feel very, very comfortable with him in charge," said a Democratic consultant who knows both men well. "But he probably won't take it."

One possible candidate — deputy chief of staff Jim Messina, Emanuel's political go-to guy — is likely to play a major role in Obama's 2012 reelection campaign and is expected to move to Chicago sometime next year.

In Messina's absence, another Emanuel favorite — Deputy National Security Adviser Tom Donilon — has emerged as a possible successor, according to people close to the situation.

Obama has been impressed by Donilon's presentations at the President's Daily Briefing, and the Rhode Island native has a wide variety of political and governmental experience, serving as a congressional liaison under President Jimmy Carter, chief State Department spokesman under President Bill Clinton and a campaign adviser who helped Obama prepare for debates against John McCain.

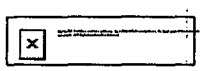
One major Donilon drawback: He served as an executive vice president for Fannie Mae, the bailed-out mortgage giant, and reportedly lobbied against stronger regulatory oversight.

David Plouffe, Obama's 2008 campaign manager, is another contender, with a reputation for discipline, team building and solid management skills. But Plouffe has been reluctant to settle down in Washington, is earning a stellar living as a consultant and hates the press.



Former Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle is also a possible successor, even though his nomination for Health and Human Services secretary was scuttled by revelations he failed to report limo rides paid for by a corporate client.

Another White House aide, Phil Schiliro, is a favorite of Obama's for his legislative savvy and political instincts. But critics said he lacks the range of policy and political experience that other candidates possess, and that his mastery of the Hill won't mean much if Democrats surrender their majorities in either house.

Then there's Ron Klain, 49, Vice President Joe Biden's brainy and politically astute chief of staff, who is said to be intensely interested in making the move from the Eisenhower Executive Office Building to the West Wing.

Klain — who also served as Al Gore's chief of staff — is well-regarded inside the White House. Plus, he's got a touch of star power: Kevin Spacey played him in the HBO movie "Recount," about his role in guiding the Gore campaign through the 2000 Florida recount.

Klain's downside: He's essentially an outsider who has yet to develop a serious rapport with the president, according to insiders.

© 2010 Capitol News Company, LLC

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 2:33 PM
To: H
Subject: IMG00211-20100614-1158.jpg
Attachments: IMG00211-20100614-1158.jpg

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 2:34 PM
To: H
Subject: IMG00214-20100614-1205.jpg
Attachments: IMG00214-20100614-1205.jpg

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 9:19 AM
Subject: Max from Israel: deconstruction of propaganda and media

http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/06/the-israeli-medias-flotilla-fail/

The Israeli Media's Flotilla Fail

On 06.22.10, By Max Blumenthal

My summary of the Israeli media's shambolic performance following the flotilla massacre was originally published here in Hebrew at Dvorit Shargal's excellent Israeli media blog, Velvet Underground. The English version follows:

If the raid of the Gaza Freedom Flotilla was a disaster for the Israel Defense Forces, its aftermath demonstrated an equally bewildering performance by the Israeli media. The IDF Spokesman's Office churned out one misleading claim after another, each one more implausible than the next, seeking to implant in the public's mind a version of events that bore little relation to reality. To a degree, this was to be expected; but it was startling to see how some of Israel's most respected reporters lined up to serve as military stenographers, barely challenging the IDF's rapidly changing versions of events. IDF claims about the flotilla passengers' links to Al Qaida, anti-Semitic statements shouted at the Israeli Navy, and their terrorist intentions were eagerly broadcast by the Israeli media without a second thought. When independent reporters forced the IDF to retract or "clarify" all of these claims, Israeli news outlets refused to correct their errors, or covered them up without acknowledgment.

It so happened that I arrived in Israel for a research trip the day after the flotilla raid. As a result, I was able to do something which I always thought to be a very basic journalistic practice, so basic it's supposed to be applied routinely: Asking an implicated party in a story to produce evidence for its claims. What I found bewildering is that at least judging from Israeli media reports, few, if any, mainstream reporters applied this practice, and when a visiting colleague did their job for them – nobody bothered to correct or withdraw their original report.

On June 2, the IDF disseminated a press release entitled, "Attackers of the IDF soldiers found to be Al Qaeda mercenaries." The accusation was not accompanied by any conclusive evidence — the IDF reported that Mavi Marmara passengers were equipped with night-vision goggles (gasp!). This did not stop Yedioth's Ron Ben-Yishai, who was embedded with the Navy commandos, from amplifying the baseless charge. Citing an "interrogation" of Marmara passengers — "lynchers," he called them — Ben-Yishai wrote the same day, "Some among the [flotilla passengers] are believed to have ties with World Jihad groups, mainly Al Qaeda." The article made no reference to any efforts on part of Ben Yishai to investigate this claim, nor did he seem to think to ask why the IDF was about to release dangerous operatives of Osama Bin Laden — presumably they would attack again, wouldn't they?

On June 3, Israeli journalist Lia Tarachansky of the Real News Network and I placed calls to the IDF Spokesman's Office to demand further evidence of the Marmara's Al Qaeda ties. We received identical responses from spokespeople from the IDF's Israel and North America desks: "We don't have any evidence. The press release was based on information from the National Security Council." Hours later, the IDF retracted its claim, changing the title of its press release to, "Attackers of IDF Soldiers Found Without Identification Papers." Despite the official retraction, Ben-Yishai's article remains uncorrected.

On June 4, the IDF released an audio clip purporting to consist of transmissions between the Mavi Marmara and a Naval warship. "Go back to Aushwitz!" a Marmara passenger shouted, according to the IDF. YNet and Haaretz reported on and reproduced the audio clip without investigating its authenticity. Forget that the voice uttering the anti-Semitic slur sounded like a mentally disturbed teenager; had reporters performed a cursory search of the IDF Spokeman's Office website, they would have found a longer clip released on May 31 that featured a dramatically different exchange with the Marmara with no mention of Auschwitz. Further, the voice of flotilla organizer Huwaida Arraf was featured in the "Aushwitz" clip, yet Arraf was not aboard the Marmara (she was on the Challenger One). Could the IDF have doctored audio to exploit public hysteria surrounding the issue of anti-Semitism?

On my blog, I pointed out the discrepancies in the IDF's footage and raised the question of doctoring. The next day, the IDF conceded that it had in fact doctored the footage, releasing a "clarification" and a new clip claiming to consist of the "full" exchange between the Navy and the flotilla. Unfortunately, the authenticity of the new clip was impossible to verify. Despite the IDF's admission, YNet and Haaretz have not corrected their original reports, though Haaretz has at least altered its headline. Once the doctoring was exposed, the New York Times covered the episode in detail, directing international attention to the triumph of independent online reporting and the apparent failure of Israel's parochial press corps.

On June 7, Haaretz's Anshel Pfeffer reported on an IDF press release claiming without evidence that five flotilla passengers had links to international terror. The press release was larded with highly implausible claims, including that Ken O'Keefe, who runs an aid organization with Tony Blair's sister-in-law, was planning to train a Hamas commando unit in the Gaza Strip. When I called the IDF Spokesman's Office, I learned that once again, no evidence was available to support their press release. "There is very limited intelligence we can give in this specific case," Sgt. Chen Arad told me. "Obviously I'm unable to give you more information." Did Pfeffer demand more evidence? If he did and was answered in the same manner as I did, why did Haaretz publish an unsubstantiated spin as fact?

Joined by Haaretz military correspondents Avi Isacharoff and Amos Harel, Pfeffer became a channel for another daytime deception by the IDF. On May 31, the three reporters produced an article based exclusively on testimony from Naval commandos — the flotilla passengers' side of the story was ignored — claiming they had faced live fire and lynching attempts from Marmara passengers. Since the story was published, the IDF has produced scant evidence to support either accusation. The article was accompanied by a suspicious photo from the IDF Spokesman's Office depicting a bearded Muslim man brandishing a knife and surrounded by photojournalists. Daylight beamed in from a window behind the man. Haaretz's caption, which was sourced to the IDF, asserted that the photo was taken "after" the commandos had boarded the Marmara. However, the commandos raided the ship at night, while the photo was taken during the day. Once again, the IDF's story was fishy.

I called Sgt. Arad at the IDF Spokesman's Office to investigate. He told me he had no evidence to support the photo's questionable caption. Soon after our phone conversation, Haaretz quietly altered the caption, removing its claim that the photo was taken "after" the commando raid. For nearly a week, the false photo caption had remained intact. Why did Haaretz suddenly change it? The only plausible explanation is that the paper received a tip from the IDF Spokesman's Office. If true, the tip-off suggests a scandalous level of coordination between the Israeli military and the country's media.

In the wake of the flotilla raid, Israeli journalists had a unique opportunity to lead the global media's investigation into the bloodbath that occurred on the deck of the Mavi Marmara. After all, no one had better access to the military or the eyewitnesses aboard the flotilla. Instead, too many among the Israeli press corps allowed themselves to be conscripted into the IDF's hapless information war, leaving the important task of investigating the raid to independent reporters who remembered to view claims by any nation's military with extreme skepticism.

So why do well-connected, experienced reporters follow the IDF baton so willingly, and fail to follow up when IDF claims are retracted? Is it simple bias, a desire to present their military in the best possible light, a desire so strong they abandon their duty to their readers to verify their information? Are they afraid of sanctions, of losing contacts and access to information? Do they fear personal reprisals? Their readers, and the world media that still relies on Israeli journalism as a vital source of information, need to know.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, May 5, 2010 10:20 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Note from Dick Gephardt

See below – you fine with this?

cdm

---

From: Gordon, Philip H
Sent: Wednesday, May 05, 2010 10:00 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: Note from Dick Gephardt

Recommend she do it. In fact we had arranged for a meeting in March but Ms. Boyner's trip was cancelled. We can send up a new meeting request.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Gordon, Philip H
Sent: Wed May 05 21:18:07 2010
Subject: FW: Note from Dick Gephardt

Thoughts on this?

---

From: Dick Gephardt [redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, May 05, 2010 4:05 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Note from Dick Gephardt

Dear Cheryl:

I have been asked by the Turkish Embassy, who I represent, to request a meeting with Secretary Clinton for Mrs. Umit Boyner, a prominent Turkish business woman. Such a meeting could be whenever and wherever you determine most convenient for the Secretary -- either in Washington, DC or Turkey.

As you will see from the biographical information below, Mrs. Boyner has had a distinguished career as a businesswoman, and she has also devoted time to philanthropy as well. Mrs. Boyner was recently selected to be the chair person of the board of one of the most prominent Turkish business organizations, the Turkish Industrialists' and Businessmen's Association (TUSIAD) – an organization comparable to the Business Roundtable. I have also attached a document providing additional background information on TUSIAD.

Mrs. Umit is a great admirer of Secretary Clinton's and would be extremely honored to be able to meet with her. I know the Secretary is extremely busy, but I hope she can find a window to meet with Mrs. Umit. Thanks for all you help and my personal regards to Secretary Clinton.

Best,

Dick

Brief Biography of Umit Boyner

Mrs. Umit Boyner, is currently the chair of the Turkish Industrialists' and Businessmen's Association (TUSIAD) Board of Directors and head of the Country Communication Fund. Mrs. Boyner was selected to chair TUSIAD's Board at the 40th General Assembly meeting held in Istanbul on January 21, 2010.

Born in 1963, Mrs. Boyner received a BA degree in Economics from the University of Rochester in the US. She began her professional career in 1985 at Chemical Mitsui Bank, followed by senior positions at the finance departments of several companies. In 1996 she became the Vice-President in charge of Finance at Boyner Group. In 2002 she became a board member overseeing the finances and investments of the group.

Mrs. Boyner has been serving on the Board of TUSIAD since 2005, initially as a board member in charge of the External Communication Commission, later as a vice-chair. Mrs. Boyner also devotes her time to various NGOs such as the Education Volunteers Foundation of Turkey (TEGV), Turkish Institute of Nautical Archaeology (TINA), and Tohum Autism Foundation. She was also the President of the Corporate Volunteer Association for two years, and a founding member and vice-president for four years of the Women Entrepreneurs Association (KAGIDER). Since 2008 she has been serving on the Middle East Advisory Board of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Mrs. Boyner is married and has two children.

TUSIAD's new Board of Directors consists of the following individuals:

Umit Boyner: Chairperson
Haluk Dincer: Vice-Chair
Tayfun Bayazit: Vice-Chair
Cansen Basaran Symes: Member
Lucien Arkas: Member
Mehmet Ali Aydinlar: Member
Erman Ilicak: Member
Ali Kibar: Member
Volkan Vural: Member
Muharrem Yilmaz: Member
Zafer Ali Yavan: Member, Secretary General

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 9:45 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Syria Trip in the San Francisco Chronicle

---

From: Cohen, Jared A
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 8:32 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Chollet, Derek H; Burns, William J; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Jentleson, Bruce W; Ross, Alec J; Crowley, Philip J; Djerassi, Alexander M
Subject: Fw: Syria Trip in the San Francisco Chronicle

Fyi

---

Jared Cohen
Policy Planning Staff
Office of the Secretary of State
U.S. Department of State
Office Tel: 202-647-0531
Cell: B6
Twitter:

This email is unclassified

---

From: Jared Cohen
To: Cohen, Jared A; alec.ross
Sent: Tue Jun 22 08:23:49 2010
Subject: Syria Trip in the San Francisco Chronicle

http://tinyurl.com/2afxnjf

Bay Area execs seek to open doors with Syria

Andrew S. Ross
Sunday, June 20, 2010

Call it a dual purpose mission, with pretty high stakes.

Bay Area executives fromCisco Systems Inc.,Symantec Corp. andVeriSign Inc. returned Friday from a trip to Syria, where they were tasked by the Obama administration with helping open business and diplomatic doors to a member of what used to be called the "axis of evil."

Were the doors flung open to a country with whom U.S. businesses are still mostly forbidden to trade?

Not exactly, given that Internet freedom, transparency, the elimination of corruption and a general opening up, Syrian leaders were told, are among the sine qua non for getting them what they say they want - U.S. businesses and investment there.

"Candid" was a word used by one delegation member to describe the four days of talks last week in Damascus and Aleppo, a commercial center and Syria's largest city. "They provided a lot of clarity for both sides. On our side, how receptive the Syrians are to U.S. companies doing business there, and for the Syrians, what they need to do to get things going," said the delegation member, who agreed to speak only on background.

The delegation, which also included senior executives fromMicrosoft Corp. andDell Inc., was led byAlec Ross, Secretary of StateHillary Rodham Clinton's senior adviser for innovation, andJared Cohen, a member of Clinton's policy planning staff.

There were sit-downs with Syrian PresidentBashar Assadand other government ministers and meetings with business leaders, including those in the country's nascent high-tech sector, along with students, academics and leaders of civic and social organizations.

Laying down the conditions:Unlike most U.S. companies, Cisco, Symantec and the other high-tech firms on the trip are allowed to do business in Syria under a waiver granted, under certain conditions, to U.S. information technology companies.

According to Syria's state news agency, Sana, "the American executives discussed setting up authorized centers for (their) companies in Syria."

But in meeting after meeting, according to the delegate, the executives said there were too many barriers to entry, including Internet access, which Clinton has said is a key plank of U.S. foreign policy.

"They can't do business in a place that is not open," was the message, according to the delegate. (While Syria remains a member in good standing of the axis of authoritarians, some of the same concerns could be raised about countries these companies do conduct business with - like, dare we say, China).

The Syrian government said it was considering a law that would require that the blocking of Web sites - a common, often arbitrary and unpredictable happening there - be at least subject to judicial review.

"Now, we have to wait and see what the government does," the delegate said.

In an earlier statement about the trip, Symantec said it was also designed to help the Obama administration's "effort to continue strengthening diplomatic relations throughout the Middle East." That also remains to be seen.

It's not the first time the administration, responding to come-hither hints from Damascus, has, like Charlie Brown, teed up the football, only to have it snatched away, Lucy-style, as Syria got cold and persisted in allying itself with U.S. archenemy Iran.

Obama, announcing the renewal of sanctions on Syria last month, cited the country's "continuing support for terrorist organizations and pursuit of weapons of mass destruction and missile programs, (which) continue to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security, foreign policy and economy of the United States."

Opportunities in the sand:Meanwhile,Robert Ludden, chief operating officer of San Francisco'sKMD Architects, is back in the Middle East seeking more business, particularly in Dubai, Abu Dhabi and Saudi Arabia.

Recently Ludden nailed down the firm's first prime contract there, as designer of the $15 million Imperial College of London diabetes center in Abu Dhabi, a showpiece facility for a disease that is surprisingly prevalent in the region.

He sees the Middle East as a growing market for architects and designers, as a number of countries there, especially the desert kingdoms, are seeking to develop sustainable communities.

"Saudi Arabia is the next big one," Ludden says.

Going global:TheBay Area Councilofficially opened its first "overseas global office" on Friday, in Shanghai.

The office, located in Shanghai's Knowledge and Innovation Community, is meant to serve as a gateway service for Bay Area companies looking to set up in China, as well as "guiding Chinese companies and investment to the Bay Area."

Next up for a global office, the council says: India.

Blogging at sfgate.com/columns/bottomline. Facebook page at sfg.ly/doACKM. Tweeting @andrewsross. E-mailbottomline@sfchronicle.com.

http://sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2010/06/20/BUOV1E0PLD.DTL

This article appeared on page D - 1 of the SanFranciscoChronicle

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 5:05 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: From Amory Lovins

Am passing on as requested. I will also follow up with Maura O'Neill – I have followed this up before at Amory's request. AM

From: Amory B. Lovins [mailto:[redacted]] B6
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 12:54 PM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: McAuliffe, Marisa S; Rasmussen Eric
Subject: please share also with Secretary Clinton -- thanks!

Dear Hillary and Anne-Marie,

For several months I've been advising on a project to take the rainforest restoration work of Dr. Willie Smits, an Indonesian agroforester, to scale on Borneo. That Smits Model effort now has an economically sustainable design with multiple benefits for the local forest population, the nation of Indonesia, and the planet. The business plan has been developed by an experienced and highly reputable investment group that serves in an Advisory role to the Prince of Wales's Trust, and the business plan has already engaged the interest of the P8, a group of the eight largest global pension funds.

The core goals of the Arenga Reforestation Project include greenhouse gas reduction, habitat restoration, rainforest remediation, deforestation protection, biofuel production that is non-food and carbon-positive, and poverty alleviation for some of the most vulnerable populations on the planet. The Internal Rate of Return, on a fairly mature business model and seven years of module testing, calculates to about 34% -- a decent investment return for almost any industry.

You can watch Willie Smits describe the possibilities at TED (to a standing ovation) here:
http://www.ted.com/talks/willie_smits_restores_a_rainforest.html

The State Department has been on the periphery of the concept development through Moira O'Neill, a Haas Professor of Business on loan to USAID from Cal. She has kept the conversation going with the White House, USAID, and State, but is extremely busy with a range of other obligations and may not have the cycles to follow this to a conclusion.

In my view this effort, the Arenga Reforestation Project, is the leading contender for an economically sustainable tropical reforestation program, and has an unprecedented climate mitigation potential (Indonesia is the world's #4 greenhouse-gas emitter, due largely to the burning and composting of the southern Kalimantan peat swamps and to rapid destruction of rainforest, both of which the Smits Model can reverse). In Aug 08 I spent 11 days visiting key sites of this project in Borneo, largely with Dr. Smits, whom I've known for about 20 years. In my opinion, and that of many others, this is the world's most sophisticated and powerful model for integrated ecological and economic restoration, with exciting prospects for much of the tropics. I can also vouch for the quality and integrity of the key people involved.

To make the impact even more noteworthy, the Minister of Forestry in Indonesia has now agreed to a 1:1 acreage match between Smits Model reforestation and the protection of virgin rainforest in perpetuity as national park. For every 30,000 hectares of Smits Model reforestation, the Ministry will designate 30,000 hectares (about 116 square miles) of virgin rainforest a National Park, and they have agreed to external monitoring by international NGOs for compliance. Since this Smits Model can scale to a million hectares, or ten million, with continually increasing economic, social, and environmental benefits, the two-fer impact is perhaps unprecedented.

It would be worthwhile for you to have someone from your staff take a look at this. In my carefully considered view, the political, social, and REDD benefits could be very substantial, and the possibility of a Public-Private Partnership is worth consideration.

The primary source for information on the project in the US is my friend and Senior Fellow at RMI, the remarkable Eric Rasmussen, MD, MDM, FACP -- CEO of the Google-founded humanitarian NGO called InSTEDD. He's leading, pro bono, the team developing the business plan, and can be reached at [redacted] or on cell at [redacted], Pacific Time Zone. B6

With warmest regards -- ABL

Amory B. Lovins
Chairman and Chief Scientist
Rocky Mountain Institute
1739 Snowmass Creek Road
Snowmass CO 81654, USA
[redacted]
+1 970 927 3129, fax 4178, desk [redacted] (on vacation through 15 Jul), cell [redacted]
Executive Assistant (Megan Shean) +1 970 927 7202, [redacted]
Chief of Staff (Lionel Bony) +1 970 927 7307, [redacted]
Special Aide (Bennett Cohen), +1 970 927 7312, [redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, May 5, 2010 10:54 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: NY meeting

Erica flagged for me, and Bill Burns just called to confirm, that Mottaki has asked the perm reps of the Security Council to have dinner tomorrow night.

Susan can't attend because she's here in DC, but proposes Alex Wolff attend in her place. B5

You can discuss with Bill and Jim in the am, but wanted to flag.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, May 5, 2010 11:00 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: NY meeting

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed May 05 22:57:33 2010
Subject: Re: NY meeting

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wed May 05 22:53:34 2010
Subject: NY meeting

Erica flagged for me, and Bill Burns just called to confirm, that Mottaki has asked the perm reps of the Security Council to have dinner tomorrow night.

Susan can't attend because she's here in DC, but proposes Alex Wolff attend in her place. [redacted]

You can discuss with Bill and Jim in the am, but wanted to flag.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 4:35 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Haiti prez to extend term if election not held

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Reynoso, Julissa
To: Mcdonald, Kara C; Merten, Kenneth H; Lindwall, David E; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A; Warnholz, Jean-Louis
Sent: Thu May 06 00:42:42 2010
Subject: Fw: Haiti prez to extend term if election not held

----- Original Message -----
From: membership_services@fma.sosiltd.com <membership_services@fma.sosiltd.com>
To: southcom_news_alerts_members_list@lists.fma.sosiltd.com
<southcom_news_alerts_members_list@lists.fma.sosiltd.com>
Sent: Thu May 06 00:37:39 2010
Subject: Haiti prez to extend term if election not held

Haiti prez to extend term if election not held JONATHAN M. KATZ,Associated Press Writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haitian President Rene Preval said Wednesday he will stay in office up to three months past the end of his term if his earthquake-ravaged nation does not hold a presidential election as scheduled.

His aide said the extension is needed to avoid chaos in case a ballot cannot be held to choose Preval's successor. The announcement set off an outcry from opposition lawmakers, who called the move unconstitutional and compared Preval to brutal dictators of the past.

Preval's five-year term is scheduled to end Feb. 7. But electoral officials are struggling to hold the election as scheduled this fall as it copes with the loss of its headquarters and records, destroyed polling places and some 1.6 million displaced or deceased voters.

The electoral council, now operating out of a gym seized in a drug raid, is also embroiled in controversy. Opposition candidates barred from February legislative elections that were canceled after the quake have accused council members of favoring Preval's newly formed Unity party. One council member also faces dismissal on charges of embezzlement.

In a decree dated Tuesday, the 67-year-old Preval said that if an election is not held before Nov. 28 he can remain in office for an extra three months — until May 14, 2011. That date falls five years after Preval's delayed 2006 inauguration, which was pushed back by wrangling over the vote count.

"If President Preval were to leave on Feb. 7, while the new president is not elected, we would find ourselves in an impossible situation," his chief of staff, Fritz Longchamp, said.

He said Prime Minister Jean-Max Bellerive and Cabinet members who signed the decree "want to make sure that the country is not going to slip into chaos."

Opposition lawmakers slammed the decision. Senator Youri Latortue said the move violated the constitution and pledged to challenge it before Haiti's supreme court.

Acluche Louis-Jeune, a deputy with the Struggling People's Organization party, told Haiti's Channel 11 that Preval is trying to stay in office to profit from the $12.7 billion-and-counting pledged in reconstruction aid.

"He's trying to make himself president for life like (ex-dictators Francois and Jean-Claude) Duvalier," he said.

Longchamp said Parliament's approval is needed for the extension, but lawmakers will have to act fast: On Monday all seats in the lower chamber and a third of the seats in the Senate expire. The Feb. 28 election to replace them could not be held because of the chaos following the Jan. 12 earthquake.

Preval also served as president from 1995 to 2000. He stepped down as scheduled when his term ended and handed power back to the man who preceded him, the re-elected Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Media Analysis and Watch Center
USSTRATCOM Foreign Media Analysis Program SOS International Ltd.

For additional information, please visit the SOSi USSTRATCOM FMA portal at Once registered, you may access FMA products and manage your subscriptions. Write to for assistance. B6

To unsubscribe from this list, please use the following link:

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 10:39 AM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E

Ann Stock was just confirmed by the Senate.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 9:25 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: From Amory Lovins

I'm on it and will report tomorrow. AM

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 9:24 PM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: From Amory Lovins

I don't recall hearing about this particular project before. Can you do a quick analysis before I follow up?

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jun 14 17:04:52 2010
Subject: From Amory Lovins

Am passing on as requested. I will also follow up with Maura O'Neill – I have followed this up before at Amory's request. AM

From: Amory B. Lovins [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Saturday, June 12, 2010 12:54 PM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: McAuliffe, Marisa S; Rasmussen Eric
Subject: please share also with Secretary Clinton -- thanks!

Dear Hillary and Anne-Marie,

For several months I've been advising on a project to take the rainforest restoration work of Dr. Willie Smits, an Indonesian agroforester, to scale on Borneo. That Smits Model effort now has an economically sustainable design with multiple benefits for the local forest population, the nation of Indonesia, and the planet. The business plan has been developed by an experienced and highly reputable investment group that serves in an Advisory role to the Prince of Wales's Trust, and the business plan has already engaged the interest of the P8, a group of the eight largest global pension funds.

The core goals of the Arenga Reforestation Project include greenhouse gas reduction, habitat restoration, rainforest remediation, deforestation protection, biofuel production that is non-food and carbon-positive, and poverty alleviation for some of the most vulnerable populations on the planet. The Internal Rate of Return, on a fairly mature business model and seven years of module testing, calculates to about 34% -- a decent investment return for almost any industry.

You can watch Willie Smits describe the possibilities at TED (to a standing ovation) here:
http://www.ted.com/talks/willie_smits_restores_a_rainforest.html

The State Department has been on the periphery of the concept development through Moira O'Neill, a Haas Professor of Business on loan to USAID from Cal. She has kept the conversation going with the White House, USAID, and State, but is extremely busy with a range of other obligations and may not have the cycles to follow this to a conclusion.

In my view this effort, the Arenga Reforestation Project, is the leading contender for an economically sustainable tropical reforestation program, and has an unprecedented climate mitigation potential (Indonesia is the world's #4 greenhouse-gas emitter, due largely to the burning and composting of the southern Kalimantan peat swamps and to rapid destruction of rainforest, both of which the Smits Model can reverse). In Aug 08 I spent 11 days visiting key sites of this project in Borneo, largely with Dr. Smits, whom I've known for about 20 years. In my opinion, and that of many others, this is the world's most sophisticated and powerful model for integrated ecological and economic restoration, with exciting prospects for much of the tropics. I can also vouch for the quality and integrity of the key people involved.

To make the impact even more noteworthy, the Minister of Forestry in Indonesia has now agreed to a 1:1 acreage match between Smits Model reforestation and the protection of virgin rainforest in perpetuity as national park. For every 30,000 hectares of Smits Model reforestation, the Ministry will designate 30,000 hectares (about 116 square miles) of virgin rainforest a National Park, and they have agreed to external monitoring by international NGOs for compliance. Since this Smits Model can scale to a million hectares, or ten million, with continually increasing economic, social, and environmental benefits, the two-fer impact is perhaps unprecedented.

It would be worthwhile for you to have someone from your staff take a look at this. In my carefully considered view, the political, social, and REDD benefits could be very substantial, and the possibility of a Public-Private Partnership is worth consideration.

The primary source for information on the project in the US is my friend and Senior Fellow at RMI, the remarkable Eric Rasmussen, MD, MDM, FACP -- CEO of the Google-founded humanitarian NGO called InSTEDD. He's leading, pro bono, the team developing the business plan, and can be reached at [redacted] or on cell at [redacted], Pacific Time Zone. B6

With warmest regards -- ABL

Amory B. Lovins

Chairman and Chief Scientist

Rocky Mountain Institute

1739 Snowmass Creek Road

Snowmass CO 81654, USA

+1 970 927 3129, fax 4178, desk (on vacation through 15 Jul), cell B6

Executive Assistant (Megan Shean) +1 970 927 7202,

Chief of Staff (Lionel Bony) +1 970 927 7307,

Special Aide (Bennett Cohen), +1 970 927 7312,

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 10:49 AM
To: Verma, Richard R; H
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Subject: RE:

OMG!

You are so fabulous!

-----Original Message-----
From: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 10:39 AM
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com'; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Subject:

Ann Stock was just confirmed by the Senate.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Strobe Talbott <[redacted]> B6
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 10:06 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: follow up on Afghan matter

June 26. In London, onwarding to Moscow.... Thought FT interview turned out well even if exposed Dan's ignorance about airplanes (he doesn't know the difference between a 727 and a 777!).

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, June 14, 2010 9:36 PM
To: Strobe Talbott
Subject: Re: follow up on Afghan matter

Thx so much for your quick and thorough followup. I'm not surprised that he believes he has to wait awhile. Let's aim for a time to catch up. When will you be back in DC?

----- Original Message -----
From: Strobe Talbott <[redacted]> B6
To: H
Cc: 'Cheryl Mills' <[redacted]>; Jake Sullivan (DOS) <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jun 02 18:20:34 2010
Subject: follow up on Afghan matter

Hillary, as promised, I connected with Bruce Jones at NYU about Spanta. Bruce got in touch offered to help Spanta put together an arrangement at NYU that might have a Brookings offshoot. Spanta said he needed to decide with Karzai whether in fact the timing was right for him to leave. He just got back in touch with Bruce saying he's decided to stay on a bit longer. That said, he's agreed to participate in some Track II regional work that Bruce has underway. All in all, it sounds as though this has ended up in the right place for now. Bruce, Martin and I will be open to other NY/DC possibilities down the road when Spanta's situation changes. Thanks again for the truly terrific event at Brookings. Regards, Strobe

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 12:07 PM
To: H
Subject: H: The bigger story here is the internal revolt against McChrystal. Sid

The Runaway General

Stanley McChrystal, Obama's top commander in Afghanistan, has seized control of the war by never taking his eye off the real enemy: The wimps in the White House

By Michael Hastings
Jun 22, 2010 10:00 AM EDT
This article originally appeared in RS 1108/1109 from July 8-22, 2010.

"How'd I get screwed into going to this dinner?" demands Gen. Stanley McChrystal. It's a Thursday night in mid-April, and the commander of all U.S. and NATO forces in Afghanistan is sitting in a four-star suite at the Hôtel Westminster in Paris. He's in France to sell his new war strategy to our NATO allies – to keep up the fiction, in essence, that we actually have allies. Since McChrystal took over a year ago, the Afghan war has become the exclusive property of the United States. Opposition to the war has already toppled the Dutch government, forced the resignation of Germany's president and sparked both Canada and the Netherlands to announce the withdrawal of their 4,500 troops. McChrystal is in Paris to keep the French, who have lost more than 40 soldiers in Afghanistan, from going all wobbly on him.
"The dinner comes with the position, sir," says his chief of staff, Col. Charlie Flynn.
McChrystal turns sharply in his chair.
"Hey, Charlie," he asks, "does this come with the position?"
McChrystal gives him the middle finger.

The general stands and looks around the suite that his traveling staff of 10 has converted into a full-scale operations center. The tables are crowded with silver Panasonic Toughbooks, and blue cables crisscross the hotel's thick carpet, hooked up to satellite dishes to provide encrypted phone and e-mail communications. Dressed in off-the-rack civilian casual – blue tie, button-down shirt, dress slacks – McChrystal is way out of his comfort zone. Paris, as one of his advisers says, is the "most anti-McChrystal city you can imagine." The general hates fancy restaurants, rejecting any place with candles on the tables as too "Gucci." He prefers Bud Light Lime (his favorite beer) to Bordeaux, Talladega Nights (his favorite movie) to Jean-Luc Godard. Besides, the public eye has never been a place where McChrystal felt comfortable: Before President Obama put him in charge of the war in Afghanistan, he spent five years running the Pentagon's most secretive black ops.
"What's the update on the Kandahar bombing?" McChrystal asks Flynn. The city has been rocked by two massive car bombs in the past day alone, calling into question the general's assurances that he can wrest it from the Taliban.
"We have two KIAs, but that hasn't been confirmed," Flynn says.
McChrystal takes a final look around the suite. At 55, he is gaunt and lean, not unlike an older version of Christian Bale in Rescue Dawn. His slate-blue eyes have the unsettling ability to drill down when they lock on you. If you've fucked up or disappointed him, they can destroy your soul without the need for him to raise his voice.

"I'd rather have my ass kicked by a roomful of people than go out to this dinner," McChrystal says.
He pauses a beat.
"Unfortunately," he adds, "no one in this room could do it."
With that, he's out the door.
"Who's he going to dinner with?" I ask one of his aides.
"Some French minister," the aide tells me. "It's fucking gay."

The next morning, McChrystal and his team gather to prepare for a speech he is giving at the École Militaire, a French military academy. The general prides himself on being sharper and ballsier than anyone else, but his brashness comes with a price: Although McChrystal has been in charge of the war for only a year, in that short time he has managed to piss off almost everyone with a stake in the conflict. Last fall, during the question-and-answer session following a speech he gave in London, McChrystal dismissed the counterterrorism strategy being advocated by Vice President Joe Biden as "shortsighted," saying it would lead to a state of "Chaos-istan." The remarks earned him a smackdown from the president himself, who summoned the general to a terse private meeting aboard Air Force One. The message to McChrystal seemed clear: Shut the fuck up, and keep a lower profile

Now, flipping through printout cards of his speech in Paris, McChrystal wonders aloud what Biden question he might get today, and how he should respond. "I never know what's going to pop out until I'm up there, that's the problem," he says. Then, unable to help themselves, he and his staff imagine the general dismissing the vice president with a good one-liner.

"Are you asking about Vice President Biden?" McChrystal says with a laugh. "Who's that?"

"Biden?" suggests a top adviser. "Did you say: Bite Me?"

When Barack Obama entered the Oval Office, he immediately set out to deliver on his most important campaign promise on foreign policy: to refocus the war in Afghanistan on what led us to invade in the first place. "I want the American people to understand," he announced in March 2009. "We have a clear and focused goal: to disrupt, dismantle and defeat Al Qaeda in Pakistan and Afghanistan." He ordered another 21,000 troops to Kabul, the largest increase since the war began in 2001. Taking the advice of both the Pentagon and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, he also fired Gen. David McKiernan – then the U.S. and NATO commander in Afghanistan – and replaced him with a man he didn't know and had met only briefly: Gen. Stanley McChrystal. It was the first time a top general had been relieved from duty during wartime in more than 50 years, since Harry Truman fired Gen. Douglas MacArthur at the height of the Korean War.

Even though he had voted for Obama, McChrystal and his new commander in chief failed from the outset to connect. The general first encountered Obama a week after he took office, when the president met with a dozen senior military officials in a room at the Pentagon known as the Tank. According to sources familiar with the meeting, McChrystal thought Obama looked "uncomfortable and intimidated" by the roomful of military brass. Their first one-on-one meeting took place in the Oval Office four months later, after McChrystal got the Afghanistan job, and it didn't go much better. "It was a 10-minute photo op," says an adviser to McChrystal. "Obama clearly didn't know anything about him, who he was. Here's the guy who's going to run his fucking war, but he didn't seem very engaged. The Boss was pretty disappointed."

From the start, McChrystal was determined to place his personal stamp on Afghanistan, to use it as a laboratory for a controversial military strategy known as counterinsurgency. COIN, as the theory is known, is the new gospel of the Pentagon brass, a doctrine that attempts to square the military's preference for high-tech violence with the demands of fighting protracted wars in failed states. COIN calls for sending huge numbers of ground troops to not only destroy the enemy, but to live among the civilian population and slowly rebuild, or build from scratch, another nation's government – a process that even its staunchest advocates admit requires years, if not decades, to achieve. The theory essentially rebrands the military, expanding its authority (and its funding) to encompass the diplomatic and political sides of warfare: Think the Green Berets as an armed Peace Corps. In 2006, after Gen. David Petraeus beta-tested the theory during his "surge" in Iraq, it quickly gained a hardcore following of think-tankers, journalists, military officers and civilian officials. Nicknamed "COINdinistas" for their cultish zeal, this influential cadre believed the doctrine would be the perfect solution for Afghanistan. All they needed was a general with enough charisma and political savvy to implement it.

As McChrystal leaned on Obama to ramp up the war, he did it with the same fearlessness he used to track down terrorists in Iraq: Figure out how your enemy operates, be faster and more ruthless than everybody else, then take the fuckers out. After arriving in Afghanistan last June, the general conducted his own policy review, ordered up by Defense Secretary Robert Gates. The now-infamous report was leaked to the press, and its conclusion was dire: If we didn't send another 40,000 troops – swelling the number of U.S. forces in Afghanistan by nearly half – we were in danger of "mission failure." The White House was furious. McChrystal, they felt, was trying to bully Obama, opening him up to charges of being weak on national security unless he did what the general wanted. It was Obama versus the Pentagon, and the Pentagon was determined to kick the president's ass.

Last fall, with his top general calling for more troops, Obama launched a three-month review to re-evaluate the strategy in Afghanistan. "I found that time painful," McChrystal tells me in one of several lengthy interviews. "I was selling an unsellable position." For the general, it was a crash course in Beltway politics – a battle that pitted him against experienced Washington insiders like Vice President Biden, who argued that a prolonged counterinsurgency campaign in Afghanistan would plunge America into a military quagmire without weakening international terrorist networks. "The entire COIN strategy is a fraud perpetuated on the American people," says Douglas Macgregor, a retired colonel and leading critic of counterinsurgency who attended West Point with McChrystal. "The idea that we are going to spend a trillion dollars to reshape the culture of the Islamic world is utter nonsense.

In the end, however, McChrystal got almost exactly what he wanted. On December 1st, in a speech at West Point, the president laid out all the reasons why fighting the war in Afghanistan is a bad idea: It's expensive; we're in an economic crisis; a decade-long commitment would sap American power; Al Qaeda has shifted its base of operations to Pakistan.

Then, without ever using the words "victory" or "win," Obama announced that he would send an additional 30,000 troops to Afghanistan, almost as many as McChrystal had requested. The president had thrown his weight, however hesitantly, behind the counterinsurgency crowd.

Today, as McChrystal gears up for an offensive in southern Afghanistan, the prospects for any kind of success look bleak. In June, the death toll for U.S. troops passed 1,000, and the number of IEDs has doubled. Spending hundreds of billions of dollars on the fifth-poorest country on earth has failed to win over the civilian population, whose attitude toward U.S. troops ranges from intensely wary to openly hostile. The biggest military operation of the year – a ferocious offensive that began in February to retake the southern town of Marja – continues to drag on, prompting McChrystal himself to refer to it as a "bleeding ulcer." In June, Afghanistan officially outpaced Vietnam as the longest war in American history – and Obama has quietly begun to back away from the deadline he set for withdrawing U.S. troops in July of next year. The president finds himself stuck in something even more insane than a quagmire: a quagmire he knowingly walked into, even though it's precisely the kind of gigantic, mind-numbing, multigenerational nation-building project he explicitly said he didn't want.

Even those who support McChrystal and his strategy of counterinsurgency know that whatever the general manages to accomplish in Afghanistan, it's going to look more like Vietnam than Desert Storm. "It's not going to look like a win, smell like a win or taste like a win," says Maj. Gen. Bill Mayville, who serves as chief of operations for McChrystal. "This is going to end in an argument."

The night after his speech in Paris, McChrystal and his staff head to Kitty O'Shea's, an Irish pub catering to tourists, around the corner from the hotel. His wife, Annie, has joined him for a rare visit: Since the Iraq War began in 2003, she has seen her husband less than 30 days a year. Though it is his and Annie's 33rd wedding anniversary, McChrystal has invited his inner circle along for dinner and drinks at the "least Gucci" place his staff could find. His wife isn't surprised. "He once took me to a Jack in the Box when I was dressed in formalwear," she says with a laugh.

The general's staff is a handpicked collection of killers, spies, geniuses, patriots, political operators and outright maniacs. There's a former head of British Special Forces, two Navy Seals, an Afghan Special Forces commando, a lawyer, two fighter pilots and at least two dozen combat veterans and counterinsurgency experts. They jokingly refer to themselves as Team America, taking the name from the South Park-esque sendup of military cluelessness, and they pride themselves on their can-do attitude and their disdain for authority. After arriving in Kabul last summer, Team America set about changing the culture of the International Security Assistance Force, as the NATO-led mission is known. (U.S. soldiers had taken to deriding ISAF as short for "I Suck at Fighting" or "In Sandals and Flip-Flops.") McChrystal banned alcohol on base, kicked out Burger King and other symbols of American excess, expanded the morning briefing to include thousands of officers and refashioned the command center into a Situational Awareness Room, a free-flowing information hub modeled after Mayor Mike Bloomberg's offices in New York. He also set a manic pace for his staff, becoming legendary for sleeping four hours a night, running seven miles each morning, and eating one meal a day. (In the month I spend around the general, I witness him eating only once.) It's a kind of superhuman narrative that has built up around him, a staple in almost every media profile, as if the ability to go without sleep and food translates into the possibility of a man single-handedly winning the war.

By midnight at Kitty O'Shea's, much of Team America is completely shitfaced. Two officers do an Irish jig mixed with steps from a traditional Afghan wedding dance, while McChrystal's top advisers lock arms and sing a slurred song of their own invention. "Afghanistan!" they bellow. "Afghanistan!" They call it their Afghanistan song.

McChrystal steps away from the circle, observing his team. "All these men," he tells me. "I'd die for them. And they'd die for me."

The assembled men may look and sound like a bunch of combat veterans letting off steam, but in fact this tight-knit group represents the most powerful force shaping U.S. policy in Afghanistan. While McChrystal and his men are in indisputable command of all military aspects of the war, there is no equivalent position on the diplomatic or political side. Instead, an assortment of administration players compete over the Afghan portfolio: U.S. Ambassador Karl Eikenberry, Special Representative to Afghanistan Richard Holbrooke, National Security Advisor Jim Jones and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, not to mention 40 or so other coalition ambassadors and a host of talking heads who try to insert themselves into the mess, from John Kerry to John McCain. This diplomatic incoherence has effectively allowed McChrystal's team to call the shots and hampered efforts to build a stable and credible government in Afghanistan. "It jeopardizes the mission," says Stephen Biddle, a senior fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations who supports McChrystal. "The military cannot by itself create governance reform."

Part of the problem is structural: The Defense Department budget exceeds $600 billion a year, while the State Department receives only $50 billion. But part of the problem is personal: In private, Team McChrystal likes to talk shit about many of Obama's top people on the diplomatic side. One aide calls Jim Jones, a retired four-star general and veteran of the Cold War, a "clown" who remains "stuck in 1985." Politicians like McCain and Kerry, says another aide, "turn up, have a meeting with Karzai, criticize him at the airport press conference, then get back for the Sunday talk shows. Frankly, it's not very helpful." Only Hillary Clinton receives good reviews from McChrystal's inner circle. "Hillary had Stan's back during the strategic review," says an adviser. "She said, 'If Stan wants it, give him what he needs.' "

McChrystal reserves special skepticism for Holbrooke, the official in charge of reintegrating the Taliban. "The Boss says he's like a wounded animal," says a member of the general's team. "Holbrooke keeps hearing rumors that he's going to get fired, so that makes him dangerous. He's a brilliant guy, but he just comes in, pulls on a lever, whatever he can grasp onto. But this is COIN, and you can't just have someone yanking on shit."

At one point on his trip to Paris, McChrystal checks his BlackBerry. "Oh, not another e-mail from Holbrooke," he groans. "I don't even want to open it." He clicks on the message and reads the salutation out loud, then stuffs the BlackBerry back in his pocket, not bothering to conceal his annoyance.
"Make sure you don't get any of that on your leg," an aide jokes, referring to the e-mail.

By far the most crucial – and strained – relationship is between McChrystal and Eikenberry, the U.S. ambassador. According to those close to the two men, Eikenberry – a retired three-star general who served in Afghanistan in 2002 and 2005 – can't stand that his former subordinate is now calling the shots. He's also furious that McChrystal, backed by NATO's allies, refused to put Eikenberry in the pivotal role of viceroy in Afghanistan, which would have made him the diplomatic equivalent of the general. The job instead went to British Ambassador Mark Sedwill – a move that effectively increased McChrystal's influence over diplomacy by shutting out a powerful rival. "In reality, that position needs to be filled by an American for it to have weight," says a U.S. official familiar with the negotiations.
The relationship was further strained in January, when a classified cable that Eikenberry wrote was leaked to The New York Times. The cable was as scathing as it was prescient. The ambassador offered a brutal critique of McChrystal's strategy, dismissed President Hamid Karzai as "not an adequate strategic partner," and cast doubt on whether the counterinsurgency plan would be "sufficient" to deal with Al Qaeda. "We will become more deeply engaged here with no way to extricate ourselves," Eikenberry warned, "short of allowing the country to descend again into lawlessness and chaos."
McChrystal and his team were blindsided by the cable. "I like Karl, I've known him for years, but they'd never said anything like that to us before," says McChrystal, who adds that he felt "betrayed" by the leak. "Here's one that covers his flank for the history books. Now if we fail, they can say, 'I told you so.' "
The most striking example of McChrystal's usurpation of diplomatic policy is his handling of Karzai. It is McChrystal, not diplomats like Eikenberry or Holbrooke, who enjoys the best relationship with the man America is relying on to lead Afghanistan. The doctrine of counterinsurgency requires a credible government, and since Karzai is not considered credible by his own people, McChrystal has worked hard to make him so. Over the past few months, he has accompanied the president on more than 10 trips around the country, standing beside him at political meetings, or shuras, in Kandahar. In February, the day before the doomed offensive in Marja, McChrystal even drove over to the president's palace to get him to sign off on what would be the largest military operation of the year. Karzai's staff, however, insisted that the president was sleeping off a cold and could not be disturbed. After several hours of haggling, McChrystal finally enlisted the aid of Afghanistan's defense minister, who persuaded Karzai's people to wake the president from his nap.
This is one of the central flaws with McChrystal's counterinsurgency strategy: The need to build a credible government puts us at the mercy of whatever tin-pot leader we've backed – a danger that Eikenberry explicitly warned about in his cable. Even Team McChrystal privately acknowledges that Karzai is a less-than-ideal partner. "He's been locked up in his palace the past year," laments one of the general's top advisers. At times, Karzai himself has actively undermined McChrystal's desire to put him in charge. During a recent visit to Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Karzai met three U.S. soldiers who had been wounded in Uruzgan province. "General," he called out to McChrystal, "I didn't even know we were fighting in Uruzgan!"

Growing up as a military brat, McChrystal exhibited the mixture of brilliance and cockiness that would follow him throughout his career. His father fought in Korea and Vietnam, retiring as a two-star general, and his four brothers all joined the armed services. Moving around to different bases, McChrystal took solace in baseball, a sport in which he made no pretense of hiding his superiority: In Little League, he would call out strikes to the crowd before whipping a fastball down the middle.
McChrystal entered West Point in 1972, when the U.S. military was close to its all-time low in popularity. His class was the last to graduate before the academy started to admit women. The "Prison on the Hudson," as it was known then, was a potent mix of testosterone, hooliganism and reactionary patriotism. Cadets repeatedly trashed the mess hall in food fights, and birthdays were celebrated with a tradition called "rat fucking," which often left the birthday boy outside in the snow or mud, covered in shaving cream. "It was pretty out of control," says Lt. Gen. David Barno, a classmate who went on to serve as the top commander in Afghanistan from 2003 to 2005. The class, filled with what Barno calls "huge talent" and "wild-eyed teenagers with a strong sense of idealism," also produced Gen. Ray Odierno, the current commander of U.S. forces in Iraq.
The son of a general, McChrystal was also a ringleader of the campus dissidents – a dual role that taught him how to thrive in a rigid, top-down environment while thumbing his nose at authority every chance he got. He accumulated more than 100 hours of demerits for drinking, partying and insubordination – a record that his classmates boasted made him a "century man." One classmate, who asked not to be named, recalls finding McChrystal passed out in the shower after downing a case of beer he had hidden under the sink. The troublemaking almost got him kicked out, and he spent hours subjected to forced marches in the Area, a paved courtyard where unruly cadets were disciplined. "I'd come visit, and I'd end up spending most of my time in the library, while Stan was in the Area," recalls Annie, who began dating McChrystal in 1973.

McChrystal wound up ranking 298 out of a class of 855, a serious underachievement for a man widely regarded as brilliant. His most compelling work was extracurricular: As managing editor of The Pointer, the West Point literary magazine, McChrystal wrote seven short stories that eerily foreshadow many of the issues he would confront in his career. In one tale, a fictional officer complains about the difficulty of training foreign troops to fight; in another, a 19-year-old soldier kills a boy he mistakes for a terrorist. In "Brinkman's Note," a piece of suspense fiction, the unnamed narrator appears to be trying to stop a plot to assassinate the president. It turns out, however, that the narrator himself is the assassin, and he's able to infiltrate the White House: "The President strode in smiling. From the right coat pocket of the raincoat I carried, I slowly drew forth my 32-caliber pistol. In Brinkman's failure, I had succeeded."

After graduation, 2nd Lt. Stanley McChrystal entered an Army that was all but broken in the wake of Vietnam. "We really felt we were a peacetime generation," he recalls. "There was the Gulf War, but even that didn't feel like that big of a deal." So McChrystal spent his career where the action was: He enrolled in Special Forces school and became a regimental commander of the 3rd Ranger Battalion in 1986. It was a dangerous position, even in peacetime – nearly two dozen Rangers were killed in training accidents during the Eighties. It was also an unorthodox career path: Most soldiers who want to climb the ranks to general don't go into the Rangers. Displaying a penchant for transforming systems he considers outdated, McChrystal set out to revolutionize the training regime for the Rangers. He introduced mixed martial arts, required every soldier to qualify with night-vision goggles on the rifle range and forced troops to build up their endurance with weekly marches involving heavy backpacks.

In the late 1990s, McChrystal shrewdly improved his inside game, spending a year at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government and then at the Council on Foreign Relations, where he co-authored a treatise on the merits and drawbacks of humanitarian interventionism. But as he moved up through the ranks, McChrystal relied on the skills he had learned as a troublemaking kid at West Point: knowing precisely how far he could go in a rigid military hierarchy without getting tossed out. Being a highly intelligent badass, he discovered, could take you far – especially in the political chaos that followed September 11th. "He was very focused," says Annie. "Even as a young officer he seemed to know what he wanted to do. I don't think his personality has changed in all these years."

By some accounts, McChrystal's career should have been over at least two times by now. As Pentagon spokesman during the invasion of Iraq, the general seemed more like a White House mouthpiece than an up-and-coming commander with a reputation for speaking his mind. When Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld made his infamous "stuff happens" remark during the looting of Baghdad, McChrystal backed him up. A few days later, he echoed the president's Mission Accomplished gaffe by insisting that major combat operations in Iraq were over. But it was during his next stint – overseeing the military's most elite units, including the Rangers, Navy Seals and Delta Force – that McChrystal took part in a cover-up that would have destroyed the career of a lesser man.

After Cpl. Pat Tillman, the former-NFL-star-turned-Ranger, was accidentally killed by his own troops in Afghanistan in April 2004, McChrystal took an active role in creating the impression that Tillman had died at the hands of Taliban fighters. He signed off on a falsified recommendation for a Silver Star that suggested Tillman had been killed by enemy fire. (McChrystal would later claim he didn't read the recommendation closely enough – a strange excuse for a commander known for his laserlike attention to minute details.) A week later, McChrystal sent a memo up the chain of command, specifically warning that President Bush should avoid mentioning the cause of Tillman's death. "If the circumstances of Corporal Tillman's death become public," he wrote, it could cause "public embarrassment" for the president.

"The false narrative, which McChrystal clearly helped construct, diminished Pat's true actions," wrote Tillman's mother, Mary, in her book Boots on the Ground by Dusk. McChrystal got away with it, she added, because he was the "golden boy" of Rumsfeld and Bush, who loved his willingness to get things done, even if it included bending the rules or skipping the chain of command. Nine days after Tillman's death, McChrystal was promoted to major general.

Two years later, in 2006, McChrystal was tainted by a scandal involving detainee abuse and torture at Camp Nama in Iraq. According to a report by Human Rights Watch, prisoners at the camp were subjected to a now-familiar litany of abuse: stress positions, being dragged naked through the mud. McChrystal was not disciplined in the scandal, even though an interrogator at the camp reported seeing him inspect the prison multiple times. But the experience was so unsettling to McChrystal that he tried to prevent detainee operations from being placed under his command in Afghanistan, viewing them as a "political swamp," according to a U.S. official. In May 2009, as McChrystal prepared for his confirmation hearings, his staff prepared him for hard questions about Camp Nama and the Tillman cover-up. But the scandals barely made a ripple in Congress, and McChrystal was soon on his way back to Kabul to run the war in Afghanistan.

The media, to a large extent, have also given McChrystal a pass on both controversies. Where Gen. Petraeus is kind of a dweeb, a teacher's pet with a Ranger's tab, McChrystal is a snake-eating rebel, a "Jedi" commander, as Newsweek called him. He didn't care when his teenage son came home with blue hair and a mohawk. He speaks his mind with a candor rare for a high-ranking official. He asks for opinions, and seems genuinely interested in the response. He gets briefings on his iPod and listens to books on tape. He carries a custom-made set of nunchucks in his convoy engraved with his name and four stars, and his itinerary often bears a fresh quote from Bruce Lee. ("There are no limits. There are only plateaus, and you must not stay there, you must go beyond them.") He went out on dozens of nighttime raids during his time in Iraq, unprecedented for a top commander, and turned up on missions unannounced, with almost no entourage. "The fucking lads love Stan McChrystal," says a British officer who serves in Kabul. "You'd be out in Somewhere, Iraq, and someone would take a knee beside you, and a corporal would be like 'Who the fuck is that?' And it's fucking Stan McChrystal."

It doesn't hurt that McChrystal was also extremely successful as head of the Joint Special Operations Command, the elite forces that carry out the government's darkest ops. During the Iraq surge, his team killed and captured thousands of insurgents, including Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, the leader of Al Qaeda in Iraq. "JSOC was a killing machine," says Maj. Gen. Mayville, his chief of operations. McChrystal was also open to new ways of killing. He systematically mapped out terrorist networks, targeting specific insurgents and hunting them down – often with the help of cyberfreaks traditionally shunned by the military. "The Boss would find the 24-year-old kid with a nose ring, with some fucking brilliant degree from MIT, sitting in the corner with 16 computer monitors humming," says a Special Forces commando who worked with McChrystal in Iraq and now serves on his staff in Kabul. "He'd say, 'Hey – you fucking muscleheads couldn't find lunch without help. You got to work together with these guys.' "

Even in his new role as America's leading evangelist for counterinsurgency, McChrystal retains the deep-seated instincts of a terrorist hunter. To put pressure on the Taliban, he has upped the number of Special Forces units in Afghanistan from four to 19. "You better be out there hitting four or five targets tonight," McChrystal will tell a Navy Seal he sees in the hallway at headquarters. Then he'll add, "I'm going to have to scold you in the morning for it, though." In fact, the general frequently finds himself apologizing for the disastrous consequences of counterinsurgency. In the first four months of this year, NATO forces killed some 90 civilians, up 76 percent from the same period in 2009 – a record that has created tremendous resentment among the very population that COIN theory is intent on winning over. In February, a Special Forces night raid ended in the deaths of two pregnant Afghan women and allegations of a cover-up, and in April, protests erupted in Kandahar after U.S. forces accidentally shot up a bus, killing five Afghans. "We've shot an amazing number of people," McChrystal recently conceded.

Despite the tragedies and miscues, McChrystal has issued some of the strictest directives to avoid civilian casualties that the U.S. military has ever encountered in a war zone. It's "insurgent math," as he calls it – for every innocent person you kill, you create 10 new enemies. He has ordered convoys to curtail their reckless driving, put restrictions on the use of air power and severely limited night raids. He regularly apologizes to Hamid Karzai when civilians are killed, and berates commanders responsible for civilian deaths. "For a while," says one U.S. official, "the most dangerous place to be in Afghanistan was in front of McChrystal after a 'civ cas' incident." The ISAF command has even discussed ways to make not killing into something you can win an award for: There's talk of creating a new medal for "courageous restraint," a buzzword that's unlikely to gain much traction in the gung-ho culture of the U.S. military.

But however strategic they may be, McChrystal's new marching orders have caused an intense backlash among his own troops. Being told to hold their fire, soldiers complain, puts them in greater danger. "Bottom line?" says a former Special Forces operator who has spent years in Iraq and Afghanistan. "I would love to kick McChrystal in the nuts. His rules of engagement put soldiers' lives in even greater danger. Every real soldier will tell you the same thing."

In March, McChrystal traveled to Combat Outpost JFM – a small encampment on the outskirts of Kandahar – to confront such accusations from the troops directly. It was a typically bold move by the general. Only two days earlier, he had received an e-mail from Israel Arroyo, a 25-year-old staff sergeant who asked McChrystal to go on a mission with his unit. "I am writing because it was said you don't care about the troops and have made it harder to defend ourselves," Arroyo wrote.

Within hours, McChrystal responded personally: "I'm saddened by the accusation that I don't care about soldiers, as it is something I suspect any soldier takes both personally and professionally – at least I do. But I know perceptions depend upon your perspective at the time, and I respect that every soldier's view is his own." Then he showed up at Arroyo's outpost and went on a foot patrol with the troops – not some bullshit photo-op stroll through a market, but a real live operation in a dangerous war zone.

Six weeks later, just before McChrystal returned from Paris, the general received another e-mail from Arroyo. A 23-year-old corporal named Michael Ingram – one of the soldiers McChrystal had gone on patrol with – had been killed by an IED a day earlier. It was the third man the 25-member platoon had lost in a year, and Arroyo was writing to see if the general would attend Ingram's memorial service. "He started to look up to you," Arroyo wrote. McChrystal said he would try to make it down to pay his respects as soon as possible.

The night before the general is scheduled to visit Sgt. Arroyo's platoon for the memorial, I arrive at Combat Outpost JFM to speak with the soldiers he had gone on patrol with. JFM is a small encampment, ringed by high blast walls and guard towers. Almost all of the soldiers here have been on repeated combat tours in both Iraq and Afghanistan, and have seen some of the worst fighting of both wars. But they are especially angered by Ingram's death. His commanders had repeatedly requested permission to tear down the house where Ingram was killed, noting that it was often used as a combat position by the Taliban. But due to McChrystal's new restrictions to avoid upsetting civilians, the request had been denied. "These were abandoned houses," fumes Staff Sgt. Kennith Hicks. "Nobody was coming back to live in them."

One soldier shows me the list of new regulations the platoon was given. "Patrol only in areas that you are reasonably certain that you will not have to defend yourselves with lethal force," the laminated card reads. For a soldier who has traveled halfway around the world to fight, that's like telling a cop he should only patrol in areas where he knows he won't have to make arrests. "Does that make any fucking sense?" asks Pfc. Jared Pautsch. "We should just drop a fucking bomb on this place. You sit and ask yourself: What are we doing here?"

The rules handed out here are not what McChrystal intended – they've been distorted as they passed through the chain of command – but knowing that does nothing to lessen the anger of troops on the ground. "Fuck, when I came over here and heard that McChrystal was in charge, I thought we would get our fucking gun on," says Hicks, who has served three tours of combat. "I get COIN. I get all that. McChrystal comes here, explains it, it makes sense. But then he goes away on his bird, and by the time his directives get passed down to us through Big Army, they're all fucked up – either because somebody is trying to cover their ass, or because they just don't understand it themselves. But we're fucking losing this thing."

McChrystal and his team show up the next day. Underneath a tent, the general has a 45-minute discussion with some two dozen soldiers. The atmosphere is tense. "I ask you what's going on in your world, and I think it's important for you all to understand the big picture as well," McChrystal begins. "How's the company doing? You guys feeling sorry for yourselves? Anybody? Anybody feel like you're losing?" McChrystal says.

"Sir, some of the guys here, sir, think we're losing, sir," says Hicks.

McChrystal nods. "Strength is leading when you just don't want to lead," he tells the men. "You're leading by example. That's what we do. Particularly when it's really, really hard, and it hurts inside." Then he spends 20 minutes talking about counterinsurgency, diagramming his concepts and principles on a whiteboard. He makes COIN seem like common sense, but he's careful not to bullshit the men. "We are knee-deep in the decisive year," he tells them. The Taliban, he insists, no longer has the initiative – "but I don't think we do, either." It's similar to the talk he gave in Paris, but it's not winning any hearts and minds among the soldiers. "This is the philosophical part that works with think tanks," McChrystal tries to joke. "But it doesn't get the same reception from infantry companies."

During the question-and-answer period, the frustration boils over. The soldiers complain about not being allowed to use lethal force, about watching insurgents they detain be freed for lack of evidence. They want to be able to fight – like they did in Iraq, like they had in Afghanistan before McChrystal. "We aren't putting fear into the Taliban," one soldier says.

"Winning hearts and minds in COIN is a coldblooded thing," McChrystal says, citing an oft-repeated maxim that you can't kill your way out of Afghanistan. "The Russians killed 1 million Afghans, and that didn't work."

"I'm not saying go out and kill everybody, sir," the soldier persists. "You say we've stopped the momentum of the insurgency. I don't believe that's true in this area. The more we pull back, the more we restrain ourselves, the stronger it's getting."

"I agree with you," McChrystal says. "In this area, we've not made progress, probably. You have to show strength here, you have to use fire. What I'm telling you is, fire costs you. What do you want to do? You want to wipe the population out here and resettle it?"

A soldier complains that under the rules, any insurgent who doesn't have a weapon is immediately assumed to be a civilian. "That's the way this game is," McChrystal says. "It's complex. I can't just decide: It's shirts and skins, and we'll kill all the shirts."

As the discussion ends, McChrystal seems to sense that he hasn't succeeded at easing the men's anger. He makes one last-ditch effort to reach them, acknowledging the death of Cpl. Ingram. "There's no way I can make that easier," he tells them. "No way I can pretend it won't hurt. No way I can tell you not to feel that. . . . I will tell you, you're doing a great job. Don't let the frustration get to you." The session ends with no clapping, and no real resolution. McChrystal may have sold President Obama on counterinsurgency, but many of his own men aren't buying it.

When it comes to Afghanistan, history is not on McChrystal's side. The only foreign invader to have any success here was Genghis Khan – and he wasn't hampered by things like human rights, economic development and press scrutiny. The COIN doctrine, bizarrely, draws inspiration from some of the biggest Western military embarrassments in recent memory: France's nasty war in Algeria (lost in 1962) and the American misadventure in Vietnam (lost in 1975).

McChrystal, like other advocates of COIN, readily acknowledges that counterinsurgency campaigns are inherently messy, expensive and easy to lose. "Even Afghans are confused by Afghanistan," he says. But even if he somehow manages to succeed, after years of bloody fighting with Afghan kids who pose no threat to the U.S. homeland, the war will do little to shut down Al Qaeda, which has shifted its operations to Pakistan. Dispatching 150,000 troops to build new schools, roads, mosques and water-treatment facilities around Kandahar is like trying to stop the drug war in Mexico by occupying Arkansas and building Baptist churches in Little Rock. "It's all very cynical, politically," says Marc Sageman, a former CIA case officer who has extensive experience in the region. "Afghanistan is not in our vital interest – there's nothing for us there."

In mid-May, two weeks after visiting the troops in Kandahar, McChrystal travels to the White House for a high-level visit by Hamid Karzai. It is a triumphant moment for the general, one that demonstrates he is very much in command – both in Kabul and in Washington. In the East Room, which is packed with journalists and dignitaries, President Obama sings the praises of Karzai. The two leaders talk about how great their relationship is, about the pain they feel over civilian casualties. They mention the word "progress" 16 times in under an hour. But there is no mention of victory. Still, the session represents the most forceful commitment that Obama has made to McChrystal's strategy in months. "There is no denying the progress that the Afghan people have made in recent years – in education, in health care and economic development," the president says. "As I saw in the lights across Kabul when I landed – lights that would not have been visible just a few years earlier."

It is a disconcerting observation for Obama to make. During the worst years in Iraq, when the Bush administration had no real progress to point to, officials used to offer up the exact same evidence of success. "It was one of our first impressions," one GOP official said in 2006, after landing in Baghdad at the height of the sectarian violence. "So many lights shining brightly." So it is to the language of the Iraq War that the Obama administration has turned – talk of progress, of city lights, of metrics like health care and education. Rhetoric that just a few years ago they would have mocked. "They are trying to manipulate perceptions because there is no definition of victory – because victory is not even defined or recognizable," says Celeste Ward, a senior defense analyst at the RAND Corporation who served as a political adviser to U.S. commanders in Iraq in 2006. "That's the game we're in right now. What we need, for strategic purposes, is to create the perception that we didn't get run off. The facts on the ground are not great, and are not going to become great in the near future."

But facts on the ground, as history has proven, offer little deterrent to a military determined to stay the course. Even those closest to McChrystal know that the rising anti-war sentiment at home doesn't begin to reflect how deeply fucked up things are in Afghanistan. "If Americans pulled back and started paying attention to this war, it would become even less popular," a senior adviser to McChrystal says. Such realism, however, doesn't prevent advocates of counterinsurgency from dreaming big: Instead of beginning to withdraw troops next year, as Obama promised, the military hopes to ramp up its counterinsurgency campaign even further. "There's a possibility we could ask for another surge of U.S. forces next summer if we see success here," a senior military official in Kabul tells me.

Back in Afghanistan, less than a month after the White House meeting with Karzai and all the talk of "progress," McChrystal is hit by the biggest blow to his vision of counterinsurgency. Since last year, the Pentagon had been planning to launch a major military operation this summer in Kandahar, the country's second-largest city and the Taliban's original home base. It was supposed to be a decisive turning point in the war – the primary reason for the troop surge that McChrystal wrested from Obama late last year. But on June 10th, acknowledging that the military still needs to lay more groundwork, the general announced that he is postponing the offensive until the fall. Rather than one big battle, like Fallujah or Ramadi, U.S. troops will implement what McChrystal calls a "rising tide of security." The Afghan police and army will enter Kandahar to attempt to seize control of neighborhoods, while the U.S. pours $90 million of aid into the city to win over the civilian population.

Even proponents of counterinsurgency are hard-pressed to explain the new plan. "This isn't a classic operation," says a U.S. military official. "It's not going to be Black Hawk Down. There aren't going to be doors kicked in." Other U.S. officials insist that doors are going to be kicked in, but that it's going to be a kinder, gentler offensive than the disaster in Marja. "The Taliban have a jackboot on the city," says a military official. "We have to remove them, but we have to do it in a way that doesn't alienate the population." When Vice President Biden was briefed on the new plan in the Oval Office, insiders say he was shocked to see how much it mirrored the more gradual plan of counterterrorism that he advocated last fall. "This looks like CT-plus!" he said, according to U.S. officials familiar with the meeting.

Whatever the nature of the new plan, the delay underscores the fundamental flaws of counterinsurgency. After nine years of war, the Taliban simply remains too strongly entrenched for the U.S. military to openly attack. The very people that COIN seeks to win over – the Afghan people – do not want us there. Our supposed ally, President Karzai, used his influence to delay the offensive, and the massive influx of aid championed by McChrystal is likely only to make things worse. "Throwing money at the problem exacerbates the problem," says Andrew Wilder, an expert at Tufts University who has studied the effect of aid in southern Afghanistan. "A tsunami of cash fuels corruption, delegitimizes the government and creates an environment where we're picking winners and losers" – a process that fuels resentment and hostility among the civilian population. So far, counterinsurgency has succeeded only in creating a never-ending demand for the primary product supplied by the military: perpetual war. There is a reason that President Obama studiously avoids using the word "victory" when he talks about Afghanistan. Winning, it would seem, is not really possible. Not even with Stanley McChrystal in charge.

This article originally appeared in RS 1108/1109 from July 8-22, 2010.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Cherie Blair <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 3:05 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: confidential

W I'll send you details later

Sent from my iPad

On 15 Jun 2010, at 02:37, "H" <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:

> I would be happy to meet w hiim. How should I follow up to arrange a mutually agreeable time? All the best to you.
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Cherie Blair <[redacted]> B6
> To: H
> Sent: Mon Jun 07 09:56:45 2010
> Subject: confidential
>
> As you know I have good links to the Qataris. Sheikha Mosah's son is the 31/32 year old Crown Prince and she is keen that he starts to build a wider international profile. He has been appointed head of the Qatar National Food Security Programme which is designed to deal with Qatar's food security issues its a $30 billion programme. He is aware that food security is an issue you are majoring on and would love to meet with you in person to discuss this and to explore potential partnership areas between US and Qatar including possible participation in the US/World Bank Food Security Fund. He is also keen to talk more generally about US/Qatari cooperation and even suggested they could help out with the Oil spill problem. There is apparently a Arab Food Security Summit in October 2010 and he would like to discuss Us participation in that too.
>
> IS a meeting possible he is more flexible on place and times than his mother! Or maybe we could set up an initial phone call.
>
> Can you let me know if this appeals to you at all?
>
>
>
> Cherie Blair
>
> [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
> This message has been scanned by MailController - www.MailController.altohiway.com

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 7:48 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Maggie

Yes, it works well -- I will follow up with her office.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Thu May 06 07:37:59 2010
Subject: Maggie

I'd like to see her next week. Does Thursday night work?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 4:54 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Fwd: [InsidersOut] Clinton equates LGBT rights to human rights

Fyi

From: Richard Socarides [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Jun 22 16:43:36 2010
Subject: Fwd: [InsidersOut] Clinton equates LGBT rights to human rights

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Chris Johnson [redacted]
Date: Tue, Jun 22, 2010 at 3:47 PM
Subject: [InsidersOut] Clinton equates LGBT rights to human rights
To: insidersout@googlegroups.com

http://www.washingtonblade.com/2010/06/22/clinton-equates-lgbt-rights-to-human-rights/

Clinton equates LGBT rights to human rights

Chris Johnson | Jun 22, 2010 | Comments 0

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton on Tuesday equated the pursuit of LGBT rights to the pursuit of human rights as she celebrated Pride month with gay State Department employees.

During a speech, Clinton said her belief that LGBT rights are synonymous with human rights as a whole is consistent with remarks she made as first lady in favor of women's rights during a visit to China.

"Just as I was very proud to say the obvious more than 15 years ago in Beijing that human rights are women's rights — and women's rights are human rights — let me say today that human rights are gay rights and gay rights are human rights," she said.

Clinton made her remarks during a State Department event commemorating June as Pride month. Gays & Lesbians in Foreign Affairs Agencies, the affinity group for LGBT employees at the State Department, coordinated the event.

The secretary compared LGBT rights to human rights after describing discrimination and oppression that many people face in other countries. She said these abuses sometimes consist of people being "harassed, beaten, subjected to sexual violence — even killed — because of who they are and who they love."

"In some places, violence against the LGBT community is permitted by law and inflamed by public calls to violence," she said. "In others, it persists insidiously behind closed doors. These dangers are not gay issues. This is a human rights issue."

Clinton was well received by the more than 400 people who attended the State Department event. She received a standing ovation before and after her speech.

The secretary said she's been "greatly motivated" by the personal stories of LGBT people over her lifetime and that they helped shape the course of her political career.

She recalled how as a first lady she marched in a Pride parade — something a first lady had never done before — and noted she co-sponsored a number of pro-LGBT bills in her previous role as a U.S. senator from New York, including hate crimes bill and the Employment Non-Discrimination Act.

In an effort to continue that commitment to LGBT people, Clinton said the State Department would "advance a comprehensive human rights agenda" that would include an end to violence and discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity.

She said efforts to confront this oppression consist of "elevating our human rights dialogues" with foreign governments to protect LGBT people as well as documenting anti-gay abuses in the State Department's annual human rights report.

One of the arms of the State Department that Clinton commended for taking the lead at confronting anti-gay abuses was the Bureau of African Affairs, which she said directed every U.S. embassy in Africa to report on the conditions of local LGBT communities. Clinton noted that she's asked every regional bureau "to make this issue a priority."

Clinton said Foreign Service officers in the State Department are siding with pro-LGBT groups overseas despite threats to personal safety. She cited the participation of U.S. officials last month in Slovakia's first ever Pride parade as one example.

"There were anti-gay protesters who became violent and the police used tear gas, which our chargée and other diplomats were exposed to — a quite unpleasant experience, but a service to a just cause," she said.

On the domestic front, Clinton recognized that many LGBT Americans feel frustrated on the lack of progress on advancing LGBT issues. Still, Clinton urged patience and said much progress has already been made.

"I know when you're in the midst of a great movement of change, it seems like it is glacial, but any fair assessment — from my perspective, and I lived longer than at least more than 75 percent of you — is that it is extraordinary what has happened in such a short period of time," she said.

Clinton said the U.S. has come "such a far distance" in advancing LGBT rights, but said are there many people within the country who need outreach and support to "stand up and be who they are."

"The struggle for equality is never, ever finished," she said. "And it is rarely easy, despite how self-evident it should be, but the hardest fought battles often have the biggest impact."

The secretary encouraged LGBT people to look out for others who may need a hand — such as LGBT youth, whom Clinton said "still, in numbers far beyond what should ever happen, take their own lives rather than live that life."

"So, I hope that each and every one of us will recommit ourselves to building a future in which every person — every single person — can live in dignity, free from violence, free to be themselves, free to live up to their God-given potential — wherever they live and whoever they are," she said.

--
Reminder: This list is an invitation only lists and all posts are OFF THE RECORD.
You received this message because you are subscribed to the Google Groups "InsidersOut" group.
To post to this group, send email to InsidersOut@googlegroups.com
To unsubscribe from this group, send email to InsidersOut-unsubscribe@googlegroups.com
For more options, visit this group at http://groups.google.com/group/InsidersOut?hl=en

--
Richard Socarides, Esq.
Brady Klein Weissman LLP
501 Fifth Avenue, 19th Floor, New York, NY 10017

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 7:44 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Are you still at office?

Yes I am. Huma is here too

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 7:40 PM
To: Hanley, Monica R
Subject: Are you still at office?

I'm on the way back.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 7:36 AM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Schedule

Will do.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
redacted B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tue Jun 15 07:32:32 2010
Subject: Schedule

I want to meet alone w Amb. Oren this afternoon.

Also, can you find out when Maggie will be in DC again?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 8:23 PM
To: H
Subject: Jake asking to talk.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 9:35 AM
To: H

Gert: thank you for sending the letter to [redacted] on the occasion of her retirement. [redacted] B6 [redacted] flew in to surprise her at the luncheon. It was a great day all around for a great lady. Thanks again. B

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 4:59 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Many Thanks
Attachments: Message hariu to B Clinton 2010.6.14.pdf

FYI. Thanks again for signing the book ---- and I do hope you get royalties from Mongolia! Also thought you would like to see the attached letter to President Clinton.

jm

---

From: Addleton, Jonathan S
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 3:57 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Many Thanks

Judith –

This is simply a quick note to thank you for the inscribed Mongolian-language copy of Secretary Clinton's memoir which just arrived. We look forward to delivering it to President Elbegdorj and know that he will be delighted. This was a terrific idea on your part – and the fact that it now has actually happened is really gratifying as well.

FYI, let me also attach a copy of a recent letter from President Elbegdorj to former President Bill Clinton. Although specifically highlighting the upcoming Nadaam festivities in Ulaanbaatar in mid July, I know that President Clinton would be welcome to visit Mongolia at any time, fulfilling the desire expressed in his "Foreign Policy" interview earlier this year that he really does want to "ride across the Mongolian steppes on horseback"!

Best regards,
Jonathan

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769971 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

МОНГОЛ УЛСЫН ЕРӨНХИЙЛӨГЧ

PRESIDENT OF MONGOLIA

Улаанбаатар
Төрийн ордон

Government House
Ulaanbaatar-12
Mongolia

HONORABLE WILLIAM J.CLINTON
55 West 125th Street
New York, N.Y. 10027

Ulaanbaatar, June "14" 2010

Dear President Clinton.

I wish to express my thanks to you for the invitation to attend the CGI 2010 Annual Meeting. I am confident that 6th Annual meeting will be another success identifying most effective solutions to address pressing global challenges.

Since my correspondence to you last Fall, we have been finalizing preparations for Mongolia's national holiday, Naadam, which will take place this year on July 11th and 12th.

This year's celebration is particularly special because it also marks our 20th anniversary as a democratic nation. Mongolia is proud of its successful democratic transition with major gains in the political, economic, social and spiritual areas of our society.

Our people are grateful to our friends and allies, including the United States and you personally, for the persistent support you have extended to Mongolia.

Because of the tremendous impact you have made for freedom in Mongolia, I would like to extend to you the highest State Award of Mongolia during the Naadam holiday next month.

Mr. President, it would be my honor to host you personally in Mongolia next month for Naadam, receiving the State Award of Mongolia and seeing and experiencing Mongolia's ancient traditions first-hand.

Looking forward to welcoming you in Mongolia,

I remain sincerely yours,

TSAKHIA ELBEGDORJ

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05769971 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 7:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Call

Westewelle cannot do call at 7:30.
Holbrooke says he needs to talk to you

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Cherie Blair <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 9:38 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: confidential

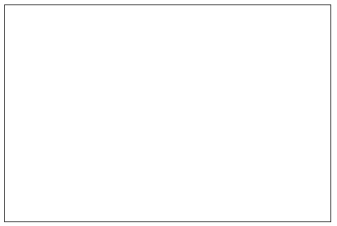
How about arranging a phone call between the two of you first to discuss the issues briefly then you could agree mutually when to meet.
If you give me a time when you can take a quick phone call from the Crown Prince I will get the number for you to ring.

Cherie Blair
[redacted]

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: 15 June 2010 02:35
To: Cherie Blair
Subject: Re: confidential

I would be happy to meet w him. How should I follow up to arrange a mutually agreeable time? All the best to you.



----- Original Message -----
From: Cherie Blair <[redacted]>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jun 07 09:56:45 2010
Subject: confidential

As you know I have good links to the Qataris. Sheikha Mosah's son is the 31/32 year old Crown Prince and she is keen that he starts to build a wider international profile. He has been appointed head of the Qatar National Food Security Programme which is designed to deal with Qatar's food security issues its a $30 billion programme. He is aware that food security is an issue you are majoring on and would love to meet with you in person to discuss this and to explore potential partnership areas between US and Qatar including possible participation in the US/World Bank Food Security Fund. He is also keen to talk more generally about US/Qatari cooperation and even suggested they could help out with the Oil spill problem. There is apparently a Arab Food Security Summit in October 2010 and he would like to discuss Us participation in that too.

IS a meeting possible he is more flexible on place and times than his mother! Or maybe we could set up an initial phone call.

Can you let me know if this appeals to you at all?

Cherie Blair

B6

This message has been scanned by MailController - www.MailController.altohiway.com

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 7:29 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Thanks to you and the Secretary for inspiring remarks today

FYI – see traffic below mine.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 9:54 PM
To: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Subject: RE: Thanks to you and the Secretary for inspiring remarks today

Kathy

What an uplifting email.

Thank you for reaching out and I will share this with her.

We still need to get that on the agenda for thank you for the reminder given her passion in this area.

And thank you for your kind words.

Best.

cdm

---

From: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Sent: Tuesday, June 22, 2010 3:21 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Thanks to you and the Secretary for inspiring remarks today

Hi, Cheryl –

Thank you so much for your excellent introduction of the Secretary today, and for your support of the good work of GLIFFA. As always, the Secretary was brilliant and inspiring. Would it be possible for you to pass on a word to her on my behalf?

You may remember that I am [redacted] working in the Office of Children's Issues, particularly on international child abduction. You and I were in contact in March 2009, and we discussed then the possibility of talking with the Secretary about the work we do here in our office. That did not work out, and I of course understood, but I would like to thank her for her interest in and support of our work, both in abduction and inter-country adoption. B6

On a personal note, I wanted the Secretary to know [redacted]

[redacted] But I want to let the Secretary know that I am especially grateful for all the work she has done for the GLBT community in the Department and around the world. What a thrill it was to today to hear her say that gay rights are human rights!

B6

We are indeed at an exciting point in history. Please extend my thanks to the Secretary for her leadership.

All the best,
Kathy

Kathleen S. Ruckman
Incoming Branch Chief
Office of Children's Issues
U.S. Department of State
NEW PHONE as of 4/1/10: 202-663-2928

---

From: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Sent: Tuesday, March 17, 2009 8:59 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: RE: Work for S

Thanks so much, Cheryl! I appreciate your efforts.
Kathy

Kathleen S. Ruckman
Deputy Director, Office of Children's Issues
U.S. Department of State, CA/OCS/CI
202-736-9123

DISCLAIMER: The contents of this e-mail are confidential to the addressee(s) and are intended solely for his/her/their exclusive use. If you are not an addressee, you may have received this e-mail in error. If so, please reply immediately to the sender and delete this message. Any disclosure, copying, distribution or action taken in reliance on it is prohibited and may be unlawful. Any opinions expressed in this e-mail are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the position of the United States Government.

In accordance with E.O. 12958, this email is: SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tuesday, March 17, 2009 8:00 AM
To: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Cc: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: RE: Work for S

I have asked Iona to find a timein the next month

---

From: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Sent: Monday, March 16, 2009 10:44 AM

To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: RE: Work for S

That would be great, Cheryl. We are always glad to talk about what we do. Let me know if there is something I need to do.
Best, Kathy

Kathleen S. Ruckman
Deputy Director, Office of Children's Issues
U.S. Department of State, CA/OCS/CI
202-736-9123

DISCLAIMER: The contents of this e-mail are confidential to the addressee(s) and are intended solely for his/her/their exclusive use. If you are not an addressee, you may have received this e-mail in error. If so, please reply immediately to the sender and delete this message. Any disclosure, copying, distribution or action taken in reliance on it is prohibited and may be unlawful. Any opinions expressed in this e-mail are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the position of the United States Government.

In accordance with E.O. 12958, this email is: SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, March 16, 2009 10:36 AM
To: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Cc: Toiv, Nora F
Subject: RE: Work for S

This is very important to her – she raised it before so if you are the primary office, it may make sense to have you and Director connect with her – politically work?

cdm

---

From: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Sent: Monday, March 16, 2009 8:49 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Toiv, Nora F; Samuelson, Heather F; Peña, Laura
Subject: RE: Work for S

Hi, Cheryl –
The Office of Children's Issues is in the Bureau of Consular Affairs, Overseas Citizens' Services, and we are the only office that handles child abductions in the Department. Our office is in SA-29 at 2100 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Fourth floor. We are the U.S. Central Authority for two Hague Conventions, the Child Abduction Convention and the Intercountry Adoption Convention. Our office is currently handling more than 1600 open international child abduction cases from the U.S. and about 400 cases of abductions of children into the U.S. under the Hague Convention. We're very busy! Come see us!
Kathy

Kathleen S. Ruckman
Deputy Director, Office of Children's Issues
U.S. Department of State, CA/OCS/CI
202-736-9123

DISCLAIMER: The contents of this e-mail are confidential to the addressee(s) and are intended solely for his/her/their exclusive use. If you are not an addressee, you may have received this e-mail in error. If so, please reply immediately to the sender and delete this message. Any disclosure, copying, distribution or action taken in reliance on it is prohibited and may be unlawful. Any opinions expressed in this e-mail are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the position of the United States Government.

In accordance with E.O. 12958, this email is: SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, March 16, 2009 5:54 AM
To: Ruckman, Kathleen S
Cc: Toiv, Nora F; Samuelson, Heather F; Peña, Laura
Subject: Re: Work for S

Kathy (pls call me cheryl)

You are in a space near and dear as is the child abduction issue - where do child abductions get handled? In consular affairs or in the individual bureaus?

---

From: Ruckman, Kathleen S
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Mar 13 17:35:54 2009
Subject: Work for S

Dear Ms. Mills:

I learned through Pam Ciccetti, in the Clinton Senate office, that you have been handling staffing for Secretary Clinton here in the Department of State. [redacted] I am also an attorney, currently working in a management position (GS-14) here in the Department of State, Bureau of Consular Affairs, as Deputy Director of the Office of Children's Issues. B6

I am happy to be serving the Secretary in my current position in an area close to her heart, children's welfare. [redacted]

Thank you and best regards,

Kathy

[redacted] B6

Kathleen S. Ruckman
Deputy Director, Office of Children's Issues
U.S. Department of State, CA/OCS/CI
202-736-9123

DISCLAIMER: The contents of this e-mail are confidential to the addressee(s) and are intended solely for his/her/their exclusive use. If you are not an addressee, you may have received this e-mail in error. If so, please reply immediately to the sender and delete this message. Any disclosure, copying, distribution or action taken in reliance on it is prohibited and may be unlawful. Any opinions expressed in this e-mail are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the position of the United States Government.

In accordance with E.O. 12958, this email is: SENSITIVE BUT UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 7:36 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Call

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Jun 23 07:29:47 2010
Subject: Re: Call

GW is dodging me so ask that letter be drafted that I could send him asap making case.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jun 23 07:04:00 2010
Subject: Call

Westewelle cannot do call at 7:30.
Holbrooke says he needs to talk to you

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 8:54 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tonight

B6

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(direct)

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Wed Jun 23 08:07:09 2010
Subject: Tonight

What's the plan

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 6:21 PM
To: H
Subject: meeting with the Danish Foreign Minister

You are scheduled to meet with the Danish Foreign Minister on Friday. The Danes are interested in partnering with the US on a side event at the Kabul Conference focused on Afghan women. I think this has potential and I'll raise with SRAP, but wanted you to know -- in case it comes up in your meeting.
When I met with a couple of the Afghan women who participated in the recent peace jirga, they told me that it would send a very strong message if a large group of women representing Afghan civil society could meet with you when you are in Kabul for the conference. I don't know if it will be possible to arrange such a large gathering, but perhaps something significant can be arranged.

Melanne S. Verveer
Ambassador at Large for Global Women's Issues
U.S. Department of State
2201 C Street NW, Room 6805
Washington, DC 20520
Tel: (202) 647-7283
Fax: (202) 647-7288
VerveerMS@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 6:32 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Strategy session

Cheryl and I discussed how to do an effective strategy session. Monday early afternoon is the first clear shot we have at getting the right group of people in the room together for an extended period of time.

We propose to start the discussion from the following premise: We've addressed, in one fashion or another, to one degree of satisfaction or another, most of the major items we set out at the beginning of last near. We've moved the needle, but we haven't changed the game. Now the question is, what are the major milestones over the next 12-18 months? What should we be aiming at? And especially, what are some potential game-changers – moves that would shift the global landscape in meaningful and long-lasting ways?

Everything will be on the table – regional issues, transnational issues, etc. Everyone should read the book of look-ahead papers; identify things they think we should pursue; and add ideas – especially creative and far-reaching ideas – on top of what's contained in them.

We propose the following roster:

Jim
Jack
Bill
AMS
Derek
CDM
Jake
Rich
Kurt
Judith
Harold

Let us know what you think.

Jake

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 10:36 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Remarks to participants at High Level Meeting on Food Security for All

---

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Tuesday, June 15, 2010 1:27 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Remarks to participants at High Level Meeting on Food Security for All

1/26/09
S.Remarks to participants at High Level Meeting on Food Security for All

President Obama has made clear that alleviating hunger worldwide is a top priority of this Administration. As he said on the first day of his Presidency, "to the people of poor nations, we pledge to work alongside you to make your farms flourish and let clean waters flow; to nourish starved bodies and feed hungry minds." The President and I intend to focus new attention on food security so that developing nations can invest in food production, affordability, accessibility, education and technology.

http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2009a/01/115585.htm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 3:41 PM
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J; Hanley, Monica R
Subject: Tonight

So DS will take you from the WH

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:00 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Statement by Ambassador Mark Sedwill, NATO's Senior Civilian Representative to Afghanistan

FYI.

Statement by Ambassador Mark Sedwill, NATO's Senior Civilian Representative to Afghanistan

Stan McChrystal is one of the finest men I have ever known. He is and will remain a lifelong friend.

General McChrystal has also been an outstanding military commander who was pivotal in creating and driving forward NATO's strategy in Afghanistan to regain the initiative against the insurgency, resolve the political tensions which fuel it and transition responsibility to the Government of Afghanistan as we help build their capabilities.

This strategy remains the basis of the campaign. The campaign remains on course. The Afghan people should have no doubt of our commitment to build a stable Afghanistan and a safer world.

I look forward to working with General David Petraeus whose remarkable track record speaks for itself. He will provide the continuity and strong leadership required to meet the challenges ahead.

Dominic Medley
SCR Spokesman/Media Advisor
medley.dominic@hq.nato.int
dominic.medley@hq.isaf.nato.int
+93 793 38 4008

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:06 PM
To: H
Subject: FW:

FYI on

From: Klobuchar, Amy (Klobuchar) [mailto:
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 4:49 PM
To: Yamamoto, Donald Y; Casper, Anne S
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject:

B6

Anne and Don—has arrived in Minnesota with his

I want you to know that I was incredibly impressed by the work of the State Department and the Embassy under very difficult circumstances. I truly don't believe he would be back in our country without your help. Thank you for everything you've done.
but he needed help! That is what we do sometimes! Thank you so much for everything you have done. I will write a separate note to Secretary Clinton about your strong work.

Sincerely,

Amy Klobuchar

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:08 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: US Senators blast 'dysfunctional' diplomats in Afghanistan

FYI

---

From: Faillace, Karlygash B
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 4:40 PM
To: SSRAP_Expanded; SCA-PPD-Guidance-DL
Subject: US Senators blast 'dysfunctional' diplomats in Afghanistan

US Senators blast 'dysfunctional' diplomats in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON, June 23, 2010 (AFP) - President Barack Obama must overhaul the "completely dysfunctional" civilian side of US-led efforts in Afghanistan or risk losing the high-stakes conflict, three hawkish US Senators said Wednesday.

Republican Senators John McCain and Lindsey Graham, joined by Independent Senator Joe Lieberman, stopped just shy of explicitly urging Obama to replace Ambassador Karl Eikenberry but had harsh words for US diplomacy in Kabul.

"The civilian side is, in my view, completely dysfunctional. The relationship between the civilian leadership and (Afghan) President (Hamid) Karzai has to be changed and repaired," said Graham.

"I would urge the president to look at this as a chance to put new people on the ground without old baggage. And if we don't change quickly, we're going to lose a war we can't afford to lose," warned Graham.

Graham and his colleagues warmly praised Obama's decision to replace General Stanley McChrystal with General David Petraeus, but cautioned that diplomatic failures could hamstring his efforts to manage the increasingly unpopular war.

McCain suggested that Obama bring back veteran diplomat Ryan Crocker, who was ambassador to Baghdad when he and Petraeus enacted the "surge" strategy credited in Washington with bringing Iraq back from the brink of civil war.

"We might suggest that a consideration be given to reuniting the Crocker-Petraeus team, although I'm sure that Ambassador Crocker will never forgive me for saying that, since he's enjoying his retirement," McCain said with a chuckle.

"There is discontent -- or let me say, there is a lack of coordination and teamwork -- between the military and civilian side, both at the embassy and other areas, in Afghanistan that needs to be repaired," said McCain.

Lieberman took a slightly softer line, but underlined he felt "there is not the kind of unity in Afghanistan between our civilian and military leadership" that is needed to prosecute Obama's counterinsurgency strategy.

The senators sharply criticized McChrystal over a Rolling Stone magazine profile in which the general and his aides are quoted as mocking top Obama national security aides, from Vice President Joe Biden on down.

McChrystal himself is quoted as deriding US special envoy Richard Holbrooke, and as saying he felt "betrayed" by Eikenberry, who had raised pointed objections to his strategy.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:26 PM
To: H
Cc: Lona Valmoro; HanleyMR@state.gov
Subject: Tonight

Now hearing that [redacted] If you [redacted], that's great - same plan. If you come back to office, just need to tell Huma what you would have told her via email, that you're skipping the concert B5

Again, your tickets and concert plans will not be altered, we've assured that can't happen

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 16, 2010 10:20 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: 2 passages from maiden speech of Britain's new sec for development

Overall the speech is worth reading; if you like I'll have it put in your weekend book. 2 passages particularly worth noting.

1. "Across the Atlantic, Hilary Clinton has pledged to put women 'front and center' of the American development agenda. That is the right choice. As David Cameron and Jeff Sachs argued earlier this year, women can hold the key to development in the world's poorest countries – in education, enterprise, micro-finance and healthcare. Investing in women pays dividends throughout the entire community."
2. "I see DFID as a key, joined-up, integrated department, a bright star in the Whitehall constellation, a department of state for development in the developing world. That's why DFID has a seat at the Cabinet table and it's why I won't be satisfied until our message rings down the corridors of each and every department in Whitehall."

We obviously don't love the "dept of state for development language," but what is most noteworthy is his emphasis on "joined-up" and "integrated" dept – underlining the fact that DFID as a separate cabinet department has been almost divorced from the rest of the government.

B5
B6

Anne-Marie Slaughter
Director of Policy Planning
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:39 PM
To: H; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: RE: Tonight

ok sounds good.

---

From: H
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:28 PM
To: Huma Abedin; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Tonight

[redacted] Heading home. B6

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:39 PM
To: H; Lona Valmoro
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tonight

[redacted]

[redacted] do I have the plan right?

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Lona Valmoro
To: PIR
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Tonight
Sent: Jun 23, 2010 5:32 PM

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:42 PM
To: H; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: RE: Tonight

also, IF you want to do any foreign/mccrystal calls:
- frattini can talk now (till 6pm)
- cannon can talk after 7pm rest will have to be tomorrow (if we do them at all)

---

From: H
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:28 PM
To: Huma Abedin; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Tonight

B6

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:42 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Second Wave of McCrystal

fyi

---

From: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:14 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: RE: Second Wave of McCrystal

There are some calls on the Hill for other changes in the team, i.e. Eikenberry. So it is already starting. [redacted] B5

PJ

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 3:11 PM
To: Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J; Crowley, Philip J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: RE: Second Wave of McCrystal

agree

---

From: Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 2:41 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Crowley, Philip J; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: RE: Second Wave of McCrystal

If she feels strongly, sure

Otherwise I vote no. We aren't directly part of this unfortunate saga, don't need to be. Once again she and Gates come across as the mature ones. The questions they have for her on her recommendation, etc would be addressed by a statement.

Besides, she'll answer this on camera tomorrow

I would however add Petreaus to her call sheet even though I'm sure she saw him at the WH, so we can reinforce her relationship with him going forward

We also need to stress their solid working relationship - I believe he was here last week and we thankfully put that on her schedule

---

From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 2:37 PM
To: Reines, Philippe I; Crowley, Philip J; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: RE: Second Wave of McCrystal

PIR [redacted] B5

---

From: Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 2:35 PM
To: Crowley, Philip J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: RE: Second Wave of McCrystal

My bet on the direction this now takes is two fronts 1) does Petreaus make any big changes; can he do in Afghanistan what he did in Iraq; his health; political benefits of locking him up like Huntsman; etc [redacted] B5 B5

Had McC weathered this, there would have been more emphasis on #2. With Petreaus there, there's an air of adult management so there will be less of that. [redacted] whether there will be other changes to the team, how they get along with Petraeus and my strong suggestion to all involved is that this change is a fresh start for all. That ends the conversation. B5

---

From: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 8:42 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Second Wave of McCrystal

Let me start some thinking [redacted]

PJ

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 5:58 PM
To: preines
Cc: Hanley, Monica R
Subject: Re: Tonight

B6

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(direct)

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines
To: Evergreen <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 17:39:11 2010
Subject: Re: Tonight

do I have the plan right?

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Lona Valmoro
To: PIR
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Tonight
Sent: Jun 23, 2010 5:32 PM

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 6:51 PM
To: H; Lona Valmoro
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tonight

Where did you say you are going?

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Lona Valmoro
To: PIR
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tonight
Sent: Jun 23, 2010 6:50 PM

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: preines <preines H
Cc: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jun 23 17:58:18 2010
Subject: Re: Tonight

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(direct)

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines
To: Evergreen <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 17:39:11 2010
Subject: Re: Tonight

do I have the plan right?

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Lona Valmoro
To: PIR
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Tonight
Sent: Jun 23, 2010 5:32 PM

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 6:54 PM
To: H; Lona Valmoro
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tonight

Huma still at your house?

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Wed, 23 Jun 2010 18:53:10
To: 'preines <preines ValmoroLJ@state.gov'<ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'<hanleymr@state.gov>
Subject: Re: Tonight

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines
To: H; Lona Valmoro <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov' <hanleymr@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jun 23 18:51:19 2010
Subject: Re: Tonight

Where did you say you are going?

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Lona Valmoro
To: PIR
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tonight
Sent: Jun 23, 2010 6:50 PM

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: preines <preines ; H
Cc: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>

Sent: Wed Jun 23 17:58:18 2010
Subject: Re: Tonight

B6

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
(direct)

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines
To: Evergreen <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 17:39:11 2010
Subject: Re: Tonight

do I have the plan right?

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Lona Valmoro
To: PIR
Cc: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Tonight
Sent: Jun 23, 2010 5:32 PM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 7:15 PM
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Concert

Bagley and Tauscher are all set with their tickets.

Mikulski will get here close to your arrival time so you might walk in with her - pls let me know if that's a problem. Pelosi is coming separately and is seated close to you.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 7:36 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Concert

Thanks. Tauscher here. Mikulski around the corner. Will see you soon.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 19:35:34 2010
Subject: Re: Concert

I'm on the way.

----- Original Message -----
From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jun 23 19:14:35 2010
Subject: Concert

Bagley and Tauscher are all set with their tickets.

Mikulski will get here close to your arrival time so you might walk in with her - pls let me know if that's a problem. Pelosi is coming separately and is seated close to you.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 17, 2010 6:19 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Toronto

I am currently traveling outside of the country with limited access to email. If you need immediate assistance, please contact Nora Toiv (ToivNF@state.gov) or Joanne Laszczych, (LaszczychJ@state.gov) at 202-647-5548.

If it is an emergency after business hours, please reach out to our Operations Center to have them reach me.

Thank you

cdm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 9:03 PM
To: H
Subject: world cup

http://www.salon.com/news/bill_clinton/index.html?story=/politics/war_room/2010/06/23/bill_clinton_world_cup

Wednesday, Jun 23, 2010 14:22 ET
War Room

Bill Clinton to U.S. soccer team: "You are amazing!"

By Joe Conason

•

AP/Michael Sohn
Former President Bill Clinton at the World Cup group C soccer match between the United States and Algeria in Pretoria, South Africa on Wednesday

Salon's Joe Conason is traveling with Bill Clinton in Africa this week and was with the former president at today's U.S. World Cup soccer game in Pretoria. He filed this report:

Minutes after Landon Donovan scored the stunning extra-time goal that won a critical World Cup match against Algeria, Bill Clinton and several of his aides and friends (including former Democratic National Committee Chairman Terry McAuliffe) were escorted downstairs to the U.S. team's locker room. The American players roared with pride as the former president (and honorary chairman of the committee bidding to bring the World Cup to the U.S. in 2018 or 2022) walked in. After a round of embraces, handshakes and high fives, he spoke briefly about his joy in their victory: " I'm proud of you because you didn't let the frustration of all the shots that you almost made get you down. You are amazing!"

Much posing for pictures ensued with the shirtless, whooping, chest-bumping players -- who couldn't quite seem to believe they had done it.

The team then invited Clinton alone to join them in the inner locker room, where he could be glimpsed toasting them with a beer amid much additional hollering. When he emerged 10 minutes or so later, he had a broad smile and a hoarse voice.

As Clinton left for Johannesburg, where he will meet tomorrow with former President Nelson Mandela, one of the players chased him out into the hall and handed one of the former president's aides an official ball signed by all the members of Team USA.

Clinton stopped for just a moment to talk with the local press before disappearing in a convoy of flashing lights and sirens. "If it hadn't been the decisive game, even I would have said it should have been a tie," he said. "It was a great game. You know, all great contests become head games at some point -- sports, elections, wars. And they [Team USA] have good heads and good hearts."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Lew, Jacob J <LewJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 9:47 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Consular fees

Sorry to confirm they are not in.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R
To: Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Campbell, Piper
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:42:52 2010
Subject: Re: Consular fees

Not in.

----- Original Message -----
From: Lew, Jacob J
To: Verma, Richard R
Cc: Campbell, Piper
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:41:57 2010
Subject: Consular fees

Just got an email from S saying that Pelosi just told her fees are in. Can we check the actual conf rept to let her know for sure if this is correct or not. I responded that we understood they were out but would check. Thx

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Lew, Jacob J <LewJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 9:53 PM
To: H
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re: Consular fees

Copying Rich -- I cannot explain. He was with us until 6 pm yesterday when he reached the conclusion that it would bring down the rule.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Lew, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:51:05 2010
Subject: Re: Consular fees

She and George Miller were adamant so what could they mean? They said Berman pushed it thru.

----- Original Message -----
From: Lew, Jacob J <LewJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:46:46 2010
Subject: Fw: Consular fees

Sorry to confirm they are not in.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R
To: Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Campbell, Piper
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:42:52 2010
Subject: Re: Consular fees

Not in.

----- Original Message -----
From: Lew, Jacob J
To: Verma, Richard R
Cc: Campbell, Piper
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:41:57 2010
Subject: Consular fees

Just got an email from S saying that Pelosi just told her fees are in. Can we check the actual conf rept to let her know for sure if this is correct or not. I responded that we understood they were out but would check. Thx

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 10:03 PM
To: Lew, Jacob J; H
Subject: Re: Consular fees

Berman went to the leadership meeting yesterday to make his case for fees - that's what they must be referring to. It was after that meeting that the blue dogs and hoyer told him no.

----- Original Message -----
From: Lew, Jacob J
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:52:57 2010
Subject: Re: Consular fees

Copying Rich -- I cannot explain. He was with us until 6 pm yesterday when he reached the conclusion that it would bring down the rule.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Lew, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:51:05 2010
Subject: Re: Consular fees

She and George Miller were adamant so what could they mean? They said Berman pushed it thru.

----- Original Message -----
From: Lew, Jacob J <LewJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:46:46 2010
Subject: Fw: Consular fees

Sorry to confirm they are not in.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R
To: Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Campbell, Piper
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:42:52 2010
Subject: Re: Consular fees

Not in.

----- Original Message -----
From: Lew, Jacob J
To: Verma, Richard R
Cc: Campbell, Piper
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:41:57 2010
Subject: Consular fees

Just got an email from S saying that Pelosi just told her fees are in. Can we check the actual conf rept to let her know for sure if this is correct or not. I responded that we understood they were out but would check. Thx

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 10:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan

Fyi

---

From: Schwartz, Eric P
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Jun 23 21:38:18 2010
Subject: Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan

Hello Jake: After consulting with Bob Blake and his team, and both our posts in the region, I'm planning to get out to Uzbekistan and, if conditions permit, Kyrgyzstan in the next day or two to assess the humanitarian situation and the assistance efforts of our partners, and to communicate our commitment to a generous response. The UN has just issued appeals for each country, and we'll be contributing additional funds in the days ahead. My Deputy, David Robinson, will be at the 9:15 meeting tomorrow (I have a congressional meeting) and will mention this to the Secretary – but given her strong interest and her exchange with me on it on Monday – I thought I should give you a head's up. Best,, Eric

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 10:41 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: [redacted] B6

She unfortunately can't come this week - she's away until Tuesday. Will see if Tuesday night or Wednesday morning works with your schedule.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 23, 2010 10:41 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: [redacted] B6

Yes she's in Hawaii until Tuesday morning. She can do Tuesday evening ot Wednesday if that works for you

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 22:40:38 2010
Subject: [redacted]

Did you reach her?

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 17, 2010 8:42 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Verma, Richard R
Subject: Gaza language

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 17, 2010 11:56 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Pew Global Attitudes 22-Nation Poll

FYI

From: Andrew Kohut [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, June 17, 2010 11:40 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Pew Global Attitudes 22-Nation Poll

Obama More Popular Abroad Than in U.S.; Muslim Disappointment

U.S. Image Strong, Despite Criticism of U.S. Policies

Even as his domestic job approval rating has declined, President Barack Obama remains highly popular in most parts of the world, and opinions of the United States – which improved markedly in 2009 reflecting global optimism about Obama – have remained much more positive than they were for much of George W. Bush's tenure.

But America continues to face image challenges in the Muslim world. After edging up slightly in 2009, U.S. favorability and confidence in Obama have slipped in key predominantly Muslim nations: America's favorability rating in Egypt has dropped from 27% to 17% – the lowest figure recorded there in five years. In Turkey, a NATO ally, confidence in Obama has fallen from 33% to 23%. Opposition to key aspects of U.S. foreign policy remains pervasive and many Muslim publics continue to view the U.S as a military threat.

Even beyond largely Muslim nations, the survey finds disagreement with Obama's foreign policies. Majorities continue to see the U.S. as acting unilaterally in world affairs. And global publics give Obama a mixed report card on his handling of specific problems: About as many countries approve as disapprove of Obama's handling of the situations in Afghanistan, Iran and Iraq. Of 22 nations surveyed, including the U.S, only in three nations do majorities approve of Obama's handling of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. In Western Europe, while substantial majorities support U.S. anti-terrorism efforts, nearly 6-in-10 Germans favor withdrawing their troops from Afghanistan, and British and French publics are evenly split on whether troops should be withdrawn or kept.

But in a striking difference from the Bush years, these policy disagreements have not significantly dented the U.S. image. The U.S. favorability rating in Western Europe is overwhelmingly positive, and confidence in Obama to do the right thing in world affairs remains high: 90% express confidence in Germany, 87% in France, 84% in Britain and 69% in Spain. Moreover, Obama gets good marks on his handling of two issues of importance to European publics – climate change and the economic crisis.

More generally, global publics express widespread dissatisfaction about the economy, though they are less gloomy than in 2009. In 20 of 22 countries, less than half the population expresses satisfaction with their country's direction, and only in four countries do people say economic conditions are good. Disgruntled publics fault their governments, banks and then themselves for their economic troubles. In Europe, amid growing economic troubles, there are no signs of a backlash against the European Union. Large majorities remain supportive of the EU and the euro. But European publics are divided about the merits of economic integration and differ over the bailing-out of EU member countries.

The new survey by the Pew Research Center's Global Attitudes Project, conducted among more than 24,000 people in 22 nations April 7 to May 8, provides an in-depth look at attitudes toward major powers and world leaders; the global economic situation from free trade to financial regulation; Islamic extremism; and international problems such as climate change. Key findings include:

- America's Image – U.S. favorability has improved markedly in Russia, China and Japan. It has fallen in India, but remains high – dipping from 76% in 2009 to 66% in 2010. America's image is highly positive in South Korea (79% favorable), Poland (74%) and Brazil (62%).

- The Arizona Effect: U.S. favorability in Mexico has tumbled in the wake of Arizona's new immigration law – from 62% in polling conducted before the law's enactment to 44% afterward.

- European Leaders: German Chancellor Angela Merkel is well regarded in Britain and Spain, and gets higher ratings for her handling of international affairs in France than in Germany itself. French President Nicolas Sarkozy, similarly, gets better ratings in Germany than in France, but the French leader is less well-regarded in Britain and Spain. Confidence about Russian President Dmitri Medvedev is on the rise, with ratings up in all five EU member nations surveyed.

- China on the Rise: A growing portion of global publics sees China, rather than the U.S, as the world's leading economic power. China itself is the most self-satisfied nation in the survey. Roughly nine-in-ten Chinese are happy with the direction of the country (87%), its economic conditions (91%), and optimistic about its economic future (87%).

- Islamic Extremism: There is no predominantly Muslim nation polled in which a majority of Muslims endorse suicide bombing, al Qaeda or Osama bin Laden. But in Nigeria, a significant minority of Muslims express extremist views -- 49% express a favorable view of al Qaeda.

- Isolationism: Americans are no more isolationist than Europeans. When asked whether their country should deal with its own problems and let others take care of themselves, nearly half of Americans (46%), Germans (44%) and British (49%) agree. The French are the most isolationist, with 65% opposing helping other nations cope with their challenges.

- Environment: Substantial majorities in most countries see global climate change as a serious problem, but global opinion is more divided when it comes to paying increased prices to combat climate change. Willingness to pay higher prices is nearly universal in China and majorities express support in India, South Korea, Japan, Turkey and Germany. Views about paying higher prices are mixed in Spain, Britain and Brazil, while majorities express opposition in the U.S., France, Russia and many less affluent nations surveyed.

- Iran and Nuclear Weapons: Majorities in nearly every country surveyed, including predominantly Muslim nations, express opposition to a nuclear-armed Iran. A notable exception is Pakistan, the only nation surveyed in which a majority (58%) favor Iran's nuclear weapons program. Among global publics who oppose a nuclear-armed Iran, substantial support exists for applying tougher international economic sanctions against Iran. Less widespread, but still significant, support exists for considering the use of military force to prevent Iran from developing nuclear weapons.

For a direct link to the full report, go to http://pewglobal.org/2010/06/17/obama-more-popular-abroad-than-at-home/. The survey is for immediate release and is available on our website, http://pewglobal.org/.

Andrew Kohut
President
Pew Research Center
202.419.4350

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 3:31 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: GOOD DAY, CHERYL HOPE YOU ARE WELL AND HAPPY. PLEASE FORWARD THIS NOTE TO HRC...

B6

From: Barbaralee Diamonstein-Spielvogel <[redacted]>
To: Mills, Cheryl D; millsc@state.gov <millsc@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jun 23 10:34:50 2010
Subject: GOOD DAY, CHERYL HOPE YOU ARE WELL AND HAPPY. PLEASE FORWARD THIS NOTE TO HRC...

Dear Madam Secretary,
My deepest appreciation for the very thoughtful, and very personal, letter that you sent to me on the occasion of my being honored by the Urban Technology Center last night. It means a great deal to me, for you to take the time from your incredibly crowded, and important, schedule to remember me.
With warmest wishes and continuing admiration,
Carl Spielvogel
23 June 2010

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 17, 2010 11:58 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Rwanda court grants medical bail to US lawyer

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-AF; NEWS-L; NEWS-CA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Thu Jun 17 11:53:25 2010
Subject: (AP) Rwanda court grants medical bail to US lawyer

KIGALI (AP) - A judge in Rwanda granted bail to a U.S. lawyer on medical grounds. Peter Erlinder was arrested and charged with genocide ideology late last month. Since his arrest he's been hospitalized multiple times. A judge in Kigali granted Erlinder bail on medical grounds, but it wasn't immediately clear if Erlinder is allowed to leave Rwanda. Erlinder's brother, Scott Erlinder, said he suspects political pressure from around the world contributed to the judge's ruling.

---

Ezra Casteel
S/ES-O Operations Specialist
202.647.1512

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, June 17, 2010 4:47 PM
To: H
Subject: H: Memo on urgent Kyrgyzstan crisis, first hand report and recommendations. Sid
Attachments: horton memo kyrgyzstan 061710.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Kyrgyzstan crisis, report and recommendations

Scott Horton has just returned from a week in Kyrgyzstan, where he held lengthy private conversations with a range of leaders. He has sent me his confidential report. In light of the crisis there—the pogroms that have created perhaps as many as 450,000 refugees, according to the U.N.—and on the eve of the June 27 constitutional referendum—he explains why and how this is an opportunity for joint U.S.-Russian action and other U.S. initiatives. His policy recommendations follow his report.

To: Sid Blumenthal

From: Scott Horton

Date: June 17, 2010

Subj: Developments in Kyrgyzstan

I was in Kyrgyzstan from June 1 – 6, during which time I met with almost all the members of the interim government, with special focus on foreign relations, security and legal issues. Here are major points that emerged from my visit:

1. Crisis in the South. Although I departed before the pogroms had commenced in Osh, I found that the interim government fully expected violence to break out there but did not anticipate the inter-ethnic element. Several candidly acknowledged that the government's grip on the south, particularly Osh and Djalalabad provinces, was extremely tenuous. They said they had severe "loyalty" problems with key figures in the police and military. When I pressed on what they meant by "loyalty," I was told that the Bakiyev family had "its people" in key positions in the police and army and that they had intercepted communications between

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770025 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

June 27, 2010

For: HRC
From: Sid
Re: UK politics/economy

1. UK polls show support for the Lib-Dems after the launch of the draconian Cameron government budget cratering. LD support is down to 16 percent, half what it was at its peak during the election and half of LD members now express a desire to defect from their party. They feel deceived by LD ministers' participation in a Tory budget opposed to their own beliefs. In Parliament, a secret caucus of LDs is meeting with Labour about opposing the budget. Meanwhile, short term support for Cameron is static and for the government slightly up, but only translated to the Tories. Both the Tories and Labour are up, profiting from the LD quandary. The scenario is potentially portentous for the LD Party: There was once an influential Australian Liberal Democratic Party, holding 11 percent of the vote and the balance of power in the Australian Senate. Upon reaching its zenith in 1996 the ALDP supported a Liberal (that is to say, a conservative) government's budget and suffered collapse. Today the ALDP holds 1 percent of the seats in the lower House. The political effect of the conservative budget will almost certainly lead to an implosion of the Tory-LD coalition. In the short run it's possible the Tories will emerge having the greatest plurality of support. But if their budget does not produce prosperity they will pay the price, too. See Stiglitz's analysis below on the Tory budget with cold analysis of the US predicament.
2. The implications for US-UK cooperation are apparent. While there are spheres that remain, they are contingent, including the Afghanistan War, opposed by 75 percent of UK public and about which Cameron felt compelled this week to declare UK engagement would end in five years (that is, before the next UK election). On economic policy, the UK is no partner and no bridge to Europe, where the Merkel government has entered a fugue state of vertigo (another subject). At no other time since World War II have the US and UK governments been at such odds over international economics. With JFK and Macmillan, Macmillan accepted the postwar Keynesian consensus. Reagan and Thatcher, of course, were of one mind ideologically, and the international economy was buoyed by Reagan's hyper-Keynesianism masked as Thatcherism. Unfortunately, Obama did not reach out to Brown, who sought to reestablish the special relationship around international economic recovery. Speaking of laissez faire, Cameron must be let alone to receive the consequences (within 18 months) of his ideologically driven economics. Can he be engaged on international development? Or does his budget rule that out too? There's not much there.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770025 Date: 08/31/2015

3. The Labour Party leadership contest is heating up. David Miliband has an article out today on how the Cameron budget will foster "a lost generation." More on that soon...

http://www.independent.co.uk/news/uk/politics/osbornes-first-budget-its-wrong-wrong-wrong-2011501.html

Osborne's first Budget? It's wrong, wrong, wrong!

Joseph Stiglitz, the Nobel prizewinner who predicted the global crisis, delivers his verdict on the Chancellor's first Budget and tells Paul Vallely it will take the UK deeper into recession and hit millions – the poorest – badly

Sunday, 27 June 2010

George Osborne will probably not be very bothered that there is a man who thinks he got last week's emergency Budget almost entirely wrong. But he should be. Because that man is a former chief economist at the World Bank who won the Nobel Prize for Economics for his work on why markets do not produce the outcomes which, in theory, they ought to.

Professor Joseph Stiglitz, who has been described as the biggest brain in economics, is distinctly unimpressed by George Osborne's strategy. This, he predicts, will make Britain's recovery from recession longer, slower and harder than it needs to be. The rise in VAT could even tip us into a double-dip recession.

Stiglitz, who was once Bill Clinton's senior economic adviser, is now professor of economics and finance at Columbia Business School. He was in the UK this week at the University of Manchester, where he chairs the Brooks World Poverty Institute, but he lifted his head from the detail of international development to scrutinise the economic strategy of the Conservative Chancellor whose Liberal Democrat partners recently reversed their judgement that massive public spending cuts now would endanger the economy and joined in the Tory slash-and-burn strategy. They were deeply wrong to do so, he believes.

It would be a mistake to ignore Stiglitz on this. He has a track record of getting his predictions right. He was one of the few economists who predicted the global financial meltdown long before it occurred.

"What happened was very much in accord with what I expected," he tells me when we meet for a coffee outside the Blackwell bookshop in the centre of the university. "The data was pretty clear about that." And the scale of the crash? "That wasn't a surprise," he adds, in a matter-of-fact manner. "The bigger the bubble, the bigger the burst.

"The thing most economists did not fully grasp was the extent to which the banks engaged in murky risk-taking activities. They were taking a risk with our money, their shareholders' money, the bond-holders' money," he says. Banks were demanding up to 40 per cent of the corporate profits, saying their innovative financing was adding value. But "all this talk about innovation was a sham" because it did not relate to any real increase in the economy's productivity, he says.

"There was a prima facie case of something screwy going on [with all the] perverse incentives that would lead them to take excessive risk. But there was no way anyone could know or believe that the banks were [conducting themselves] at that level of stupidity. I predicted that there was going to be a collapse because of the information asymmetry problems that were being created." His Nobel prize was given for exactly that – showing how markets fail because different people in them hold different levels of information.

Yet there is no hint of I-told-you-so about Stiglitz's tone as he asks the waiter for coffee. He orders decaffeinated, but suggests the British economy needs the opposite: a stiff stimulant rather than the "fiscal consolidation" which is George Osborne's economic euphemism for cuts.

Fiscal stimulus is out of fashion now. World leaders embarked on that strategy – injecting money to re-energise the economy – after the banking crash three years ago. It was widely perceived not to have worked because the money governments pumped into the banks was not passed on to ailing businesses or individuals in trouble with their mortgages.

"The problem was that, in the US, the stimulus wasn't big enough," he says. "Too much of it was in tax cuts. And when they gave money to the banks they gave it to the wrong banks and, as a result, credit has not been restored – we can expect a couple of million or more homes to be repossessed this year than last year – and the economy has not been restarted." Instead of producing a consensus that the government should have done more, it has created disillusion that the government can do anything, Stiglitz says.

The result is that, following the attacks by the financial markets on Greece and then Spain, everybody is now in a mood of retrenchment. "It's not just pre-Keynesian, it's Hooverite," he says. By which he means governments are not just refusing to stimulate, they are making cuts, as Herbert Hoover did in the US in 1929 – when he turned the Wall Street Crash into the Great Depression. "Hoover had this idea that, whenever you go into recession, deficits grow, so he decided to go for cuts – which is what the foolish financial markets that got us into this trouble in the first place now want."

It has become the new received wisdom throughout Europe. But it is the classic error made by those who confuse a household's economics with those of a national economy.

"If you have a household that can't pay its debts, you tell it to cut back on spending to free up the cash to pay the debts. But in a national economy, if you cut back on your spending, then economic activity goes down, nobody invests, the amount of tax you take goes down, the amount you pay out in unemployment benefits goes up – and you don't have enough money to pay your debts.

"The old story is still true: you cut expenditures and the economy goes down. We have lots of experiments which show this, thanks to Herbert Hoover and the IMF," he adds. The IMF imposed that mistaken policy in Korea, Thailand, Indonesia, Argentina and hosts of other developing countries in the 1980s and 1990s. "So we know what will happen: economies will get weaker, investment will get stymied and it's a downward vicious spiral. How far down we don't know – it could be a Japanese malaise. Japan did an experiment just like this in 1997; just as it was recovering, it raised VAT and went into another recession."

Then why have we not learned from all that? Because politicians like George Osborne are driven by ideology; the national deficit is an excuse to shrink the state because that is what he wanted anyway. Because the financial market only cares about one thing – getting repaid. And because other European governments are panicking because of the market's wild attack on Greece and Spain, and they don't want to be next.

"But cutbacks in Germany, Britain and France will mean all of Europe will suffer. The cuts will all feed back negatively. And if everyone follows this policy, their budget deficits will get worse, so they will have to make more cuts and raise taxes more. It's a vicious downward spiral. We're now looking at a long, hard, slow recovery with the possibility of a double dip if everybody cuts back at the same time. The best scenario is long and hard ... and the worst is much worse. If any one of these countries is forced into default, the banking system is so highly leveraged that it could cause real problems. This is really risky, really scary."

So what should we be doing? "The lesson is not that you cut back spending, but that you redirect it. You cut out the war in Afghanistan. You cut a couple of hundred billion dollars of wasteful military expenditure. You cut out oil subsidies. There's a long list of things we can cut. But you increase spending in other areas, such as research and development, infrastructure, education" – areas where government can get a good return on the investment of public money. "I haven't done the calculation for Britain, but, for the US, all you need is a return on government investment of 5 to 6 per cent and the long-term deficit debt is lowered."

Taxes also need to be restructured. Osborne has increased capital gains tax for high earners from 18 to 28 per cent. "There's absolutely no reason why you couldn't tax speculative gains [from rising house or land prices] by 40 per cent. There's no social return on it and land is going to be there whether people have speculated or not. But you lower the tax on investment in things like R&D."

Stiglitz has one more practical solution to offer. Governments should set up their own banks to restart lending to businesses and save struggling homeowners from repossession. "If the banks aren't lending, let's create a new lending facility to do that job," he says. "In the US, we gave $700bn to the banks; if we had used a fraction of that to create a new bank, we could have financed all the lending that was needed."

Indeed, it could be done for far less. "Take $100bn, lever that at 10 to 1 [by attracting funds from the private sector] and that's a trillion-dollar new lending capacity – more than the real economy needs."

Such a move would help ordinary people more than all Osborne's rhetoric about being tough but fair. Stiglitz is sceptical, too, about the moral underpinning of a Budget which claims that "we are all in this together", but then hits the poorest hardest.

Analysis by the Institute for Fiscal Studies has suggested that the Chancellor's Budget will cost the poor 2.5 per cent of their income, while the rich will lose just 1 per cent. "I've not made an independent study on that point, but cuts in public services will have a disproportionate effect on the poor," Stiglitz says. Osborne's Budget "may be well-intentioned, but it takes an enormous amount of work to make sure that a package of public spending cuts of that magnitude doesn't hit the poor disproportionately".

His big fear is that overseas aid, which has been protected in this first round of cuts, will not escape a second. "Developing countries have redirected themselves towards Asia, and China in particular, in recent years, so growth in Africa will be more robust than one might have expected, given the severity of the downturn," he says.

Even so, aid remains vital to poor countries. "If aid is cut back, growth will be badly affected," he says. "China is providing aid, but its aid is all in infrastructure, whereas aid from the US and Europe is mainly in education and health – areas in which ordinary people will suffer most if there are cuts."

Joseph Stiglitz has come full circle. What the world needs now – developing and developed – is not retrenchment but greater economic stimulus. It is not a message many are in the mood to hear. But they didn't listen to him last time, either. And he turned out to be right, and they were wrong – and at what a cost to us all.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Voda ebeling [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 1:10 PM
To: H; Kevin M. O'Keefe; Elaine Weiss; Michael M. Conway; abedinh@state.gov

Haley posted this today on website:

Another Good Visit

Posted 26 minutes ago

[redacted] B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 17, 2010 8:21 PM
To: H
Subject: July 2011

May 7, 2010 – Ben Rhodes briefing:

"We've identified July 2011 as the beginning point of a transition to an Afghan lead in certain instances.

Again, the reductions that will follow July 2011 will be based upon conditions on the ground."

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 6:22 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: jackson/vanik

FYI – on Jackon/Vanik re: Russia. Will send more information as we get it.

---

From: Hormats, Robert D
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 12:14 AM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re:

Hi Rich,
This is not quite the case....the russians certainly do want it lifted.

B5

Levin wants two votes: one to lift it with provisions that the russians would be committed to meet and then another vote to determine if they have been met.

I will send her a more detailed memo when I get back.
Thanks,
Bob

---

From: Verma, Richard R
To: Hormats, Robert D
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Jun 17 18:23:28 2010
Subject:

Hi Bob –

The Secretary had a conversation with Senator Levin today about Jackson/Vanik – Levin told her that the Administration has been opposed to his efforts to lift the Jackson Vanik restrictions pertaining to Russia. He said that Administration officials have been telling him that the Russians don't want them lifted. This didn't make a whole lot of sense to me, but she asked me to follow-up with you to find out our current posture on Jackson Vanik and Russia. She'd like to get back to Senator Levin soon. I leave it up to you how you want to get the info to her, but I did want to pass along her request.

Thanks, and hope all else is well.

Rich

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 7:24 AM
To: H
Subject: You get Kyrgyzstan memo?

Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 7:33 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: A new approach on the PSD

I am on travel and will not return to the office until Tuesday, July 6. If you need immediate assistance please contact Marisa McAuliffe by phone at 202-647-2972 or email at McauliffeMS@state.gov.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 7:46 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Scheduled 6/18/10 Friday

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:15 am PARTY FOR DAN SMITH
9:30 am Treaty Room, 7th Floor

9:30 am WEEKLY MEETING w/UN AMBASSADOR SUSAN RICE
10:00 am Secretary's Office

10:15 am WORLD REFUGEE DAY EVENT
10:25 am Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor *Approx. 200 ppl expected.

10:45 am BILATERAL w/DANISH DPM/FM LENE ESPERSEN
11:15 am Secretary's Conference Room *Official photo in East Hall preceding.

11:15 am PRESS PRE-BRIEF
11:20 am Secretary's Office

11:20 am JOINT PRESS AVAILABILITY w/DANISH DPM/FM ESPERSEN
11:35 am Treaty Room

11:40 am OFFICE TIME
12:00 pm Secretary's Office

12:00 pm DEPART State Department *En route NFATC

12:15 pm ARRIVE NFATC

12:15 pm DEDICATION CEREMONY TO MARK THE EXPANSION OF
1:00 pm FOREIGN SERVICE INSTITUTE/GEORGE P. SHULTZ CENTER
National Foreign Affairs Training Center *Approx. 500 ppl expected.

1:05 pm DEPART NFATC *En route Washington National Airport

1:20 pm ARRIVE Washington National Airport

2:00 pm DEPART Washington National Airport
*En route New York, NY

3:25 pm ARRIVE New York, LaGuardia Airport

3:35 pm DEPART New York, LaGuardia Airport *En route Private Residence

4:20 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 8:39 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: You get Kyrgyzstan memo?

Hope it's helpful, Horton is very well informed and trustworthy ------Original Message------
From: Hillary Clinton
To: 'sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Jun 18, 2010 8:36 AM
Subject: Re: You get Kyrgyzstan memo?

I did and thank you. I'll try to call later.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Fri Jun 18 07:24:29 2010
Subject: You get Kyrgyzstan memo?

Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 2:37 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Suprise

----- Original Message -----
From: Mikulski, BAM (Mikulski) <BAM@Mikulski.senate.gov>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Thu Jun 24 14:35:24 2010
Subject: Suprise

B6

---
Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 3:57 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: COKE removed from Jamaica

Importance: High

---

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 3:12 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Macmanus, Joseph E; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: COKE removed from Jamaica
Importance: High

I wanted to make sure S knew of the latest on the Coke transfer. DEA reports that: "at approximately 1:55 pm, Christopher COKE was handed over to US officials and immediately transported off the island. DEA aircraft transporting COKE is expected to arrive in the NY area at approximately 7 pm EST."

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: pverveer
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 12:21 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Ukraine

Just met with Fr Gudziak. He will come back to Kyiv for your visit!
Also John Tefft saw him in Lviv. He is so grateful for the strong support you have delivered.
Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Tue, 1 Jun 2010 07:00:28
To: 'pverveer'<pverveer
Subject: Re: Ukraine

Very distressing report. If I go to Ukraine in early July, are you going w me? What could I do to address? Let's raise w Phil Gordon today.

----- Original Message -----
From: PVerveer <PVerveer
To: H
Sent: Sun May 30 22:47:57 2010
Subject: Ukraine

This is from Fr. Borys Gudziak, the wonderful priest you met in Lviv. He gave you a tour of the Cathedral and you had a wonderful chat with him at the time. Since then, much progress has been made there. He became head of the new Ukrainian Catholic University and has really come in to his own as a respected leader and scholar.
Unfortunately, his situation and that of the Catholic community and academic freedom has come under siege since Yanokovich became president. I have a series of emails from the US Ukrainian community, in addition to this email directly from Gudziak, They are alarmed about developments. I've been in touch with John Tefft and sent him everything. He is aware of recent events.
I will make a folder of the correspondence for you since the community here and in Ukraine sees you as their champion. This is not a good turn of events.

---

From: gudziak
To: pverveer
Sent: 5/29/2010 3:09:23 A.M. Eastern Daylight Time
Subj: difficulties for UCU

Dear Melanne,

It has been awhile since we have been in touch. As you now we are under special pressure at the Ukrainian Catholic University. It is a question of our welfare and future. But not only. Almost no educational institutions have taken a stand in defense of democracy and even western Ukrainian politicians are capitulating under pressure. So is business. The approach of the new authorities is quick and systematic. Top and middle positions in all spheres of government, administration, state security, police have been rapidly changed and are effectively moving in on the freedom of the press and discourse.

Our students are scared.

Some are active, but some fear for the university, that it may loose accreditation. A father and his daughter-student came to my office in a state of anxiety.

Some students are afraid to blog and post comments because they fear that they will be traced and that their parents will loose their jobs.

There is clear evidence from one of our banks that the authorities are beginning to dig into the question of our finances. Provocations, moral defamation, planting of drugs and weapons in student residences as happened in 2004 before the election could be next.

The most effective defense is speaking out.

I am grateful for your solicitude and wanted to ask for two things.

1 To ask the Secretary of State to bring this to the attention of the president and vice president and to do what she can in our defense.

2. to help us get the story to some of the main media outlets: New York Times, Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, CNN, etc. One story by any of these for us and for the people in Ukraine that have the courage to speak the truth is invaluable.

We have had some great support already. But I have a sense that this adventure is only beginning and we have to be ready for everything.

Please pass on my respect to Secretary Clinton.

May God bless you!

Fr. Borys

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 1:05 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: AIPAC?

Think we came to a resolution on government procurement, and civ nuke. Jury is still out on shoulds/shalls.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 12:57 PM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject: AIPAC?

What happened?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 25, 2010 8:32 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 6/25/10 Friday

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:15 am OFFICE TIME
10:00 am Secretary's Office

10:00 am PRIVATE MEETING
10:10 am Secretary's Office

10:15 am BRIEFING ON GLOBAL HEALTH INITIATIVE ISSUES
11:15 am Secretary's Outer Office

11:30 am WEEKLY DEVELOPMENT TEAM MEETING
12:30 pm Secretary's Outer Office

12:30 pm OFFICE TIME
1:15 pm Secretary's Office

1:20 pm DEPART State Department
En route Washington Reagan National Airport

1:40 pm ARRIVE Washington Reagan National Airport

2:00 pm DEPART Washington Reagan National Airport via US Airways Shuttle #2174
En route New York, NY

3:25 pm ARRIVE New York, New York-LaGuardia Airport

3:35 pm DEPART New York-LaGuardia Airport
En route Private Residence

4:25 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:22 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: final list of strategy sessions for next week

FYI

I think we need smart ways to get one or two more folks in – like – Dan Baer and few others like that.

---

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 2:06 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: final list of strategy sessions for next week

Here's our final list as discussed -- I am moving ahead and inviting Monday's two meetings now. Huma and I may need to tweak timing slightly as the week goes on but will try to stick to these times as outlined.

Monday, June 21st
3:30pm-5:00pm
Core Group Session
Jim, Jack, Jake, Cheryl and Derek

5:00pm-6:30pm
Core Group plus Regional Assistant Secretaries
Carson, Blake, Gordon, Campbell, Valenzuela, Feltman, Brimmer, Johnson

Wednesday, June 23rd

1:30pm-3:00pm
Core Group plus select S
Verma, Benjamin, Goosby, Verveer, Koh, Slaughter, Goldberg, Goldwyn

Friday, June 25th
10:30am-11:30am
Core Group plus T
Tauscher, Timbie, Van Diepen, Andrew Shapiro, Gottemoeller

11:30am-12:30pm
Core Group plus G/EEB
Fernandez, Hormats, Hariton, Otero, Posner, Jones, Schwartz, CdeBaca

3:00pm-4:00pm
Hold time for Core Group Wrap Up Session

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct)

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:28 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

You fine with this for the P meeting on Monday – scroll down for all invitees.

---

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:21 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

So far – Johnnie, Blake and Dave Johnson are regrets.
Phil Gordon, Arturo and Kurt are coming.
Waiting to hear from Brimmer and Feltman.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:19 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Hmmm – who else can't come – we need johnnie

---

From: Carson, Johnnie
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 2:54 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Yamamoto, Donald Y; Cook, Akunna E
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

---

Lona: I will be en route to Sudan (Khartoum and Juba) and will not be able to make it. (I will be away from Sunday to Sunday.) If the Secretary decides to include substitutes, my deputy Don Yamamoto, will be available to attend. Johnnie

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 2:38 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J; Chollet, Derek H; Carson, Johnnie; Blake, Robert O; Gordon, Philip H; Campbell, Kurt M; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Brimmer, Esther D; Johnson, David T
Cc: Toiv, Nora F; Laszczych, Joanne; Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Hanley, Monica R; Lavy, Brendan L; Polidoro, Evelyn R; Gent, Stephanie R; Cook, Akunna E; Jennings, Monika D; Hegendorfer, Daryl R; Grigola, Sandra T (NEA/FO); Gonzalez, Juan S; Lowe, Matthew D; Le Mon, Christopher J
Subject: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

The Secretary would like to hold a strategy session on Monday, June 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm in the S Conference Room.

Let me know if you have significant conflict and will not be able to join -- no substitutions or additions to this meeting, please.

Thank you – Lona

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct)

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 25, 2010 11:27 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: With deep gratitude

fyi

---

From: Stanton, Katie
Sent: Friday, June 25, 2010 10:31 AM
Subject: With deep gratitude

Dear friends,

I'm so grateful to have had the pleasure of working with you over the past 18 months. Public service is an honor and I feel so lucky to have had the opportunity to serve our country in both the White House and the State Department. I'm deeply impressed by the important work you do and will leave Washington, DC knowing that our country's best days are ahead of us thanks to your commitment, hard work, and passion.

My last day at the State Department will be July 9th. [redacted] I would love to see you before I go – please save the date of July 8th for a cupcakes and champagne party in DC. B6

My personal email is [redacted]. Please visit me in [redacted] ☺

Best,
Katie

Katie Jacobs Stanton
Office of the Secretary of State
e: stantonk@state.gov || t: 202-647-0419 || c: [redacted]
twitter: @StateDept @KatieS

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:41 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Let me see what dates might work for this group.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:38 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Do you think we should go ahead or postpone w more notice to insure more participation or just go on and check the box so everyone participates at some point?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jun 18 15:28:29 2010
Subject: FW: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

You fine with this for the P meeting on Monday – scroll down for all invitees.

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:21 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

So far – Johnnie, Blake and Dave Johnson are regrets.

Phil Gordon, Arturo and Kurt are coming.

Waiting to hear from Brimmer and Feltman.

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:19 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Hmmm – who else can't come – we need johnnie

From: Carson, Johnnie
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 2:54 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Yamamoto, Donald Y; Cook, Akunna E
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Lona: I will be en route to Sudan (Khartoum and Juba) and will not be able to make it. (I will be away from Sunday to Sunday.) If the Secretary decides to include substitutes, my deputy Don Yamamoto, will be available to attend.
Johnnie

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 2:38 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J; Chollet, Derek H; Carson, Johnnie; Blake, Robert O; Gordon, Philip H; Campbell, Kurt M; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Brimmer, Esther D; Johnson, David T
Cc: Toiv, Nora F; Laszczych, Joanne; Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Hanley, Monica R; Lavy, Brendan L; Polidoro, Evelyn R; Gent, Stephanie R; Cook, Akunna E; Jennings, Monika D; Hegendorfer, Daryl R; Grigola, Sandra T (NEA/FO); Gonzalez, Juan S; Lowe, Matthew D; Le Mon, Christopher J
Subject: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

The Secretary would like to hold a strategy session on Monday, June 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm in the S Conference Room.

Let me know if you have significant conflict and will not be able to join -- no substitutions or additions to this meeting, please.

Thank you – Lona

Lona Valmoro

Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

[redacted] (direct)

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 5:14 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

We are going to postpone Monday's and start with tues or weds.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:38 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Do you think we should go ahead or postpone w more notice to insure more participation or just go on and check the box so everyone participates at some point?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jun 18 15:28:29 2010
Subject: FW: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

You fine with this for the P meeting on Monday – scroll down for all invitees.

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:21 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

So far – Johnnie, Blake and Dave Johnson are regrets.

Phil Gordon, Arturo and Kurt are coming.

Waiting to hear from Brimmer and Feltman.

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 3:19 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Hmmm – who else can't come – we need johnnie

From: Carson, Johnnie
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 2:54 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J
Cc: Yamamoto, Donald Y; Cook, Akunna E
Subject: RE: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

Lona: I will be en route to Sudan (Khartoum and Juba) and will not be able to make it. (I will be away from Sunday to Sunday.) If the Secretary decides to include substitutes, my deputy Don Yamamoto, will be available to attend.
Johnnie

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 2:38 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B; Lew, Jacob J; Chollet, Derek H; Carson, Johnnie; Blake, Robert O; Gordon, Philip H; Campbell, Kurt M; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Brimmer, Esther D; Johnson, David T
Cc: Toiv, Nora F; Laszczych, Joanne; Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Hanley, Monica R; Lavy, Brendan L; Polidoro, Evelyn R; Gent, Stephanie R; Cook, Akunna E; Jennings, Monika D; Hegendorfer, Daryl R; Grigola, Sandra T (NEA/FO); Gonzalez, Juan S; Lowe, Matthew D; Le Mon, Christopher J
Subject: meeting with the secretary on monday june 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm

The Secretary would like to hold a strategy session on Monday, June 21st from 5:00pm-6:30pm in the S Conference Room.

Let me know if you have significant conflict and will not be able to join -- no substitutions or additions to this meeting, please.

Thank you – Lona

Lona Valmoro

Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

[redacted] (direct)

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 18, 2010 5:24 PM
To: H
Subject: consular fees

We sent the paper on consular fees to Tanner today, and his staff confirmed that he has received it. Assuming Tanner continues to be supportive, we need him to let Hoyer know he supports our effort.

Additionally, Jack thinks it is important for you to talk to Pelosi. Berman mentioned that as well. I can send a call sheet just in case you have a chance to connect with her.

Thanks again for stopping by the AIPAC meeting. It really helped close out some important issues.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 19, 2010 6:11 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Farewell

Fyi traffic

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Smith, Daniel B
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Jun 19 06:10:26 2010
Subject: Re: Farewell

Dan

I don't know where to begin as you are our beginning and middle and I cannot imagine our end without your quiet but firm wisdom, careful candor, and watchful eye for the Secretary and all of us who have joined the department to have a chance to help her and those who work so hard in this building make a difference.

Her success to date is yours - I hope you know that as we are so very cognizant of that.

I look forward to visiting you as you give your leadership to greece on b/h of our country.

More importantly, I look forward to an enduring friendship.

Thank you. For everything.

Cdm

---

From: Smith, Daniel B
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Jun 18 17:46:14 2010
Subject: Farewell

Cheryl,

I just wanted to say what a pleasure it has been working with you. You are a wonderful Chief of Staff and Counselor, and I have learned a great deal from you. I am deeply indebted to you for my onward assignment and, Senate willing, hope to welcome you to Athens soon. In the meantime, I know Steve Mull and the Secretariat will continue to do all they can to support you and the other members of the Secretary's senior leadership team. If I can ever do anything for you, please don't hesitate to ask. All the best, Dan representatives of "embattled NGOs" in the balcony of the Slowacki Theater, and many were literally awe-struck. They told me that it was the most important, most inspirational speech they had ever heard relating to civil society. I agree.

I realize that considerable behind-the-scenes work goes into a speech like this. While civil society has an important role in critiquing governmental actions, I also think that it's important to recognize the efforts of our remarkable colleagues in government. So please allow me to say "thank you" to you and your team. Please also know that you can count on ICNL to redouble its efforts - within the CD Working Group and otherwise - to advance the objectives set forth in Krakow. Indeed, I've already met with the Working Group and have reached out to other partners to ensure that civil society properly complements the tireless efforts you and your team have displayed in protecting civic space around the world.

With best regards,

Doug

* * *

Douglas Rutzen
President
International Center for Not-for-Profit Law
1126 16th Street NW #400
Washington, DC 20036
202-684-2535
www.icnl.org

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 19, 2010 9:45 AM
To: H
Subject: Quartet

Dan will stay through Monday to work [redacted] B5

[redacted]

The next step would be to work to [redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 19, 2010 2:13 PM
To: H
Subject: Gaza

Below is the update I have as of yesterday - still waiting on today's update and Dan is working the language on a number of points. I will get you the latest either late tonight or tomorrow morning.

Based on our discussions so far, [redacted] B5

[redacted]

DRAFT STATEMENT

[redacted]

DISCUSSION

[redacted]

B5

B5

ANALYSIS

B5

For us, there is merit

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 19, 2010 2:32 PM
To: H
Subject: An interview with George Yeo

See hus analysis of where we are on EAS but also on the US, Japan, and Chinese urbanization and trade patterns.. Nothing that new, but valuable coming from him.

The Australian - 19 Jun 10
Embracing everyone from the US to India Greg Sheridan, Foreign editor

GEORGE Yeo, Singapore's Foreign Minister, is one of the most dazzlingly clever people you could meet in Southeast Asia. Singapore is a society that notoriously produces hardheads in its strategic outlook. But Yeo combines Singapore's characteristic hard-headedness with a depth of historical understanding and context, as well as a lively human sympathy for the diversity of the region that surrounds him, which I, at any event, find almost unique. I remember interviewing him at the height of the East Asian economic crisis in 1997 and asking whether this crisis shattered the idea of Asia as the growing centre of the global economy, as numerous foolishly triumphalist Western commentators were then suggesting. "No it doesn't," Yeo told me. "At the most it might put back the forecasts by five or 10 years." It moved the graph a little to the right, it didn't change the trends. On that, Yeo was absolutely right.

But it is also Yeo's ability to apply the insights of history to the real problems of Asia today which make him formidable. This week, Yeo spent a few days in Australia and I caught up with him for one of those slightly mesmerising historical tour de force conversations in which he specialises.

It is no secret Singapore had the most serious reservations about Kevin Rudd's proposal to establish an Asia-Pacific Community. The Prime Minister wanted the US, India and Russia included in a regional body which could deal with strategic issues as well as trade and economics. Singapore's hesitation over the Rudd proposal came because it thought that the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, of which it is a key member, could be sidelined. I asked Yeo whether the region was now clear on what it wanted its organisations to accomplish. "We still need a lot more discussion," he said. "The vision is going to change dramatically, with the emergence of China and India on the global stage. The configuration is evolving much faster than most of us would have preferred. But that's the reality we've got to work with.

We need a regional architecture which is able to accommodate the stresses. The single most important relationship is between the US and China. Increasingly, the relationship between India and China is becoming more important. I think eventually a triangular relationship will decide the big issues of war and peace in Asia this century - the triangle consisting of the US, China and India."

Yeo saw Rudd and Foreign Minister Stephen Smith in Canberra and now describes Canberra and Singapore as being in harmony on the evolution of regional organisations. This is how he saw it having played out: "When Prime Minister Rudd proposed the APC, Dick Woolcott (Rudd's envoy) went round the region. He did not visit all countries. He made it quite plain to some that only the big countries of ASEAN need to be involved. We talked among ourselves and quite soon the conclusion was reached that ASEAN was going to be sidelined. So there was an immediate blowback from the region. "To PM Rudd's credit he quickly clarified this, that ASEAN is central to his conception of the APC and that that was his vision from the very beginning. I said, 'All of us in the region are very relieved to hear that'.

"Separately we had (former Japanese) prime minister (Yukio) Hatoyama articulating his view of an East Asian region apparently centred on China, Japan and Korea. It created, as you would expect, a natural reaction in Southeast Asia. That got us all thinking in the region. How to keep Russia and the US in the region in a way that's comfortable. For a long time we've been thinking about China, more recently about India." Yeo pointed out that earlier regional organisations also evolved slowly, in particular the East Asia Summit, which includes Australia and New Zealand, as well as ASEAN, China, Japan, South Korea and India. He said: "It took us a long time to create the EAS structure. Some preferred it to be based on the ASEAN plus three (China, Japan, Korea), harking back to (former Malaysian prime minister) Mahathir (Mohamad)'s East Asian caucus. "Others felt that's too limiting. If it's just ASEAN plus three, that may be a little lop-sided because of the economic weight of the plus three. So we thought if we have India on one side, and Australia and New Zealand to the south, there's a certain natural equipoise.

"Then it took many discussions. The Russians wanted to join the EAS but we felt this should not be rushed. Russia is too important a country. There was some unhappiness from the Russians that we did not accommodate them in the EAS at that time. (Former US) President (George W.) Bush did not want to join the EAS but he worried that the EAS might exclude the US from the region. We told our American friends that it could not be purely an Asian thing because Australia and New Zealand were in it. In any case, countries like Singapore would never want an EAS to be exclusive. What would threaten us most is if the world developed into blocs."

So where do we end up today? "When I met PM Rudd I thanked him for helping to catalyse the thinking of ASEAN. So now there are two possibilities, either an EAS expanded for Russia and the US or a separate ASEAN plus eight (including the US and Russia) configuration. In fact I had a very interesting discussion with Prime Minister Rudd. I think in the end he's happy to let ASEAN members decide and he doesn't want to interfere in our regional discussion."

So you can describe what Yeo outlines as either a win or a loss for Rudd. Whatever evolves, nobody is going to call it the Asia-Pacific Community and no one is going to imagine that Rudd was its founder, as everyone accepts that Bob Hawke founded APEC in 1989. On the other hand, it does seem as though it's very much more than likely that there will finally be a regional organisation embracing everyone from the US to India, which is able to discuss security. That is pretty much Rudd's policy aim and, as Yeo constructively puts it, Rudd has influenced ASEAN thinking. Friends of Rudd can describe it as the embodiment of his vision and fulfilment of his initiative. His enemies can say the APC came to nothing and was a failure in Australian diplomacy. Certainly Yeo casts it in a constructive light. There is only space to give the smallest sampling of Yeo's prodigiously rich insights on other issues.

On the US, he said: "Both Australia and Singapore feel it in our bones that the US will remain a great power for many decades. It is a vast country always throwing up new ideas, always on the boil. It has a sunny disposition. We in Singapore and Australia feel it in our bones that one way or another they will get out of their current difficulties."

On China, I asked whether its political development was keeping pace with its growth in power, financial and military, so it could manage that new power in a way that was beneficial to everybody. Yeo stressed that he was sure Beijing's preoccupations were internal, and said: "China is the No 1 trading partner for Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, India and already No 2 for New Zealand, and for all the countries (in Asia) the graph points in the same direction. "

(The historical process) is high drama in China. It was historically because of the large rural peasantry that Maoism developed as a different ideology from Bolshevism. China was 20 per cent urban. It's now 40 per cent urban and will go to 80 per cent or 90 per cent. The urbanisation of Europe was languid by comparison, but look at Dickens or Victor Hugo. Look at the huge reaction in Europe to urbanisation and industrialisation. In China it's all compressed. If they succeed they will be the greatest nation on Earth. The Chinese know they have to learn new tricks. The skills which brought them to power won't keep them in power."

He recalled that early in China's economic modernisation program it was fascinated by how Singapore, as a mostly Chinese nation, ran its society in such an orderly and effective manner, combining rapid economic growth with social order and a respect for tradition. Then that interest seemed to wane. But now Chinese delegations are back again in large numbers, fascinated particularly with how Singapore manages the politics of being a big and booming city. Mainland Chinese are even sitting in on politicians' electoral clinics in Singapore, observing how real problems are recognised, integrated into the system and dealt with.

I asked Yeo too whether he thought Japan could sustain the stabilising role it has played in Asia these past 60 years. He replied: "Their politics now are a mess. Partly because they fit the pieces together so closely, reconfiguring the pieces is difficult. A lot of Japanese politics now is not about fitting the pieces together but pulling them apart.

"The DPJ came to power determined to pull the pieces apart, the Liberal Democratic Party from big business from the bureacracy. Never write Japan off. It takes a long time for them to change but when they do change they do it with a fury and intensity that surprises everyone." Japan has gone through profound periods of change in the past - the Meiji Restoration of the 19th century, in which it decided to become a modern nation; or the pervasive change after World War II, in which it decided to embrace democracy and the role of the key US ally in the region. The fact that it is now grappling with change is no reason to think it cannot emerge again with a successful model.

Yeo is an old, old friend of Australia, and in a sense a long-term champion of Australia's involvement in Southeast Asia. He has been a minister in the Singapore government for more than 20 years. He embodies a great deal of institutional memory and strategic continuity, not just within Singapore but within the broader councils of the region.

It's just a pity he doesn't visit us a bit more often.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 19, 2010 5:29 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Norway confirmed

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Mara Rudman [redacted] B6
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jun 19 16:39:43 2010
Subject: Norway confirmed to me -- at least via guy on grd there who I think has good access to FM -- that they will be prepared to be publicly supportive on what comes out when get word frm us, and will hold back til then.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 25, 2010 7:01 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Development PPD
Attachments: Draft Development PPD 06-25 5pm version.doc

Attached is the PPD.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, June 25, 2010 9:48 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Former VP Cheney hospitalized

---

From: Pearce, Jennifer
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Jun 25 21:07:19 2010
Subject: (AP) Former VP Cheney hospitalized

WASHINGTON - Former Vice President Cheney was admitted to the hospital after experiencing discomfort, the latest health scare for the 69-year-old Republican leader who has a long history of heart disease. Cheney was expected to remain at George Washington University Hospital over the weekend, said spokesman Peter Long. It was not immediately clear whether Cheney's health concern was related to his previous heart troubles. He sustained his last heart attack, deemed a mild one, in February. Cheney was not feeling well and went to see his doctors at George Washington University. On their advice, he was admitted to the hospital for further testing.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, June 26, 2010 8:21 AM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Af/Pak trip

We had brief conversation about it with paul a while ago but we didn't know how early conf would start.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sat Jun 26 08:16:57 2010
Subject: Af/Pak trip

I think I should spend the night of the 19th in Kabul before the conference there.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 26, 2010 1:40 PM
To: H
Subject: Call sheets

Just sent oscar call sheets for nita lowey and greek fm papandraeou for you.
I think jake may have told you the aide to the Greek Minister of Citizens Protection was killed in the protests earlier this week. EUR has made request that you place a condolence call to FM Papandreou this weekend. The week is going to be tough politically and personally for the FM. The Minister of Citizens Protection has resigned as a result of the protests and deaths. let me know if u want to.
Also, we have abdullah call for either tomorrow or monday. Waiting fo them to get back to us.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, June 26, 2010 4:09 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Obama will resume talks on South Korea trade

From: Pearce, Jennifer
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Sent: Sat Jun 26 16:03:00 2010
Subject: (AP) Obama will resume talks on South Korea trade

TORONTO - A senior administration official says President Obama has decided to resume talks aimed at resolving issues blocking the completion of a free trade agreement with South Korea. The official says Obama plans to announce the new effort after a meeting with South Korean President Lee Myung-bak. The official says the goal would be to clear up remaining differences with Seoul by the time Obama visits South Korea in November. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because Obama had not yet spoken.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 6:48 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: With deep gratitude

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Jun 25 13:29:53 2010
Subject: Re: With deep gratitude

Is there a backstory?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jun 25 11:27:27 2010
Subject: FW: With deep gratitude

fyi

From: Stanton, Katie
Sent: Friday, June 25, 2010 10:31 AM
Subject: With deep gratitude

Dear friends,

I'm so grateful to have had the pleasure of working with you over the past 18 months. Public service is an honor and I feel so lucky to have had the opportunity to serve our country in both the White House and the State Department. I'm deeply impressed by the important work you do and will leave Washington, DC knowing that our country's best days are ahead of us thanks to your commitment, hard work, and passion.

My last day at the State Department will be July 9th. I would love to see you before I go – please save the date of July 8th for a cupcakes and champagne party in DC.

My personal email is . Please visit me in .

Best,

Katie

Katie Jacobs Stanton

Office of the Secretary of State

e: stantonk@state.gov || t: 202-647-0419 || c: [redacted] B6

twitter: @StateDept @KatieS

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 7:22 AM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: RE: Tomorrow

Absolutely.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 7:21 AM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin
Subject: Tomorrow

Katie Stanton is leaving to go back to California. Will you ask her to come by to say goodbye to me? Thx.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 10:35 AM
To: H
Subject: H: memo on UK politics/budget/economy Sid
Attachments: hrc memo uk politialeconomy 062710.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

June 27, 2010

For: HRC
From: Sid
Re: UK politics/economy

UK polls show support for the Lib-Dems after the launch of the draconian Cameron government budget cratering. LD support is down to 16 percent, half what it was at its peak during the election and half of LD members now express a desire to defect from their party. They feel deceived by LD ministers' participation in a Tory budget opposed to their own beliefs. In Parliament, a secret caucus of LDs is meeting with Labour about opposing the budget. Meanwhile, short term support for Cameron is static and for the government slightly up, but only translated to the Tories. Both the Tories and Labour are up, profiting from the LD quandary. The scenario is potentially portentous for the LD Party: There was once an influential Australian Liberal Democratic Party, holding 11 percent of the vote and the balance of power in the Australian Senate. Upon reaching its zenith in 1996 the ALDP supported a Liberal (that is to say, a conservative) government's budget and suffered collapse. Today the ALDP holds 1 percent of the seats in the lower House. The political effect of the conservative budget will almost certainly lead to an implosion of the Tory-LD coalition. In the short run it's possible the Tories will emerge having the greatest plurality of support. But if their budget does not produce prosperity they will pay the price, too. See Stiglitz's analysis below on the Tory budget with cold analysis of the US predicament.

The implications for US-UK cooperation are apparent. While there are spheres that remain, they are contingent, including the Afghanistan War, opposed by 75 percent of UK public and about which Cameron felt compelled this week to declare UK engagement would end in five years (that is, before the next UK election). On economic policy, the UK is no partner and no bridge to Europe, where the Merkel government has entered a fugue state of vertigo (another subject). At no other time since World War II have the US and UK governments been at such odds over international economics. With JFK and Macmillan, Macmillan accepted the postwar Keynesian consensus. Reagan and Thatcher, of course, were of one mind ideologically, and the international economy was buoyed by Reagan's hyper-Keynesianism masked as Thatcherism. Unfortunately, Obama did not reach out to Brown, who sought to reestablish the special relationship around international economic recovery. Speaking of laissez faire, Cameron must be let alone to receive the consequences (within 18 months) of his ideologically driven economics. Can he be engaged on international development? Or does his budget rule that out too? There's not much there.

The Labour Party leadership contest is heating up. David Miliband has an article out today on how the Cameron budget will foster "a lost generation." More on that soon…

http://www.independent.co.uk/news/uk/politics/osbornes-first-budget-its-wrong-wrong-wrong-2011501.html

Osborne's first Budget? It's wrong, wrong, wrong!

Joseph Stiglitz, the Nobel prizewinner who predicted the global crisis, delivers his verdict on the Chancellor's first Budget and tells Paul Vallely it will take the UK deeper into recession and hit millions – the poorest – badly

Sunday, 27 June 2010

George Osborne will probably not be very bothered that there is a man who thinks he got last week's emergency Budget almost entirely wrong. But he should be. Because that man is a former chief economist at the World Bank who won the Nobel Prize for Economics for his work on why markets do not produce the outcomes which, in theory, they ought to.

Professor Joseph Stiglitz, who has been described as the biggest brain in economics, is distinctly unimpressed by George Osborne's strategy. This, he predicts, will make Britain's recovery from recession longer, slower and harder than it needs to be. The rise in VAT could even tip us into a double-dip recession.

Stiglitz, who was once Bill Clinton's senior economic adviser, is now professor of economics and finance at Columbia Business School. He was in the UK this week at the University of Manchester, where he chairs the Brooks World Poverty Institute, but he lifted his head from the detail of international development to scrutinise the economic strategy of the Conservative Chancellor whose Liberal Democrat partners recently reversed their judgement that massive public spending cuts now would endanger the economy and joined in the Tory slash-and-burn strategy. They were deeply wrong to do so, he believes.

It would be a mistake to ignore Stiglitz on this. He has a track record of getting his predictions right. He was one of the few economists who predicted the global financial meltdown long before it occurred.

"What happened was very much in accord with what I expected," he tells me when we meet for a coffee outside the Blackwell bookshop in the centre of the university. "The data was pretty clear about that." And the scale of the crash? "That wasn't a surprise," he adds, in a matter-of-fact manner. "The bigger the bubble, the bigger the burst.

"The thing most economists did not fully grasp was the extent to which the banks engaged in murky risk-taking activities. They were taking a risk with our money, their shareholders' money, the bond-holders' money," he says. Banks were demanding up to 40 per cent of the corporate profits, saying their innovative financing was adding value. But "all this talk about innovation was a sham" because it did not relate to any real increase in the economy's productivity, he says.

"There was a prima facie case of something screwy going on [with all the] perverse incentives that would lead them to take excessive risk. But there was no way anyone could know or believe that the banks were [conducting themselves] at that level of stupidity. I predicted that there was going to be a collapse because of the information asymmetry problems that were being created." His Nobel prize was given for exactly that – showing how markets fail because different people in them hold different levels of information.

Yet there is no hint of I-told-you-so about Stiglitz's tone as he asks the waiter for coffee. He orders decaffeinated, but suggests the British economy needs the opposite: a stiff stimulant rather than the "fiscal consolidation" which is George Osborne's economic euphemism for cuts.

Fiscal stimulus is out of fashion now. World leaders embarked on that strategy – injecting money to re-energise the economy – after the banking crash three years ago. It was widely perceived not to have worked because the money governments pumped into the banks was not passed on to ailing businesses or individuals in trouble with their mortgages.

"The problem was that, in the US, the stimulus wasn't big enough," he says. "Too much of it was in tax cuts. And when they gave money to the banks they gave it to the wrong banks and, as a result, credit has not been restored – we can expect a couple of million or more homes to be repossessed this year than last year – and the economy has not been restarted." Instead of producing a consensus that the government should have done more, it has created disillusion that the government can do anything, Stiglitz says.

The result is that, following the attacks by the financial markets on Greece and then Spain, everybody is now in a mood of retrenchment. "It's not just pre-Keynesian, it's Hooverite," he says. By which he means governments are not just refusing to stimulate, they are making cuts, as Herbert Hoover did in the US in 1929 – when he turned the Wall Street Crash into the Great Depression. "Hoover had this idea that, whenever you go into recession, deficits grow, so he decided to go for cuts – which is what the foolish financial markets that got us into this trouble in the first place now want."

It has become the new received wisdom throughout Europe. But it is the classic error made by those who confuse a household's economics with those of a national economy.

"If you have a household that can't pay its debts, you tell it to cut back on spending to free up the cash to pay the debts. But in a national economy, if you cut back on your spending, then economic activity goes down, nobody invests, the amount of tax you take goes down, the amount you pay out in unemployment benefits goes up – and you don't have enough money to pay your debts.

"The old story is still true: you cut expenditures and the economy goes down. We have lots of experiments which show this, thanks to Herbert Hoover and the IMF," he adds. The IMF imposed that mistaken policy in Korea, Thailand, Indonesia, Argentina and hosts of other developing countries in the 1980s and 1990s. "So we know what will happen: economies will get weaker, investment will get stymied and it's a downward vicious spiral. How far down we don't know – it could be a Japanese malaise. Japan did an experiment just like this in 1997; just as it was recovering, it raised VAT and went into another recession."

Then why have we not learned from all that? Because politicians like George Osborne are driven by ideology; the national deficit is an excuse to shrink the state because that is what he wanted anyway. Because the financial market only cares about one thing – getting repaid. And because other European governments are panicking because of the market's wild attack on Greece and Spain, and they don't want to be next.

"But cutbacks in Germany, Britain and France will mean all of Europe will suffer. The cuts will all feed back negatively. And if everyone follows this policy, their budget deficits will get worse, so they will have to make more cuts and raise taxes more. It's a vicious downward spiral. We're now looking at a long, hard, slow recovery with the possibility of a double dip if everybody cuts back at the same time. The best scenario is long and hard ... and the worst is much worse. If any one of these countries is forced into default, the banking system is so highly leveraged that it could cause real problems. This is really risky, really scary."

So what should we be doing? "The lesson is not that you cut back spending, but that you redirect it. You cut out the war in Afghanistan. You cut a couple of hundred billion dollars of wasteful military expenditure. You cut out oil subsidies. There's a long list of things we can cut. But you increase spending in other areas, such as research and development, infrastructure, education" – areas where government can get a good return on the investment of public money. "I haven't done the calculation for Britain, but, for the US, all you need is a return on government investment of 5 to 6 per cent and the long-term deficit debt is lowered."

Taxes also need to be restructured. Osborne has increased capital gains tax for high earners from 18 to 28 per cent. "There's absolutely no reason why you couldn't tax speculative gains [from rising house or land prices] by 40 per cent. There's no social return on it and land is going to be there whether people have speculated or not. But you lower the tax on investment in things like R&D."

Stiglitz has one more practical solution to offer. Governments should set up their own banks to restart lending to businesses and save struggling homeowners from repossession. "If the banks aren't lending, let's create a new lending facility to do that job," he says. "In the US, we gave $700bn to the banks; if we had used a fraction of that to create a new bank, we could have financed all the lending that was needed."

Indeed, it could be done for far less. "Take $100bn, lever that at 10 to 1 [by attracting funds from the private sector] and that's a trillion-dollar new lending capacity – more than the real economy needs."

Such a move would help ordinary people more than all Osborne's rhetoric about being tough but fair. Stiglitz is sceptical, too, about the moral underpinning of a Budget which claims that "we are all in this together", but then hits the poorest hardest.

Analysis by the Institute for Fiscal Studies has suggested that the Chancellor's Budget will cost the poor 2.5 per cent of their income, while the rich will lose just 1 per cent. "I've not made an independent study on that point, but cuts in public services will have a disproportionate effect on the poor," Stiglitz says. Osborne's Budget "may be well-intentioned, but it takes an enormous amount of work to make sure that a package of public spending cuts of that magnitude doesn't hit the poor disproportionately".

His big fear is that overseas aid, which has been protected in this first round of cuts, will not escape a second. "Developing countries have redirected themselves towards Asia, and China in particular, in recent years, so growth in Africa will be more robust than one might have expected, given the severity of the downturn," he says.

Even so, aid remains vital to poor countries. "If aid is cut back, growth will be badly affected," he says. "China is providing aid, but its aid is all in infrastructure, whereas aid from the US and Europe is mainly in education and health – areas in which ordinary people will suffer most if there are cuts."

Joseph Stiglitz has come full circle. What the world needs now – developing and developed – is not retrenchment but greater economic stimulus. It is not a message many are in the mood to hear. But they didn't listen to him last time, either. And he turned out to be right, and they were wrong – and at what a cost to us all.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 11:22 AM
Subject: Caroline

[redacted] AdlerCE@state.gov B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Russo, Robert V <RussoRV@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 2:16 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Notes format

Great - I will work with Claire to find a good time. Enjoy the rest of your weekend!

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Russo, Robert V
Sent: Sun Jun 27 08:56:04 2010
Subject: Notes format

Pls come see me tomorrow about redesigning and updating the format. Thx.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 6:50 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Call list

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; Huma Abedin < [redacted] > B6
Sent: Sun Jun 27 18:47:36 2010
Subject: Call list

Pls add the following:

Paul Charron about Haiti

Mickey and Heidi Kantor

John Kao

Do letter of thanks to

Gen Kean who was commander in Haiti

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 6:56 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Schedule

No date from slim.
We will follow up on all

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Huma Abedin
Cc: H
Sent: Sun Jun 27 18:49:01 2010
Subject: Schedule

Pls reach out to Dianne Feinstein for a dinner which will be very hard for me in July but if I have to be back for a few days in early August, might work then. Just so she knows we are trying.

Also, I want to see Jack Keane for a drink.

FM Lieberman wants to see me in July--let's discuss

Also FM Zebari of Iraq will be in US in July. Pls find out when he is coming

Have you heard from Carlos Slim about a date for a mtg?

Don't forget:

the Skoll mtg,

the Arctic Council in Greenland,

Harlan Dalton's visit,

Carol Evans' request for an interview,

the Vital Voices Summit 9/14-17,

the request for a mtg or call w Dellums

the AGOA conf in DC which I was told is 8/3-4

The Putin conf about tigers in Vladivostock 9/11-19

What happened w the Baucus mtg?

Also, I'd like a working lunch w Ron Kirk and a mtg about Latin America w Chris Dodd

Pls schedule Hannah Rosenthal to see me

David Rockefeller Sr has asked to see me. I'd like to do when I'm in NY or if there is a State Dept award we could give him for his citizen diplomacy esp in Latin America--could you run traps on that idea?

During UNGA, I have to do bilat w Cathy Ashton

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Sunday, June 27, 2010 7:07 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: memo on UK politics/budget/economy Sid

Me, too. On Oz.

On UK, been in touch with people, more this coming week. With Labour leadership contest going through summer there's no real opposition, which is just as well, let Cameron/Clegg dig their own hole. Labour needs a new face after Gordon. Lots of internal tensions inside LDs, will only get worse. They are seen as the enablers. This can't be sustained. This budget isn't the end either. College tuition probably to double this fall, among other new measures.

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
Sent: Sun, Jun 27, 2010 6:46 pm
Subject: Re: H: memo on UK politics/budget/economy Sid

Very interesting. Thanks. Speaking of Australia, I was sorry about Kevin Rudd.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop

To: H

Sent: Sun Jun 27 10:35:18 2010

Subject: H: memo on UK politics/budget/economy Sid

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770101 Date: 08/31/2015

CONFIDENTIAL

June 27,

2010

For: HRC

From: Sid

Re: UK politics/economy

1. UK polls show support for the Lib-Dems after the launch of the draconian Cameron government budget cratering. LD support is down to 16 percent, half what it was at its peak during the election and half of LD members now express a desire to defect from their party. They feel deceived by LD ministers' participation in a Tory budget opposed to their own beliefs. In Parliament, a secret caucus of LDs is meeting with Labour about opposing the budget. Meanwhile, short term support for Cameron is static and for the government slightly up, but only translated to the Tories. Both the Tories and Labour are up, profiting from the LD quandary. The scenario is potentially portentous for the LD Party: There was once an influential Australian Liberal Democratic Party, holding 11 percent of the vote and the balance of power in the Australian Senate. Upon reaching its zenith in 1996 the ALDP supported a Liberal (that is to say, a conservative) government's budget and suffered collapse. Today the ALDP holds 1 percent of the seats in the lower House. The political effect of the conservative budget will almost certainly lead to an implosion of the Tory-LD coalition. In the short run it's possible the Tories will emerge having the greatest plurality of support. But if their budget does not produce prosperity they will pay the price, too. See Stiglitz's analysis below on the Tory budget with cold analysis of the US predicament.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770101 Date: 08/31/2015

2. The implications for US-UK cooperation are apparent. While there are spheres that remain, they are contingent, including the Afghanistan War, opposed by 75 percent of UK public and about which Cameron felt compelled this week to declare UK engagement would end in five years (that is, before the next UK election). On economic policy, the UK is no partner and no bridge to Europe, where the Merkel government has entered a fugue state of vertigo (another subject). At no other time since World War II have the US and UK governments been at such odds over international economics. With JFK and Macmillan, Macmillan accepted the postwar Keynesian consensus. Reagan and Thatcher, of course, were of one mind ideologically, and the international economy was buoyed by Reagan's hyper-Keynesianism masked as Thatcherism. Unfortunately, Obama did not reach out to Brown, who sought to reestablish the special relationship around international economic recovery. Speaking of laissez faire, Cameron must be let alone to receive the consequences (within 18 months) of his ideologically driven economics. Can he be engaged on international development? Or does his budget rule that out too? There's not much there.

3. The Labour Party leadership contest is heating up. David Miliband has an article out today on how the Cameron budget will foster "a lost generation." More on that soon...

http://www.independent.co.uk/news/uk/politics/osbornes-first-budget-its-wrong-wrong-wrong-2011501.html

Osborne's first Budget? It's wrong, wrong, wrong!

Joseph Stiglitz, the Nobel prizewinner who predicted the global crisis, delivers his verdict on the Chancellor's first Budget and tells Paul Vallely it will take the UK deeper into recession and hit millions - the poorest - badly

Sunday, 27 June 2010

George Osborne will probably not be very bothered that there is a man who thinks he got last week's emergency Budget almost entirely wrong. But he should be. Because that man is a former chief economist at the World Bank who won the Nobel Prize for Economics for his work on why markets do not produce the outcomes which, in theory, they ought to.

Professor Joseph Stiglitz, who has been described as the biggest brain in economics, is distinctly unimpressed by George Osborne's strategy. This, he predicts, will make Britain's recovery from recession longer, slower and harder than it needs to be. The rise in VAT could even tip us into a double-dip recession.

Stiglitz, who was once Bill Clinton's senior economic adviser, is now professor of economics and finance at Columbia Business School. He was in the UK this week at the University of Manchester, where he chairs the Brooks World Poverty Institute, but he lifted his head from the detail of international development to scrutinise the economic strategy of the Conservative Chancellor whose Liberal Democrat partners recently reversed their judgement that massive public spending cuts now would endanger the economy and joined in the Tory slash-and-burn strategy. They were deeply wrong to do so, he believes.

It would be a mistake to ignore Stiglitz on this. He has a track record of getting his predictions right. He was one of the few economists who predicted the global financial meltdown long before it occurred.

"What happened was very much in accord with what I expected," he tells me when we meet for a coffee outside the Blackwell bookshop in the centre of the university. "The data was pretty clear about that." And the scale of the crash? "That wasn't a surprise," he adds, in a matter-of-fact manner. "The bigger the bubble, the bigger the burst.

"The thing most economists did not fully grasp was the extent to which the banks engaged in murky risk-taking activities. They were taking a risk with our money, their shareholders' money, the bond-holders' money," he says. Banks were demanding up to 40 per cent of the corporate profits, saying their innovative financing was adding value. But "all this talk about innovation was a sham" because it did not relate to any real increase in the economy's productivity, he says.

"There was a prima facie case of something screwy going on [with all the] perverse incentives that would lead them to take excessive risk. But there was no way anyone could know or believe that the banks were [conducting themselves] at that level of stupidity. I predicted that there was going to be a collapse because of the information asymmetry problems that were being created." His Nobel prize was given for exactly that - showing how markets fail because different people in them hold different levels of information.

Yet there is no hint of I-told-you-so about Stiglitz's tone as he asks the waiter for coffee. He orders decaffeinated, but suggests the British economy needs the opposite: a stiff stimulant rather than the "fiscal consolidation" which is George Osborne's economic euphemism for cuts.

Fiscal stimulus is out of fashion now. World leaders embarked on that strategy - injecting money to re-energise the economy - after the banking crash three years ago. It was widely perceived not to have worked because the money governments pumped into the banks was not passed on to ailing businesses or individuals in trouble with their mortgages.

"The problem was that, in the US, the stimulus wasn't big enough," he says. "Too much of it was in tax cuts. And when they gave money to the banks they gave it to the wrong banks and, as a result, credit has not been restored - we can expect a couple of million or more homes to be repossessed this year than last year - and the economy has not been restarted." Instead of producing a consensus that the government should have done more, it has created disillusion that the government can do anything, Stiglitz says.

The result is that, following the attacks by the financial markets on Greece and then Spain, everybody is now in a mood of retrenchment. "It's not just pre-Keynesian, it's Hooverite," he says. By which he means governments are not just refusing to stimulate, they are making cuts, as Herbert Hoover did in the US in 1929 - when he turned the Wall Street Crash into the Great Depression.

"Hoover had this idea that, whenever you go into recession, deficits grow, so he decided to go for cuts - which is what the foolish financial markets that got us into this trouble in the first place now want."

It has become the new received wisdom throughout Europe. But it is the classic error made by those who confuse a household's economics with those of a national economy.

"If you have a household that can't pay its debts, you tell it to cut back on spending to free up the cash to pay the debts. But in a national economy, if you cut back on your spending, then economic activity goes down, nobody invests, the amount of tax you take goes down, the amount you pay out in unemployment benefits goes up - and you don't have enough money to pay your debts.

"The old story is still true: you cut expenditures and the economy goes down. We have lots of experiments which show this, thanks to Herbert Hoover and the IMF," he adds. The IMF imposed that mistaken policy in Korea, Thailand, Indonesia, Argentina and hosts of other developing countries in the 1980s and 1990s. "So we know what will happen: economies will get weaker, investment will get stymied and it's a downward vicious spiral. How far down we don't know - it could be a Japanese malaise. Japan did an experiment just like this in 1997; just as it was recovering, it raised VAT and went into another recession."

Then why have we not learned from all that? Because politicians like George Osborne are driven by ideology; the national deficit is an excuse to shrink the state because that is what he wanted anyway. Because the financial market only cares about one thing - getting repaid. And because other European governments are panicking because of the market's wild attack on Greece and Spain, and they don't want to be next.

"But cutbacks in Germany, Britain and France will mean all of Europe will suffer. The cuts will all feed back negatively. And if everyone follows this policy, their budget deficits will get worse, so they will have to make more cuts and raise taxes more. It's a vicious downward spiral. We're now looking at a long, hard, slow recovery with the possibility of a double dip if everybody cuts back at the same time. The best scenario is long and hard ... and the worst is much worse. If any one of these countries is forced into default, the banking system is so highly leveraged that it could cause real problems. This is really risky, really scary."

So what should we be doing? "The lesson is not that you cut back spending, but that you redirect it. You cut out the war in Afghanistan. You cut a couple of hundred billion dollars of wasteful military expenditure. You cut out oil subsidies. There's a long list of things we can cut. But you increase spending in other areas, such as research and development, infrastructure, education" - areas where government can get a good return on the investment of public money.

"I haven't done the calculation for Britain, but, for the US, all you need is a return on government investment of 5 to 6 per cent and the long-term deficit debt is lowered."

Taxes also need to be restructured. Osborne has increased capital gains tax for high earners from 18 to 28 per cent. "There's absolutely no reason why you couldn't tax speculative gains [from rising house or land prices] by 40 per cent. There's no social return on it and land is going to be there whether people have speculated or not. But you lower the tax on investment in things like R&D."

Stiglitz has one more practical solution to offer. Governments should set up their own banks to restart lending to businesses and save struggling homeowners from repossession. "If the banks aren't lending, let's create a new lending facility to do that job," he says. "In the US, we gave $700bn to the banks; if we had used a fraction of that to create a new bank, we could have financed all the lending that was needed."

Indeed, it could be done for far less. "Take $100bn, lever that at 10 to 1 [by attracting funds from the private sector] and that's a trillion-dollar new lending capacity - more than the real economy needs."

Such a move would help ordinary people more than all Osborne's rhetoric about being tough but fair. Stiglitz is sceptical, too, about the moral underpinning of a Budget which claims that "we are all in this together", but then hits the poorest hardest.

Analysis by the Institute for Fiscal Studies has suggested that the Chancellor's Budget will cost the poor 2.5 per cent of their income, while the rich will lose just 1 per cent. "I've not made an independent study on that point, but cuts in public services will have a disproportionate effect on the poor," Stiglitz says. Osborne's Budget "may be well-intentioned, but it takes an enormous amount of work to make sure that a package of public spending cuts of that magnitude doesn't hit the poor disproportionately".

His big fear is that overseas aid, which has been protected in this first round of cuts, will not escape a second. "Developing countries have redirected themselves towards Asia, and China in particular, in recent years, so growth in Africa will be more robust than one might have expected, given the severity of the downturn," he says.

Even so, aid remains vital to poor countries. "If aid is cut back, growth will be badly affected," he says. "China is providing aid, but its aid is all in infrastructure, whereas aid from the US and Europe is mainly in education and health - areas in which ordinary people will suffer most if there are cuts."

Joseph Stiglitz has come full circle. What the world needs now - developing and developed - is not retrenchment but greater economic stimulus. It is not a message many are in the mood to hear. But they didn't listen to him last time, either. And he turned out to be right, and they were wrong - and at what a cost to us all.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Cherie Blair
Sent: Wednesday, June 30, 2010 9:01 AM
To: H
Cc: dband
Subject: RE: confidential

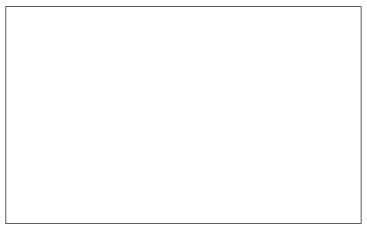
Hilary can you give me a telephone number the Qatar Crown Prince can ring you on and he will get in touch. Alternatively I can get his personal phone number for you. What is the best for you?

Cherie Blair

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: 15 June 2010 02:35
To: Cherie Blair
Subject: Re: confidential

I would be happy to meet w him. How should I follow up to arrange a mutually agreeable time? All the best to you.



----- Original Message -----
From: Cherie Blair
To: H
Sent: Mon Jun 07 09:56:45 2010
Subject: confidential

As you know I have good links to the Qataris. Sheikha Mosah's son is the 31/32 year old Crown Prince and she is keen that he starts to build a wider international profile. He has been appointed head of the Qatar National Food Security Programme which is designed to deal with Qatar's food security issues its a $30 billion programme. He is aware that food security is an issue you are majoring on and would love to meet with you in person to discuss this and to explore potential partnership areas between US and Qatar including possible participation in the US/World Bank Food Security Fund. He is also keen to talk more generally about US/Qatari cooperation and even suggested they could help out with the Oil spill problem. There is apparently a Arab Food Security Summit in October 2010 and he would like to discuss Us participation in that too.

IS a meeting possible he is more flexible on place and times than his mother! Or maybe we could set up an initial phone call.

Can you let me know if this appeals to you at all?

Cherie Blair

B6

This message has been scanned by MailController - www.MailController.altohiway.com

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 7:38 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Byrd contacts

In case you want to connect directly
Otherwise lauren can track for you

----- Original Message -----
From: Tamera Luzzatto [redacted] B6
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Reines, Philippe I; Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Schwerin, Daniel B
Sent: Mon Jun 28 06:53:47 2010
Subject: Byrd contacts

hiya. I have been in touch with "our" Tom Gavin abt Byrd's death. If of interest, here are contact possibilities. Barbara refers to his longtime CoS Videniecks (sp?).

Pat Griffin or Ann Barth in his WV office are other potential sources.
An ode to the third Senator of NY and all he did for us in that rough 9-11 time.....

Likely one of the grandchildren. She's met Mary Ann Clarkson, who is one of the reading clerks in the Senate. Her mobile, if this is still right, is [redacted]

Otherwise, Barbara. But I don't think she's taking calls right now. Her home is [redacted] The Capitol office number is 202-224-2848.

Not sure which family may be at his house. But that is [redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 10:18 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: CDM Travel this Summer

Reminder

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, June 21, 2010 12:59 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D

Subject: CDM Travel this Summer

This is just fyi for my out of office planning/scheduling purposes:

29 June: afternoon in NY

2 Jul – 9 Jul: annual leave

19 Jul – 23 Jul: travel with S

25 Aug – 27 Aug: out of offic

1 Sep: Haiti travel

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 11:32 AM
To: H; Lew, Jacob J
Subject: FW: Afghan release -- about to be sent out by lowey.

Lowey to Remove Assistance for Afghanistan From Foreign Aid Bill

Chairwoman Announces Oversight Hearings on Corruption in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON – In light of two troubling news reports on corruption within the Afghan government, Congresswoman Nita Lowey (D-NY), Chairwoman of the Appropriations State and Foreign Operations Subcommittee, today announced she is removing funding for Afghanistan beyond humanitarian aid from her 2011 bill scheduled for markup this week.

"The alleged shipment of billions in donor funds out of Afghanistan and allegations of Afghan government insiders impeding corruption investigations are outrageous," said Lowey. "I do not intend to appropriate one more dime for assistance to Afghanistan until I have confidence that U.S. taxpayer money is not being abused to line the pockets of corrupt Afghan government officials, drug lords, and terrorists. Furthermore, the government of Afghanistan must demonstrate that corruption is being aggressively investigated and prosecuted.

"Rampant corruption fosters the conditions that threaten the security of our troops and the stability of the Afghan government and economy."

The State and Foreign Operations Appropriations Subcommittee will mark up its Fiscal Year 2011 Appropriations Act on Wednesday June 30th. The subcommittee will not consider any bilateral assistance for the Afghan government other than lifesaving humanitarian aid at this time.

Lowey also announced the Subcommittee will hold oversight hearings after the July 4th recess to get to the bottom of these allegations.

"Too many Americans are suffering in this economy for us to put their hard-earned tax dollars into the hands of criminals overseas," said Lowey. "We will not commit billions more in taxpayer money for Afghanistan until there are assurances that such funds will be used for their intended purposes and that the government of Afghanistan is willing and able to root corruption within its ranks. U.S. taxpayers deserve nothing less."

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 7:49 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Dave Stone

Will do.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
redacted B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Mon Jun 28 19:47:37 2010
Subject: Dave Stone

Pls add his burial ceremony at Arlington on July 14 as option for me. Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 8:25 PM
To: H
Subject: Jake wants to talk to you.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 10:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Ae you still up?

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 05/06/2020

RELEASE IN PART B1,1.4(B),1.4(D), B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 3:18 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Luis Alberto Moreno

---

From: Thomas F. McLarty [mailto: B6
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 1:03 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Luis Alberto Moreno

Dear Cheryl,

Thank you for the update on the ongoing matter of the IDB and the hopeful reelection of Luis Alberto Moreno. I am pleased that you and Luis had a good opportunity to meet and discuss the current situation. Following up with Mexico strikes me as exactly the right next step. Assuming Luis' outreach to Mexico goes well I would hope and think we would be very close to resolving the situation in a positive manner. I look forward to our staying in touch in that regard.

Thank you and Secretary Clinton for your consistent engagement and usual good judgment on this important matter.

Personally,
Mack

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D [mailto:MillsCD@state.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, May 05, 2010 9:50 PM
To: Thomas F. McLarty
Subject: RE: Luis Alberto Moreno

Luis and I met today and had a good conversation.

He is following up with Mexico, whom he also believes will be expressing their support, which will be impactful to putting this issue to rest.

Best.

cdm

---

From: Thomas F. McLarty [mailto:
Sent: Wednesday, May 05, 2010 1:59 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Luis Alberto Moreno

Dear Cheryl,

Thank you for your prompt and clear response. I look forward to your follow up call and guidance regarding Luis Alberto and the IDB presidency. It seems to me we are an inflection point in this long running saga and a decision needs to be reached. Again, I feel [redacted] it is time for the US to make the right and natural decision and support his reelection. 1.4(D) B1

Personally,
Mack

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D [mailto:MillsCD@state.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 04, 2010 5:35 PM
To: Thomas F. McLarty
Subject: RE: Luis Alberto Moreno

Mack:

Thank you so much for your kind words regarding the Secretary. I will pass them along.

I will give you a call regarding this matter, as we have consistent views.

Best.

cdm

---

From: Thomas F. McLarty [mailto:[redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, May 04, 2010 10:54 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Luis Alberto Moreno

Dear Cheryl,

Good morning as another full week begins for both of us, but particularly for you and the distinguished Secretary. Hillary's interview on Meet the Press was flawless as was the cover story in Newsweek. Her great pictures are matching her thoughtful words.

Cheryl it is my understanding that [redacted] President of the IDB. Assuming this information is accurate (and I believe it is) I think this puts the US in a difficult and awkward position not to be agreeable to Luis' continued leadership at the IDB. We are simply unnecessarily complicating a relationship and situation in the hemisphere in my humble opinion.

I wanted to be certain you were aware of this development and would appreciate any thoughts or guidance you have as to how we might bring this matter to a timely and positive conclusion.

Personally,
Mack

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 5:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Items

1. You asked about Kurt's visit to Burma. He's set to go in three days. I talked to Jim about it today,

B5

2. You also asked about IRS assessments of tax delinquency at State.

3. Craig and the Cuba team are working something up

4.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 3:10 AM
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Making peace

Frank Ricciardone came to see me several weeks ago to make the case for

B5

AM

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 6:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Projection from exit of 305 tory seats, 326 majority, LibDems underperforming at 61 in exit. Informed people don't believe exit, going to be counted out district by district into tomorrow. Tories and Murdoch will try to drive Gordon out though they lack majority, will say he's repudiated, must concede. Gordon may reach out to Clegg, don't know. Shaun talked to Alastait Campbell about it yesterday, Alistair working with Gordon. Will likely be protracted and increasingly devisive, like Florida. More to come soon...
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Thu, 6 May 2010 18:07:09
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Thx. What's happening?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Wed May 05 13:51:30 2010
Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine.

Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 5:18 AM
To: H
Subject: Tomorrow

Cristophe is coming tomorrow at 7:30, not Isabelle. Let me know who you want wednesday cause he's offered to come then too.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 7:18 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: The political ramifications of the Greek/European debt crisis

B5

As you know, the EU-IMF-USG consensus hope motivating the Greek bailout is that it will buy time for Spain, Portugal, etc. From widening credit spreads to falling stock prices, most relevant market indicators are responding with doubt. Former IMF Chief Economist and NYT Columnist (and influential blogger for bond traders) Simon Johnson has an important rejoinder to this consensus hope in today's NYT, full text pasted below.

As the EU has no playbook for most of the pressing questions it faces, my staff is working to brainstorm as to the least bad of what are only sobering options.

This is long but worth it.

May 6, 2010, 6:11 amIt's Not About Greece AnymoreBy PETER BOONE AND SIMON JOHNSONLouisa Gouliamaki/Agence France-Presse — Getty Images Protesters waved flags from the Acropolis archaeological site behind banners in English and Greek hung in front of the Parthenon temple in Athens.Peter Boone is chairman of the charity Effective Intervention and a research associate at the Center for Economic Performance at the London School of Economics. He is also a principal in Salute Capital Management Ltd. Simon Johnson, the former chief economist at the International Monetary Fund, is the co-author of "13 Bankers."The Greek "rescue" package announced last weekend is dramatic, unprecedented and far from enough to stabilize the euro zone.The Greek government and the European Union leadership, prodded by the International Monetary Fund, are finally becoming realistic about the dire economic situation in Greece. They have abandoned previous rounds of optimistic forecasts and have now admitted to a profoundly worse situation. This new program calls for "fiscal adjustments" — cuts to the fiscal deficit, mostly through spending cuts — totaling 11 percent of gross domestic product in 2010, 4.3 percent in 2011, and 2 percent in 2012 and 2013. The total debt-to-G.D.P. ratio peaks at 149 percent in 2012-13 before starting a gentle glide path back down to sanity.This new program is honest enough to show why it is unlikely to succeed.Daniel Gros, an eminent economist on euro zone issues based in Brussels, has argued that for each 1 percent of G.D.P. decline in Greek government spending, total demand in the country falls by 2.5 percent of G.D.P. If the government reduces spending by 15 percent of G.D.P. — the initial shock to demand could be well over 30 percent of G.D.P.Obviously this simple rule does not work with such large numbers, but it illustrates that Greece is likely to experience a very sharp recession — and there is substantial uncertainty around how bad the economy will get. The program announced last weekend assumes Greek G.D.P. falls by 4 percent this year, then by another 2.6 percent in 2011, before recovering to positive growth in 2012 and beyond.Such figures seem extremely optimistic, particularly in the face of the civil unrest now sweeping Greece and the deep hostility expressed toward Greece in some northern European policy circles.The pattern of growth is critical because, under this program, Greece needs to grow out of its debt problem soon. Greece's debt-to-G.D.P. ratio will be a debilitating 145 percent at the end of 2011.Now consider putting more realistic growth figures into the I.M.F. forecast for Greece's economy — e.g., with G.D.P. declining 12 percent in 2011, then the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio may reach 155 percent. At these levels, with a 5 percent real interest rate and no growth, the country needs a primary surplus at 8 percent of G.D.P. to keep the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio stable. It will be nowhere near that level. The I.M.F. program has Greece running a primary budget deficit of around 1 percent of G.D.P. in that year, and that assumes a path for Greek growth that can be regarded only as an "upside scenario."The politics of these implied budget surpluses remains brutal. Since most Greek debt is held abroad, roughly 80 percent of the budget savings the Greek government makes go straight to Germans, French and other foreign debt holders (mostly banks). If growth turns out poorly, will the Greeks be prepared for ever-tougher austerity to pay the Germans? Even if everything goes well, Greek citizens seem unlikely to welcome this version of their "new normal."

Last week the European leadership panicked — very late in the day — when it realized that the euro zone itself was at risk of a meltdown. If the euro zone proves unwilling to protect a member like Greece from default, then bond investors will run from Portugal and Spain also — if you doubt this, study carefully the interlocking debt picture published recently in The New York Times. Higher yields on government debt would have caused concerns about potential bank runs in these nations, and then spread to more nations in Europe.When there is such a "run," it is not clear where it stops. In the hazy distance, Belgium, France, Austria and many others were potentially at risk.

Even the Germans cannot afford to bail out those nations.Slapped in the face by this ugly scenario, the Europeans decided to throw everything they and the I.M.F. had at bailing out Greece. The program as announced has only a small chance of preventing eventual Greek bankruptcy, but it may still slow or avert a dangerous spiral downward — and enormous collateral damage — in the rest of Europe.The I.M.F. floated in some fashion an alternative scenario with a debt restructuring, but this was rejected by both the European Union and the Greek authorities. This is not a surprise; leading European policy makers are completely unprepared for broader problems that would follow a Greek "restructuring," because markets would immediately mark down the debt (i.e., increase the yields) for Portugal, Spain, Ireland and even Italy.The fear and panic in the face of this would be unparalleled in modern times: When the Greeks pay only 50 percent on the face value of their debt, what should investors expect from the Portuguese and Spanish? It all becomes arbitrary, including which countries are dragged down.Someone has to decide who should be defended and at what cost, and the European structures are completely unsuited to this kind of tough decision-making under pressure.In the extreme downside scenario, Germany is the only obvious safe haven within the euro zone, so its government bond yields would collapse while other governments face sharply rising yields. The euro zone would likely not hold together.There is still a narrow escape path, without immediate debt default and the chaos that that would produce:·

Talk down the euro — moving toward parity with the American dollar would help lift growth across the euroz one.·

As the euro falls, bond yields will rise on the euro zone periphery. This will create episodes of panic. Enough short-term financing must be in place to support the rollover of government debt.·

Once the euro has fallen a great deal, announce the European Central Bank will support the euro at those levels (i.e., prevent appreciation, with G-20 tacit agreement), and also support the peripheral euro zone nations viewed as solvent by buying their bonds whenever markets are chaotic.·

At that stage, but not before, the euro zone leadership needs to push weaker governments to restructure. That will include Greece and perhaps also Portugal. Hopefully, in this scenario Spain can muddle through.·

European banks should be recapitalized as necessary and have most of their management replaced. This is a massive failure of euro groupthink — including most notably at the political level — but there is no question that bank executives have not behaved responsibly in a long while and should be replaced en masse.To the extent possible, some of the ensuing losses should be shared with bank creditors. But be careful what you wish for. The bankers are powerful for a reason; they have built vital yet fragile structures at the heart of our economies. Dismantle with care.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 7:30 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Another possible scenario: With Anji Hunter now, Tony's friend, talked to Peter yesterday, who had no clue, he will make statement tomorrow, no guidance, but Anji's sense is but wholly conjectural that Gordon will be pushed aside, let Tories form minoroty government, fight for David for leader and go into opposition, that is one Blairite view. Sid Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Thu, 6 May 2010 18:07:09
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Thx. What's happening?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Wed May 05 13:51:30 2010
Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 7:49 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Peter on Sky News right now says LibDems will likely negotiate with both parties and then says !!!! He would be in favor of Labour deal with LibDems. "Don't be so horrified." Peter robinson just lost his seat to the Alliance Party!!!!!
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Thu, 6 May 2010 18:07:09
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Thx. What's happening?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Wed May 05 13:51:30 2010
Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power.

The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 5:52 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: [redacted] B6

Will lock [redacted] in for tonight.
We spoke to Marianne about coming in on the 8th.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tue Jun 29 00:42:02 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Let's do Tues evening. Do you know when I can see Maryann?

----- Original Message -----
From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jun 23 22:41:18 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Yes she's in Hawaii until Tuesday morning. She can do Tuesday evening ot Wednesday if that works for you

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 22:40:38 2010
Subject: [redacted]

Did you reach her?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 6:01 AM
To: 'hanleymr@state.gov'; H
Subject: Re: [redacted] B6

Monica - [redacted] is already is locked for tonite. I am seeing her right before actually.

----- Original Message -----
From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Tue Jun 29 05:51:47 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Will lock [redacted] in for tonight.
We spoke to Marianne about coming in on the 8th.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tue Jun 29 00:42:02 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Let's do Tues evening. Do you know when I can see Maryann?

----- Original Message -----
From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jun 23 22:41:18 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Yes she's in Hawaii until Tuesday morning. She can do Tuesday evening ot Wednesday if that works for you

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 22:40:38 2010
Subject: [redacted]

Did you reach her?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 6:54 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

When salon called, I told them to tell him about it so he might come.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Jun 29 06:44:02 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Is he coming to the party?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jun 29 05:17:30 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

Cristophe is coming tomorrow at 7:30, not Isabelle. Let me know who you want wednesday cause he's offered to come then too.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 7:05 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

I figured.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Jun 29 06:57:18 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Ok. But I want Isabelle tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jun 29 06:53:37 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

When salon called, I told them to tell him about it so he might come.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Jun 29 06:44:02 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Is he coming to the party?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jun 29 05:17:30 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

Cristophe is coming tomorrow at 7:30, not Isabelle. Let me know who you want wednesday cause he's offered to come then too.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Huma Abedin <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 7:48 AM
To: H; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Yes easily.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'hanleymr@state.gov' <hanleymr@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jun 29 07:45:31 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Could we move [redacted] to 8:30?

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin
To: 'hanleymr@state.gov' <hanleymr@state.gov>; H
Sent: Tue Jun 29 06:00:45 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Monica - [redacted] is already is locked for tonite. I am seeing her right before actually.

----- Original Message -----
From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Tue Jun 29 05:51:47 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Will lock [redacted] in for tonight.
We spoke to Marianne about coming in on the 8th.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Cc: Huma Abedin <[redacted]>
Sent: Tue Jun 29 00:42:02 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Let's do Tues evening. Do you know when I can see Maryann?

----- Original Message -----
From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jun 23 22:41:18 2010
Subject: Re: [redacted]

Yes she's in Hawaii until Tuesday morning. She can do Tuesday evening ot Wednesday if that works for you

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Jun 23 22:40:38 2010
Subject: [redacted] B6

Did you reach her?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 8:01 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Reintegration Decree Signed

Good news.

---

From: Holbrooke, Richard
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; 'jake.sullivan <jake.sullivan Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Jun 29 07:29:39 2010
Subject: Fw: Reintegration Decree Signed

B6

FYI

---

From: Wayne, E Anthony
To: Eikenberry, Karl W; 'Petraeus, David H GEN MIL USA USCENTCOM CCCC/CCCC'
Cc: Holbrooke, Richard; ; Lute, Douglas E. ; Klemm, Hans G; Keith, James R; Todd, William E; Wagner, JoAnne; Pforzheimer, Annie; Kabul Exec Admin
Sent: Tue Jun 29 04:15:40 2010
Subject: FW: Reintegration Decree Signed

Passing this on Decree Signed.
Tony

---

From: Wagner, JoAnne
Sent: Tuesday, June 29, 2010 11:56 AM
To: Eikenberry, Karl W; Wayne, E Anthony; Keith, James R; Todd, William E
Cc: Kosnett, Philip S; Pforzheimer, Annie; Kabul Exec Admin; Kabul EXEC CDDEA; Castonguay, Stephane M; Katz, David J; Taliaferro, Aaron C; Harkenrider, Zachary; Molnar, Erin M
Subject: Reintegration Decree Signed -- Message to GEN Petraeus' Team?

Kabul Exec – could you please help me make sure that this gets to the Ambassador?

Ambassador --

Karzai's Chief of Staff, Omar Daudzai, called Annie this morning to relay that President Karzai did sign the Afghan Peace and Reintegration Program decree, and that GIRoA will make a public announcement to that effect this evening (Kabul time).

We do not yet have a copy of the signed decree (we are working to get a copy for our LES to translate, however, it is not yet available from any of our sources). Based on previous drafts, we believe the decree will:

- Establish the High Peace Council (HPC) called for at the National Consultative Peace Jirga. The HPC will provide political and strategic leadership to the Afghan Peace and Reintegration Program (APRP);

- Establish the bureaucratic and organizational structure and space for the reintegration Joint Secretariat, including appointment of an interim CEO (presumably Stanekzai – although his future long-term tenure in the job is unclear).

- Provide clear instructions to line ministries to support reintegration and allocate representatives to the Joint Secretariat;

- Provide clear instructions to sub-national officials to support reintegration and to establish provincial and district reintegration committees in accordance with the interim guidance released by the Afghan National Security Council in April;

- Define a process to absorb Peace through Strength (PTS) and other reintegration structures (potentially Disarmament of Illegal Armed Groups -- DIAG) under the national and provincial structures of the APRP; and

- Most importantly, give the requisite Presidential imprimatur to the program.

A second decree should be issued prior to or concurrent with the Kabul Conference appointing the members of the High Peace Council and a permanent CEO for the APRP.

As soon as we have a copy of the decree and can confirm its contents, we will send a Front Channel cable; in the meantime, we are informing the Desk, SRAP and General Petraeus' staff that the decree has been signed.

Regards,

JoAnne

JoAnne Wagner
Deputy Counselor for Political-Military Affairs
Embassy Kabul

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 7:53 PM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; H
Subject: Re: The political ramifications of the Greek/European debt crisis

I've asked AMS to have her team work up a nite note that we could send over tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu May 06 19:18:12 2010
Subject: The political ramifications of the Greek/European debt crisis

B5

As you know, the EU-IMF-USG consensus hope motivating the Greek bailout is that it will buy time for Spain, Portugal, etc. From widening credit spreads to falling stock prices, most relevant market indicators are responding with doubt. Former IMF Chief Economist and NYT Columnist (and influential blogger for bond traders) Simon Johnson has an important rejoinder to this consensus hope in today's NYT, full text pasted below.

As the EU has no playbook for most of the pressing questions it faces, my staff is working to brainstorm as to the least bad of what are only sobering options.

This is long but worth it.

May 6, 2010, 6:11 amIt's Not About Greece AnymoreBy PETER BOONE AND SIMON JOHNSONLouisa Gouliamaki/Agence France-Presse — Getty Images Protesters waved flags from the Acropolis archaeological site behind banners in English and Greek hung in front of the Parthenon temple in Athens.Peter Boone is chairman of the charity Effective Intervention and a research associate at the Center for Economic Performance at the London School of Economics. He is also a principal in Salute Capital Management Ltd. Simon Johnson, the former chief economist at the International Monetary Fund, is the co-author of "13 Bankers."The Greek "rescue" package announced last weekend is dramatic, unprecedented and far from enough to stabilize the euro zone.The Greek government and the European Union leadership, prodded by the International Monetary Fund, are finally becoming realistic about the dire economic situation in Greece. They have abandoned previous rounds of optimistic forecasts and have now admitted to a profoundly worse situation. This new program calls for "fiscal adjustments" — cuts to the fiscal deficit, mostly through spending cuts — totaling 11 percent of gross domestic product in 2010, 4.3 percent in 2011, and 2 percent in 2012 and 2013. The total debt-to-G.D.P. ratio peaks at 149 percent in 2012-13 before starting a gentle glide path back down to sanity.This new program is honest enough to show why it is unlikely to succeed.Daniel Gros, an eminent economist on euro zone issues based in Brussels, has argued that for each 1 percent of G.D.P. decline in Greek government spending, total demand in the country falls by 2.5 percent of G.D.P. If the government reduces spending by 15 percent of G.D.P. — the initial shock to demand could be well over 30 percent of G.D.P.Obviously this simple rule does not work with such large numbers, but it illustrates that Greece is likely to experience a very sharp recession — and there is substantial uncertainty around how bad the economy will get. The program announced last weekend assumes Greek G.D.P. falls by 4 percent this year, then by another 2.6 percent in 2011, before recovering to positive growth in 2012 and beyond.Such figures seem extremely optimistic, particularly in the face of the civil unrest now sweeping Greece and the deep hostility expressed toward

Greece in some northern European policy circles.The pattern of growth is critical because, under this program, Greece needs to grow out of its debt problem soon. Greece's debt-to-G.D.P. ratio will be a debilitating 145 percent at the end of 2011.Now consider putting more realistic growth figures into the I.M.F. forecast for Greece's economy — e.g., with G.D.P. declining 12 percent in 2011, then the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio may reach 155 percent. At these levels, with a 5 percent real interest rate and no growth, the country needs a primary surplus at 8 percent of G.D.P. to keep the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio stable. It will be nowhere near that level. The I.M.F. program has Greece running a primary budget deficit of around 1 percent of G.D.P. in that year, and that assumes a path for Greek growth that can be regarded only as an "upside scenario."The politics of these implied budget surpluses remains brutal. Since most Greek debt is held abroad, roughly 80 percent of the budget savings the Greek government makes go straight to Germans, French and other foreign debt holders (mostly banks). If growth turns out poorly, will the Greeks be prepared for ever-tougher austerity to pay the Germans? Even if everything goes well, Greek citizens seem unlikely to welcome this version of their "new normal."

Last week the European leadership panicked — very late in the day — when it realized that the euro zone itself was at risk of a meltdown. If the euro zone proves unwilling to protect a member like Greece from default, then bond investors will run from Portugal and Spain also — if you doubt this, study carefully the interlocking debt picture published recently in The New York Times. Higher yields on government debt would have caused concerns about potential bank runs in these nations, and then spread to more nations in Europe.When there is such a "run," it is not clear where it stops. In the hazy distance, Belgium, France, Austria and many others were potentially at risk.

Even the Germans cannot afford to bail out those nations.Slapped in the face by this ugly scenario, the Europeans decided to throw everything they and the I.M.F. had at bailing out Greece. The program as announced has only a small chance of preventing eventual Greek bankruptcy, but it may still slow or avert a dangerous spiral downward — and enormous collateral damage — in the rest of Europe.The I.M.F. floated in some fashion an alternative scenario with a debt restructuring, but this was rejected by both the European Union and the Greek authorities. This is not a surprise; leading European policy makers are completely unprepared for broader problems that would follow a Greek "restructuring," because markets would immediately mark down the debt (i.e., increase the yields) for Portugal, Spain, Ireland and even Italy.The fear and panic in the face of this would be unparalleled in modern times: When the Greeks pay only 50 percent on the face value of their debt, what should investors expect from the Portuguese and Spanish? It all becomes arbitrary, including which countries are dragged down.Someone has to decide who should be defended and at what cost, and the European structures are completely unsuited to this kind of tough decision-making under pressure.In the extreme downside scenario, Germany is the only obvious safe haven within the euro zone, so its government bond yields would collapse while other governments face sharply rising yields. The euro zone would likely not hold together.There is still a narrow escape path, without immediate debt default and the chaos that that would produce:·

Talk down the euro — moving toward parity with the American dollar would help lift growth across the euroz one.·

As the euro falls, bond yields will rise on the euro zone periphery. This will create episodes of panic. Enough short-term financing must be in place to support the rollover of government debt.·

Once the euro has fallen a great deal, announce the European Central Bank will support the euro at those levels (i.e., prevent appreciation, with G-20 tacit agreement), and also support the peripheral euro zone nations viewed as solvent by buying their bonds whenever markets are chaotic.·

At that stage, but not before, the euro zone leadership needs to push weaker governments to restructure. That will include Greece and perhaps also Portugal. Hopefully, in this scenario Spain can muddle through.·

European banks should be recapitalized as necessary and have most of their management replaced. This is a massive failure of euro groupthink — including most notably at the political level — but there is no question that bank executives have not behaved responsibly in a long while and should be replaced en masse.To the extent possible, some of the ensuing losses should be shared with bank creditors. But be careful what you wish for. The bankers are powerful for a reason; they have built vital yet fragile structures at the heart of our economies. Dismantle with care.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 7:58 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Robinson talking now, voice cracking but resolute in carying on, he STAYS as first minister despite defeat as MP Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Thu, 6 May 2010 18:07:09
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Thx. What's happening?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Wed May 05 13:51:30 2010
Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 8:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Brown now putting out he will try to form coalition if hung parliament Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Thu, 6 May 2010 18:07:09
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Thx. What's happening?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Wed May 05 13:51:30 2010
Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 8:09 PM
To: H
Subject: Robinson lost seat

Naomi Long (Alliance) defeated Peter Robinson for the East Belfast constituency. Huge upset. She was the mayor of Belfast - you met her on the trip.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 8:20 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Greece, etc.

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 7:06 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Burns, William J
Subject: Fw: Greece, etc.

B5

Jake and Cheryl -- pse read below. This is extremely serious. I just talked to Bill Burns,

AM

---

From: Harris, Jennifer M
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thu May 06 14:54:08 2010
Subject: RE: Greece, etc.

The link is here, and its cut and pasted below. Simon Johnson is the Former Chief Economist of the IMF and now writes for the NYT and for his own blog, hugely influential for bond traders, called Baseline Scenario. He also wrote the current bestseller 13 bankers, making waves as probably the best academic indictment on the 2008 crisis (better in my view than Michael Lewis' current book, which speaks more to the personalities involved).

And the US markets are taking a worse beating than even I would've thought possible. In the words of the owner of one of the largest hedge funds in NY, "this has that 2 year ago feeling. This is carnage."

S&P – down 4.5% just today
XLS (S&P components of major financial institutions, essentially a more focused look at just the financial sector component of the S&P) – down 5% just today
Preferred shares (these don't typically move, ever)- down 9% and falling
Euro heading for 1.26

Credit markets are worse than stocks.
VIX (Volatility Index at 34, which is up 36%).

RELEASE IN PART
B5

The New York Times
Economix
Explaining the Science of Everyday Life

MAY 6, 2010, 6:11 AM

It's Not About Greece Anymore

By PETER BOONE AND SIMON JOHNSON

Louisa Gouliamaki/Agence France-Presse — Getty Images Protesters waved flags from the Acropolis archaeological site behind banners in English and Greek hung in front of the Parthenon temple in Athens.

Peter Boone is chairman of the charity Effective Intervention and a research associate at the Center for Economic Performance at the London School of Economics. He is also a principal in Salute Capital Management Ltd. Simon Johnson, the former chief economist at the International Monetary Fund, is the co-author of "13 Bankers."

The Greek "rescue" package announced last weekend is dramatic, unprecedented and far from enough to stabilize the euro zone.

The Greek government and the European Union leadership, prodded by the International Monetary Fund, are finally becoming realistic about the dire economic situation in Greece. They have abandoned previous rounds of optimistic forecasts and have now admitted to a profoundly worse situation. This new program calls for "fiscal adjustments" — cuts to the fiscal deficit, mostly through spending cuts — totaling 11 percent of gross domestic product in 2010, 4.3 percent in 2011, and 2 percent in 2012 and 2013. The total debt-to-G.D.P. ratio peaks at 149 percent in 2012-13 before starting a gentle glide path back down to sanity.

This new program is honest enough to show why it is unlikely to succeed.

Daniel Gros, an eminent economist on euro zone issues based in Brussels, has argued that for each 1 percent of G.D.P. decline in Greek government spending, total demand in the country falls by 2.5 percent of G.D.P. If the government reduces spending by 15 percent of G.D.P. — the initial shock to demand could be well over 30 percent of G.D.P.

Obviously this simple rule does not work with such large numbers, but it illustrates that Greece is likely to experience a very sharp recession — and there is substantial uncertainty around how bad the economy will get. The program announced last weekend assumes Greek G.D.P. falls by 4 percent this year, then by another 2.6 percent in 2011, before recovering to positive growth in 2012 and beyond.

Such figures seem extremely optimistic, particularly in the face of the civil unrest now sweeping Greece and the deep hostility expressed toward Greece in some northern European policy circles.

The pattern of growth is critical because, under this program, Greece needs to grow out of its debt problem soon. Greece's debt-to-G.D.P. ratio will be a debilitating 145 percent at the end of 2011.

Now consider putting more realistic growth figures into the I.M.F. forecast for Greece's economy — e.g., with G.D.P. declining 12 percent in 2011, then the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio may reach 155 percent. At these levels, with a 5 percent real interest rate and no growth, the country needs a primary surplus at 8 percent of G.D.P. to keep the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio stable. It will be nowhere near that level. The I.M.F. program has Greece running a primary budget deficit of around 1 percent of G.D.P. in that year, and that assumes a path for Greek growth that can be regarded only as an "upside scenario."

The politics of these implied budget surpluses remains brutal. Since most Greek debt is held abroad, roughly 80 percent of the budget savings the Greek government makes go straight to Germans, French and other foreign debt holders (mostly banks). If growth turns out poorly, will the Greeks be prepared for ever-tougher austerity to pay the Germans? Even if everything goes well, Greek citizens seem unlikely to welcome this version of their "new normal."

Last week the European leadership panicked — very late in the day — when it realized that the euro zone itself was at risk of a meltdown. If the euro zone proves unwilling to protect a member like Greece from default, then bond investors will run from Portugal and Spain also — if you doubt this, study carefully the interlocking debt picture published recently in The New York Times. Higher yields on government debt would have caused concerns about potential bank runs in these nations, and then spread to more nations in Europe.

When there is such a "run," it is not clear where it stops. In the hazy distance, Belgium, France, Austria and many others were potentially at risk. Even the Germans cannot afford to bail out those nations.

Slapped in the face by this ugly scenario, the Europeans decided to throw everything they and the I.M.F. had at bailing out Greece. The program as announced has only a small chance of preventing eventual Greek bankruptcy, but it may still slow or avert a dangerous spiral downward — and enormous collateral damage — in the rest of Europe.

The I.M.F. floated in some fashion an alternative scenario with a debt restructuring, but this was rejected by both the European Union and the Greek authorities. This is not a surprise; leading European policy makers are completely unprepared for broader problems that would follow a Greek "restructuring," because markets would immediately mark down the debt (i.e., increase the yields) for Portugal, Spain, Ireland and even Italy.

The fear and panic in the face of this would be unparalleled in modern times: When the Greeks pay only 50 percent on the face value of their debt, what should investors expect from the Portuguese and Spanish? It all becomes arbitrary, including which countries are dragged down.

Someone has to decide who should be defended and at what cost, and the European structures are completely unsuited to this kind of tough decision-making under pressure.

In the extreme downside scenario, Germany is the only obvious safe haven within the euro zone, so its government bond yields would collapse while other governments face sharply rising yields. The euro zone would likely not hold together.

There is still a narrow escape path, without immediate debt default and the chaos that that would produce:

- Talk down the euro — moving toward parity with the American dollar would help lift growth across the euroz one.
- As the euro falls, bond yields will rise on the euro zone periphery. This will create episodes of panic. Enough short-term financing must be in place to support the rollover of government debt.
- Once the euro has fallen a great deal, announce the European Central Bank will support the euro at those levels (i.e., prevent appreciation, with G-20 tacit agreement), and also support the peripheral euro zone nations viewed as solvent by buying their bonds whenever markets are chaotic.
- At that stage, but not before, the euro zone leadership needs to push weaker governments to restructure. That will include Greece and perhaps also Portugal. Hopefully, in this scenario Spain can muddle through.
- European banks should be recapitalized as necessary and have most of their management replaced. This is a massive failure of euro groupthink — including most notably at the political level — but there is no question that bank executives have not behaved responsibly in a long while and should be replaced en masse.

To the extent possible, some of the ensuing losses should be shared with bank creditors. But be careful what you wish for. The bankers are powerful for a reason; they have built vital yet fragile structures at the heart of our economies. Dismantle with care.

- Copyright 2010 The New York Times Company
- Privacy Policy
- NYTimes.com 620 Eighth Avenue New York, NY 10018

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 2:02 PM
To: Harris, Jennifer M
Subject: RE: Greece, etc.

B5

Can you send me the complete NYT piece so that we can get it into S's and Steinberg's book for tonight?

So you and Eric and anyone else you can gather should brainstorm away. Also, just give me a little more on Simon Johnson so I can make the case for why she should read this.

From: Harris, Jennifer M
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 10:30 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: RE: Greece, etc.

Anne-Marie,

B5

Just promise me that if you and Bill brief the QDDR in Greece, we at least make Ed consider the possibility of my tagging along;)

Best, Jen

---

Below is an excerpt from Simon Johnson (NYT columnist and respected econ blogger), from today's NYT. I think he's dead on.

.....Last week the European leadership panicked — very late in the day — when it realized that the euro zone itself was at risk of a meltdown. If the euro zone proves unwilling to protect a member like Greece from default, then bond investors will run from Portugal and Spain also — if you doubt this, study carefully the interlocking debt picture published recently in The New York Times. Higher yields on government debt would have caused concerns about potential bank runs in these nations, and then spread to more nations in Europe.

When there is such a "run," it is not clear where it stops. In the hazy distance, Belgium, France, Austria and many others were potentially at risk. Even the Germans cannot afford to bail out those nations.

Slapped in the face by this ugly scenario, the Europeans decided to throw everything they and the I.M.F. had at bailing out Greece. The program as announced has only a small chance of preventing eventual Greek bankruptcy, but it may still slow or avert a dangerous spiral downward — and enormous collateral damage — in the rest of Europe.

The I.M.F. floated in some fashion an alternative scenario with a debt restructuring, but this was rejected by both the European Union and the Greek authorities. This is not a surprise; leading European policy makers are completely unprepared for broader problems that would follow a Greek "restructuring," because markets would immediately mark down the debt (i.e., increase the yields) for Portugal, Spain, Ireland and even Italy.

The fear and panic in the face of this would be unparalleled in modern times: When the Greeks pay only 50 percent on the face value of their debt, what should investors expect from the Portuguese and Spanish? It all becomes arbitrary, including which countries are dragged down.

Someone has to decide who should be defended and at what cost, and the European structures are completely unsuited to this kind of tough decision-making under pressure.

In the extreme downside scenario, Germany is the only obvious safe haven within the euro zone, so its government bond yields would collapse while other governments face sharply rising yields. The euro zone would likely not hold together.

There is still a narrow escape path, without immediate debt default and the chaos that that would produce:

- Talk down the euro — moving toward parity with the American dollar would help lift growth across the euroz one.
- As the euro falls, bond yields will rise on the euro zone periphery. This will create episodes of panic. Enough short-term financing must be in place to support the rollover of government debt.
- Once the euro has fallen a great deal, announce the European Central Bank will support the euro at those levels (i.e., prevent appreciation, with G-20 tacit agreement), and also support the peripheral euro zone nations viewed as solvent by buying their bonds whenever markets are chaotic.
- At that stage, but not before, the euro zone leadership needs to push weaker governments to restructure. That will include Greece and perhaps also Portugal. Hopefully, in this scenario Spain can muddle through.
- European banks should be recapitalized as necessary and have most of their management replaced. This is a massive failure of euro groupthink — including most notably at the political level — but there is no question that bank executives have not behaved responsibly in a long while and should be replaced en masse.

To the extent possible, some of the ensuing losses should be shared with bank creditors. But be careful what you wish for. The bankers are powerful for a reason; they have built vital yet fragile structures at the heart of our economies. Dismantle with care.

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 9:37 AM
To: Harris, Jennifer M
Subject: RE: Greece, etc.

B5

---

From: Harris, Jennifer M
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 9:26 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: RE: Greece, etc.

B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Wednesday, May 05, 2010 11:01 PM
To: Harris, Jennifer M
Subject: Fw: Greece, etc.

From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: Hormats, Robert D; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Crocker, Bathsheba N
Sent: Wed May 05 15:41:05 2010
Subject: Greece, etc.

Hi guys,

Tx,
Jake

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 8:31 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Lieberman Legislation

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 6:50 PM
To: Crowley, Philip J; Verma, Richard R; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Echard, John E Jr; Townley, Stephen G; Eichensehr, Kristen E; Cleveland, Sarah H
Subject: RE: Lieberman Legislation

B5

From: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 2010 4:22 PM

To: Koh, Harold Hongju; Verma, Richard R; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Echard, John E Jr
Subject: Lieberman Legislation

We did a couple of holding actions today regarding this legislation. The Secretary said we have the authority to do what is called expatriation. US citizenship is a privilege not a right. Where you swear to uphold duties to our Constitution. Those who support terrorism are in violation in the Secretary's opinion. We will take a hard look at what is proposed. At the podium, I said that there were issues regarding due process and that Americans would be concerned if citizenship were revoked before as opposed to after a legal proceeding.

B5

PJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, May 6, 2010 9:32 PM
To: H
Subject: Reg Loses in S. Antrim

Willy McCrea (DUP) holds seat; Reg's gamble fails. Looks unlikely UUP/Tory link-up will produce any seats.

Our team can't imagine he'll hold on as leader for long. One key commentator just said Reg is finished.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 4:56 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Hung parliament declared. Theme song of election: Rolling Stones' "Satisfaction": "...can't get no..." Everyone in turmoil. Tories in complete turmoil. Gordon convening cabinet meeting this afternoon. I'm in touch. Will let you know... Sid

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop
Sent: Thu, May 6, 2010 6:07 pm
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Thx. What's happening?

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop

To: H

Sent: Wed May 05 13:51:30 2010

Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5,

2010

For: Hillary

From: Sid

Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:28 AM
To: H

Gordon has issued a statement this morning saying basically he's trying to negotiate a new government. Left a message with David, will undoubtedly be in touch with him today, will let you know.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:46 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Clegg just announced he wants Tories to form government as a minority government. But this may not change anything. Tories don't have a majority and can't move. May be an opening bid.

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop
Sent: Thu, May 6, 2010 6:07 pm
Subject: Re: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

Thx. What's happening?

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop

To: H

Sent: Wed May 05 13:51:30 2010

Subject: H: IMPORTANT. Memo on UK election, am in London, Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

May 5,

2010

For: Hillary

From: Sid

Re: British election

First and most important: Do NOT, repeat, NOT, call any prospective winner on either Election Night, May 6, or on the next day, Friday, May 7. The result will be unclear. It will not be clear, even perhaps by Friday afternoon. Today, the combined polls show Cameron and the Conservatives ahead but not winning an outright majority. The latest Guardian poll, out tomorrow, shown me by Alan Rusbridger today, has the Tories falling short of a majority of seats. Even if Cameron were to win an outright majority, Brown and Labour will attempt to make a deal with Clegg and the Liberal Democrats. Brown remains as Prime Minister unless the Tories win outright, which take a long time to determine. Labour and the Lib-Dems will almost certainly gain about 60 percent of the vote, more or less. Brown will reach out to Clegg to stay in power. The deal will be that Brown will approve a referendum on proportional representation giving the LDs much greater representationin future elections. That will spell the end forever of the Tories ever coming to power. The Tories see the election in apocalyptic terms—and they are not wrong. Brown's weakness heralds the sort of grand progressive coalition/alliance that Tony imagined but was never able to attempt between Labour and the LDs. Brown offering the referendum would be the first step toward that. In the case of the Tories falling short of an outright majority in seats, they will respond as though Brown is acting illegitimately, which he would not be by remaining as PM and dealing with Clegg. Informed people are already talking of what might begin to unfold on Friday as "Florida." The Tories, backed by the Murdoch press, will attempt to push Labour aside by force majeure—something that will not succeed under those circumstances. The Murdochs are almost literally going crazy. James Murdoch and hiw wife stormed into the offices of The Independent, not a Murdoch paper, when the paper endorsed the LDs

and confronted the publisher, screaming in the middle of the newsroom. Murdoch would be a big, big loser if Cameron loses. Another possibile outcome is that the Conservatives come up just short and attempt their own deal with the DUP to cover the gap in seats. Shaun is on to this potential, has been talking to Peter Robinson.

No matter what, keep your powder dry until the result is crystal clear. Wait.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:57 AM
To: H

It seems to me that Clegg feels he's weak, can't form a grand progressive coalition--the Lib Dems have LOST seats--Clegg's so-called "modernizing" has failed. So Clegg is saying no deal with Labour, Tories must govern without acting on their program. He's plalying for another election relatively soon, perhaps a year, hoping to do better, but will do even worse having played the spoiler. And if Labour goes out, so does Gordon and Labour will have a new face, probably David. Sid
=

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 7:23 AM
To: H
Subject: Noon, state of play

Shaun is going to Downing St to meet with Gordon, Peter, and two others (Stuart Woods, Sue Nye, Gordon's aides) to discuss what to do, will learn outcome as soon as meeting is over. Sid

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 8:03 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Edward Campbell

From:
To:

B6

Cc:
Sent: Fri May 07 07:41:34 2010
Subject: Edward Campbell

From:
Sent: Friday, May 07, 2010 1:09 AM
To:
Subject: Edward

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 8:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: More on Lieberman's bill

See below, in particular section B. That is the nub of Harold's argument.

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
To: Crowley, Philip J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Jake Sullivan [redacted]; Mills, Cheryl D; Verma, Richard R B6
Cc: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Fri May 07 07:42:29 2010
Subject: More on Lieberman's bill

Senator Lieberman's bill would strip American citizenship from anyone who has "provid[ed] material support or resources to a foreign terrorist organization" or "engaged in, or purposefully and materially support[ed], hostilities against the United States" or any of its allies. [redacted] B5

A. Constitutional Rules:

[redacted]

B. Statute

[redacted]

C. Administrative Policy:

B5

D. Lieberman bill

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 8:11 AM
To: H
Subject: DPRK

Wanted to make sure you saw this item:

Traces of gunpowder found in the wreckage of a sunken Republic of Korea naval ship have been identified as those generated by the explosion of a torpedo, an anonymous ROK government official said. (yonhapnews.co.kr)

Also, we're still in a bit of a holding pattern on prox talks, though looking very good.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 8:14 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 5/7/10 Friday

7:30 am CONFERENCE/PRE-BRIEF CALL Private Residence

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence *En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:20 am TAPED TV INTERVIEW w/SCOTT PELLY, CBS'S "60 MINUTES"
10:00 am 7th and 8th Floors * (One Video taping in Monroe Room, 8th Floor)

10:15 am KEYNOTE ADDRESS AND PLAQUE DEDICATION AT FOREIGN
11:00 am AFFAIRS DAY Dean Acheson Auditorium and C Street Lobby

11:15 am CONF. CALL w/FRENCH FM KOUCHNER, GERMAN FM
11:30 am WESTERWELLE, UK POLITICAL DIRECTOR GEOFFREY ADAMS AND EU HIGH REPRESENTATIVE ASHTON Secretary's Office

11:30 am MEETING w/HAROLD KOH, TODD BUCHWALD AND CHERYL
12:00 pm MILLS Secretary's Office

12:15 pm WEEKLY DEVELOPMENT MEETING
1:00 pm Secretary's Office

1:00 pm SWEARING-IN CEREMONY FOR RETA JO LEWIS, SPECIAL
1:20 pm REPRESENTATIVE FOR GLOBAL INTERGOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS
Treaty Room, 7th Floor

1:30pm PHONE CALL w/INDONESIAN FM MARTY NATALEGAWA
1:45pm Secretary's Office

1:45 pm OFFICE TIME
2:20 pm Secretary's Office

2:20 pm DEPART State Department *En route Washington National Airport

2:40 pm ARRIVE Washington National Airport

3:00 pm DEPART Washington National Airport via US Airways Shuttle #2176
En route New York, NY

4:25 pm ARRIVE New York, New York-LaGuardia Airport

4:35 pm DEPART New York-LaGuardia Airport *En route Private Residence

5:25 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 30, 2010 12:20 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: RCH

I have talked to him, as has Derek, but I need one more convo before you see him.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Jun 29 19:18:11 2010
Subject: RCH

Did you and/or PIR talk to him today? Do I need to see him tomorrow?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 30, 2010 4:37 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: FM Smith and former PM Rudd Requests

Fyi

---

From: Bleich, Jeffrey L
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Campbell, Kurt M
Cc: Kagan, Edgard D; Hyland, Jason P
Sent: Wed Jun 30 02:48:07 2010
Subject: FM Smith and former PM Rudd Requests

Kurt and Cheryl,

In my meeting yesterday with FM Smith, he said he'd still like to speak with S. Originally, they were scheduled to talk last Friday but it was cancelled. Given the change in leadership, and Smith's increased responsibility -- taking on trade and aid portfolios as well as foreign affairs -- I think a brief call would be helpful.

Also, I spoke at length with former PM Rudd on Monday. Although he did not raise the issue, his aide called Edgard afterward and noted that Rudd had not heard from S, and would have hoped for a sympathetic call. I have no strong point of view on this one. He has received such a call from POTUS already. [redacted] B5

[redacted] But, I think he and S had a good relationship and he may want to talk to her about his future career goals.

Best,

J.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 30, 2010 5:56 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Ecuador and the Financial Action Task Force

Madam Secretary,

Following up on your trip to Ecuador, Jake asked me to send you a quick update on the Financial Action Task Force's (FATF) listing of Ecuador:

(SBU) On June 25 the FATF moved Ecuador down a notch from a list of countries with serious strategic deficiencies in measures against money laundering and financing terrorism. Ecuador is now on the "Improving AML/CFT Compliance: On-going Process" list for showing progress in its efforts against money laundering and financing terrorism.

(SBU) According to Treasury, the change in Ecuador's status stems from its commitment to an action plan with the FATF, and the GOE's demonstrated high-level political commitment to work toward AML/CFT (anti-money laundering – combating the financing of terrorism) compliance.

WHA is looking into options for next steps.

Please let me know if you would like any further information.

Best,
Mike

Michael H. Fuchs
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-1709
redacted

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Russo, Robert V <RussoRV@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 30, 2010 9:44 PM
To: H
Subject: Thank you

Madame Secretary -

Forgive the email but I just wanted to thank you and President Clinton for so graciously opening your home and inviting me to join in celebrating [redacted] It was a truly wonderful evening. B6

Safe travels!

-Rob

RELEASE IN FULL

Janysh Bakiyev and a number of key security officers in the south. "Something is being planned to disrupt the referendum," I was told. Beknazarov told me he believed that, following the pattern of the last two revolutions, they anticipated that there would be an attack on administrative offices in the south, following quickly within a few days by attacks in Bishkek. Government leaders I spoke with over the weekend told me they now recognize they had misassessed the data they had, that the Bakiyev plan was obviously to instigate inter-ethnic violence.

Precisely what led to the tragedy in and around Osh is still unclear and requires careful investigation, but people I have spoken with in Osh describe police and army leaders directing the pogroms, and they were able to identify some of these individuals as persons close to the Bakiyevs. Moreover, the timing and some of the specific descriptions of events support this thesis—Bakiyev was the only person who clearly had something to gain from the violence. If that is so, then Bakiyev adopted an extremely cynical, indeed criminal strategy. His objectives would have been to derail the referendum, demonstrate the weakness of the interim government, and fuel calls for an iron-fisted central government through the resurrection of his presidency. The tactics used bear comparison with those used by Slobodan Milosević and Radovan Karadžić as Yugoslavia disintegrated or by the Soviet MVD in the waning days of the Soviet empire in programs like "Operation Koltso." If the government's charges bear out, serious crimes were committed by the Bakiyev faction.

While Otunbayeva publicly states that order has been restored in the south and that foreign intervention is no longer needed, I am not persuaded that this is what she actually thinks. She is anxious to build public confidence in her government and its abilities. Confidentially she acknowledges that the interim government's grip over the situation in the south is extremely weak and that the government does not feel it can necessarily count on the local police and military there, whose loyalties are plainly divided. This in turn suggests that the international community should give active consideration to both the humanitarian and the security dimensions of the situation in the south. My sense remains that Otunbayeva would strongly welcome such an initiative.

2. Internal Workings of the Interim Government. The interim government verges on being completely dysfunctional. It operates as a collection of individual fiefdoms, with leaders engaged in constant squabbles over patronage appointments. Career civil service personnel report being terrorized and extorted. I spent the better part of three days inside the current government headquarters on Staraya Ploshchod and was able to directly observe primitive horse-trading, threats and counterthreats between key government functionaries, sometimes in agitated voices. Roza Otunbayeva and a handful of figures closest to her were exceptions in this process—admonishing others about the unseemliness of their conduct, urging moderation and restraint. But Otunbayeva also acknowledges that the limitations on her own authority and states that she "has to put up with it," at least for the moment. Three government members advised me during meetings of their intention to resign before the end of the month in order to start running for parliament. Significantly, I sense sharp rifts within the government—between Atembayev and Beknazarov, for instance, who could not refrain from criticizing one another in my interviews with them, or between Sariyev and Beknazarov.

Only Otunbayeva (and to a lesser extent her close ally Elmira Ibraimova) appear to be the glue that holds things together, commanding the respect of the other government members. I found that the admiration for Otunbayeva was almost universal—she appears to be the only figure in the government emerging from the interim period with an untarnished reputation. Still the special order under which she has assumed power as "president of the interim government" presents some clear problems for her authority. She has a fixed term into 2011, but she will have no democratic mandate. After the new government is formed, based on the parliamentary elections, they will have democratic legitimacy and she will not—this sets up a situation in which her authority may well be eclipsed or at least made more narrow. Still, all the members of the current government recognize that she has essential skills that they do not—particularly her ability to conciliate and her ability to reach out to other leaders on the international stage.

There is an expectation that the parliamentary elections will result in a weeding out of the government. The next government is expected to be formed through a parliamentary coalition. But only two or perhaps three of the current seven factions will survive. Much of the bickering and instability in the current government is keyed to the coming game of parliamentary moving chairs—there is an intense struggle now to secure personal loyalty and funds to use in the parliamentary elections; the entire process has an aura of sink or swim about it. Ironically the immediate prospect of parliamentary elections and the sense that they will be genuinely open and fair thus contributes to the ineptness and near chaotic appearance of the current government.

3. Constitution and Referendum. Under the guidance of Tekebayev, the government put forward a proposed new constitution, which it seeks to have confirmed through a referendum vote on June 27. The constitution itself does shift the country further in the direction of a parliamentary democracy, and it contains unusual protection for parliamentary minority factions. Government leaders told me that Kazakh president Nursultan Nazarbayev had waded in on the question of the constitution directly, pressing them to retain a "strong president" system. They say this was coupled with not-very-subtle threats, and that the frontier between Kyrgyzstan and Kazakhstan remains closed, with harmful consequences for the Kyrgyz economy. A major question exists about holding the referendum as scheduled. The events in the south have resulted in the mass displacement of population and if held as planned, a large part of the population in the south would probably be disenfranchised. However, government leaders say that their current problems all come back to legitimacy, and they will not be able to form a government with democratic legitimacy without a new constitution and new elections. Accordingly, they resist any further delays and are even contemplating moving the date of the parliamentary election forward to the last week of August (it is now set for October 10). The crisis in the south presents a severe dilemma in this regards, and it seems that this would have been Bakiyev's objective in instigating it, if indeed he did.

4. Manas Transit Center. As expected, I discovered that the interim government is deeply fragmented on the question of MTC. One faction headed by Otunbayeva favors a "pragmatic solution" to the base issue under which it will be continued but placed on a more transparent basis in which the economic benefits to the government are clear. Otunbayeva argues that the base can only be accepted under circumstances in which it presents no friction for Kyrgyz-Russian relations; she seeks to have disputes surrounding fuel supply, for instance, resolved directly between the United States and Russia. Another faction, headed by Beknazarov, takes a more demagogic approach, denouncing the base and seeking its closing in internal meetings. Talking with Beknazarov, I had the clear impression that his attitudes were entirely opportunistic—he thinks this will be a good campaign issue to use on the hustings. He suggested rather strongly that he could accept a continued base presence under the right circumstances and that he views threats to close the base as a sort of stick to use to extort more money and other concessions from the Americans. In general, Beknazarov strikes me as hot-headed and crass and an untrustworthy partner in any future discussions. Atembayev also has somewhat demagogic impulses, though they are mild by comparison. Otunbayeva, the third and most senior member of the government engaged on base issues, is the critical voice of reason in the process. My impression based on discussions with numerous figures is that Otunbayeva's views currently hold sway. However, all the government members are agreed that the economic deal struck by Bakiyev is unfavorable to the Kyrgyz state and that the base must rest on transparent economic concessions and there can be no more under-the-table dealings with political figures.

5. Resolving the Crisis in the South. I believe that two key points should be kept in mind when approaching the humanitarian crisis that has emerged in the south. First, the crisis probably has its origins in a raw struggle for power. The interim government's legitimacy deficit contributed to the problem, because it left the government with weak tools to control the situation in the south. A long-term solution to the problem must involve the creation of governments at the national (Bishkek) and regional (Osh, Djalalabad) levels that have an essential modicum of democratic legitimacy. Delaying this process may only hasten the entire country's continued descent into chaos. This highlights the need to conduct free, fair and open elections as quickly as possible. Second, the last thing the interim government needs is a "Sophie's choice" between the United States and Russian Federation. International assistance needs to reflect a joint U.S.-Russian approach and showcase U.S. and Russian leadership (not merely participation). With President Medvedev's visit to the White House now on the horizon, this would be a good opportunity to establish joint sponsorship of an international humanitarian initiative. Here, I believe, are the essential elements of a program that could achieve U.S.-Russian co-sponsorship:

- An Appeal for Restraint: Although the instigation of the conflict appears clearly to rest with ethnic Kyrgyz agitators, including a number in uniform and operating military equipment, at present both Uzbek and Kyrgyz armed groups are involved in random shootings designed to reinforce perceptions of their group being persecuted (rapes etc.) by another. Credible reports are suggesting that there has been political manipulation (including payment of money to drug and other criminal gangs) aimed at fomenting violence. The attack on a sports facility set up by a prominent Uzbek drug baron (murdered several years earlier) in Osh shortly before the violence started also suggests that criminal gangs involved in drug transshipment had another motivation for engaging in the violence. It may be that the violence was an initiative of the deposed president, but once it began, it provided cover for numerous incidents of score-settling and criminal mischief. In these circumstances, a strong appeal for restraint is appropriate and martial law rules including curfews may legitimately be imposed by the interim government. An imprimatur of support from the international community would help establish the authority of the interim government in this process.

- Exit Corridors for Civilians: Civilians who feel threatened must be allowed to leave the high risk zones, and access of humanitarian aid, and creation of a safe zone for humanitarian operation should be priorities at locations created to shelter them. The EU, OSCE and UN issued a statement on June 16 calling for a humanitarian corridor in the southern regions of Osh and Jalalabad provinces, as well as of ensuring the equitable distribution of humanitarian aid among those in need. The cooperation of the Uzbek government may be particularly important in this process.

- Peacekeeping/Policing Operation: The international community should support special arrangements with broad international legitimacy and participation to enhance peacekeeping and police operations in the affected area. As I noted, even though Otunbayeva made a public statement on June 15 to the effect that foreign military/police intervention was no longer needed, the situation remains precarious and in her confidential discussions Otunbayeva acknowledges the benefits in confidence building that would emerge from an qualified, professional and international presence in the region. Peacekeeping/policing operations should at a minimum include security for designated sheltering areas for refugees and internally displaced persons and monitoring operations in tandem with local police and military, to build confidence in their protective functions.

- Investigation of Events: a broad, credible, independent investigation should be undertaken into the events and their origin. The investigation should be under the aegis of an international organization, such as the Security Council or OSCE and it should be conducted by an individual of stature with strong credentials as a fact-finder and prosecutor. The investigation should particularly take cognizance of accusations that crimes against humanity were perpetrated, potentially including crimes of genocide. The involvement of persons exercising ostensible government authority—policemen, military figures, leaders of the civil administration—should be given special scrutiny in this process. The person commissioned to handle the investigation should be specifically empowered to recommend criminal charges be brought against individuals identified in his investigation—either by the criminal authorities of the Kyrgyz Republic or before an international body seized of proper jurisdiction.

- Effective Post-Conflict Reconstruction. UN authorities are estimating that as many as 450,000 persons may have been displaced by the current violence. The devastation in central Osh and in numerous villages is reported to be near total. There will be an intense housing shortage and a crisis with respect to food supply and healthcare. The international community under United States and Russian leadership should provide generous support to jumpstart the reconstruction process, prioritizing its assistance to benefit those most egregiously injured by the violence.

- The Referendum/Parliamentary Elections. In view of the disruption and violence, the interim government may well conclude that the constitutional referendum must be postponed. However, if it does not postpone the referendum, then extraordinary measures should be taken to insure that internally displaced persons and refugees are given an opportunity to vote—in both cases this will be a reemphasis of the bond of citizenship and a promise of inclusion in the democratic process that will be critical to the resolution of the crisis. The international community should also mobilize observers in connection with the parliamentary elections to help assure that candidates have fair access to the ballot and to media, that campaigns are permitted to proceed without unreasonable limitations and that voting occurs in a fair and free manner across the country. Special attention in this process should be given to the affected areas to insure that refugees and IDPs have a fair opportunity to vote and are freed from unreasonable limitations in the process.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Wednesday, June 30, 2010 10:07 PM
To: H
Cc: CDM; Jake Sullivan
Subject: NYT

Top 2 Civilians Face Rockiness in Afghan Shift By MARK LANDLER The New York Times Thu, July 1, 2010

WASHINGTON — As General David H. Petraeus takes command in Afghanistan, the two top American civilian officials in the war face an uncertain and tricky future, working with a newly empowered military leader, under the gaze of an impatient president who has put them on notice that his fractious war council needs to pull together.

Richard C. Holbrooke, the Obama administration's special representative to the region, and Karl W. Eikenberry, the ambassador to Afghanistan, both hung on to their jobs in the uproar that followed Gen. Stanley A. McChrystal's career-ending quotes in Rolling Stone magazine.

But privately, at least one senior White House official suggested using General McChrystal's exit as an excuse for a housecleaning, according to senior officials. That was rejected as too disruptive during a military campaign that relies heavily on civilian support, these people said.

In recent days, other administration officials have begun floating the idea that Ambassador Eikenberry might be replaced by Ryan C. Crocker, the highly regarded former ambassador in Iraq who forged a close partnership with General Petraeus during the successful Iraq troop increase.

Such a prospect is viewed as remote, given Mr. Crocker's prestigious new post at Texas A&M University. But the fact that his name is being invoked underlines the challenges that confront Ambassador Eikenberry, as he adapts to a new partner — one who has strong ideas about how soldiers and diplomats should work together in war.

It also illustrates the remarkably powerful role that General Petraeus will assume in the nine-year-old war, setting him up as almost a viceroy in Afghanistan and a key broker in negotiations between President

Hamid Karzai and Pakistan over an eventual political settlement.

Prior to General Petraeus's arrival, some critics said the White House had created a problem by recruiting several forceful, ambitious personalities and giving them jobs with overlapping responsibilities. Administration officials acknowledge that, as one said, "There are obviously a number of substantial personalities on the team." But the White House believes that the current lineup can mesh, and that a difficult war demands this much talent.

Still, the McChrystal blow-up has reverberated through the State Department. Secretary of State

Hillary Rodham Clinton instructed Ambassador Eikenberry and Mr. Holbrooke to take a hard look at the civilian team, two officials said. She is not wedded to the current lineup if it continues to bog down in internecine battles, they said.

"You can't have a major shift in a civ-mil structure without having the civilian side take a step back and look at everything," said a senior State Department official, using the jargon for a civilian-military campaign.

General Petraeus, whose appointment was approved 99-0 by the Senate on Wednesday, took pains at his confirmation hearing on Tuesday to back a unified civilian and military effort. He noted then that he had telephoned Mr. Holbrooke and would rendezvous with Ambassador Eikenberry in Brussels, so the two could land in Kabul together.

"Holbrooke has been my wingman, to a great degree," General Petraeus said in an interview. "We have had, and do have, a very good relationship." That role, he said, will now fall to Ambassador Eikenberry.

Ambassador Eikenberry was highly critical of the Pentagon's proposal last year to send 60,000 additional troops to Afghanistan, which led to a difficult relationship with General McChrystal. But in fact General Petraeus was the true architect of the plan.

The ambassador, a retired lieutenant general and former commander in Afghanistan, graduated from West Point in 1973, a year ahead of General Petraeus, but they did not know each other at the academy. The two share a scholarly bent: General Petraeus holds a Ph.D. from Princeton, while Ambassador Eikenberry has Master's degrees from Harvard and Stanford.

While they were never assigned together, their careers intersected twice. In Iraq, General Eikenberry led an assessment of Iraqi security forces while General Petraeus was commanding the 101st Airborne Division in Mosul. When General Eikenberry was commander in Afghanistan, General Petraeus led an assessment of Afghan National Security Forces.

General Petraeus declined to discuss personnel issues, while Ambassador Eikenberry and Mr. Holbrooke turned down requests for an interview. Mr. Crocker, now the dean of the George Bush School of Government at Texas A&M, did not return a call for comment.

For Mr. Holbrooke, the new landscape is challenging in other ways. Officials said his job security was less in doubt than it was six months ago, when his ouster was the subject of endless Washington chatter. Yet he has arguably become a less central player:

Jacob J. Lew, a deputy secretary of state, manages much of the civilian influx in Afghanistan that Mr. Holbrooke helped shape, while the embassy in Kabul is carrying it out. Mr. Holbrooke's current portfolio has played to his weaknesses, his own allies admit. He is best as a high-level negotiator, and not as comfortable with the nitty-gritty work of helping Afghanistan build an economy.

These days, Mr. Holbrooke has become a globe-trotting diplomat, trying to retain flagging European allies while seeking to draw influential Muslim countries like Egypt into helping Afghanistan. At a recent conference of 35 countries in Madrid, Mr. Holbrooke drummed up more support from allies for the Afghan government's campaign to reintegrate Taliban fighters into mainstream society.

Mr. Karzai's longer-term effort to reconcile with Taliban leaders, and his negotiations with Pakistan, could propel Mr. Holbrooke back into a central role. Were these talks to become more serious, several officials said, Mr. Holbrooke's negotiating skills could be put to use, as a broker and guardian of American interests. For now, though, as evidence of General Petraeus's influence, he will do most of the shuttling between Kabul and Islamabad.

On his last visit to the region, Mr. Holbrooke met with Mr. Karzai and with senior Pakistani officials, including the army chief of staff, Ashfaq Parvez Kayani. Mr. Holbrooke's past run-ins with Mr. Karzai, several officials said, have not hindered his ability to deal with the Afghan leader, and Pakistani officials said they trusted him.

Husain Haqqani, Pakistan's ambassador to Washington, said that Mr. Holbrooke took time to understand Pakistan's concerns. "Ambassador Holbrooke is liked by some, admired by others and seen as effective, even by those who may not like him," Mr. Haqqani said.

Still, General Petraeus is indisputably the key player, and he has wasted no time asserting his control. On a secure videoconference call last Saturday, a person familiar with the call said, General Petraeus threw his support behind a costly, and controversial, plan to install temporary generators to supply more electricity to Kandahar, the Taliban stronghold that is the next major American military target.

Mr. Holbrooke and Ambassador Eikenberry swiftly assented.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, July 1, 2010 11:06 AM
To: H
Cc: cheryl.mills
Subject: fyi

Maariv: Netanyahu won't meet Clinton; 'sources' say she "isn't relevant"

Didi Remez | July 1, 2010 at 15:25 | Categories: Diplomacy | URL: http://wp.me/pHlQV-Ep

Do they honestly think that publicizing a quote like this, on record or off, works to their advantage?

Israeli diplomatic [euphemism for Prime Minister's Office -- DR] sources said: "Clinton isn't relevant and is out of the circle of influence. Mitchell has taken over the peace process to a great extent and Obama, in any event, is the important person in this story because he is the one who decides."

---

Netanyahu to meet Obama, but not Clinton

Eli Bardenstein, Maariv, July 1 2010 [page 7; Hebrew original here and at bottom of post]

Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu is to leave next week for Washington, where he will meet with US President Barack Obama. Rather curiously, he is not scheduled to meet with Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in the course of his visit to Washington.

Contrary to his previous visit in March, this time the US administration intends to create the impression, outwardly at least, that the severe crisis in the relationship has passed and that the relations between the two countries are as strong as ever. In order to bolster that impression, the two leaders will meet the media together and will be photographed. As opposed to the previous time, Netanyahu will also be put up at Blair House, the official White House guesthouse, and not at a hotel.

That said, officials in Washington are waiting apprehensively for the answers that Netanyahu will provide in the course of the meeting, which is expected to address the transition from the proximity talks that are at an impasse to direct negotiations. Obama, apparently, will demand that Netanyahu agree to extend the construction freeze in Judea and Samaria beyond the September 26 expiration date in hope of securing PA

Chairman Abu Mazen's consent to begin direct talks with Israel. For the time being, the forum of seven is divided over this issue.

Read more of this post

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 9:03 AM
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: Noon, state of play

B6

Pls keep the updates coming!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Fri May 07 07:22:31 2010
Subject: Noon, state of play

Shaun is going to Downing St to meet with Gordon, Peter, and two others (Stuart Woods, Sue Nye, Gordon's aides) to discuss what to do, will learn outcome as soon as meeting is over. Sid

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 9:10 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Noon, state of play

Going now to jonathan's office, will hear from shaun as soon as downing st meeting breaks up. On way from guardian. Think clegg misplaying, doesn't get his moment or power, will explain more later...
------Original Message------
From: Hillary Clinton
To: 'sbwhoeop
Sent: May 7, 2010 2:02 PM
Subject: Re: Noon, state of play

Pls keep the updates coming!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Fri May 07 07:22:31 2010
Subject: Noon, state of play

Shaun is going to Downing St to meet with Gordon, Peter, and two others (Stuart Woods, Sue Nye, Gordon's aides) to discuss what to do, will learn outcome as soon as meeting is over. Sid

Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 12:20 PM
To: H
Subject: H: Latest, as of 5:15 pm, London time. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo latest uk 050710.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

May 7, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Latest on UK (5:15 pm, Friday, London); plus Euro and Tony

Everyone has their favorite scenario, but it seems fairly obvious that it will be almost impossible for Gordon to hang on. This process may take some days. Jonathan, who knows Clegg, says he's basically not who his voters think he is but a pro-Europeanist Tory. When Clegg was contemplating a political career he consulted Jonathan. Clegg comes from a Tory family. Jonathan told him to become a Tory, join a real political party rather than the Lib Dems, but Clegg thought he would advance further with LDs. So several theories: 1. Clegg makes an outright deal with Cameron, including for some form of proportional representation (giving LDs more seats in future elections) and cabinet positions. Clegg might become foreign secretary under this scenario. This is the scenario Jonathan believes may well happen. 2. Clegg supports Cameron to form a minority government, but doesn't go into a coalition. Instead his deal involves Cameron dropping almost the whole Tory program but a joint program on financial recovery to be proposed in the Queen's Speech (equivalent of State of the Union). I find this far-fetched. But who knows? 3. Clegg supports Cameron to form government, makes no deals. Jonathan Freedland, who spent last week with Clegg, told me today that Clegg told him a deal with Gordon would appear dirty. Yet making a deal with Cameron would also make Clegg to be a dealmaker, even without a deal on program. These are the convolutions people are going through waiting for resolution. Then, Gordon: Gordon is trying to figure out how to form a coalition. Clegg is refusing him. Gordon may propose Clegg's maximum demands to him to see if he will publicly refuse them. Hard to know when this comes to a head and if and when Gordon departs. Jonathan told me that Tony's view is that Gordon will go but that he couldn't see how Gordon would understand it or exactly how he would go. Barring any clear process, skipping ahead, David appears to be frontrunner for successor as leader of opposition. He would be well positioned to be the future PM if he plays it right under these circumstances. More to come...

Also:

1. You might consider making a statement on Europe and the financial crisis, not a detailed policy statement but a general statement, a little music to position support for Merkel, which she would greatly appreciate, especially facing a harsh regional election in North Rhineland. I would make it short and sweet, simply something about the US commitment to the European project, there from the beginning, is as strong and steadfast as ever; that the US supports Merkel's efforts (and mention Sarkozy) to stabilize Europe and the Euro, etc. Timing TBD, but soon.

2. Tony says he ready and willing to do more on the Middle East if you want to use him.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770171 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

May 7, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Latest on UK (5:15 pm, Friday, London); plus Euro and Tony

Everyone has their favorite scenario, but it seems fairly obvious that it will be almost impossible for Gordon to hang on. This process may take some days. Jonathan, who knows Clegg, says he's basically not who his voters think he is but a pro-Europeanist Tory. When Clegg was contemplating a political career he consulted Jonathan. Clegg comes from a Tory family. Jonathan told him to become a Tory, join a real political party rather than the Lib Dems, but Clegg thought he would advance further with LDs. So several theories: 1. Clegg makes an outright deal with Cameron, including for some form of proportional representation (giving LDs more seats in future elections) and cabinet positions. Clegg might become foreign secretary under this scenario. This is the scenario Jonathan believes may well happen. 2. Clegg supports Cameron to form a minority government, but doesn't go into a coalition. Instead his deal involves Cameron dropping almost the whole Tory program but a joint program on financial recovery to be proposed in the Queen's Speech (equivalent of State of the Union). I find this far-fetched. But who knows? 3. Clegg supports Cameron to form government, makes no deals. Jonathan Freedland, who spent last week with Clegg, told me today that Clegg told him a deal with Gordon would appear dirty. Yet making a deal with Cameron would also make Clegg to be a dealmaker, even without a deal on program. These are the convolutions people are going through waiting for resolution. Then, Gordon: Gordon is trying to figure out how to form a coalition. Clegg is refusing him. Gordon may propose Clegg's maximum demands to him to see if he will publicly refuse them. Hard to know when this comes to a head and if and when Gordon departs. Jonathan told me that Tony's view is that Gordon will go but that he couldn't see how Gordon would understand it or exactly how he would go. Barring any clear process, skipping ahead, David appears to be frontrunner for successor as leader of opposition. He would be well positioned to be the future PM if he plays it right under these circumstances. More to come...

Also:

1. You might consider making a statement on Europe and the financial crisis, not a detailed policy statement but a general statement, a little music to position support for Merkel, which she would greatly appreciate, especially facing a harsh regional election in North Rhineland. I would make it short and sweet, simply something about the US commitment to the European project, there from the beginning, is as strong and steadfast as ever; that the US supports Merkel's efforts (and mention Sarkozy) to stabilize Europe and the Euro, etc. Timing TBD, but soon.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770171 Date: 08/31/2015

2. Tony says he ready and willing to do more on the Middle East if you want to use him.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770172 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

May 7, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: The Downing Street meeting today

Today a seven hour meeting took place at Downing Street to attempt to determine Gordon's strategy. The participants were Gordon, Shaun, Peter, Alastair Campbell, and Ed Balls (who is close to Gordon).

1. Gordon has made a maximum proposal to Clegg through intermediaries, including a referendum on proportional representation, program, cabinet slots if Clegg wants them, or not if he prefers to be perceived as above dealmaking. The offer is open, too, and can be added to. Gordon is letting Cameron and Clegg have their conversation without going public. Clegg in private is in something of a state of shock. He actually expected to win about 125 seats—and finished at 57, losing 14 from what the Lib-Dems held. While Clegg is out front he cannot make a deal on his own; he requires his party's backing. Gordon and his people are in touch with people close to Clegg. Many of Clegg's senior people will not support the deal that Cameron has proposed. Vincent Cable, Clegg's number two, the shadow chancellor, is unhappy with the Tory deal. Clegg is therefore at sea. Clegg's party base, moreover, would not approve a deal that did not represent a "progressive" position. Much of the Lib-Dem base is idealistic and subject to disillusionment.
2. Gordon is doing whatever he can to hold on to power. Shaun, for his part, is working on an economic package for Northern Ireland to win support from the DUP and other parties for Labour—a package to be proposed in the Queen's Speech. Peter floats in and out of the meeting and appears on TV. Alastair has emerged as a stalwart, providing Gordon with talking points and practical ideas hour by hour.
3. The Tories are working overtime to foster the atmosphere that Gordon is repudiated and should leave. This perception is gaining ground as the Cameron-Clegg talks go on. Cameron seems to be dragging them out in order to undermine Gordon.
4. The outcome is highly uncertain largely because Clegg is between a rock and a hard place within his own party. More to come later…

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770172 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 12:31 PM
To: H
Subject: latest, latest, 5:30 pm

Cameron has openly reached out to Clegg for a deal, promising a party committee of inquiry on proportional representation. They seem to be coordinating, but hard to see how far right now. More to come...

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 3:02 PM
To: H
Subject: H: Here it is! What's really going on. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo very, very inside latest 050710.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

May 7, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: The Downing Street meeting today

Today a seven hour meeting took place at Downing Street to attempt to determine Gordon's strategy. The participants were Gordon, Shaun, Peter, Alastair Campbell, and Ed Balls (who is close to Gordon).

Gordon has made a maximum proposal to Clegg through intermediaries, including a referendum on proportional representation, program, cabinet slots if Clegg wants them, or not if he prefers to be perceived as above dealmaking. The offer is open, too, and can be added to. Gordon is letting Cameron and Clegg have their conversation without going public. Clegg in private is in something of a state of shock. He actually expected to win about 125 seats—and finished at 57, losing 14 from what the Lib-Dems held. While Clegg is out front he cannot make a deal on his own; he requires his party's backing. Gordon and his people are in touch with people close to Clegg. Many of Clegg's senior people will not support the deal that Cameron has proposed. Vincent Cable, Clegg's number two, the shadow chancellor, is unhappy with the Tory deal. Clegg is therefore at sea. Clegg's party base, moreover, would not approve a deal that did not represent a "progressive" position. Much of the Lib-Dem base is idealistic and subject to disillusionment.

Gordon is doing whatever he can to hold on to power. Shaun, for his part, is working on an economic package for Northern Ireland to win support from the DUP and other parties for Labour—a package to be proposed in the Queen's Speech. Peter floats in and out of the meeting and appears on TV. Alastair has emerged as a stalwart, providing Gordon with talking points and practical ideas hour by hour.

The Tories are working overtime to foster the atmosphere that Gordon is repudiated and should leave. This perception is gaining ground as the Cameron-Clegg talks go on. Cameron seems to be dragging them out in order to undermine Gordon.

The outcome is highly uncertain largely because Clegg is between a rock and a hard place within his own party. More to come later…

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 3:37 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: S video on Mother's Day

MS -- A wonderful note!

From: Kane, Kristin M
Sent: Friday, May 07, 2010 3:34 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: S video on Mother's Day

Hi Lona, I just saw the S video for Mother's Day: After nearly 10 years of working for the Department, this ranks as one of my proudest, most fulfilling moments of serving as a Foreign Service Officer.

B6

Clearly I'm not the only one who has made these sacrifices or who has these frustrations; Secretary Clinton has heard our struggles (indeed has gone through her own struggles as a professional mom!), and she truly gets it.

I just wanted to tell somebody, and I remembered your name from the women's conference in December. Forgive this long message. Happy Mother's Day, and congratulations on working with such an incredible person.

Regards,
Kristin

Kristin M. Kane
Office of Public Affairs and Outreach
Bureau of International Organization Affairs
U.S. Department of State
Washington, DC
Tel: (202) 647-7994

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 3:52 PM
To: H
Subject: doctrine of no surprises

I just wanted to make sure you know that the CARE speech is now going to focus on nutrition/health/early childhood, rather than being a major health speech. I still feel that you need to do a health speech as a bookend to food and water – perhaps before UNGA. You could focus on health in the context of the larger Millennium Dev Goals. You have not given a speech yet about maternal and child health. We have a great story to tell with our investment in GHI, and there will be an opportunity to tell it with the ramp-up to UNGA (with the Summit focusing on MDGs). There is a tremendous amount of activity going on elsewhere in the world. And this is a legacy issue for you. (I have already relayed this idea to CDM and Jake).

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 4:23 PM
To: Doug Band; H
Subject: FW: Campbell - Visitation and Funeral Arrangements

From: [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, May 07, 2010 3:51 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Campbell - Visitation and Funeral Arrangements

Sunday, May 9 – Visitation @ 3pm – 5pm
Dunn's Funeral Home
2121 Grand Avenue
Des Moines, IA

Monday, May 10 – Funeral @ 12:00n
St. Anthony's Catholic Church (Southside)
15 Indianola Avenue
Des Moines, IA

From: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, May 07, 2010 6:42 AM
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]
Subject: Edward Campbell

[redacted]

From: [redacted]
Sent: Friday, May 07, 2010 1:09 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Edward

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 4:30 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: More on Lieberman's bill

See the highlighted specifically.

cdm

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Friday, May 07, 2010 7:42 AM
To: Crowley, Philip J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Jake Sullivan; Mills, Cheryl D; Verma, Richard R
Cc: Koh, Harold Hongju
Subject: More on Lieberman's bill

Senator Lieberman's bill would strip American citizenship from anyone who has "provid[ed] material support or resources to a foreign terrorist organization" or "engaged in, or purposefully and materially support[ed], hostilities against the United States" or any of its allies.

B5

A. Constitutional Rules:

B. Statute

C. Administrative Policy:

B5

D. Lieberman bill

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:06 PM
To: H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Maggie

MS -- I just spoke to Maggie and she can meet with you/do dinner on Tuesday night around 7pm. That works well on your schedule but of course wanted to double check before locking in with her.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:31 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Maggie

The VP/Karzai dinner is on Wednesday night but will check to see what he has on Tuesday too.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri May 07 17:24:58 2010
Subject: Re: Maggie

I can't remember but don't I have some Karzai event? If not, what is he doing then?

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri May 07 17:06:01 2010
Subject: Maggie

MS -- I just spoke to Maggie and she can meet with you/do dinner on Tuesday night around 7pm. That works well on your schedule but of course wanted to double check before locking in with her.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:38 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Morning meeting notes

---

From: Moy, Kin W
Sent: Friday, May 07, 2010 5:13 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Morning meeting notes

Cheryl,

Below are the notes I took at this morning's senior staff meeting. As you can see, it was a little perfunctory with the A-team mostly out of the building. I believe Harold sought out the Secretary on this topic at midday...have a nice weekend...km

Summary of 8:45 meeting, May 7, 2010:

(M) Pat Kennedy chaired, with (L) Harold Koh, (PA) PJ Crowley, (S/P) Ann-Marie Slaughter, (H) Matthew Rooney, (D) Sheba Crocker, (D) Piper Campbell, (P) Alice Wells, and (S/ES)Kin Moy attending.

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:40 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: Maggie

On Tuesday night, after our reception, he has nothing planned, "rest" time at the hotel. The VP dinner is Wednesday night.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri May 07 17:24:58 2010
Subject: Re: Maggie

I can't remember but don't I have some Karzai event? If not, what is he doing then?

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri May 07 17:06:01 2010
Subject: Maggie

MS -- I just spoke to Maggie and she can meet with you/do dinner on Tuesday night around 7pm. That works well on your schedule but of course wanted to double check before locking in with her.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:41 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; H
Subject: Re: Maggie

Doesn't give u chance to change your mind if u decide to go to dinner.

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri May 07 17:39:40 2010
Subject: Re: Maggie

On Tuesday night, after our reception, he has nothing planned, "rest" time at the hotel. The VP dinner is Wednesday night.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri May 07 17:24:58 2010
Subject: Re: Maggie

I can't remember but don't I have some Karzai event? If not, what is he doing then?

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri May 07 17:06:01 2010
Subject: Maggie

MS -- I just spoke to Maggie and she can meet with you/do dinner on Tuesday night around 7pm. That works well on your schedule but of course wanted to double check before locking in with her.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 5:49 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: Maggie

Sounds good.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri May 07 17:44:22 2010
Subject: Re: Maggie

Ok--lets do Maggie. Maybe I could take her out to dinner.

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri May 07 17:39:40 2010
Subject: Re: Maggie

On Tuesday night, after our reception, he has nothing planned, "rest" time at the hotel. The VP dinner is Wednesday night.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Fri May 07 17:24:58 2010
Subject: Re: Maggie

I can't remember but don't I have some Karzai event? If not, what is he doing then?

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri May 07 17:06:01 2010
Subject: Maggie

MS -- I just spoke to Maggie and she can meet with you/do dinner on Tuesday night around 7pm. That works well on your schedule but of course wanted to double check before locking in with her.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Sunday, August 1, 2010 10:43 AM
To: H
Subject: what Max did on July 31.

http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/07/the-summer-camp-of-destruction-israeli-high-schoolers-join-in-the-destruction-of-a-bedouin-town/

The "Summer Camp Of Destruction:" Israeli High Schoolers Assist The Razing Of A Bedouin Town

On 07.31.10, By Max Blumenthal

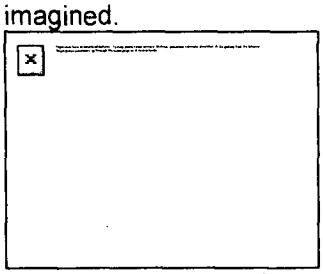
AL-ARAKIB, ISRAEL — On July 26, Israeli police demolished 45 buildings in the unrecognized Bedouin village of al-Arakib, razing the entire village to the ground to make way for a Jewish National Fund forest. The destruction was part of a larger project to force the Bedouin community of the Negev away from their ancestral lands and into seven Indian reservation-style communities the Israeli government has constructed for them. The land will then be open for Jewish settlers, including young couples in the army and those who may someday be evacuated from the West Bank after a peace treaty is signed. For now, the Israeli government intends to uproot as many villages as possible and erase them from the map by establishing "facts on the ground" in the form of JNF forests. (See video of of al-Arakib's demolition here).



"]

Moments before the destruction of the Bedouin village of al-Arakib, Israeli high school age police volunteers lounge on furniture taken from a family's home. [The following four photos are by Ata Abu Madyam of Arab Negev News.

One of the most troubling aspects of the destruction of al-Arakib was a report by CNN that the hundreds of Israeli riot police who stormed the village were accompanied by "busloads of cheering civilians." Who were these civilians and why didn't CNN or any outlet investigate further?

I traveled to al-Arakib yesterday with a delegation from Ta'ayush, an Israeli group that promotes a joint Arab-Jewish struggle against the occupation. The activists spent the day preparing games and activities for the village's traumatized children, helping the villagers replace their uprooted olive groves, and assisting in the reconstruction of their demolished homes. In a massive makeshift tent where many of al-Arakib's residents now sleep, I interviewed village leaders about the identity of the cheering civilians. Each one confirmed the presence of the civilians, describing how they celebrated the demolitions. As I compiled details, the story grew increasingly horrific. After interviewing more than a half dozen elders of the village, I was able to finally identify the civilians in question. What I discovered was more disturbing than I had imagined.

Israeli police youth volunteers pick through the belongings an al-Arakib family

Arab Negev News publisher Ata Abu Madyam supplied me with a series of photos he took of the civilians in action. They depicted Israeli high school students who appeared to have volunteered as members of the Israeli police civilian guard (I am working on identifying some participants by name). Prior to the demolitions, the student volunteers were sent into the villagers' homes to extract their furniture and belongings. A number of villagers including Madyam told me the volunteers smashed windows and mirrors in their homes and defaced family photographs with crude drawings. Then they lounged around on the furniture of al-Arakib residents in plain site of the owners. Finally, according to Matyam, the volunteers celebrated while bulldozers destroyed the homes.

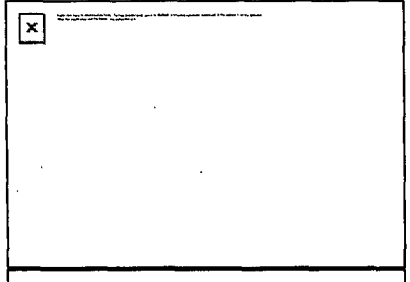
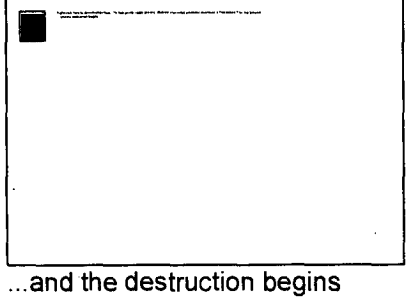
"What we learned from the summer camp of destruction," Madyam remarked, "is that Israeli youth are not being educated on democracy, they are being raised on racism." (The cover of the latest issue of Madyam's Arab Negev News features a photo of Palestinians being expelled to Jordan in 1948 juxtaposed with a photo of a family fleeing al-Arakib last week. The headline reads, "Nakba 2010.")

According to residents of al-Arakib, the youth volunteers vandalized homes throughout the village



The Israeli civilian guard, which incorporates 70,000 citizens including youth as young as 15 (about 15% of Israeli police volunteers are teenagers), is one of many programs designed to incorporate Israeli children into the state's military apparatus. It is not hard to imagine what lessons the high school students who participated in the leveling of al-Arakib took from their experience, nor is it especially difficult to predict what sort of citizens they will become once they reach adulthood. Not only are they being indoctrinated to swear blind allegiance to the military, they are learning to treat the Arab outclass as less than human. The volunteers' behavior toward Bedouins, who are citizens of Israel and serve loyally in Israeli army combat units despite widespread racism, was strikingly reminiscent of the behavior of settler youth in Hebron who pelt Palestinian shopkeepers in the old city with eggs, rocks and human waste. If there is a distinction between the two cases, it is that the Hebron settlers act as vigilantes while the teenagers of Israeli civilian guard vandalize Arab property as agents of the state.



The spectacle of Israeli youth helping destroy al-Arakib helps explain why 56% of Jewish Israeli high school students do not believe Arabs should be allowed to serve in the Knesset – why the next generation wants apartheid. Indeed, the widespread indoctrination of Israeli youth by the military apparatus is a central factor in Israel's authoritarian trend. It would be difficult for any adolescent boy to escape from an experience like al-Arakib, where adults in heroic warrior garb encourage him to participate in and gloat over acts of massive destruction, with even a trace of democratic values.

Youth volunteers extract belongings from village homes as bulldozers move in

As for the present condition of Israeli democracy, it is essential to consider the way in which the state pits its own citizens against one another, enlisting the Jewish majority as conquerers while targeting the Arab others as, in the words of Zionist founding father Chaim Weizmann, "obstacles that had to be cleared on a difficult path." Historically, only failing states have encouraged such corrosive dynamics to take hold. That is why the scenes from al-Arakib, from the demolished homes to the uprooted gardens to the grinning teens who joined the mayhem, can be viewed as much more than the destruction of a village. They are snapshots of the phenomenon that is laying Israeli society as a whole to waste.

...and the destruction begins

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Monday, August 2, 2010 12:37 PM
To: H
Subject: fyi

Go Back

Print this page

Skip to content

Subscribe to The New Yorker

The Political Scene

The Empty Chamber

Just how broken is the Senate?

Seventy-six nominees for judgeships and executive posts have been approved by committees but, because of blocks, haven't come up for a vote in the full Senate, leaving courtrooms idle and jobs unfilled across the upper levels of the Obama Administration....
The tally of cloture votes reflects only a small fraction of senatorial obstruction. Three hundred and forty-five bills passed by the House have been prevented from even coming up for debate in the Senate....

by George Packer August 9, 2010

Text Size:
Small Text
Medium Text
Large Text
Print E-Mail Feeds

"Sit and watch us for seven days," one senator says of the deadlocked chamber. "You know what you'll see happening? Nothing."

"This is just one of those days when you want to throw up your hands and say, 'What in the world are we doing?' " Senator Claire McCaskill, the Missouri Democrat, said.
"It's unconscionable," Carl Levin, the senior Democratic senator from Michigan, said. "The obstructionism has become mindless."
The Senators were in the Capitol, sunk into armchairs before the marble fireplace in the press lounge, which is directly behind the Senate chamber. It was four-thirty on a Wednesday afternoon. McCaskill, in a matching maroon jacket and top, looked exasperated; Levin glowered over his spectacles.
"Also, it's a dumb rule in itself," McCaskill said. "It's time we started looking at some of these rules."
She was referring to Senate Rule XXVI, Paragraph 5, which requires unanimous consent for committees and subcommittees to hold hearings after two in the afternoon while the Senate is in session. Both Levin and McCaskill had scheduled hearings that day for two-thirty. Typically, it wouldn't be difficult to get colleagues to waive the rule; a general and an admiral had flown halfway around the world to appear before Levin's Armed Services Committee, and McCaskill's Subcommittee on Contracting Oversight of the Homeland Security Committee was investigating the training of Afghan police. But this was March 24th, the day after President Barack Obama signed the health-care-reform bill, in a victory ceremony at the White House; it was also the day that the Senate was to vote on a reconciliation bill for health-care reform, approved by the House three nights earlier, which would retroactively remove the new law's most embarrassing sweetheart deals and complete the yearlong process of passing universal health care. Republicans, who had fought the bill as a bloc, were in no mood to make things easy.
So, four hours earlier, when Levin went to the Senate floor and asked for consent to hold his hearing, Senator Richard Burr, Republican of North Carolina, and a member of Levin's committee, had refused. "I have no personal objection to continuing," Burr said. But, he added, "there is objection on our side of the aisle. Therefore, I would have to object."
Burr had to object on behalf of his party because he was the only Republican in the chamber when Levin spoke. In general, when senators give speeches on the floor, their colleagues aren't around, and the two or three who might be present aren't listening. They're joking with aides, or e-mailing Twitter ideas to their press secretaries, or getting their first look at a speech they're about to give before the eight unmanned cameras that provide a live feed to C-SPAN2. The presiding officer of the Senate—freshmen of the majority party take rotating, hour-long shifts intended to introduce them to the ways of the institution—sits in his chair on the dais, scanning his BlackBerry or reading a Times article about the Senate. Michael Bennet, a freshman Democrat from Colorado, said, "Sit and watch us for seven days—just watch the floor. You know what you'll see happening? Nothing. When I'm in the chair, I sit there thinking, I wonder what they're doing in China right now?"
Between speeches, there are quorum calls, time killers in which a Senate clerk calls the roll at the rate of one name every few minutes. The press gallery, above the dais, is typically deserted, as journalists prefer to hunker down in the press lounge, surfing the Web for analysis of current Senate negotiations; television screens alert them if something of interest actually happens in the chamber. The only people who pay attention to a speech are the Senate stenographers. On this afternoon, two portly bald men in suits stood facing the speaker from a few feet away, tapping at the transcription machines, which resembled nineteenth-century cash registers, slung around their necks. The Senate chamber is an intimate room where men and women go to talk to themselves for the record.
Like many other aspects of senatorial procedure, Rule XXVI, Paragraph 5 is a relic from the days when senators had to hover around their desks to know what was happening on the floor during the main afternoon debate. (The desks, some built as long ago as 1819, are mahogany, and their lids lift up, like those in an old schoolhouse; the desks of the Majority and Minority Leader are still equipped with brass spittoons.) In the press lounge, McCaskill said, with light sarcasm, "Somebody told me the rule is to make sure people pay attention to what's happening on the floor during debate and not be distracted by committee work. Clearly, it's an old rule."
The Republicans had turned this old rule into a new means of obstruction. There would be no hearings that afternoon; the general and the admiral would have to come back another day. Like investment bankers on Wall Street, senators these days direct much of their creative energy toward the manipulation of arcane rules and loopholes, scoring short-term successes while magnifying their institution's broader dysfunction.
Around five o'clock, the chamber began to fill, as the reconciliation bill came up for a vote; there were twenty-three amendments pending, all from Republicans, and perhaps many more to come. Ordinarily, debate and voting on an amendment might take two legislative days, but under the rules of the reconciliation bill the senators were to dispatch the amendments one after another, as in a hot-dog-eating contest, with a minute of debate for each side. The goal was to finish the bill by the end of the evening, so that senators wouldn't miss a day of their spring recess—apparently, the only thing worse than a government takeover of the health-care system. The usual longueurs of the Senate, where forty minutes can tick away on the antique clock above the rear double doors without a word's being spoken, were about to yield to a frenzy. Harry Reid, the Majority Leader, from Nevada, had predicted that the process, known as Vote-O-Rama, would go past two in the morning, and had warned senators to stay close to the chamber.
Max Baucus, of Montana, the manager of the bill for the Democrats, rose and said, "This is the first time in recent memory that a reconciliation bill has all the amendments on one side only. These are clearly amendments designed to kill the reconciliation and, therefore, kill health-care reform. So I very much hope that all of these amendments are defeated."
Tall, gaunt Judd Gregg, of New Hampshire, the bill's Republican manager, took the floor. "The position on the other side of the aisle is: no amendments allowed, even if they are good," he said. Indignation rouged his cheeks, and his voice rose half an octave. "Obviously, they presume the Republican Party is an inconvenience. The democratic process is an inconvenience. It also appears, considering the opposition to this out in America, that the American people are an inconvenience."

The Senate chamber is laid out in four concentric semicircles, with adjacent desks almost touching on the crowded Democratic side, and the desks of the much smaller Republican minority spaced loosely apart. The design is meant to emphasize the senators' unity. But Baucus and Gregg avoided eye contact across the six feet of aisle that now divides the chamber into two constantly warring factions. Senators are required, by custom, to speak of one another in the third person, directing their anger and sarcasm through whichever poor freshman happens to be the presiding officer at the moment. Rule XIX, Paragraphs 2 and 3—one of the original rules drawn from Thomas Jefferson's "Manual of Parliamentary Practice"—bars senators from imputing unworthy conduct or motives to another senator, and from insulting any senator's state. But there is no rule against finger-wagging, and Baucus wagged his at Gregg while shouting at Al Franken, of Minnesota, who had started a shift in the presiding officer's chair: "Mr. President, make no mistake, the intent of every single one of the amendments offered on the other side of the aisle is to kill health-care reform. . . . A senator on the other side of the aisle stood up and said that this is hopefully the President's Waterloo. They want to kill health-care reform!"

The voice of Stuart Smalley filled the chamber: "The time of the senator has expired."

For the next nine hours, the chamber became the stage of a theatrical whose ending, like almost everything that happens on the Senate floor, was known in advance to all. The Republican goal in Vote-O-Rama was to embarrass the Democrats while appearing to suggest useful changes; the Democratic goal was to prevent any change to the bill, so that it wouldn't have to return to the House, where it might be voted down. Several of the Republican amendments had been designed to make Democrats look hypocritical, by forcing them to vote against policies that the Party typically supports. One amendment, for example, declared that the health-care bill could not be linked to a tax hike on individuals making less than two hundred thousand dollars a year. Other amendments were more nakedly partisan, and outlandish. David Vitter, a Louisiana Republican, proposed an amendment that repealed the entire law. Senator Tom Coburn, a Republican obstetrician from Oklahoma, introduced an amendment to insure that veterans diagnosed with mental illness would not be denied the right to own firearms, and another to prevent "convicted child molesters, rapists, and sex offenders" from buying erectile-dysfunction drugs with taxpayer funds. Coburn got through the minute he was allotted to explain his Viagra amendment without cracking a smile. "This is not a game amendment," he insisted. "It actually saves money."

So many senators snickered that the presiding officer banged his gavel for order.

"The amendment offered by the senator from Oklahoma makes a mockery of this Senate," Baucus declared. "It is a crass political stunt aimed at making thirty-second commercials, not public policy." Baucus asked for the yeas and nays, and a clerk called the roll at a ragged pace. "Mr. Coburn, Mr. Cochran, Ms. Collins." Thirty-five-second pause. "Mr. Conrad, Mr. Corker." Ten seconds. "Mr. Cornyn." Senators pay no attention to the sound of their name; they cast votes when they're so inclined—wandering in late, shuffling down the chamber's gentle blue-carpeted steps to the swarm of colleagues milling about in the well, where the clerks sit at a table, and then holding a finger up or down. At one point, John McCain—now just one of a hundred senators and struggling to stay in office—spent half a minute waving stiff-armed, trying to catch the eye of a clerk so he could cast his vote. In the end, two Democrats—Evan Bayh, of Indiana, and Ben Nelson, of Nebraska—joined the Republicans in opposing Viagra for sex offenders. The amendment was defeated.

The carpeting in the chamber absorbs voices, and during the long night one of the few that rose above the muffled drone was that of Charles Schumer, who said to Gregg, "Get to work! Stop screwing around with health care!" Sporadically, a sharp cackle emanated from Al Franken, who wandered the chamber, looking for Republicans he could charm into laughing. Observed from the press gallery, the senators in their confined space began to resemble zoo animals—Levin a shambling brown bear, John Thune a loping gazelle, Jim Bunning a maddened grizzly. Each one displayed a limited set of behaviors: in conversations, John Kerry planted himself a few inches away, loomed, and clamped his hands down on a colleague's shoulders. Joe Lieberman patted everyone on the back. It became clear which senators were loners (Russ Feingold, Daniel Akaka) and which were social (Blanche Lincoln, Lindsey Graham); which senators were important (Dick Durbin, Jon Kyl) and which were ignored (Bayh, Bunning).

Past midnight, Durbin slumped at his desk, one hand over his face, yawning painfully. Susan Collins was going through her mail. Twenty-three amendments had been voted down, and the Republicans were proposing a fresh batch. "Can we get some order?" Bunning growled, before he introduced a proposal to let senior citizens opt out of parts of Medicare. It was the only amendment that any Republicans joined the Democrats to defeat.

Harry Reid controls the Senate's schedule, but Mitch McConnell, of Kentucky, who is the Minority Leader, can object. Since nearly everything in the Senate depends on unanimous consent, the main business of the place is a continuous negotiation between these two supremely unsentimental men. That night, they played a game of chicken: McConnell, unsmiling, his eyes riveted ahead, held out the prospect of dozens more amendments; Reid, a former boxer, was hunched and mumbling, playing rope-a-dope, vowing to fend off amendments all night. The two leaders left the chamber to confer privately about how to proceed. Inside, the atmosphere of a slumber party set in. Debbie Stabenow, of Michigan, her hand across her heart, sang a sentimental duet with Robert Menendez, of New Jersey. Exhaustion momentarily eased the partisan divide. Claire McCaskill sat down beside Tom Coburn, held up an erect finger in his face, as if casting her Viagra vote, then let it go limp. Coburn could be heard to joke, "The longest it lasted was thirty seconds."

At two-forty-five in the morning, Reid suddenly declared the Senate adjourned. The Senate parliamentarian had just found two small violations of the reconciliation rules, meaning that in the morning, despite the Democrats' efforts, the bill would go back to the House for another vote. At the bang of the gavel, the senators fled. In the parking lot, on the Capitol's northeast side, McCaskill climbed into her S.U.V. Levin, in a cramped sedan, was chauffeured off into the empty streets. On a marble ledge near the exit, Arlen Specter sat alone, a ghost in a brown suit, staring straight ahead, as if waiting for someone to take him away.

The Senate reconvened at 9:45 A.M. Around two in the afternoon, the members gathered for the final vote, and the Democrats were giddy. Tom Harkin, of Iowa, and Christopher Dodd, of Connecticut, even exchanged a hug. "Everyone's tired," Reid declared before the final vote. "This legislative fight is one for the record books." He was so fatigued that he initially voted the wrong way. Lindsey Graham came in late, delaying the tally by ten minutes. "Way to go, Lindsey, way to stretch it out," Sam Brownback told him. A few Republicans lingered and took in the moment, like players on the losing team at the end of the World Series. After a year of work, health-care reform had passed, 56–43, and for a moment the chamber's Tweeting pygmies had become legislative giants.

The Senate is often referred to as "the world's greatest deliberative body." Jeff Merkley, a freshman Democrat from Oregon, said, "That is a phrase that I wince each time I hear it, because the amount of real deliberation, in terms of exchange of ideas, is so limited." Merkley could remember witnessing only one moment of floor debate between a Republican and a Democrat. "The memory I took with me was: 'Wow, that's unusual—there's a conversation occurring in which they're making point and counterpoint and challenging each other.' And yet nobody else was in the chamber."

Tom Udall, a freshman Democrat from New Mexico, could not recall seeing a senator change another senator's mind. "You would really need a good hour or two of extensive exchange among folks that really know the issue," he said. Instead, a senator typically gives "a prepared speech that's already been vetted through the staff. Then another guy gets up and gives a speech on a completely different subject." From time to time, senators of the same party carry on a colloquy—"I would be interested in the distinguished senator from Iowa's view of the other side's Medicare Advantage plan"—that has been scripted in advance by aides.

While senators are in Washington, their days are scheduled in fifteen-minute intervals: staff meetings, interviews, visits from lobbyists and home-state groups, caucus lunches, committee hearings, briefing books, floor votes, fund-raisers. Each senator sits on three or four committees and even more subcommittees, most of which meet during the same morning hours, which helps explain why committee tables are often nearly empty, and why senators drifting into a hearing can barely sustain a coherent line of questioning. All this activity is crammed into a three-day week, for it's an unwritten rule of the modern Senate that votes are almost never scheduled for Mondays or Fridays, which allows senators to spend four days away from the capital. Senators now, unlike those of several decades ago, often keep their families in their home states, where they return most weekends, even if it's to Alaska or Idaho—a concession to endless fund-raising, and to the populist anti-Washington mood of recent years. (When Newt Gingrich became Speaker of the House, in 1995, he told new Republican members not to move their families to the capital.) Tom Daschle, the former Democratic leader, said, "When we scheduled votes, the only day where we could be absolutely certain we had all one hundred senators there was Wednesday afternoon."

Nothing dominates the life of a senator more than raising money. Tom Harkin, the Iowa Democrat, said, "Of any free time you have, I would say fifty per cent, maybe even more," is spent on fund-raising. In addition to financing their own campaigns, senators participate at least once a week in the Power Hour, during which they make obligatory calls on behalf of the Party (in the Democrats' case, from a three-story town house across Constitution Avenue from the Senate office buildings, since they're barred from using their own offices to raise money). Lamar Alexander, the Tennessee Republican, insisted that the donations are never sufficient to actually buy a vote, but he added, "It sucks up time that a senator ought to be spending getting to know other senators, working on issues."

In June, 2009, top aides to Max Baucus, whose Finance Committee was negotiating the health-care-reform bill, took time to meet with two health-care lobbyists, who themselves were former Baucus aides. (Baucus received more than a million dollars from the industry for his 2008 reëlection campaign.) That month, according to Common Cause, industry groups were spending $1.4 million a day to lobby members of Congress. Udall, speaking of the corrosive effect of fund-raising and lobbying, said, "People know it in their heart—they know this place is dominated by special interests. The over-all bills are not nearly as bold because of the influence of money."

Daschle sketched a portrait of the contemporary senator who is too busy to think: "Sometimes, you're dialling for dollars, you get the call, you've got to get over to vote, you've got fifteen minutes. You don't have a clue what's on the floor, your staff is whispering in your ears, you're running onto the floor, then you check with your leader—you double check—but, just to make triple sure, there's a little sheet of paper on the clerk's table: The leader recommends an aye vote, or a no vote. So you've got all these checks just to make sure you don't screw up, but even then you screw up sometimes. But, if you're ever pressed, 'Why did you vote that way?'—you just walk out thinking, Oh, my God, I hope nobody asks, because I don't have a clue."

Aides, at the elbows of senators as they shuttle between their offices and the Capitol, have proliferated over the past few decades, and they play a crucial role. Lamar Alexander, who has an office of fifty people, pointed out that staff members, who are younger and often more ideological than their bosses, and less dependent on institutional relationships, tend to push senators toward extremes. Often, aides are the main actors behind proposed legislation—writing bills, negotiating the details—while the senator is relegated to repeating talking points on Fox or MSNBC.

One day in his office, Udall picked up some tabloids from his coffee table and waved them at me. "You know about all these rags that cover the Hill, right?" he said, smiling. There are five dailies—Politico, The Hill, Roll Call, CongressDaily, and CQ Today—all of which emphasize insider conflict. The senators, who like to complain about the trivializing effect of the "24/7 media," provide no end of fodder for it. The news of the day was what Udall called a "dust-up" between Scott

Brown, the freshman Massachusetts Republican, and a staffer for Jim DeMint, the arch-conservative from South Carolina; the staffer had Tweeted that Brown was voting too often with the Democrats, leading Brown to confront DeMint on the Senate floor over this supposed breach of protocol. Bloggers carry so much influence that many senators have a young press aide dedicated to the care and feeding of online media. News about, by, and for a tiny kingdom of political obsessives dominates the attention of senators and staff, while stories that might affect their constituents go unreported because their home-state papers can no longer afford to have bureaus in Washington. Dodd, who came to the Senate in 1981 and will leave next January, told me, "I used to have eleven Connecticut newspaper reporters who covered me on a daily basis. I don't have one today, and haven't had one in a number of years. Instead, D.C. publications only see me through the prism of conflict." Lamar Alexander described the effect as "this instant radicalizing of positions to the left and the right."

Both Alexander and Gregg said that the Senate had been further polarized by the rising number of senators—now nearly fifty—who come from the House, rather than from governorships or other positions where bipartisan coöperation is still permissible. "A lot of senators don't understand the history or tradition of the institution," Gregg said. "Substantive, thoughtful, moderate discussion is pushed aside."

Encumbered with aides, prodded by hourly jolts from electronic media, racing from the hearing room to the caucus lunch to the Power Hour to the airport, senators no longer have the time, or perhaps the inclination, to get to know one another—least of all, members of the other party. Friendships across party lines are more likely among the few spouses who live in Washington. After Udall joined the Senate, last year, he was invited to dinner by Alexander, because Jill Cooper Udall and Honey Alexander had become friends through a women's social club. It remains the only time Udall has set foot in the house of a Republican senator. (Vice-President Joe Biden, in his autobiography, recalls that, in the seventies, a bipartisan group of senators and their wives hosted a monthly dinner: "In those days Democrats and Republicans actually enjoyed each other's company.") When I asked Chris Dodd how well he knew, for example, Jim DeMint, Dodd said, "Not at all. Whereas Jesse Helms and I knew each other pretty well." He repeated something that Jon Kyl, the Republican whip, from Arizona, had recently said to him: "There's no trust." Dodd, whose father was a senator, went on, "That's really all there is—this place really operates on that. I don't think anyone would argue with that conclusion. And if that's missing . . . "

There remains a veneer—badly chipped—of comity. On the floor, senators still refer to members of the opposing party as "friends." Gregg described Kent Conrad, a Democrat from North Dakota, as "one of my best friends in the Senate," and both Gregg and Alexander ticked off examples of little-known legislation that they are currently working on with Democrats; Alexander and Ben Cardin, of Maryland, have introduced a bill to ban mountaintop-removal coal mining. Udall noted that he had become friendly with John McCain when they went on a congressional tour of Iraq. But opportunities to bond are rare. On the first floor of the Capitol, there is a private dining room for senators, the "inner sanctum," where Republicans and Democrats used to have lunch (at separate tables, but in the same room). In the seventies, old bulls such as James Eastland, Hubert Humphrey, and Jacob Javits held court there; later, Daniel Patrick Moynihan did. "You learned, and also you found out what was going on," Dodd said, adding, "It's awfully difficult to say crappy things about someone that you just had lunch with." These days, the inner sanctum is nearly always empty. Senators eat lunch in their respective caucus rooms with members of their party, or else "downtown," which means asking donors for money over steak and potatoes at the Monocle or Charlie Palmer. The tradition of the "caucus lunch" was instituted by Republicans in the fifties, when they lost their majority; Democrats, after losing theirs in 1980, followed suit. Caucus lunches work members on both sides into a state of pep-rally fervor. During one recent Republican lunch, Jim Bunning referred to Harry Reid as an idiot. "At least he had the courtesy to do it behind closed doors," Alexander joked, adding, "We spend most of our time in team meetings deciding what we're going to do to each other."

In 2007, Alexander and Lieberman started a series of bipartisan Tuesday breakfasts. "They kind of dwindled off during the health-care debate," Alexander said. Udall has tried to revive the Wednesday inner-sanctum lunch. For the first few months, only Democrats attended. Then, one Wednesday in May, Susan Collins, the Maine Republican, showed up, joking nervously about being a turncoat; to protect her reputation, her presence was kept secret.

These efforts at resurrecting dead customs are as self-conscious and, probably, as doomed as the get-togethers of lovers who try to stay friends after a breakup. Ira Shapiro, a Washington lawyer and a former aide to Senator Gaylord Nelson, of Wisconsin, put it this way: "Why would they want to have lunch together when they hate each other?"

The upper chamber of Congress was a constitutional compromise between popular sovereignty and state sovereignty. The Senate was designed, as part of the separation of powers, to check the impulses of the House and the popular will. For some Federalists, it also had an aristocratic purpose: to collect knowledge and experience, and to guard against a levelling spirit that might overtake the majority. When Alexis de Tocqueville visited the Senate, in 1832, he was deeply impressed by the quality of its members: "They represent only the lofty thoughts [of the nation] and the generous instincts animating it, not the petty passions." But he also recognized that "a minority of the nation dominating the Senate could completely paralyze the will of the majority represented in the other house, and that is contrary to the spirit of constitutional government." As long as the Senate continued to be composed of America's most talented statesmen, Tocqueville implied, it would restrain its own anti-democratic potential.

Robert A. Caro, in "Master of the Senate," the third volume of his life of Lyndon Johnson, argues that after the Civil War · the Senate was captured by wealthy and sectional interests, ending a more high-minded age when Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, and John C. Calhoun engaged in brilliant debate. Aside from spasms of legislation at the start of the Presidencies of Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Roosevelt, Caro writes, the Senate remained controlled by an alliance of Southern racists and Republican corporate shills, and was "the dam against which the waves of social reform dashed themselves in vain—the chief obstructive force in the federal government." By the fifties, the Senate had become far more conservative than the public. And not just conservative: William S. White, in his 1956 book "Citadel," called the Senate "to a most peculiar degree, a Southern Institution . . . growing at the heart of this ostensibly national assembly" and "the only place in the country where the South did not lose the war."

By mid-century, it had become a journalistic cliché to call the Senate broken. Otto Preminger's 1962 film "Advise and Consent," based on the novel by Allen Drury, is about the Senate of that period, and it presents Democrats and Republicans as equally amoral, calculating, and power-hungry. But the institution, as depicted by Preminger, still works, in its way: though the deals stink, they get cut. The senators know their colleagues and the rules; they back-stab one another in the lunchroom, then drink cocktails and play cards on Saturday nights. There are no lobbyists, no fund-raisers, no media, no constituents—only senators' intricate relations with one another. The Senate is its own world.

In a memoir, Johnson's longtime aide Harry McPherson recalls learning that the Senate's "famous 'club' atmosphere is based on the members' mutual acceptance of responsibility and concentration on the tasks at hand. . . . They thrust hard at one another in debate over serious matters," but, he writes, "understanding and accommodation in the ordinary course of the Senate day was essential to sanity." Johnson, the most powerful Majority Leader in history, bent the Senate to his will and forced it to become more efficient. He saw his colleagues as either "whales"—the heavyweight chairmen who negotiated legislation—or "minnows," the followers who went along with the brokered deals. And when, in 1958, a formidable new class of liberal Democrats entered the Senate—including Edmund Muskie, Eugene McCarthy, and Philip Hart—the legislative machinery began to produce reform. Michael Janeway, the author of "The Fall of the House of Roosevelt," worked as a summer staff member between 1958 and 1962. "They used to talk to each other—that's my most vivid recollection," he said. "If Wayne Morse talked of constitutional law on the floor, the Southerners would come in to hear him. The same with Hubert Humphrey on farm policy. My strongest impression was of it being a deliberative body, drawing each other out—sometimes pedantically." Senators who ran for office in order to work on foreign policy, social welfare, or urbanization had to win credibility with the whales. "But if you wanted to do something there was a mechanism by which you could do it," Janeway said.

In the sixties and seventies, Southern-conservative control was broken by a coalition of left-of-center Democrats and moderate Republicans. Donald Ritchie, the Senate historian, who started working there in 1976, described the Senate of those decades as "a bipartisan liberal institution." The Civil Rights Act of 1964 was written largely out of the office of the Republican Minority Leader, Everett Dirksen. Every major initiative—voting rights, open housing, environmental law, campaign reform—enjoyed bipartisan support. In the rare event of a filibuster, the motion to end debate was often filed jointly by leaders of both parties. When Medicare—that government takeover of health care for the elderly—was passed, in 1965, it won 70–24.

The Senate's momentum nurtured superb talent: William Fulbright, Everett Dirksen, Henry Jackson, Frank Church, Howard Baker. In 1969, George McGovern chaired a select committee on hunger that actually held bipartisan "field hearings" in poor regions, calling witnesses in migrant labor camps, and then, with Bob Dole's indispensable support, greatly expanded the food-stamp program. The intensity of senatorial purpose in those years must strike today's legislators as profoundly humbling. After Joe Biden came to the Senate, in 1973, Hubert Humphrey took him aside and said, "You have to pick an issue that becomes yours. That's how you attract your colleagues to follow you, Joe. That's how you demonstrate your bona fides. Don't be a gadfly." Humphrey's career advice: "You should become Mr. Housing. Housing is the future."

The Senate's modern decline began in 1978, with the election of a new wave of anti-government conservatives, and accelerated as Republicans became the majority in 1981. "The Quayle generation came in, and there were a number of people just like Dan—same generation, same hair style, same beliefs," Gary Hart, the Colorado Democrat, recalled. "They were harder-line. They weren't there to get along with Democrats. But they look accommodationist compared to Republicans in the Senate today." Church, McGovern, Javits, and Birch Bayh were gone. Ira Shapiro, the former aide, who is writing a book about the Senate of the sixties and seventies, said, "It was a huge loss of the most experienced, accomplished senators being replaced by neophytes. All of a sudden, in 1981, more than half the Senate had been there less than six years." He added, "The shattering of the great Senate has long-term effects that keep showing up. It gets worse over time, but it just never gets restored. There was a phrase I heard from Helms and the younger ones: 'Others didn't want to make waves; I wanted to drain the swamp.' "

After C-SPAN went on the air, in 1979, the cozy atmosphere that encouraged both deliberation and back-room deals began to yield to transparency and, with it, posturing. "So Damn Much Money," a recent book by the Washington Post reporter Robert G. Kaiser, traces the spectacular rise of Washington lobbying to the same period. Liberal Republicans began to disappear, and as Southern Democrats died out they were replaced by conservative Republicans. Bipartisan coalitions on both wings of the Senate vanished. The institutionalist gave way to the free agent, who controlled his own fund-raising apparatus and media presence, and whose electoral base was a patchwork of single-issue groups. Members of both parties—Howard Metzenbaum, the Ohio Democrat; Jesse Helms, the North Carolina Republican—took to regularly using the Senate's rules to tie up business for narrowly ideological reasons. The number of filibusters shot up in the eighties and continued to rise in the following decades, as the parties kept alternating control of the Senate and escalating a procedural arms race, routinely blocking the confirmation of executive and judicial appointees. Democrats filibustered Republican nominees to the bench; then Republicans threatened to ban the filibuster in such cases—the so-called "nuclear option." Older members were perturbed when, in 2004, the Republican Majority Leader, Bill Frist, went to

South Dakota to campaign against the Democratic Minority Leader, Tom Daschle (who went on to lose). A few years earlier, such an action would have been unthinkable.

The weakened institution could no longer withstand pressures from outside its walls; as money and cameras rushed in, independent minds fell more and more in line with the partisans. Rough parity between the two parties meant that every election had the potential to make or break a majority, crushing the incentive to coöperate across the aisle. The Senate, no longer a fount of ideas, became a backwater of the U.S. government. During the Clinton years, the main action was between the White House and the Gingrich House of Representatives; during the Bush years, the Republican Senate majority abdicated the oversight role that could have placed a vital check on executive power.

Norman Ornstein, a congressional expert at the American Enterprise Institute, said that the Senate has increasingly become populated by "ideologues and charlatans." He went on, "When we do get good people who come in, they very quickly get ground up by the dynamic and the culture of the parties. And once you get there, look at what it takes to stay there." He spoke of Charles Grassley, the Iowa Republican, who, nearing the end of his career, spent much of last year working closely with his friend Max Baucus on the health-care bill. Then, in August, Grassley went home and, faced with angry Republican voters and the prospect of a primary challenge from the right, started warning about "pulling the plug on Grandma." Ornstein added that similar pressures had led John McCain to begin "altering his behavior and abandoning every issue, including campaign-finance reform."

One morning in April, I visited Harry McPherson, the former L.B.J. aide, at the offices of the legal and lobbying firm D. L. A. Piper, in downtown Washington. McPherson, who is eighty, had on his desk the firm's spiral-bound directory for the 111th Congress. I asked him who, in Johnsonian terms, were the whales of the current Senate. McPherson ran his finger down the list of senators. He did it again. "I'm trying here, looking for a remote descendant. Judas Priest, look at this." He was stumped. "Well, I see some good people, I see some people who are going to get coalitions together over time." He put the directory aside. "I'm just having the damnedest time."

Down the hall from McPherson's office was that of Mel Martinez, a former Republican senator from Florida; he was hired last year, two weeks after resigning his Senate seat without completing his first term. (He has since moved on to JPMorgan Chase.) William Cohen, the former Maine senator and Secretary of Defense, has an office downstairs. Tom Daschle works at D. L. A. Piper; his predecessor as Democratic leader, George Mitchell, was the firm's chairman, until President Obama appointed him to be his Middle East envoy. One feature of the diminished U.S. senator is the ease with which he moves from legislating to lobbying. Between 1998 and 2004, half the senators who left office became lobbyists. In 2007, Trent Lott, a Republican leader in the Senate less than a year into his fourth term, abruptly resigned and formed a lobbying firm with former Senator John Breaux, just a few weeks before a new law took effect requiring a two-year waiting period between serving and lobbying.

When you spend your days at the Senate, it's easy to forget about everything else. The House of Representatives seems miles away (it's just down a corridor and across the rotunda), the White House is another country, and actual foreign countries are unimaginable. The place remains insular, labyrinthine, and opaque—even physically. Senators commute thirty seconds between their offices and the chamber by electric subway cars that run along a tunnel under Constitution Avenue. Many signs are misleading or obsolete (the gilded lettering over the visitors' gallery says "Men's Gallery"), and the Capitol is filled with secret passageways and spare rooms, called hideaways, doled out according to seniority, where senators can read, drink, doze, and wait for the buzzer announcing an imminent vote. The most pervasive authority over the institution is not the Constitution or the Bible but, rather, an impenetrable sixteen-hundred-page tome, by Floyd M. Riddick, called "Senate Procedure: Precedents and Practices," which only the late Robert Byrd, of West Virginia, was known to have read in its entirety. The procedures are so abstruse that a parliamentarian must sit below the presiding officer and, essentially, tell him or her what to say.

After half a century, the picture given by Preminger's "Advise and Consent" is still faintly visible. "The Senate, by its nature, is a place where consensus reigns and personal relationships are paramount," Lamar Alexander said. "And that's not changed." Which is exactly the problem: it's a self-governing body that depends on the reasonableness of its members to function. Sarah Binder, a congressional scholar at George Washington University, said, "To have a chamber that rules by unanimous consent—it's nutty! Especially when you've got Jim Bunning to please."

In 2006 and 2008, sixteen Democrats entered the Senate, giving the Party its current majority of fifty-nine to forty-one (counting two independents). They include moderates, like Jon Tester, of Montana, and Mark Warner, of Virginia; liberals, like Sherrod Brown, of Ohio, and Sheldon Whitehouse, of Rhode Island; policy specialists, like Amy Klobuchar, of Minnesota, and Jeff Merkley; and iconoclasts, like Claire McCaskill. Their interest in legislating has won the admiration of senior senators. "If they can stay, I think they'll be terrific," Chris Dodd said. "My worry is they won't stay. Because it's not productive."

The Democratic class of 2008 arrived with President Obama, expecting to usher in a dynamic new era. Instead, their young Senate careers have passed in a daily slog of threatened filibusters and "secret holds"—when a senator anonymously objects to bringing an appointment up for a vote, which requires unanimous consent. On April 20th, Claire McCaskill took the trouble to read off the names of fifty-six Obama nominees languishing in the limbo of secret holds, and Jon Kyl objected to every one of them. Just getting a bill to the floor for debate can require days of tactical gamesmanship between the party leaders. There were times when Warner wondered if anyone had ever quit in the first year. Michael Bennet said, "We find ourselves at a moment in our history when the questions are huge ones, not small ones, and where things have been put off for a really long period of time." He mentioned the national debt, energy policy, and the financial crisis. "Yet you have a Senate that's designed not to advance change but to slow it."

We were talking in his hideaway, a windowless room in the Capitol basement, which had a mini-fridge stocked with bottled water, black leatherette furniture circa 1962, and a TV tuned to C-SPAN2 on mute; Senator Kyl's mouth was moving. Bennet, the former superintendent of schools in Denver, was appointed to a vacant seat in 2009, and already has to defend it this year. He described the Senate with the dry bluntness of an outsider who hasn't allowed himself to grow too attached. Bennet repeated a story he had heard about a new congressman giving his maiden speech: "And then some more veteran guy came over and said, 'Son, you're talking like this place is on the level. It's not on the level.' As the fifteen months or so have gone by that I've been here, the less on the level it seems."

Earlier this year, the Senate's procedural absurdities became national news twice in one month. On February 4th, CongressDaily reported that Richard Shelby, an Alabama Republican, was secretly blocking the confirmation of seventy Obama appointees over a dispute involving defense earmarks for his state. (His tactics exposed, Shelby—whose office maintains that he was responsible for fewer than fifty holds—lifted all but three.) Later that month, Bunning spent several days and a late night on the Senate floor, filibustering to prevent benefits from being paid to millions of unemployed Americans. When Merkley tried to reason with him, Bunning responded, "Tough shit." (Eventually, Republicans persuaded Bunning to stop.)

These incidents elicited a brief outcry, but the extent of the Senate's routine folly remains largely hidden. For example, Grassley and Ron Wyden, of Oregon, have been trying since 1997 to end the practice of secret holds, without success. In 2007, the Senate passed a bill banning secret holds that last longer than six days. But to get around the ban two or more senators can pass the hold back and forth—it's called "rolling holds"—and their party leader facilitates the game by keeping their names secret.

Many of the Senate's antique rules and precedents have been warped beyond recognition by the modern pressures of partisanship. The hold, for example, was a courtesy extended to senators in the days of horse travel, when they needed time to get back to Washington and read a bill or question an appointee before casting their vote. Sarah Binder, who co-authored a book on the filibuster, calls the procedure a historical accident: in 1806, the Senate got rid of a little-used rule that allowed the "previous question" to be called to a vote. Suddenly, there was no inherent limit on debate, and by the eighteen-thirties senators had begun taking advantage of this loophole, derailing the proceedings by getting up and talking until their voice, legs, or bladder gave out. (The word "filibuster" comes from vrijbuiter—old Dutch for "looter.")

In 1917, Woodrow Wilson, with his wartime legislative agenda blocked by filibusters, forced the Senate to pass Rule XXII, which allowed a two-thirds majority to bring a floor debate to an end with a "cloture" vote. For decades, the rule was rarely used; between 1919 and 1971, there were only forty-nine cloture votes, fewer than one per year. In the seventies and eighties, the annual average rose to about a dozen. (Frustration with this increase led the Senate, in 1975, to lower the threshold for cloture to sixty votes.) In the nineties and early aughts, the average went up to twenty-five or thirty a year, as both parties escalated their use of the filibuster when they found themselves in the minority. After the Republicans lost their majority in 2006, filibusters became everyday events: there were a hundred and twelve cloture votes in 2007 and 2008, and this session Republicans are on target to break their own filibuster record.

The tally of cloture votes reflects only a small fraction of senatorial obstruction. Three hundred and forty-five bills passed by the House have been prevented from even coming up for debate in the Senate. "Why?" Steny Hoyer, the outraged Democratic Majority Leader of the House, asked me. "Because they do not do their business in a way that facilitates noncontroversial things. Thankfully, the House of Representatives is not becoming the Senate." Last week, six House Democrats expressed their displeasure with the upper chamber by staging a sit-in of sorts on the Senate floor.

Seventy-six nominees for judgeships and executive posts have been approved by committees but, because of blocks, haven't come up for a vote in the full Senate, leaving courtrooms idle and jobs unfilled across the upper levels of the Obama Administration. (The Democrats also practiced the art of blocking nominees during the Bush Administration.) There's often no objection to the individual being blocked: after an eight-month hold, Martha Johnson, nominated to run the General Services Administration, was confirmed 96–0. On an issue like health-care reform, when the objection was substantive, Republicans ransacked Riddick's "Senate Procedure" for every conceivable way to delay a debate and vote. Judd Gregg even sent a memo on stalling tactics to his Republican colleagues. Tom Coburn demanded the reading aloud of an entire seven-hundred-and-sixty-seven-page amendment proposed by Bernie Sanders, the Vermont socialist; Senate clerks, working in half-hour shifts, were three hours into the chore when Sanders withdrew the amendment in frustration.

Under McConnell, Republicans have consistently consumed as much of the Senate's calendar as possible with legislative maneuvering. The strategy is not to extend deliberation of the Senate's agenda but to prevent it. Tom Harkin, who first proposed reform of the filibuster in 1995, called his Republican colleagues "nihilists," who want to create chaos because it serves their ideology. "If there's chaos, things will tend toward simple solutions," Harkin said. "In chaos people don't listen to reason." McConnell did not respond to requests for an interview, but he has often argued that the Republican strategy reflects the views of a majority of Americans. In March, he told the Times, "To the extent that they"—the Democrats—"want to do things that we think are in the political center and would be helpful to the country, we'll be helpful. To the extent they are trying to turn us into a Western European country, we are not going to be helpful."

One of the mysteries of the Senate is how Mitch McConnell has been able to keep his members in line, on vote after vote. Why do moderates with years of experience and their own power base back home—Richard Lugar, of Indiana; Susan Collins, of Maine; George Voinovich, of Ohio—keep siding with the more extreme members of their caucus? Alexander said that McConnell listens well to all his members, adding, "When you have your back against the wall and the gallows are hanging in front of you, it tends to unify. Operating with forty members—it concentrates the mind."

Lindsey Graham described to the Times how McConnell exhorted his caucus after the disastrous 2008 election: "He said if we didn't stick together on big things, we wouldn't be relevant." Last December, the Republicans decided to filibuster a military-spending bill in order to delay the looming vote on health care until as close to Christmas as possible. Thad Cochran, the Republican ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, promised Daniel Inouye, the chairman, that he wouldn't join the effort. But at the last minute Cochran, who has been in the Senate since 1979 and brings disproportionate amounts of defense money to Mississippi, told Reid that his leadership wouldn't allow him to vote with the Democrats and end the filibuster—even on a matter of national security. (The Democrats were able to impose cloture, and the vote on health care finally took place on Christmas Eve.)

Republican defections have been rare. In early 2009, Collins and Olympia Snowe, also of Maine, voted for the stimulus bill, along with Arlen Specter (who promptly switched parties). Snowe also voted for the Finance Committee's health-care-reform bill last October, the only Republican to do so. But in December, at the pivotal moment, she voted against the version that went before the full Senate. "I wasn't interested in expanding this program beyond the Finance Committee version—it grew by a thousand pages," Snowe said. She wasn't included in the negotiations with White House officials that took place in an elegant conference room across from Reid's suite of offices, and said that the Democrats "did not accept any of my proposals. As I said to the President, it was all windup and no pitch." McConnell was able to exploit her alienation. A friend of Snowe cited another reason for her reversal: "She actually said to me once that she had never felt the pressure that she felt on health care, never before had that pressure been quite as evident to her or quite as real or troubling. Kyl and McConnell were saying things like 'You just can't let us down, we're all in this together. You're a senior Republican member of this caucus, and you just have to hang tough with us. We expect it and you're going to do it.' "

Reid doesn't use such tough tactics; he has achieved his position, in spite of his public shortcomings, by being the senator who helped other Democrats, always answered their calls, and got them what they wanted through masterly maneuvering. This has made him enormously popular within the Democratic caucus, but it doesn't give him the leverage of McConnell, let alone of Lyndon Johnson.

In the current Senate, it has become normal for a handful of senators, sometimes representing just ten or twenty per cent of the country's population, to hold everything up. And the status quo has become sufficiently frustrating that a few new senators have considered a radical option: mutiny.

Tom Udall, who is sixty-two, is older than most freshman senators. He has the crow's-feet of a Westerner who has spent time in the sun, and a slow, good-natured voice. His father, Stewart, was an Arizona congressman and the Interior Secretary for Presidents Kennedy and Johnson; his uncle Mo was a legendary Arizona representative; his cousin Mark is a freshman senator from Colorado. Udall served five terms in the House before winning a Senate seat from New Mexico, in 2008. And yet he has the air of a political Candide—he is always earnest, capable of disappointment but not cynicism. "I ran on the idea that the Senate should not be a graveyard for good ideas," he said. "Then to be on the inside—the thing that strikes you is how one senator can hold up the whole show."

In his first year in office, Udall decided to do something audacious: he would try to change the Senate's rules. Customarily, the rules continue session after session, and a provision in Rule XXII requires sixty-seven votes to amend them, making it extremely difficult. ("Rule XXII is a Catch-22," Ted Kennedy used to joke.) Udall embraced a different idea—the "constitutional option." Article I, Section 5 of the Constitution states that "each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings" at the beginning of the new Congress. So, in theory, a senator could take the floor next January and propose debating its rules from scratch, including the filibuster. New rules could be passed with a simple majority. There's even a precedent for this: moves to revisit the rules by invoking the constitutional option have been made three times, most recently in 1975. Udall has spent much of the past year trying to build support for the idea.

At the request of Udall and others, Schumer, who is the chairman of the Rules Committee, has held a series of hearings on the filibuster, calling witnesses such as Sarah Binder, the historian, and Walter Mondale, who was in the Senate when the constitutional option was invoked in 1975. Dick Durbin, the second-highest-ranking Democrat, has organized working groups among newer members on other internal reforms, such as ending secret holds and choosing committee chairs by caucus vote rather than by seniority. (Lamar Alexander wryly suggested to me that Schumer and Durbin were competing for the favor of newer members, in case Harry Reid loses his seat in the fall and they run against each other for Majority Leader.)

For Republican institutionalists, such as Alexander and Gregg, the push for rules reform is folly. "If you want a parliamentary form of government, go over to the House," Gregg, who is about to retire, scoffed. "Why even run for the Senate?" Udall's plan for next January, he said, would be a "gigantic mistake."

"They'll get over it," Alexander said of the Democrats' enthusiasm for rules reform. "And they'll get over it quicker if they're in the minority next January. Because they'll instantly see the value of slowing the Senate down to consider whatever they have to say." He added that the Senate "may be getting done about as much as the American people want done." The President's ambitious agenda, after all, has upset a lot of voters, across the political spectrum. None of the Republicans I spoke to agreed with the contention that the Senate is "broken." Alexander claimed that he and other Republicans were exercising the moderating, thoughtful influence on legislation that the founders wanted in the Senate. "The Senate wasn't created to be efficient," he argued. "It was created to be inefficient." At one of the filibuster hearings, in April, Alexander, sitting across the table from Udall, said that, for all the times the Democrats charge the Republicans with obstructing legislation, "we could say that's the number of times the majority has tried to cut off our right to debate, our right to offer amendments, which is the essence of the Senate."

Newcomers like Udall seem to think that the Senate has grown so absurd and extreme that some kind of reform is inevitable. Perhaps they need more time to plumb the depths of the institution's intransigence. According to Sarah Binder, a change in rules is extremely unlikely; Republicans would be implacably opposed to, say, weakening the filibuster, and so would some Democrats, especially long-serving ones. "I would oppose that," Chris Dodd said, adding of the freshmen, "These are people who have never been in the minority." For older Democrats, who have put in their years, grown adept at working the rules, and now chair powerful committees, the reform impulse could be a threat. (Among senior senators, the sole enthusiast for rules reform is Tom Harkin.) One senator spoke of the Senate as being divided not between whales and minnows but, rather, between bulls and calves. The older Democrats are too accustomed to the Senate's ways to share the frustrations of the newcomers; the handful of older moderate Republicans are too weak to challenge the newer radicals who now dominate the caucus.

Even if the freshmen Democrats can somehow reform the filibuster next January, the Senate will remain a sclerotic, wasteful, unhappy body. The deepest source of its problems is not rules and precedents but, rather, its human beings, who have created a culture where Tocqueville's "lofty thoughts" and "generous impulses" have no place.

A few days after passing health-care reform, the Senate struggled to its feet to take on a second large task. Financial regulatory reform should have been the easiest piece of major legislation of the Obama Presidency, the likeliest to win real bipartisan support. The financial crisis had been catastrophic for millions of Americans, and after the 2008 bailout Wall Street had become even more hated than the Senate was. In April, a lineup of bankers from Goldman Sachs appeared before Senator Levin's subcommittee on investigations, and managed to appear as arrogant, callous, and evasive as their reputations had suggested. The public demanded action. Some Republicans had a genuine desire to pass a bill. If health-care reform had been a war of attrition, financial reform was a promising liaison.

The affair began with a Republican, Bob Corker, and a Democrat, Mark Warner—both multimillionaires serving their first term, both considered centrists. Corker is a small, dapper former construction magnate who became the mayor of Chattanooga; Warner is a tall, preppily dressed former telecommunications entrepreneur who became the governor of Virginia. Chris Dodd, the Banking Committee chairman, assigned them to work together on the section of the bill having to do with the liquidation of troubled firms—making sure that there would never be another taxpayer bailout. They worked through the winter, in Warner's office, in Corker's office, over dinner, sometimes without staff, as if they were members of a Senate from the past. They hosted a series of afternoon seminars, inviting guests such as Ben Bernanke, Alan Greenspan, and Sheila Bair. Corker and Warner were sometimes said to be the only Democrat and Republican still talking to each other. In January, Business Week called them the Senate's "Odd Couple." By February, they had finished their work.

Meanwhile, discussions about the entire bill between Dodd and Richard Shelby, the top Republican on the committee, dragged on, repeatedly breaking down. Finally, on February 10th, Dodd called Corker, who, though he was one of the committee's junior members, agreed to be the chairman's Republican negotiating partner. When Corker informed McConnell and Shelby, they expressed surprise. "It was an odd place to be," Corker recalled. "And yet that night we began meeting." The junior Republican savored the rare experience of creating, rather than opposing, legislation. In response, Shelby's conservative staff tried to undermine Corker, spreading rumors among Republicans and their lobbyists that he was giving too much away. (A Shelby aide said that staff members were simply informing other Republicans of the Party's line on financial reform.)

On March 10th, Dodd concluded that he had to move a bill to the floor. He called Corker and said, "You've been a great partner." He was ending their talks after only a month. "It's a little stunning, I've got to be honest," Corker told reporters afterward. Someone close to the negotiations compared Corker to Dickens's Miss Havisham, unable to get over the rebuff, forever awaiting the arrival of her groom, all her clocks stopped. Corker later said that Dodd had ended the talks under pressure from the White House and other Democrats. Dodd said that Corker had been unable to bring any other Republicans with him. "Baloney," Corker said. "If Dodd had reached an agreement with me, we'd've had at least twenty-five Republican votes."

The bill that Dodd brought before the Senate, after a year of discussions with Democrats and Republicans alike, incorporated the bipartisan plan of Warner and Corker to prevent another bank bailout: setting up a fifty-billion-dollar fund, paid for by the banks, to insure orderly liquidation, and establishing a risk council to detect warning signs of another crisis. But in mid-April Mitch McConnell—who had just met with Wall Street executives in New York, and was now parroting talking points from a memo written by the Republican strategist Frank Luntz—called it a "partisan bill" that "will guarantee perpetual taxpayer bailout of Wall Street banks." McConnell presented a letter, signed by all forty-one Republicans, suggesting that they would filibuster the financial-reform bill.

His remarks amounted to a repudiation of Corker's work as well as of Dodd's. The next day, April 15th, Corker pleaded with his colleagues, in his Tennessee twang, "Let's come to the floor and let's act like adults. Let's tone down the rhetoric. Let's don't exaggerate the pluses or minuses. Let's do what the Senate was created to do. . . . We were supposed to be the people that took some of the red-hot activities that sometimes come from the other body and sat down with cooler heads and resolved the issues like adults. We can do that. As a matter of fact, I would say, if we cannot do that on financial regulation, an issue that really doesn't have any real philosophical bearings to it . . ." Corker didn't allow the thought to ripen—he had already gone farther than almost any Republican would have dared.

Dodd spoke later in the day and completed Corker's speech: "I know my friends on the other side of the aisle are faced with a difficult choice between supporting their party leadership and participating in this complicated, difficult debate. I am not naïve. I know that is a hard place to be. But if we can't act like U.S. senators for the sake of this issue . . . then why are we even here?" He went on, "We work for an American public that is sick and tired of feeling like no one is looking out for their interests, like the political hacks and lobbyists hold all the cards in these discussions. The minority seems intent on proving them right. . . . I have been here a long time. I know this institution is better than that. I know there are friends of mine on the other side of the aisle who care about this bill, who want to be a part of the debate, who want to be part of the solution."

In the same speech, Dodd joined the partisan fight, accusing McConnell of lying about the bill. Turning crimson-faced, he chopped the air with his hand as he shouted, "I have to ask myself, why did I go through this process over the last four or five months, agreeing to much of what they were offering, and there is not a single political vote to show for it. . . . I have to say to the younger members, the newer members coming along: be careful!"

Corker, having heard that Dodd was speaking, returned to the chamber and asked to respond. "You and I went a long way," Corker told Dodd. "Then we stopped. On March 10th it ended. I understand that, look, you were losing Democrats on your committee."

"And I was not gaining Republicans," Dodd replied.

"You had one, and that is all you asked for when you started. I never said I could speak for anybody but myself. And I did not leave the table." Corker urged Dodd to keep talking to Republicans—their differences could be sorted out in a few days.

But this was not McConnell's agenda. Instead, financial reform became a slightly more polite repeat of the health-care-reform brawl: the Republicans threatened filibusters, the Democrats threatened all-nighters, and thousands of lobbyists prowled the Capitol, charging their Wall Street clients more than a billion dollars. On April 28th, I was sitting in the ornate Reception Room with Jim Manley, Reid's spokesman. On the other side of the wall, there was the noise of furniture scraping across a tile floor. "Those are cots being set up in the L.B.J. Room," Manley said. "Very little happens around here without a deadline." The cots persuaded Republicans to allow the bill to move to the floor for debate. A few weeks later, on May 20th, yet another filibuster was defeated by yet another cloture motion, and financial reform finally came to a vote. It passed, 59–39. Only four Republicans had joined the majority. Corker wasn't among them. He had even voted for an amendment, offered by his Republican colleague Jeff Sessions, of Alabama, that would have scrapped Corker's work of many months with Warner.

"The idea of watching Bob Corker vote for the Sessions amendment!" Dodd said afterward, sitting in his red-curtained office, under a print of Holbein's portrait of Thomas More. "It's the Senate, I guess." McConnell's strategy of obstruction had once again come close to succeeding, Dodd said, but he knew that a "shrinking number" of Republicans were frustrated. The previous day, Dodd had said to Susan Collins, "God, I would have loved to have you as my ranking member on this." Collins responded, "We could have had such a great time on this bill."

Warner, who said that he believed in bipartisanship because "the American people don't trust either political party enough to give them a blank check," was astonished that so few Republicans voted for financial reform. "There was zero substantive reason why this couldn't have been eighty votes," he said. I asked him why Bob Corker had voted no on the bill. Warner started to talk about the consumer-protection title, and then said, "If you want to vote against something, you can always find your reasons."

But Corker hadn't seemed to want to vote against it. He had spent months trying to act like a U.S. senator, alienating himself from his own party and then the other party, and on the day of the vote he held the floor for the better part of thirty minutes, as if he were still reluctant to let the effort go. "I am obviously disappointed," he said. "I think I have spent as much time as any senator . . . on policy regarding our financial system. I think any bill—even this bill—has good things in it. There is no question. And I appreciate the thrust. But I think there is a lot of overreaching, and I think not enough time was spent on some of the core issues."

As the senators cast their votes, I noticed Robert Kaiser, the author of "So Damn Much Money," in the press gallery. I later asked him if, with the passage of two big reform bills in three months, we were witnessing a possible renewal of the Senate. "If you can engage public opinion in a way politicians can understand, public opinion can still blow away money and interest groups," he said. "But over the past few decades the reflex has grown in the Senate that, all things considered, it's better to avoid than to take on big issues. This is the kind of thing that drives Michael Bennet nutty: here you've arrived in the United States Senate and you can't do fuck-all about the destruction of the planet."

After the final vote on financial reform, the Republicans flew home, and the Democratic leaders held a press conference, smiling before the microphones outside the Senate chamber. Reid said, "For those who wanted to protect Wall Street, it didn't work." He then excused himself: he had to join Biden for a telephone fund-raiser with "some Nevadans."

Durbin said, "I was stunned that only four Republicans would join us in passing this historic legislation. What does it take to bring the Republican Party into the conversation about the future of America?"

Dodd, glowing with triumph, said, "I wanted to demonstrate that the Senate of the United States could conduct its business much as our founders intended. We did that."

On July 21st, President Obama signed the completed bill. The two lasting achievements of this Senate, financial regulation and health care, required a year and a half of legislative warfare that nearly destroyed the body. They depended on a set of circumstances—a large majority of Democrats, a charismatic President with an electoral mandate, and a national crisis—that will not last long or be repeated anytime soon. Two days after financial reform became law, Harry Reid announced that the Senate would not take up comprehensive energy-reform legislation for the rest of the year. And so climate change joined immigration, job creation, food safety, pilot training, veterans' care, campaign finance, transportation security, labor law, mine safety, wildfire management, and scores of executive and judicial appointments on the list of matters that the world's greatest deliberative body is incapable of addressing. Already, you can feel the Senate slipping back into stagnant waters.

ILLUSTRATION: STEVE BRODNER

- Print
- E-Mail
- Feeds

Share:

- Facebook
- Twitter
- Digg
- More

To get more of The New Yorker's signature mix of politics, culture and the arts: Subscribe now

Related Links

Ask the Author: Join a live chat with George Packer about the Senate on Wednesday, August 4, at 3 P.M. E.T.

Read more http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true#ixzz0vT1PYxi7

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, August 2, 2010 1:18 PM
To: H; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Shuttle

Yes they should have known.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Aug 02 13:17:23 2010
Subject: Shuttle

Did USSS know we're leaving at 3? They seemed surprised. Do they have tickets?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, August 2, 2010 1:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: fyi

Long New Yorker article on dysfunction of Senate
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Mon, 2 Aug 2010 13:35:29
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]
Subject: Re: fyi

What is this?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Mon Aug 02 12:37:28 2010
Subject: fyi

<http://w.ic.tynt.com/b/x/0?g=0vT1PYxi7&p=50&c=%20food%20safety%2C%20pilot%20training%2C%20veterans%E2%80%99%20care%2C%20campaign%20finance%2C%20transportation%20security%2C%20labor%20law%2C%20mine%20safety%2C%20wildfire%20management%2C%20and%20scores%20of%20executive%20and%20judicial%20appointments%20on%20the%20list%20of%20matters%20that%20the%20world%E2%80%99s%20greatest%20deliberative%20body%20is%20incapable%20of%20addressing.%20Already%2C%20you%20can%20feel%20the%20Senate%20slipping%20back%20into%20stagnant%20waters.%0D%0A%0D%0AILLUSTRATION%3A%20STEVE%20BRODNER%0D%0A%0D%0A%20%20%20%20*%20Print%0D%0A%20%20%20%20*%20E-Mail%0D%0A%20%20%20%20*%20Feeds%0D%0A%0D%0AShare%3A%0D%0A%0D%0A%20%20%20%20*%20Facebook%0D%0A%20%20%20%20*%20Twitter%0D%0A%20%20%20%20*%20Digg%0D%0A%20%20%20%20*%20More%0D%0A%0D%0ATo%20get%20more%20of%20The%20New%20Yorker%27s%20signature%20mix%20of%20politics%2C%20culture%20and%20the%20arts%3A%20Subscribe%20now%0D%0ARelated%20Links%0D%0A%0D%0A%20%20%20%20Ask%20the%20Author%3A%20Join%20a%20live>

Go Back <javascript:history.go(-1)>

Print this page <javascript:window.print();>

The New Yorker <http://www.newyorker.com/>

Skip to content <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true#content>

Subscribe to The New Yorker
<https://magazine.newyorker.com/ecom/subscribe.jsp?oppId=5400134&tgt=/atg/registry/RepositoryTargeters/NYR/NYR_global_headerCallout&placementId=5500001&logOppId=true&placementGroupId=>

Subscribe to The New Yorker
<https://magazine.newyorker.com/ecom/subscribe.jsp?oppId=5400134&tgt=/atg/registry/RepositoryTargeters/NYR/NYR_global_header&placementId=5400006&logOppId=true&placementGroupId=>

<http://www.newyorker.com/images/ecom/failsafe/NYR_global_header.gif>

The Political Scene

The Empty Chamber

Just how broken is the Senate?

Seventy-six nominees for judgeships and executive posts have been approved by committees but, because of blocks, haven't come up for a vote in the full Senate, leaving courtrooms idle and jobs unfilled across the upper levels of the Obama Administration....
The tally of cloture votes reflects only a small fraction of senatorial obstruction. Three hundred and forty-five bills passed by the House have been prevented from even coming up for debate in the Senate....

by George Packer
<http://www.newyorker.com/magazine/bios/george_packer/search?contributorName=george%20packer> August 9, 2010

Text Size:
Small Text <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true#>
Medium Text <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true#>
Large Text <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true#>

Print <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true> E-Mail
<http://www.newyorker.com/contact/emailFriend?referringPage=http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer&title=Filibusters%20and%20arcane%20obstructions%20in%20the%20Senate> Feeds
<http://www.newyorker.com/services/rss/summary?selectedFeeds=everything,%20reporting,%20content_reporting,%20topic_politics,topic_politics>

"Sit and watch us for seven days," one senator says of the deadlocked chamber. "You know what you'll see happening? Nothing."

"This is just one of those days when you want to throw up your hands and say, 'What in the world are we doing?' " Senator Claire McCaskill, the Missouri Democrat, said.
"It's unconscionable," Carl Levin, the senior Democratic senator from Michigan, said. "The obstructionism has become mindless."
The Senators were in the Capitol, sunk into armchairs before the marble fireplace in the press lounge, which is directly behind the Senate chamber. It was four-thirty on a Wednesday afternoon. McCaskill, in a matching maroon jacket and top, looked exasperated; Levin glowered over his spectacles.
"Also, it's a dumb rule in itself," McCaskill said. "It's time we started looking at some of these rules."

She was referring to Senate Rule XXVI, Paragraph 5, which requires unanimous consent for committees and subcommittees to hold hearings after two in the afternoon while the Senate is in session. Both Levin and McCaskill had scheduled hearings that day for two-thirty. Typically, it wouldn't be difficult to get colleagues to waive the rule; a general and an admiral had flown halfway around the world to appear before Levin's Armed Services Committee, and McCaskill's Subcommittee on Contracting Oversight of the Homeland Security Committee was investigating the training of Afghan police. But this was March 24th, the day after President Barack Obama signed the health-care-reform bill, in a victory ceremony at the White House; it was also the day that the Senate was to vote on a reconciliation bill for health-care reform, approved by the House three nights earlier, which would retroactively remove the new law's most embarrassing sweetheart deals and complete the yearlong process of passing universal health care. Republicans, who had fought the bill as a bloc, were in no mood to make things easy.

So, four hours earlier, when Levin went to the Senate floor and asked for consent to hold his hearing, Senator Richard Burr, Republican of North Carolina, and a member of Levin's committee, had refused. "I have no personal objection to continuing," Burr said. But, he added, "there is objection on our side of the aisle. Therefore, I would have to object."

Burr had to object on behalf of his party because he was the only Republican in the chamber when Levin spoke. In general, when senators give speeches on the floor, their colleagues aren't around, and the two or three who might be present aren't listening. They're joking with aides, or e-mailing Twitter ideas to their press secretaries, or getting their first look at a speech they're about to give before the eight unmanned cameras that provide a live feed to C-SPAN2. The presiding officer of the Senate—freshmen of the majority party take rotating, hour-long shifts intended to introduce them to the ways of the institution—sits in his chair on the dais, scanning his BlackBerry or reading a Times article about the Senate. Michael Bennet, a freshman Democrat from Colorado, said, "Sit and watch us for seven days—just watch the floor. You know what you'll see happening? Nothing. When I'm in the chair, I sit there thinking, I wonder what they're doing in China right now?"

Between speeches, there are quorum calls, time killers in which a Senate clerk calls the roll at the rate of one name every few minutes. The press gallery, above the dais, is typically deserted, as journalists prefer to hunker down in the press lounge, surfing the Web for analysis of current Senate negotiations; television screens alert them if something of interest actually happens in the chamber. The only people who pay attention to a speech are the Senate stenographers. On this afternoon, two portly bald men in suits stood facing the speaker from a few feet away, tapping at the transcription machines, which resembled nineteenth-century cash registers, slung around their necks. The Senate chamber is an intimate room where men and women go to talk to themselves for the record.

Like many other aspects of senatorial procedure, Rule XXVI, Paragraph 5 is a relic from the days when senators had to hover around their desks to know what was happening on the floor during the main afternoon debate. (The desks, some built as long ago as 1819, are mahogany, and their lids lift up, like those in an old schoolhouse; the desks of the Majority and Minority Leader are still equipped with brass spittoons.) In the press lounge, McCaskill said, with light sarcasm, "Somebody told me the rule is to make sure people pay attention to what's happening on the floor during debate and not be distracted by committee work. Clearly, it's an old rule."

The Republicans had turned this old rule into a new means of obstruction. There would be no hearings that afternoon; the general and the admiral would have to come back another day. Like investment bankers on Wall Street, senators these days direct much of their creative energy toward the manipulation of arcane rules and loopholes, scoring short-term successes while magnifying their institution's broader dysfunction.

Around five o'clock, the chamber began to fill, as the reconciliation bill came up for a vote; there were twenty-three amendments pending, all from Republicans, and perhaps many more to come. Ordinarily, debate and voting on an amendment might take two legislative days, but under the rules of the reconciliation bill the senators were to dispatch the amendments one after another, as in a hot-dog-eating contest, with a minute of debate for each side. The goal was to finish the bill by the end of the evening, so that senators wouldn't miss a day of their spring recess—apparently, the only thing worse than a government takeover of the health-care system. The usual longueurs of the Senate, where forty minutes can tick away on the antique clock above the rear double doors without a word's being spoken, were about to yield to a frenzy. Harry Reid, the Majority Leader, from Nevada, had predicted that the process, known as Vote-O-Rama, would go past two in the morning, and had warned senators to stay close to the chamber.

Max Baucus, of Montana, the manager of the bill for the Democrats, rose and said, "This is the first time in recent memory that a reconciliation bill has all the amendments on one side only. These are clearly amendments designed to kill the reconciliation and, therefore, kill health-care reform. So I very much hope that all of these amendments are defeated."

Tall, gaunt Judd Gregg, of New Hampshire, the bill's Republican manager, took the floor. "The position on the other side of the aisle is: no amendments allowed, even if they are good," he said. Indignation rouged his cheeks, and his voice rose half an octave. "Obviously, they presume the Republican Party is an inconvenience. The democratic process is an inconvenience. It also appears, considering the opposition to this out in America, that the American people are an inconvenience."

The Senate chamber is laid out in four concentric semicircles, with adjacent desks almost touching on the crowded Democratic side, and the desks of the much smaller Republican minority spaced loosely apart. The design is meant to emphasize the senators' unity. But Baucus and Gregg avoided eye contact across the six feet of aisle that now divides the chamber into two constantly warring factions. Senators are required, by custom, to speak of one another in the third person, directing their anger and sarcasm through whichever poor freshman happens to be the presiding officer at the moment. Rule XIX, Paragraphs 2 and 3—one of the original rules drawn from Thomas Jefferson's "Manual of Parliamentary Practice"—bars senators from imputing unworthy conduct or motives to another senator, and from insulting any senator's state. But there is no rule against finger-wagging, and Baucus wagged his at Gregg while shouting at Al Franken, of Minnesota, who had started a shift in the presiding officer's chair: "Mr. President, make no mistake, the intent of every single one of the amendments offered on the other side of the aisle is to kill health-care reform. . . . A senator on the other side of the aisle stood up and said that this is hopefully the President's Waterloo. They want to kill health-care reform!"

The voice of Stuart Smalley filled the chamber: "The time of the senator has expired."

For the next nine hours, the chamber became the stage of a theatrical whose ending, like almost everything that happens on the Senate floor, was known in advance to all. The Republican goal in Vote-O-Rama was to embarrass the Democrats while appearing to suggest useful changes; the Democratic goal was to prevent any change to the bill, so that it wouldn't have to return to the House, where it might be voted down. Several of the Republican amendments had been designed to make Democrats look hypocritical, by forcing them to vote against policies that the Party typically supports. One amendment, for example, declared that the health-care bill could not be linked to a tax hike on individuals making less than two hundred thousand dollars a year. Other amendments were more nakedly partisan, and outlandish. David Vitter, a Louisiana Republican, proposed an amendment that repealed the entire law. Senator Tom Coburn, a Republican obstetrician from Oklahoma, introduced an amendment to insure that veterans diagnosed with mental illness would not be denied the right to own firearms, and another to prevent "convicted child molesters, rapists, and sex offenders" from buying erectile-dysfunction drugs with taxpayer funds. Coburn got through the minute he was allotted to explain his Viagra amendment without cracking a smile. "This is not a game amendment," he insisted. "It actually saves money."

So many senators snickered that the presiding officer banged his gavel for order.

"The amendment offered by the senator from Oklahoma makes a mockery of this Senate," Baucus declared. "It is a crass political stunt aimed at making thirty-second commercials, not public policy." Baucus asked for the yeas and nays, and a clerk called the roll at a ragged pace. "Mr. Coburn, Mr. Cochran, Ms. Collins." Thirty-five-second pause. "Mr. Conrad, Mr. Corker." Ten seconds. "Mr. Cornyn." Senators pay no attention to the sound of their name; they cast votes when they're so inclined—wandering in late, shuffling down the chamber's gentle blue-carpeted steps to the swarm of colleagues milling about in the well, where the clerks sit at a table, and then holding a finger up or down. At one point, John McCain—now just one of a hundred senators and struggling to stay in office—spent half a minute waving stiff-armed, trying to catch the eye of a clerk so he could cast his vote. In the end, two Democrats—Evan Bayh, of Indiana, and Ben Nelson, of Nebraska—joined the Republicans in opposing Viagra for sex offenders. The amendment was defeated.

The carpeting in the chamber absorbs voices, and during the long night one of the few that rose above the muffled drone was that of Charles Schumer, who said to Gregg, "Get to work! Stop screwing around with health care!"

Sporadically, a sharp cackle emanated from Al Franken, who wandered the chamber, looking for Republicans he could charm into laughing. Observed from the press gallery, the senators in their confined space began to resemble zoo animals—Levin a shambling brown bear, John Thune a loping gazelle, Jim Bunning a maddened grizzly. Each one displayed a limited set of behaviors: in conversations, John Kerry planted himself a few inches away, loomed, and clamped his hands down on a colleague's shoulders. Joe Lieberman patted everyone on the back. It became clear which senators were loners (Russ Feingold, Daniel Akaka) and which were social (Blanche Lincoln, Lindsey Graham); which senators were important (Dick Durbin, Jon Kyl) and which were ignored (Bayh, Bunning).

Past midnight, Durbin slumped at his desk, one hand over his face, yawning painfully. Susan Collins was going through her mail. Twenty-three amendments had been voted down, and the Republicans were proposing a fresh batch. "Can we get some order?" Bunning growled, before he introduced a proposal to let senior citizens opt out of parts of Medicare. It was the only amendment that any Republicans joined the Democrats to defeat.

Harry Reid controls the Senate's schedule, but Mitch McConnell, of Kentucky, who is the Minority Leader, can object. Since nearly everything in the Senate depends on unanimous consent, the main business of the place is a continuous negotiation between these two supremely unsentimental men. That night, they played a game of chicken: McConnell, unsmiling, his eyes riveted ahead, held out the prospect of dozens more amendments; Reid, a former boxer, was hunched and mumbling, playing rope-a-dope, vowing to fend off amendments all night. The two leaders left the chamber to confer privately about how to proceed. Inside, the atmosphere of a slumber party set in. Debbie Stabenow, of Michigan, her hand across her heart, sang a sentimental duet with Robert Menendez, of New Jersey. Exhaustion momentarily eased the partisan divide. Claire McCaskill sat down beside Tom Coburn, held up an erect finger in his face, as if casting her Viagra vote, then let it go limp. Coburn could be heard to joke, "The longest it lasted was thirty seconds."

At two-forty-five in the morning, Reid suddenly declared the Senate adjourned. The Senate parliamentarian had just found two small violations of the reconciliation rules, meaning that in the morning, despite the Democrats' efforts, the bill would go back to the House for another vote. At the bang of the gavel, the senators fled. In the parking lot, on the Capitol's northeast side, McCaskill climbed into her S.U.V. Levin, in a cramped sedan, was chauffeured off into the empty streets. On a marble ledge near the exit, Arlen Specter sat alone, a ghost in a brown suit, staring straight ahead, as if waiting for someone to take him away.

The Senate reconvened at 9:45 A.M. Around two in the afternoon, the members gathered for the final vote, and the Democrats were giddy. Tom Harkin, of Iowa, and Christopher Dodd, of Connecticut, even exchanged a hug. "Everyone's tired," Reid declared before the final vote. "This legislative fight is one for the record books." He was so fatigued that he initially voted the wrong way. Lindsey Graham came in late, delaying the tally by ten minutes. "Way to go, Lindsey, way to stretch it out," Sam Brownback told him. A few Republicans lingered and took in the moment, like players on the losing team at the end of the World Series. After a year of work, health-care reform had passed, 56–43, and for a moment the chamber's Tweeting pygmies had become legislative giants.

The Senate is often referred to as "the world's greatest deliberative body." Jeff Merkley, a freshman Democrat from Oregon, said, "That is a phrase that I wince each time I hear it, because the amount of real deliberation, in terms of exchange of ideas, is so limited." Merkley could remember witnessing only one moment of floor debate between a Republican and a Democrat. "The memory I took with me was: 'Wow, that's unusual—there's a conversation occurring in which they're making point and counterpoint and challenging each other.' And yet nobody else was in the chamber." Tom Udall, a freshman Democrat from New Mexico, could not recall seeing a senator change another senator's mind. "You would really need a good hour or two of extensive exchange among folks that really know the issue," he said. Instead, a senator typically gives "a prepared speech that's already been vetted through the staff. Then another guy gets up and gives a speech on a completely different subject." From time to time, senators of the same party carry on a colloquy—"I would be interested in the distinguished senator from Iowa's view of the other side's Medicare Advantage plan"—that has been scripted in advance by aides.

While senators are in Washington, their days are scheduled in fifteen-minute intervals: staff meetings, interviews, visits from lobbyists and home-state groups, caucus lunches, committee hearings, briefing books, floor votes, fund-raisers. Each senator sits on three or four committees and even more subcommittees, most of which meet during the same morning hours, which helps explain why committee tables are often nearly empty, and why senators drifting into a hearing can barely sustain a coherent line of questioning. All this activity is crammed into a three-day week, for it's an unwritten rule of the modern Senate that votes are almost never scheduled for Mondays or Fridays, which allows senators to spend four days away from the capital. Senators now, unlike those of several decades ago, often keep their families in their home states, where they return most weekends, even if it's to Alaska or Idaho—a concession to endless fund-raising, and to the populist anti-Washington mood of recent years. (When Newt Gingrich became Speaker of the House, in 1995, he told new Republican members not to move their families to the capital.) Tom Daschle, the former Democratic leader, said, "When we scheduled votes, the only day where we could be absolutely certain we had all one hundred senators there was Wednesday afternoon."

Nothing dominates the life of a senator more than raising money. Tom Harkin, the Iowa Democrat, said, "Of any free time you have, I would say fifty per cent, maybe even more," is spent on fund-raising. In addition to financing their own campaigns, senators participate at least once a week in the Power Hour, during which they make obligatory calls on behalf of the Party (in the Democrats' case, from a three-story town house across Constitution Avenue from the Senate office buildings, since they're barred from using their own offices to raise money). Lamar Alexander, the Tennessee

Republican, insisted that the donations are never sufficient to actually buy a vote, but he added, "It sucks up time that a senator ought to be spending getting to know other senators, working on issues."

In June, 2009, top aides to Max Baucus, whose Finance Committee was negotiating the health-care-reform bill, took time to meet with two health-care lobbyists, who themselves were former Baucus aides. (Baucus received more than a million dollars from the industry for his 2008 reëlection campaign.) That month, according to Common Cause, industry groups were spending $1.4 million a day to lobby members of Congress. Udall, speaking of the corrosive effect of fund-raising and lobbying, said, "People know it in their heart—they know this place is dominated by special interests. The over-all bills are not nearly as bold because of the influence of money."

Daschle sketched a portrait of the contemporary senator who is too busy to think: "Sometimes, you're dialling for dollars, you get the call, you've got to get over to vote, you've got fifteen minutes. You don't have a clue what's on the floor, your staff is whispering in your ears, you're running onto the floor, then you check with your leader—you double check—but, just to make triple sure, there's a little sheet of paper on the clerk's table: The leader recommends an aye vote, or a no vote. So you've got all these checks just to make sure you don't screw up, but even then you screw up sometimes. But, if you're ever pressed, 'Why did you vote that way?'—you just walk out thinking, Oh, my God, I hope nobody asks, because I don't have a clue."

Aides, at the elbows of senators as they shuttle between their offices and the Capitol, have proliferated over the past few decades, and they play a crucial role. Lamar Alexander, who has an office of fifty people, pointed out that staff members, who are younger and often more ideological than their bosses, and less dependent on institutional relationships, tend to push senators toward extremes. Often, aides are the main actors behind proposed legislation—writing bills, negotiating the details—while the senator is relegated to repeating talking points on Fox or MSNBC.

One day in his office, Udall picked up some tabloids from his coffee table and waved them at me. "You know about all these rags that cover the Hill, right?" he said, smiling. There are five dailies—Politico, The Hill, Roll Call, CongressDaily, and CQ Today—all of which emphasize insider conflict. The senators, who like to complain about the trivializing effect of the "24/7 media," provide no end of fodder for it. The news of the day was what Udall called a "dust-up" between Scott Brown, the freshman Massachusetts Republican, and a staffer for Jim DeMint, the arch-conservative from South Carolina; the staffer had Tweeted that Brown was voting too often with the Democrats, leading Brown to confront DeMint on the Senate floor over this supposed breach of protocol. Bloggers carry so much influence that many senators have a young press aide dedicated to the care and feeding of online media. News about, by, and for a tiny kingdom of political obsessives dominates the attention of senators and staff, while stories that might affect their constituents go unreported because their home-state papers can no longer afford to have bureaus in Washington. Dodd, who came to the Senate in 1981 and will leave next January, told me, "I used to have eleven Connecticut newspaper reporters who covered me on a daily basis. I don't have one today, and haven't had one in a number of years. Instead, D.C. publications only see me through the prism of conflict." Lamar Alexander described the effect as "this instant radicalizing of positions to the left and the right."

Both Alexander and Gregg said that the Senate had been further polarized by the rising number of senators—now nearly fifty—who come from the House, rather than from governorships or other positions where bipartisan coöperation is still permissible. "A lot of senators don't understand the history or tradition of the institution," Gregg said. "Substantive, thoughtful, moderate discussion is pushed aside."

Encumbered with aides, prodded by hourly jolts from electronic media, racing from the hearing room to the caucus lunch to the Power Hour to the airport, senators no longer have the time, or perhaps the inclination, to get to know one another—least of all, members of the other party. Friendships across party lines are more likely among the few spouses who live in Washington. After Udall joined the Senate, last year, he was invited to dinner by Alexander, because Jill Cooper Udall and Honey Alexander had become friends through a women's social club. It remains the only time Udall has set foot in the house of a Republican senator. (Vice-President Joe Biden, in his autobiography, recalls that, in the seventies, a bipartisan group of senators and their wives hosted a monthly dinner: "In those days Democrats and Republicans actually enjoyed each other's company.") When I asked Chris Dodd how well he knew, for example, Jim DeMint, Dodd said, "Not at all. Whereas Jesse Helms and I knew each other pretty well." He repeated something that Jon Kyl, the Republican whip, from Arizona, had recently said to him: "There's no trust." Dodd, whose father was a senator, went on, "That's really all there is—this place really operates on that. I don't think anyone would argue with that conclusion. And if that's missing . . . "

There remains a veneer—badly chipped—of comity. On the floor, senators still refer to members of the opposing party as "friends." Gregg described Kent Conrad, a Democrat from North Dakota, as "one of my best friends in the Senate," and both Gregg and Alexander ticked off examples of little-known legislation that they are currently working on with

Democrats; Alexander and Ben Cardin, of Maryland, have introduced a bill to ban mountaintop-removal coal mining. Udall noted that he had become friendly with John McCain when they went on a congressional tour of Iraq. But opportunities to bond are rare. On the first floor of the Capitol, there is a private dining room for senators, the "inner sanctum," where Republicans and Democrats used to have lunch (at separate tables, but in the same room). In the seventies, old bulls such as James Eastland, Hubert Humphrey, and Jacob Javits held court there; later, Daniel Patrick Moynihan did. "You learned, and also you found out what was going on," Dodd said, adding, "It's awfully difficult to say crappy things about someone that you just had lunch with." These days, the inner sanctum is nearly always empty. Senators eat lunch in their respective caucus rooms with members of their party, or else "downtown," which means asking donors for money over steak and potatoes at the Monocle or Charlie Palmer. The tradition of the "caucus lunch" was instituted by Republicans in the fifties, when they lost their majority; Democrats, after losing theirs in 1980, followed suit. Caucus lunches work members on both sides into a state of pep-rally fervor. During one recent Republican lunch, Jim Bunning referred to Harry Reid as an idiot. "At least he had the courtesy to do it behind closed doors," Alexander joked, adding, "We spend most of our time in team meetings deciding what we're going to do to each other." In 2007, Alexander and Lieberman started a series of bipartisan Tuesday breakfasts. "They kind of dwindled off during the health-care debate," Alexander said. Udall has tried to revive the Wednesday inner-sanctum lunch. For the first few months, only Democrats attended. Then, one Wednesday in May, Susan Collins, the Maine Republican, showed up, joking nervously about being a turncoat; to protect her reputation, her presence was kept secret.

These efforts at resurrecting dead customs are as self-conscious and, probably, as doomed as the get-togethers of lovers who try to stay friends after a breakup. Ira Shapiro, a Washington lawyer and a former aide to Senator Gaylord Nelson, of Wisconsin, put it this way: "Why would they want to have lunch together when they hate each other?"

The upper chamber of Congress was a constitutional compromise between popular sovereignty and state sovereignty. The Senate was designed, as part of the separation of powers, to check the impulses of the House and the popular will. For some Federalists, it also had an aristocratic purpose: to collect knowledge and experience, and to guard against a levelling spirit that might overtake the majority. When Alexis de Tocqueville visited the Senate, in 1832, he was deeply impressed by the quality of its members: "They represent only the lofty thoughts [of the nation] and the generous instincts animating it, not the petty passions." But he also recognized that "a minority of the nation dominating the Senate could completely paralyze the will of the majority represented in the other house, and that is contrary to the spirit of constitutional government." As long as the Senate continued to be composed of America's most talented statesmen, Tocqueville implied, it would restrain its own anti-democratic potential.

Robert A. Caro, in "Master of the Senate," the third volume of his life of Lyndon Johnson, argues that after the Civil War the Senate was captured by wealthy and sectional interests, ending a more high-minded age when Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, and John C. Calhoun engaged in brilliant debate. Aside from spasms of legislation at the start of the Presidencies of Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Roosevelt, Caro writes, the Senate remained controlled by an alliance of Southern racists and Republican corporate shills, and was "the dam against which the waves of social reform dashed themselves in vain—the chief obstructive force in the federal government." By the fifties, the Senate had become far more conservative than the public. And not just conservative: William S. White, in his 1956 book "Citadel," called the Senate "to a most peculiar degree, a Southern Institution . . . growing at the heart of this ostensibly national assembly" and "the only place in the country where the South did not lose the war."

By mid-century, it had become a journalistic cliché to call the Senate broken. Otto Preminger's 1962 film "Advise and Consent," based on the novel by Allen Drury, is about the Senate of that period, and it presents Democrats and Republicans as equally amoral, calculating, and power-hungry. But the institution, as depicted by Preminger, still works, in its way: though the deals stink, they get cut. The senators know their colleagues and the rules; they back-stab one another in the lunchroom, then drink cocktails and play cards on Saturday nights. There are no lobbyists, no fund-raisers, no media, no constituents—only senators' intricate relations with one another. The Senate is its own world.

In a memoir, Johnson's longtime aide Harry McPherson recalls learning that the Senate's "famous 'club' atmosphere is based on the members' mutual acceptance of responsibility and concentration on the tasks at hand. . . . They thrust hard at one another in debate over serious matters," but, he writes, "understanding and accommodation in the ordinary course of the Senate day was essential to sanity." Johnson, the most powerful Majority Leader in history, bent the Senate to his will and forced it to become more efficient. He saw his colleagues as either "whales"—the heavyweight chairmen who negotiated legislation—or "minnows," the followers who went along with the brokered deals. And when, in 1958, a formidable new class of liberal Democrats entered the Senate—including Edmund Muskie, Eugene McCarthy, and Philip Hart—the legislative machinery began to produce reform. Michael Janeway, the author of "The Fall of the House of Roosevelt," worked as a summer staff member between 1958 and 1962. "They used to talk to each other—that's my most vivid recollection," he said. "If Wayne Morse talked of constitutional law on the floor, the Southerners would come in to hear him. The same with Hubert Humphrey on farm policy. My strongest impression was of it being a deliberative body, drawing each other out—sometimes pedantically." Senators who ran for office in order to work on foreign policy, social welfare, or urbanization had to win credibility with the whales. "But if you wanted to do something there was a mechanism by which you could do it," Janeway said.

In the sixties and seventies, Southern-conservative control was broken by a coalition of left-of-center Democrats and moderate Republicans. Donald Ritchie, the Senate historian, who started working there in 1976, described the Senate of those decades as "a bipartisan liberal institution." The Civil Rights Act of 1964 was written largely out of the office of the Republican Minority Leader, Everett Dirksen. Every major initiative—voting rights, open housing, environmental law, campaign reform—enjoyed bipartisan support. In the rare event of a filibuster, the motion to end debate was often filed jointly by leaders of both parties. When Medicare—that government takeover of health care for the elderly—was passed, in 1965, it won 70–24.

The Senate's momentum nurtured superb talent: William Fulbright, Everett Dirksen, Henry Jackson, Frank Church, Howard Baker. In 1969, George McGovern chaired a select committee on hunger that actually held bipartisan "field hearings" in poor regions, calling witnesses in migrant labor camps, and then, with Bob Dole's indispensable support, greatly expanded the food-stamp program. The intensity of senatorial purpose in those years must strike today's legislators as profoundly humbling. After Joe Biden came to the Senate, in 1973, Hubert Humphrey took him aside and said, "You have to pick an issue that becomes yours. That's how you attract your colleagues to follow you, Joe. That's how you demonstrate your bona fides. Don't be a gadfly." Humphrey's career advice: "You should become Mr. Housing. Housing is the future."

The Senate's modern decline began in 1978, with the election of a new wave of anti-government conservatives, and accelerated as Republicans became the majority in 1981. "The Quayle generation came in, and there were a number of people just like Dan—same generation, same hair style, same beliefs," Gary Hart, the Colorado Democrat, recalled. "They were harder-line. They weren't there to get along with Democrats. But they look accommodationist compared to Republicans in the Senate today." Church, McGovern, Javits, and Birch Bayh were gone. Ira Shapiro, the former aide, who is writing a book about the Senate of the sixties and seventies, said, "It was a huge loss of the most experienced, accomplished senators being replaced by neophytes. All of a sudden, in 1981, more than half the Senate had been there less than six years." He added, "The shattering of the great Senate has long-term effects that keep showing up. It gets worse over time, but it just never gets restored. There was a phrase I heard from Helms and the younger ones: 'Others didn't want to make waves; I wanted to drain the swamp.' "

After C-SPAN went on the air, in 1979, the cozy atmosphere that encouraged both deliberation and back-room deals began to yield to transparency and, with it, posturing. "So Damn Much Money," a recent book by the Washington Post reporter Robert G. Kaiser, traces the spectacular rise of Washington lobbying to the same period. Liberal Republicans began to disappear, and as Southern Democrats died out they were replaced by conservative Republicans. Bipartisan coalitions on both wings of the Senate vanished. The institutionalist gave way to the free agent, who controlled his own fund-raising apparatus and media presence, and whose electoral base was a patchwork of single-issue groups. Members of both parties—Howard Metzenbaum, the Ohio Democrat; Jesse Helms, the North Carolina Republican—took to regularly using the Senate's rules to tie up business for narrowly ideological reasons. The number of filibusters shot up in the eighties and continued to rise in the following decades, as the parties kept alternating control of the Senate and escalating a procedural arms race, routinely blocking the confirmation of executive and judicial appointees. Democrats filibustered Republican nominees to the bench; then Republicans threatened to ban the filibuster in such cases—the so-called "nuclear option." Older members were perturbed when, in 2004, the Republican Majority Leader, Bill Frist, went to South Dakota to campaign against the Democratic Minority Leader, Tom Daschle (who went on to lose). A few years earlier, such an action would have been unthinkable.

The weakened institution could no longer withstand pressures from outside its walls; as money and cameras rushed in, independent minds fell more and more in line with the partisans. Rough parity between the two parties meant that every election had the potential to make or break a majority, crushing the incentive to coöperate across the aisle. The Senate, no longer a fount of ideas, became a backwater of the U.S. government. During the Clinton years, the main action was between the White House and the Gingrich House of Representatives; during the Bush years, the Republican Senate majority abdicated the oversight role that could have placed a vital check on executive power.

Norman Ornstein, a congressional expert at the American Enterprise Institute, said that the Senate has increasingly become populated by "ideologues and charlatans." He went on, "When we do get good people who come in, they very quickly get ground up by the dynamic and the culture of the parties. And once you get there, look at what it takes to stay there." He spoke of Charles Grassley, the Iowa Republican, who, nearing the end of his career, spent much of last year working closely with his friend Max Baucus on the health-care bill. Then, in August, Grassley went home and, faced with angry Republican voters and the prospect of a primary challenge from the right, started warning about "pulling the plug on Grandma." Ornstein added that similar pressures had led John McCain to begin "altering his behavior and abandoning every issue, including campaign-finance reform."

One morning in April, I visited Harry McPherson, the former L.B.J. aide, at the offices of the legal and lobbying firm D. L. A. Piper, in downtown Washington. McPherson, who is eighty, had on his desk the firm's spiral-bound directory for the 111th Congress. I asked him who, in Johnsonian terms, were the whales of the current Senate. McPherson ran his finger down the list of senators. He did it again. "I'm trying here, looking for a remote descendant. Judas Priest, look at this." He was stumped. "Well, I see some good people, I see some people who are going to get coalitions together over time." He put the directory aside. "I'm just having the damnedest time."

Down the hall from McPherson's office was that of Mel Martinez, a former Republican senator from Florida; he was hired last year, two weeks after resigning his Senate seat without completing his first term. (He has since moved on to JPMorgan Chase.) William Cohen, the former Maine senator and Secretary of Defense, has an office downstairs. Tom Daschle works at D. L. A. Piper; his predecessor as Democratic leader, George Mitchell, was the firm's chairman, until President Obama appointed him to be his Middle East envoy. One feature of the diminished U.S. senator is the ease with which he moves from legislating to lobbying. Between 1998 and 2004, half the senators who left office became lobbyists. In 2007, Trent Lott, a Republican leader in the Senate less than a year into his fourth term, abruptly resigned and formed a lobbying firm with former Senator John Breaux, just a few weeks before a new law took effect requiring a two-year waiting period between serving and lobbying.

When you spend your days at the Senate, it's easy to forget about everything else. The House of Representatives seems miles away (it's just down a corridor and across the rotunda), the White House is another country, and actual foreign countries are unimaginable. The place remains insular, labyrinthine, and opaque—even physically. Senators commute thirty seconds between their offices and the chamber by electric subway cars that run along a tunnel under Constitution Avenue. Many signs are misleading or obsolete (the gilded lettering over the visitors' gallery says "Men's Gallery"), and the Capitol is filled with secret passageways and spare rooms, called hideaways, doled out according to seniority, where senators can read, drink, doze, and wait for the buzzer announcing an imminent vote. The most pervasive authority over the institution is not the Constitution or the Bible but, rather, an impenetrable sixteen-hundred-page tome, by Floyd M. Riddick, called "Senate Procedure: Precedents and Practices," which only the late Robert Byrd, of West Virginia, was known to have read in its entirety. The procedures are so abstruse that a parliamentarian must sit below the presiding officer and, essentially, tell him or her what to say.

After half a century, the picture given by Preminger's "Advise and Consent" is still faintly visible. "The Senate, by its nature, is a place where consensus reigns and personal relationships are paramount," Lamar Alexander said. "And that's not changed." Which is exactly the problem: it's a self-governing body that depends on the reasonableness of its members to function. Sarah Binder, a congressional scholar at George Washington University, said, "To have a chamber that rules by unanimous consent—it's nutty! Especially when you've got Jim Bunning to please."

In 2006 and 2008, sixteen Democrats entered the Senate, giving the Party its current majority of fifty-nine to forty-one (counting two independents). They include moderates, like Jon Tester, of Montana, and Mark Warner, of Virginia; liberals, like Sherrod Brown, of Ohio, and Sheldon Whitehouse, of Rhode Island; policy specialists, like Amy Klobuchar, of Minnesota, and Jeff Merkley; and iconoclasts, like Claire McCaskill. Their interest in legislating has won the admiration of senior senators. "If they can stay, I think they'll be terrific," Chris Dodd said. "My worry is they won't stay. Because it's not productive."

The Democratic class of 2008 arrived with President Obama, expecting to usher in a dynamic new era. Instead, their young Senate careers have passed in a daily slog of threatened filibusters and "secret holds"—when a senator anonymously objects to bringing an appointment up for a vote, which requires unanimous consent. On April 20th, Claire McCaskill took the trouble to read off the names of fifty-six Obama nominees languishing in the limbo of secret holds, and Jon Kyl objected to every one of them. Just getting a bill to the floor for debate can require days of tactical gamesmanship between the party leaders. There were times when Warner wondered if anyone had ever quit in the first year. Michael Bennet said, "We find ourselves at a moment in our history when the questions are huge ones, not small ones, and where things have been put off for a really long period of time." He mentioned the national debt, energy policy, and the financial crisis. "Yet you have a Senate that's designed not to advance change but to slow it."

We were talking in his hideaway, a windowless room in the Capitol basement, which had a mini-fridge stocked with bottled water, black leatherette furniture circa 1962, and a TV tuned to C-SPAN2 on mute; Senator Kyl's mouth was moving. Bennet, the former superintendent of schools in Denver, was appointed to a vacant seat in 2009, and already has to defend it this year. He described the Senate with the dry bluntness of an outsider who hasn't allowed himself to grow too attached. Bennet repeated a story he had heard about a new congressman giving his maiden speech: "And then some more veteran guy came over and said, 'Son, you're talking like this place is on the level. It's not on the level.' As the fifteen months or so have gone by that I've been here, the less on the level it seems."

Earlier this year, the Senate's procedural absurdities became national news twice in one month. On February 4th, CongressDaily reported that Richard Shelby, an Alabama Republican, was secretly blocking the confirmation of seventy Obama appointees over a dispute involving defense earmarks for his state. (His tactics exposed, Shelby—whose office maintains that he was responsible for fewer than fifty holds—lifted all but three.) Later that month, Bunning spent several days and a late night on the Senate floor, filibustering to prevent benefits from being paid to millions of unemployed Americans. When Merkley tried to reason with him, Bunning responded, "Tough shit." (Eventually, Republicans persuaded Bunning to stop.)

These incidents elicited a brief outcry, but the extent of the Senate's routine folly remains largely hidden. For example, Grassley and Ron Wyden, of Oregon, have been trying since 1997 to end the practice of secret holds, without success. In 2007, the Senate passed a bill banning secret holds that last longer than six days. But to get around the ban two or more senators can pass the hold back and forth—it's called "rolling holds"—and their party leader facilitates the game by keeping their names secret.

Many of the Senate's antique rules and precedents have been warped beyond recognition by the modern pressures of partisanship. The hold, for example, was a courtesy extended to senators in the days of horse travel, when they needed time to get back to Washington and read a bill or question an appointee before casting their vote. Sarah Binder, who co-authored a book on the filibuster, calls the procedure a historical accident: in 1806, the Senate got rid of a little-used rule that allowed the "previous question" to be called to a vote. Suddenly, there was no inherent limit on debate, and by the eighteen-thirties senators had begun taking advantage of this loophole, derailing the proceedings by getting up and talking until their voice, legs, or bladder gave out. (The word "filibuster" comes from vrijbuiter—old Dutch for "looter.") In 1917, Woodrow Wilson, with his wartime legislative agenda blocked by filibusters, forced the Senate to pass Rule XXII, which allowed a two-thirds majority to bring a floor debate to an end with a "cloture" vote. For decades, the rule was rarely used; between 1919 and 1971, there were only forty-nine cloture votes, fewer than one per year. In the seventies and eighties, the annual average rose to about a dozen. (Frustration with this increase led the Senate, in 1975, to lower the threshold for cloture to sixty votes.) In the nineties and early aughts, the average went up to twenty-five or thirty a year, as both parties escalated their use of the filibuster when they found themselves in the minority. After the Republicans lost their majority in 2006, filibusters became everyday events: there were a hundred and twelve cloture votes in 2007 and 2008, and this session Republicans are on target to break their own filibuster record.

The tally of cloture votes reflects only a small fraction of senatorial obstruction. Three hundred and forty-five bills passed by the House have been prevented from even coming up for debate in the Senate. "Why?" Steny Hoyer, the outraged Democratic Majority Leader of the House, asked me. "Because they do not do their business in a way that facilitates noncontroversial things. Thankfully, the House of Representatives is not becoming the Senate." Last week, six House Democrats expressed their displeasure with the upper chamber by staging a sit-in of sorts on the Senate floor. Seventy-six nominees for judgeships and executive posts have been approved by committees but, because of blocks, haven't come up for a vote in the full Senate, leaving courtrooms idle and jobs unfilled across the upper levels of the Obama Administration. (The Democrats also practiced the art of blocking nominees during the Bush Administration.) There's often no objection to the individual being blocked: after an eight-month hold, Martha Johnson, nominated to run the General Services Administration, was confirmed 96–0. On an issue like health-care reform, when the objection was substantive, Republicans ransacked Riddick's "Senate Procedure" for every conceivable way to delay a debate and vote. Judd Gregg even sent a memo on stalling tactics to his Republican colleagues. Tom Coburn demanded the reading aloud of an entire seven-hundred-and-sixty-seven-page amendment proposed by Bernie Sanders, the Vermont socialist; Senate clerks, working in half-hour shifts, were three hours into the chore when Sanders withdrew the amendment in frustration.

Under McConnell, Republicans have consistently consumed as much of the Senate's calendar as possible with legislative maneuvering. The strategy is not to extend deliberation of the Senate's agenda but to prevent it. Tom Harkin, who first proposed reform of the filibuster in 1995, called his Republican colleagues "nihilists," who want to create chaos because it serves their ideology. "If there's chaos, things will tend toward simple solutions," Harkin said. "In chaos people don't listen to reason." McConnell did not respond to requests for an interview, but he has often argued that the Republican strategy reflects the views of a majority of Americans. In March, he told the Times, "To the extent that they"—the Democrats—"want to do things that we think are in the political center and would be helpful to the country, we'll be helpful. To the extent they are trying to turn us into a Western European country, we are not going to be helpful."

One of the mysteries of the Senate is how Mitch McConnell has been able to keep his members in line, on vote after vote. Why do moderates with years of experience and their own power base back home—Richard Lugar, of Indiana; Susan Collins, of Maine; George Voinovich, of Ohio—keep siding with the more extreme members of their caucus? Alexander said that McConnell listens well to all his members, adding, "When you have your back against the wall and the gallows are hanging in front of you, it tends to unify. Operating with forty members—it concentrates the mind." Lindsey Graham described to the Times how McConnell exhorted his caucus after the disastrous 2008 election: "He said if we didn't stick together on big things, we wouldn't be relevant." Last December, the Republicans decided to filibuster a military-spending bill in order to delay the looming vote on health care until as close to Christmas as possible. Thad Cochran, the Republican ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, promised Daniel Inouye, the chairman, that he wouldn't join the effort. But at the last minute Cochran, who has been in the Senate since 1979 and brings disproportionate amounts of defense money to Mississippi, told Reid that his leadership wouldn't allow him to vote with the Democrats and end the filibuster—even on a matter of national security. (The Democrats were able to impose cloture, and the vote on health care finally took place on Christmas Eve.)
Republican defections have been rare. In early 2009, Collins and Olympia Snowe, also of Maine, voted for the stimulus bill, along with Arlen Specter (who promptly switched parties). Snowe also voted for the Finance Committee's health-care-reform bill last October, the only Republican to do so. But in December, at the pivotal moment, she voted against the version that went before the full Senate. "I wasn't interested in expanding this program beyond the Finance Committee version—it grew by a thousand pages," Snowe said. She wasn't included in the negotiations with White House officials that took place in an elegant conference room across from Reid's suite of offices, and said that the Democrats "did not accept any of my proposals. As I said to the President, it was all windup and no pitch." McConnell was able to exploit her alienation. A friend of Snowe cited another reason for her reversal: "She actually said to me once that she had never felt the pressure that she felt on health care, never before had that pressure been quite as evident to her or quite as real or troubling. Kyl and McConnell were saying things like 'You just can't let us down, we're all in this together. You're a senior Republican member of this caucus, and you just have to hang tough with us. We expect it and you're going to do it.' "
Reid doesn't use such tough tactics; he has achieved his position, in spite of his public shortcomings, by being the senator who helped other Democrats, always answered their calls, and got them what they wanted through masterly maneuvering. This has made him enormously popular within the Democratic caucus, but it doesn't give him the leverage of McConnell, let alone of Lyndon Johnson.
In the current Senate, it has become normal for a handful of senators, sometimes representing just ten or twenty per cent of the country's population, to hold everything up. And the status quo has become sufficiently frustrating that a few new senators have considered a radical option: mutiny.
Tom Udall, who is sixty-two, is older than most freshman senators. He has the crow's-feet of a Westerner who has spent time in the sun, and a slow, good-natured voice. His father, Stewart, was an Arizona congressman and the Interior Secretary for Presidents Kennedy and Johnson; his uncle Mo was a legendary Arizona representative; his cousin Mark is a freshman senator from Colorado. Udall served five terms in the House before winning a Senate seat from New Mexico, in 2008. And yet he has the air of a political Candide—he is always earnest, capable of disappointment but not cynicism. "I ran on the idea that the Senate should not be a graveyard for good ideas," he said. "Then to be on the inside—the thing that strikes you is how one senator can hold up the whole show."
In his first year in office, Udall decided to do something audacious: he would try to change the Senate's rules. Customarily, the rules continue session after session, and a provision in Rule XXII requires sixty-seven votes to amend them, making it extremely difficult. ("Rule XXII is a Catch-22," Ted Kennedy used to joke.) Udall embraced a different idea—the "constitutional option." Article I, Section 5 of the Constitution states that "each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings" at the beginning of the new Congress. So, in theory, a senator could take the floor next January and propose debating its rules from scratch, including the filibuster. New rules could be passed with a simple majority. There's even a precedent for this: moves to revisit the rules by invoking the constitutional option have been made three times, most recently in 1975. Udall has spent much of the past year trying to build support for the idea.
At the request of Udall and others, Schumer, who is the chairman of the Rules Committee, has held a series of hearings on the filibuster, calling witnesses such as Sarah Binder, the historian, and Walter Mondale, who was in the Senate when the constitutional option was invoked in 1975. Dick Durbin, the second-highest-ranking Democrat, has organized working groups among newer members on other internal reforms, such as ending secret holds and choosing committee chairs by caucus vote rather than by seniority. (Lamar Alexander wryly suggested to me that Schumer and Durbin were competing for the favor of newer members, in case Harry Reid loses his seat in the fall and they run against each other for Majority Leader.)

For Republican institutionalists, such as Alexander and Gregg, the push for rules reform is folly. "If you want a parliamentary form of government, go over to the House," Gregg, who is about to retire, scoffed. "Why even run for the Senate?" Udall's plan for next January, he said, would be a "gigantic mistake."

"They'll get over it," Alexander said of the Democrats' enthusiasm for rules reform. "And they'll get over it quicker if they're in the minority next January. Because they'll instantly see the value of slowing the Senate down to consider whatever they have to say." He added that the Senate "may be getting done about as much as the American people want done." The President's ambitious agenda, after all, has upset a lot of voters, across the political spectrum. None of the Republicans I spoke to agreed with the contention that the Senate is "broken." Alexander claimed that he and other Republicans were exercising the moderating, thoughtful influence on legislation that the founders wanted in the Senate. "The Senate wasn't created to be efficient," he argued. "It was created to be inefficient." At one of the filibuster hearings, in April, Alexander, sitting across the table from Udall, said that, for all the times the Democrats charge the Republicans with obstructing legislation, "we could say that's the number of times the majority has tried to cut off our right to debate, our right to offer amendments, which is the essence of the Senate."

Newcomers like Udall seem to think that the Senate has grown so absurd and extreme that some kind of reform is inevitable. Perhaps they need more time to plumb the depths of the institution's intransigence. According to Sarah Binder, a change in rules is extremely unlikely; Republicans would be implacably opposed to, say, weakening the filibuster, and so would some Democrats, especially long-serving ones. "I would oppose that," Chris Dodd said, adding of the freshmen, "These are people who have never been in the minority." For older Democrats, who have put in their years, grown adept at working the rules, and now chair powerful committees, the reform impulse could be a threat. (Among senior senators, the sole enthusiast for rules reform is Tom Harkin.) One senator spoke of the Senate as being divided not between whales and minnows but, rather, between bulls and calves. The older Democrats are too accustomed to the Senate's ways to share the frustrations of the newcomers; the handful of older moderate Republicans are too weak to challenge the newer radicals who now dominate the caucus.

Even if the freshmen Democrats can somehow reform the filibuster next January, the Senate will remain a sclerotic, wasteful, unhappy body. The deepest source of its problems is not rules and precedents but, rather, its human beings, who have created a culture where Tocqueville's "lofty thoughts" and "generous impulses" have no place.

A few days after passing health-care reform, the Senate struggled to its feet to take on a second large task. Financial regulatory reform should have been the easiest piece of major legislation of the Obama Presidency, the likeliest to win real bipartisan support. The financial crisis had been catastrophic for millions of Americans, and after the 2008 bailout Wall Street had become even more hated than the Senate was. In April, a lineup of bankers from Goldman Sachs appeared before Senator Levin's subcommittee on investigations, and managed to appear as arrogant, callous, and evasive as their reputations had suggested. The public demanded action. Some Republicans had a genuine desire to pass a bill. If health-care reform had been a war of attrition, financial reform was a promising liaison.

The affair began with a Republican, Bob Corker, and a Democrat, Mark Warner—both multimillionaires serving their first term, both considered centrists. Corker is a small, dapper former construction magnate who became the mayor of Chattanooga; Warner is a tall, preppily dressed former telecommunications entrepreneur who became the governor of Virginia. Chris Dodd, the Banking Committee chairman, assigned them to work together on the section of the bill having to do with the liquidation of troubled firms—making sure that there would never be another taxpayer bailout. They worked through the winter, in Warner's office, in Corker's office, over dinner, sometimes without staff, as if they were members of a Senate from the past. They hosted a series of afternoon seminars, inviting guests such as Ben Bernanke, Alan Greenspan, and Sheila Bair. Corker and Warner were sometimes said to be the only Democrat and Republican still talking to each other. In January, Business Week called them the Senate's "Odd Couple." By February, they had finished their work.

Meanwhile, discussions about the entire bill between Dodd and Richard Shelby, the top Republican on the committee, dragged on, repeatedly breaking down. Finally, on February 10th, Dodd called Corker, who, though he was one of the committee's junior members, agreed to be the chairman's Republican negotiating partner. When Corker informed McConnell and Shelby, they expressed surprise. "It was an odd place to be," Corker recalled. "And yet that night we began meeting." The junior Republican savored the rare experience of creating, rather than opposing, legislation. In response, Shelby's conservative staff tried to undermine Corker, spreading rumors among Republicans and their lobbyists that he was giving too much away. (A Shelby aide said that staff members were simply informing other Republicans of the Party's line on financial reform.)

On March 10th, Dodd concluded that he had to move a bill to the floor. He called Corker and said, "You've been a great partner." He was ending their talks after only a month. "It's a little stunning, I've got to be honest," Corker told reporters afterward. Someone close to the negotiations compared Corker to Dickens's Miss Havisham, unable to get over the rebuff, forever awaiting the arrival of her groom, all her clocks stopped. Corker later said that Dodd had ended the talks under pressure from the White House and other Democrats. Dodd said that Corker had been unable to bring any other Republicans with him. "Baloney," Corker said. "If Dodd had reached an agreement with me, we'd've had at least twenty-five Republican votes."

The bill that Dodd brought before the Senate, after a year of discussions with Democrats and Republicans alike, incorporated the bipartisan plan of Warner and Corker to prevent another bank bailout: setting up a fifty-billion-dollar fund, paid for by the banks, to insure orderly liquidation, and establishing a risk council to detect warning signs of another crisis. But in mid-April Mitch McConnell—who had just met with Wall Street executives in New York, and was now parroting talking points from a memo written by the Republican strategist Frank Luntz—called it a "partisan bill" that "will guarantee perpetual taxpayer bailout of Wall Street banks." McConnell presented a letter, signed by all forty-one Republicans, suggesting that they would filibuster the financial-reform bill.

His remarks amounted to a repudiation of Corker's work as well as of Dodd's. The next day, April 15th, Corker pleaded with his colleagues, in his Tennessee twang, "Let's come to the floor and let's act like adults. Let's tone down the rhetoric. Let's don't exaggerate the pluses or minuses. Let's do what the Senate was created to do. . . . We were supposed to be the people that took some of the red-hot activities that sometimes come from the other body and sat down with cooler heads and resolved the issues like adults. We can do that. As a matter of fact, I would say, if we cannot do that on financial regulation, an issue that really doesn't have any real philosophical bearings to it . . ." Corker didn't allow the thought to ripen—he had already gone farther than almost any Republican would have dared.

Dodd spoke later in the day and completed Corker's speech: "I know my friends on the other side of the aisle are faced with a difficult choice between supporting their party leadership and participating in this complicated, difficult debate. I am not naïve. I know that is a hard place to be. But if we can't act like U.S. senators for the sake of this issue . . . then why are we even here?" He went on, "We work for an American public that is sick and tired of feeling like no one is looking out for their interests, like the political hacks and lobbyists hold all the cards in these discussions. The minority seems intent on proving them right. . . . I have been here a long time. I know this institution is better than that. I know there are friends of mine on the other side of the aisle who care about this bill, who want to be a part of the debate, who want to be part of the solution."

In the same speech, Dodd joined the partisan fight, accusing McConnell of lying about the bill. Turning crimson-faced, he chopped the air with his hand as he shouted, "I have to ask myself, why did I go through this process over the last four or five months, agreeing to much of what they were offering, and there is not a single political vote to show for it. . . . I have to say to the younger members, the newer members coming along: be careful!"

Corker, having heard that Dodd was speaking, returned to the chamber and asked to respond. "You and I went a long way," Corker told Dodd. "Then we stopped. On March 10th it ended. I understand that, look, you were losing Democrats on your committee."

"And I was not gaining Republicans," Dodd replied.

"You had one, and that is all you asked for when you started. I never said I could speak for anybody but myself. And I did not leave the table." Corker urged Dodd to keep talking to Republicans—their differences could be sorted out in a few days.

But this was not McConnell's agenda. Instead, financial reform became a slightly more polite repeat of the health-care-reform brawl: the Republicans threatened filibusters, the Democrats threatened all-nighters, and thousands of lobbyists prowled the Capitol, charging their Wall Street clients more than a billion dollars. On April 28th, I was sitting in the ornate Reception Room with Jim Manley, Reid's spokesman. On the other side of the wall, there was the noise of furniture scraping across a tile floor. "Those are cots being set up in the L.B.J. Room," Manley said. "Very little happens around here without a deadline." The cots persuaded Republicans to allow the bill to move to the floor for debate. A few weeks later, on May 20th, yet another filibuster was defeated by yet another cloture motion, and financial reform finally came to a vote. It passed, 59–39. Only four Republicans had joined the majority. Corker wasn't among them. He had even voted for an amendment, offered by his Republican colleague Jeff Sessions, of Alabama, that would have scrapped Corker's work of many months with Warner.

"The idea of watching Bob Corker vote for the Sessions amendment!" Dodd said afterward, sitting in his red-curtained office, under a print of Holbein's portrait of Thomas More. "It's the Senate, I guess." McConnell's strategy of obstruction had once again come close to succeeding, Dodd said, but he knew that a "shrinking number" of Republicans were frustrated. The previous day, Dodd had said to Susan Collins, "God, I would have loved to have you as my ranking member on this." Collins responded, "We could have had such a great time on this bill."

Warner, who said that he believed in bipartisanship because "the American people don't trust either political party enough to give them a blank check," was astonished that so few Republicans voted for financial reform. "There was zero substantive reason why this couldn't have been eighty votes," he said. I asked him why Bob Corker had voted no on the bill. Warner started to talk about the consumer-protection title, and then said, "If you want to vote against something, you can always find your reasons."

But Corker hadn't seemed to want to vote against it. He had spent months trying to act like a U.S. senator, alienating himself from his own party and then the other party, and on the day of the vote he held the floor for the better part of thirty minutes, as if he were still reluctant to let the effort go. "I am obviously disappointed," he said. "I think I have spent as much time as any senator . . . on policy regarding our financial system. I think any bill—even this bill—has good things in it. There is no question. And I appreciate the thrust. But I think there is a lot of overreaching, and I think not enough time was spent on some of the core issues."

As the senators cast their votes, I noticed Robert Kaiser, the author of "So Damn Much Money," in the press gallery. I later asked him if, with the passage of two big reform bills in three months, we were witnessing a possible renewal of the Senate. "If you can engage public opinion in a way politicians can understand, public opinion can still blow away money and interest groups," he said. "But over the past few decades the reflex has grown in the Senate that, all things considered, it's better to avoid than to take on big issues. This is the kind of thing that drives Michael Bennet nutty: here you've arrived in the United States Senate and you can't do fuck-all about the destruction of the planet."

After the final vote on financial reform, the Republicans flew home, and the Democratic leaders held a press conference, smiling before the microphones outside the Senate chamber. Reid said, "For those who wanted to protect Wall Street, it didn't work." He then excused himself: he had to join Biden for a telephone fund-raiser with "some Nevadans."

Durbin said, "I was stunned that only four Republicans would join us in passing this historic legislation. What does it take to bring the Republican Party into the conversation about the future of America?"

Dodd, glowing with triumph, said, "I wanted to demonstrate that the Senate of the United States could conduct its business much as our founders intended. We did that."

On July 21st, President Obama signed the completed bill. The two lasting achievements of this Senate, financial regulation and health care, required a year and a half of legislative warfare that nearly destroyed the body. They depended on a set of circumstances—a large majority of Democrats, a charismatic President with an electoral mandate, and a national crisis—that will not last long or be repeated anytime soon. Two days after financial reform became law, Harry Reid announced that the Senate would not take up comprehensive energy-reform legislation for the rest of the year. And so climate change joined immigration, job creation, food safety, pilot training, veterans' care, campaign finance, transportation security, labor law, mine safety, wildfire management, and scores of executive and judicial appointments on the list of matters that the world's greatest deliberative body is incapable of addressing. Already, you can feel the Senate slipping back into stagnant waters.

ILLUSTRATION: STEVE BRODNER

* Print <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true&printable=true>
* E-Mail <http://www.newyorker.com/contact/emailFriend?referringPage=http://www.newyorker.com%2Freporting%2F2010%2F08%2F09%2F100809fa_fact_packer%3Fprintable%3Dtrue&title=>
* Feeds <http://www.newyorker.com/services/rss/summary>

Share:

* Facebook <http://www.facebook.com/share.php?u=http://www.newyorker.com%2Freporting%2F2010%2F08%2F09%2F100809fa_fact_packer%3Fprintable%3Dtrue&t=>

* Twitter
<http://www.twitter.com?status=http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true>
* Digg
<http://www.digg.com/submit?phase=2&url=http://www.newyorker.com%2Freporting%2F2010%2F08%2F09%2F100809fa_fact_packer%3Fprintable%3Dtrue&title=>
* More
<http://www.addthis.com/bookmark.php?pub=newyorker&url=http%3a%2f%2fwww.newyorker.com%2freporting%2f2010%2f08%2f09%2f100809fa_fact_packer&title=Filibusters+and+arcane+obstructions+in+the+Senate%3a+newyorker.com>

To get more of The New Yorker's signature mix of politics, culture and the arts: Subscribe now
<https://magazine.newyorker.com/ecom/subscribe.jsp?oppId=5400134&tgt=/atg/registry/RepositoryTargeters/NYR/NYR_contentPage_textOffer&placementId=5400007&logOppId=true&placementGroupId=>

Related Links

Ask the Author: Join a live chat with George Packer about the Senate on Wednesday, August 4, at 3 P.M. E.T.
<http://www.newyorker.com/online/blogs/ask/2010/08/george-packer-senate.html>

<http://event.newyorker.com/images/event.gif?e0_sc=NYR&e0_ec=most_viewed&e0_env=PROD&e0_id=100809fa_fact_packer&e0_ct=Article&e0_url=%2Freporting%2F2010%2F08%2F09%2F100809fa_fact_packer&e0_tit=Filibusters%20and%20arcane%20obstructions%20in%20the%20Senate&rnd=3854251392360948>
<http://www.omniture.com>

Read more http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/09/100809fa_fact_packer?printable=true#ixzz0vT1PYxi7

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 2, 2010 2:11 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Call list

ok

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, August 02, 2010 2:11 PM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Call list

Pls add Oscar de LR to my call list. If he's still in the hospital, add that # too.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, August 2, 2010 4:48 PM
To: H; 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: RE: Call list

hes back at home at nyc apartment apparently doing well
lauren will have on call list

B6

---

From: H
Sent: Monday, August 02, 2010 2:10 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Call list

Pls add Oscar de LR to my call list. If he's still in the hospital, add that # too.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: PIR <
Sent: Tuesday, August 3, 2010 7:17 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin; Lona Valmoro; Jake Sullivan
Subject: Pak

MS -

We're hoping you'll be ok with taking one of the videos you were going to record tomorrow - the one for the Pakistani audience - and instead deliver the remarks live in the Treaty Room, one of those things where you just pop out the side door, make a statement, vamanose back through the doors

You have the time in the morning, we'd be dropping a video, and it will have ten times the impact. And to sweeten the deal...

We can scrub BOTH flood related videos and merge their remarks into one live Treaty Room Statement

Please let us know so we can make the necessary changes and preparations.

PIR

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 2, 2010 7:51 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: US statement on UN flotilla investigation

Below is the actual Rice statement

USUN PRESS RELEASE #157 August 2, 2010
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Statement by Ambassador Susan E. Rice, U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations, on Secretary General Ban's Panel Concerning the May 31 Flotilla Incident

The United States welcomes today's announcement by UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon of the establishment of a Panel regarding the incident of May 31st. We thank both governments for the constructive and cooperative spirit they have shown and the Secretary General for his leadership and determination. The Panel, which has the support of both Israel and Turkey, will receive and review the reports of each government's national investigation into the incident and make recommendations as to how to avoid such incidents in the future. This Panel is not a substitute for those national investigations. It complements them, affording Israel and Turkey the opportunity to present the conclusions of their investigations to the international community. The focus of the Panel is appropriately on the future and on preventing such incidents from recurring. The United States also hopes that the Panel can serve as a vehicle to enable Israel and Turkey to move beyond the recent strains in their relationship and repair their strong historic ties.

The United States expects that the Panel will operate in a transparent and credible manner and that its work will be the primary method for the international community to review the incident, obviating the need for any overlapping international inquiries. The United States welcomes the naming of the former Prime Minister of New Zealand, Geoffrey Palmer, as Chair and the outgoing President of Colombia, Alvaro Uribe, as Vice-Chair. We look forward to the announcement of the two additional members from Israel and Turkey.

###

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Lucas, Laura D
Sent: Monday, August 02, 2010 5:54 PM
To: Barks-Ruggles, Erica J
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants
Subject: US statement on UN flotilla investigation

Hi Erica,

Could you please pass us a copy of Ambassador Rice's most recent statement on the UN flotilla investigation?

Thank you,

Laura Lucas
Special Assistant
Office of the Secretary
(202) 647-9573

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 2, 2010 8:49 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (SBU) SECDEF Approves ExecSec/Pakistan Relief Package

Fyi

---

From: Lucas, Laura D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants
Sent: Mon Aug 02 20:33:47 2010
Subject: FW: (SBU) SECDEF Approves ExecSec/Pakistan Relief Package

FYI

---

From: Slattery, Phillip T
Sent: Monday, August 02, 2010 8:07 PM
To: SES_DutyDeputies; D(S); D(L); P; M_Staff; S_SpecialAssistants; SCA-Staff-Assistants-DL; SSRAP_StaffAssistants
Cc: Ruggiero, Frank J; Butte-Dahl, Jennifer X; Lenderking, Timothy A; SES-O_SWO; SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_Shift-I
Subject: (SBU) SECDEF Approves ExecSec/Pakistan Relief Package

Colleagues -

For your situational awareness, I wanted to inform you that the SECDEF has approved the OSD package responding to the State ExecSec memo regarding Pakistan flood relief.

The package approves the transport of personnel and humanitarian assistance/supplies (including non-DOD relief supplies), activation of assessment teams, and intel/recon support. The package includes the use of up to six helos.

Best Regards,

Phillip T. Slattery
Senior Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center
slatteryp@state.gov
tel: 202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 3, 2010 10:52 AM
To: H; Lew, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: DiMartino, Kitty
Subject: FW: PA Germany Restructuring
Attachments: PA Germany Strategy Doc.doc; StateSeal.gif

During the past year we have discussed the size of the Germany PD budget and the fact that it did not reflect current priorities. EUR reviewed the budget and made the decision to cut the German PD budget by 30% and reallocate the funding to other areas, primarily Eastern Europe. As you will see from the email below and the attached memo, Mission Germany responded by reviewing all their PD operations and developing an entirely new approach based on the PD strategic framework we rolled out earlier this year. I think they did an excellent job and we will be using this as a model for other Missions as we go forward.

Let me know what you think.

jm

From: SMART Core [mailto:svcSMARTBTSRctSPrec@state.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, August 03, 2010 10:08 AM
To: Ackerman, Steven G
Cc: Mellott, Joseph; McHale, Judith A; Gordon, Philip H; Quanrud, Pamela G; Boyer, Spencer P; McKay, Maria E; Jamison, Jeffrey M; BERLIN-SMARTS
Subject: PA Germany Restructuring

UNCLASSIFIED

MRN: 10 BERLIN 1052
Date/DTG: Aug 03, 2010 / 031406Z AUG 10
From: AMEMBASSY BERLIN
Action: WASHDC, SECSTATE IMMEDIATE
E.O.: 13526
TAGS: AMGT, KCOM, KPAO, GM
Pass Line: STATE FOR R - U/S MCHALE
EUR - A/S GORDON
Subject: PA Germany Restructuring

As you know, PA Germany has taken a huge budget hit. We have lost one-third of our PD funding and, as a result, PD LES staffing has been reduced by almost one-third. Dealing with a cut of this magnitude is never easy – it was particularly tough last month when we handed out the RIF notices – but we are not wasting time feeling sorry for ourselves. We are viewing this as an opportunity, a chance to redefine and restructure our entire PD operation.

I want to give you a brief update on the progress we have made.

- We have developed a strategic plan (attached) which we have conveyed to Washington. Rather than just slicing off pieces of our PD operation, we have focused on our key goals and on how to focus our resources to get maximum impact in the areas that are most important.

- We are well advanced in creating a new organizational structure for PA Germany in line with our strategic plan.

- We are significantly reducing and reshaping our PD LES staffing. We began the process with close to 60 PD LES throughout Germany. We will end up with 41.

- Now we are looking carefully at all the positions that remain and, wherever necessary, redefining them in line with the principles laid out in the strategic plan. Our objectives include: emphasis on new media, elimination of stove piping among the traditional PD elements (e.g. Press, Culture, Information Resource work), and creating the capacity to form issue-focused "campaign teams." These teams will closely integrate all areas of activity (Press, Culture, Information Services) and link staff resources Mission-wide.

Our goal is to create a 21st century PD operation that is lean, quick and flexible. We are well on our way to achieving that goal. Assuming our new funding level remains stable, I am convinced that we will come out of this stronger than ever.

| | |
|---|---|
| Signature: | Murphy |
| Drafted By: | BERLIN:Armstrong, Bruce W. |
| Cleared By: | EXEC:Delawie, Greg TPOL:Glass, George APA:Finn, Helena KPA:Armstrong, Bruce W |
| Approved By: | EXEC:Murphy, Philip D |
| Released By: | BERLIN:Ackerman, Steven G |
| Info: | Mellott, Joseph ROUTINE; McHale, Judith A ROUTINE; Gordon, Philip H ROUTINE; Quanrud, Pamela G ROUTINE; Boyer, Spencer P ROUTINE; McKay, Maria E ROUTINE; Jamison, Jeffrey M ROUTINE |
| Attachments: | PA Germany Strategy Doc.doc, Metadata.dat |
| Action Post: | |
| Dissemination Rule: | Released Copy |

UNCLASSIFIED

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770207 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

MISSION GERMANY

PUBLIC DIPLOMACY STRATEGY FOR THE FUTURE

PA Germany is losing one-third of its budget and almost one-third of its LES staff. That's tough – especially last month when we handed out the RIF notices – but it is also a tremendous opportunity. It has given us a chance to rethink, redefine and restructure our entire operation.

In moving ahead, we are not taking a "same as before but less" approach. Rather than taking off slices here and there, we are fundamentally reshaping PA Germany. At the heart of this process there are three basic questions: What are our goals? What are the audiences we need to connect with to achieve those goals? Which PD tools are most effective in reaching those audiences? The answers to those questions tell us what we need to be doing and how we should deploy our money and staff. And we are deploying accordingly, determined to make ourselves even stronger than we were before in the activity sectors that are crucial.

Our goals are clearly defined in Mission Germany's MSRP. At a June 2-3 offsite in Hamburg chaired by the DCM, a Mission Germany PD team that included the Consuls General focused intensively on identifying the key audiences we need to reach in order to achieve those goals and the PD tools that have the greatest impact on those audiences. Yes, that is something that all Public Affairs sections around the world do on an ongoing basis, but – knowing that our resources are shrinking by a third – our analysis of what is essential and what is not is particularly hard-edged and rigorous.

A central aspect of this process is identifying the activities that need to be pared down or eliminated. Justifications such as "we've always done that" or "audiences like it" are not sufficient. It's not about what we have always done, it's about what we need to be doing now and in the coming years. And, while it is always nice when people respond positively to our efforts, the reality is this: if it is not an audience that is closely linked to one of our goals, there is no justification for the expenditure of staff time and money.

As we go about reinventing PA Germany, we need to strike the right balance between our highly focused work in support of specific U.S. policy goals and our longer term efforts to strengthen understanding for U.S. culture and values, recognizing that those two areas of emphasis often flow into each other (the get-together with high school students that turns into a discussion of Afghanistan; the key staffer who is accessible to us because she is a Fulbright alumna, etc.).

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770207 Date: 08/31/2015

It is essential that we get this right because Germany matters for the U.S. Germany is one of our strongest, most capable partners and is crucial to achieving successful outcomes on the most significant foreign policy issues our country faces. Afghanistan, Iran, Middle East peace, financial regulation, economic growth, climate change, non-proliferation, counterterrorism – with each one of these issues, positive German engagement is vitally important. And, in addition to its value as a bilateral partner, Germany is the engine that drives core institutions of European policy, not only in the traditional councils of Brussels, NATO, and the UN, but also now in the newly empowered European Parliament. It is the indispensable power behind European economic, security, and political affairs. Germany's relationship with the United States sets the tone and outlines the scope for how the United States interacts with Europe.

The restructuring of PA Germany is all about prioritization and the tough choices that it involves. In thinking about our priorities, it is clear that engaging youth is very high on the list. That is true worldwide, but there are specific circumstances in Germany that make it essential that we connect with young people and help them see that a close relationship between the U.S. and Germany has relevance for their lives. In the 20 years since the end of the Cold War and the fall of the Wall and against the background of eight years during which the image of America was severely tarnished, millions of young Germans have drifted away from us. We have a chance now to reverse that trend and we must make the most of it, but we can only do that if we systematically focus our efforts.

Key subsets of the German youth audience are immigrant youth and youth in eastern Germany. It is essential that we reach both those subgroups; if we fail to engage successfully with them it is very likely that as they enter adulthood negative attitudes toward the U.S. will harden into unchangeable convictions. (Among immigrant youth, which in Germany is largely synonymous with Muslim youth: the belief that the U.S. is hostile toward Islam; among young eastern Germans: the distorted image of America that they have inherited from their parents who grew up in a communist environment.)

As we work to focus our efforts for maximum impact, a central challenge is how much time to devote to fundamentally friendly audiences with which we have a long-established relationship, audiences that often tend to be older, non-immigrant and predominately male. We would be foolish to cut our ties to those people, many of whom are influential and have been with us for a long time. We cannot rebuff old friends, but neither can we overinvest in preaching to the choir. Youth, immigrants, women, eastern Germans – audiences that often greet us with deep skepticism – need to occupy a central place in our work.

The restructuring plan that we are implementing aims to:

- Eliminate stove piping. We are getting rid of the organizational and mental walls that separate (a) the three PD areas of activity (Press, Culture, Information Services) and (b) the six PD platforms in Germany (Embassy, five Consulates).

- Create the capacity to form issue-focused "campaign teams" closely integrating all areas of activity (Press, Culture, Information Services) and linking staff resources Mission-wide.

- Make optimum use of Social Media, recognizing that it has tremendous potential as a program enhancer and as a bridge to youth audiences, but it is not a silver bullet that can accomplish everything. Make sure American and local staff get substantial training in using Social Media.

- Identify thematic areas and/or support functions in which individual Consulates can play a lead role, leveraging the specific profiles of their districts and the specific talents of their staff. Learn from what the Mission's Management section has accomplished in this area.

- Eliminate duplication of effort and create efficient mechanisms for sharing information and products. Our Mission-wide SharePoint site will play a key role in this.

- Identify products/activities that can be outsourced. Just because something is definitely worth doing does not mean it has to be done in-house.

- Bring the Information Resource function into the 21st century. Connect it to today's key audiences and institutions; focus it on cutting-edge technology and media.

- Look for opportunities to build a LES team that reflects the diversity and youth of the audiences with whom we are engaging.

- Make the most of the ten German American Institutes (GAIs). With significantly less discretionary funding, we will have to make tough funding choices, but we need to keep supporting the GAIs and find low-cost (in terms of time and money) ways to maximize their impact.

We are well into the process of transforming ourselves. What is the endpoint we are heading toward? On one level, there is no endpoint. The environment in which we operate and the tools at our disposal are evolving rapidly and therefore the act of redefining and restructuring ourselves needs to be ongoing and open-ended. If we do not make continual revitalization of how we do business a key part of doing business, we will always be playing a hopeless game of catch-up.

What we do have now is a clear sense of (a) the focal points we will have for the foreseeable future and (b) the country-wide structure that will enable us to concentrate our resources on those focal points and achieve maximum impact. That structure, presented in the attached diagram, is based on the organizational goals and principles listed above. Above all, it embodies our commitment to prioritizing our efforts rigorously and working as a single unified team unencumbered by rigid organizational walls. We want to be quick, flexible and focused exclusively on what is most important.

A few notes about the diagram and the strategy it embodies:

- As indicated by the center element of the diagram, our strategy includes a robust capacity to participate in global or regional campaigns focused on specific issues.
- The general public, while not explicitly highlighted by the diagram, is an important audience and one which we reach with many of our PD tools such as media interviews and our website.
- As emphasized above, two important subsets of the youth audience are immigrant youth (which in Germany is primarily Muslim) and youth in eastern Germany.
- "Outreach to Schools, etc." on the "Engage Youth" side of the diagram is shorthand for "Outreach to Schools and Other Institutions (including Libraries)." The specific importance attached to libraries as partner institutions ranges from high (Leipzig) to minimal (Munich) – one specific example of the significant regional differences in the PD landscape in Germany.
- "Content Development," listed under "Research," is shorthand for the conceptualizing, researching and drafting of material delivered to our key audiences in a variety of ways, above all via our website and various new media (Embassy Facebook page, blogs, webchats, videos posted on YouTube).
- "Professional relationships, the building and maintaining of contacts that are essential for PD work, is listed under "Influence Key Thinkers," but in fact that activity also benefits our efforts to engage youth.

The diagram divides the totality of the work we do into 31 tasks. The PD LES staffing we will devote to each of those tasks is listed on the attached document (that information is also built into the electronic version of the diagram). Also attached is a document showing how our LES staff will be distributed (a) among the goals and functions listed on the diagram, and (b) among Mission Germany's six public diplomacy platforms (Berlin and the five Consulates).

Attachments:

- Diagram: Mission Germany Public Diplomacy Strategy
- Mission Germany PD LES staffing: task-by-task
- Mission Germany PD LES staffing: by goal and geographically

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 3, 2010 5:38 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: New Poll: Approval Ratings for Administration Officials Drop Across the Board

---

From: John Podesta [mailto:] B6
Sent: Tuesday, August 03, 2010 4:22 PM
To: Neera Tanden; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: New Poll: Approval Ratings for Administration Officials Drop Across the Board

Break out the kevlar vests.

---

From: Clarus Research Group, Ron Faucheux [mailto:Clarus_Research_Group_Ron_Fauche
Sent: Tuesday, August 03, 2010 4:17 PM
To: John Podesta
Subject: New Poll: Approval Ratings for Administration Officials Drop Across the Board

---

Augus

'PROVAL RATINGS FOR ADMINISTRATION OFFICIALS DROP ACROSS THE BOARD

s Poll of "news watchers" – a nationwide survey of registered voters who say they follow the news "closely" or "very closely" – finds that the job l ratings of President Obama, his top aides and Cabinet officials have fallen considerably during the past seven months.

The July 2010 Clarus Poll shows that only two members of the Obama team, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton (64 percent) and Defense Secretary Robert Gates (56 percent), were surveyed to have job approval ratings of more than 50 percent.

Clinton, Obama's opponent in the 2008 Democratic primaries, received the highest job rating in the "news watchers" survey, but her 64 percent ra the July 2010 poll is down 11 points since the December 2009 Clarus Inner Circle poll.

Gates, who is second with a 56 percent approval rating, suffered the biggest drop – down 13 points since December.

President Obama, who scored a 45 percent job approval rating in the July 2010 poll, is down 6 points from where he was seven months ago.

nine officials tested, six have higher disapproval than approval ratings – Obama, Timothy Geithner, Janet Napolitano, Ken Salazar, Rahm Emanuel xelrod," said Ron Faucheux, president of Clarus. "President Obama's advisers suffered steeper declines over the past seven months than did the pr "

:r Circle Poll was conducted July 26-27, 2010 by the non-parisan Clarus Research Group, a Washington, D.C. based polling and research firm. The /as not sponsored or paid for by any client, candidate or political party.

ıdings:

Clinton and Gates owe their higher ratings to stronger bipartisan appeal. Clinton received 45 percent approval from Republicans and 57 percent fr independents. Gates scored 45 percent from both Republicans and independents.

Both Obama and Clinton posted 90 percent approval scores among Democrats. Gates, who was first appointed to his current job by GOP Presidem George W. Bush, received a 76 percent approval rating from Democratic news watchers.

Obama's ratings were more politically polarized: The president received a 35 percent job approval from independents and a dismal 14 percent fror Republicans. Obama won the 2008 election by drawing 52 percent of independent voters.

In addition to Clinton and Gates, the only other administration official to have higher approval than disapproval ratings is Press Secretary Robert C (43 percent to 34 percent).

Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar, who has been on the hot seat because of the Gulf oil spill, scored the lowest job rating (22 percent) of all tho tested.

er 2009 vs. July 2010 Inner Circle ratings:

| | December 2009 | | July 2010 | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Approve | Disapprove | Approve | Disapprove | Change |
| lent Barack Obama | 51% | 45% | 45% | 52% | Down 6 |
| tary of Defense Robert | 69 | 20 | 56 | 29 | Down 13 |
| tary of State Hillary Clinton | 75 | 21 | 64 | 32 | Down 11 |
| tary of the Interior Ken ar | * | * | 22 | 39 | -- |

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| ıary of Homeland Security Napolitano | * | * | 39 | 48 | -- |
| ıary of the Treasury Tim ner | 44 | 45 | 33 | 46 | Down 11 |
| lential Chief of Staff Rahm uel | 40 | 40 | 32 | 44 | Down 8 |
| lential Press Secretary t Gibbs | 50 | 33 | 43 | 34 | Down 7 |
| lential Advisor David ɔd | 38 | 36 | 32 | 36 | Down 6 |

cluded in December 2009 poll

ETHODOLOGY: Clarus Inner Circle survey interviews were conducted live via telephone calls based on a sample of 636 U.S. registered voters ıde who said they "closely" or "very closely" follow news and world events. Those who said they follow news and world events "fairly closely" or ıt all" were screened out. The margin of error for the sample is +/- 3.9 percent. The survey was conducted only among news watchers because som tration insiders who were tested are not well known to the general public. The following question was asked of respondents: "I am now going to re. ıames of a number of public officials. For each one, please tell me whether you approve or disapprove of the job they are doing... " (EACH NAME 'LE WAS THEN READ)

ɔcheux, Ph.D., Clarus president and chief analyst, is the author and editor of seven books on politics and teaches at the Georgetown University Pub ıstitute. For more information or for an interview, he can be reached at rfaucheux@ClarusRG.com. For more information on Clarus, go to ɔrusRG.com.

Dr. Ron Faucheux
President
Clarus Research Group

For more information about the poll, contact Ron Faucheux (rfaucheux@ClarusRG.com).
For more information about Clarus Research Group, go to www.ClarusRG.com.

If you no longer wish to receive these emails, please simply click on the following link: Unsubscribe

Clarus Research Group
1201 Connecticut Ave. NW, Suite 600
Washington, DC 20036
US

Read the VerticalResponse marketing policy.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 3, 2010 7:05 PM
To: H
Subject: Keep getting your home vox - on cell in airport

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <[redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, August 3, 2010 7:17 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin; Lona Valmoro; Jake Sullivan
Subject: Pak

MS -

We're hoping you'll be ok with taking one of the videos you were going to record tomorrow - the one for the Pakistani audience - and instead deliver the remarks live in the Treaty Room, one of those things where you just pop out the side door, make a statement, vamanose back through the doors

You have the time in the morning, we'd be dropping a video, and it will have ten times the impact. And to sweeten the deal...

We can scrub BOTH flood related videos and merge their remarks into one live Treaty Room Statement

Please let us know so we can make the necessary changes and preparations.

PIR

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, August 3, 2010 8:00 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Pak

Ever since you've become a Mother-in-Law you've been very funny

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Re: Pak
Sent: Aug 3, 2010 7:51 PM

Oh, you sweet-talking guy,,,ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <[redacted]>
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin; Lona Valmoro <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>; Jake Sullivan <[redacted]>
Sent: Tue Aug 03 19:16:57 2010
Subject: Pak

MS -

We're hoping you'll be ok with taking one of the videos you were going to record tomorrow - the one for the Pakistani audience - and instead deliver the remarks live in the Treaty Room, one of those things where you just pop out the side door, make a statement, vamanose back through the doors

You have the time in the morning, we'd be dropping a video, and it will have ten times the impact. And to sweeten the deal...

We can scrub BOTH flood related videos and merge their remarks into one live Treaty Room Statement

Please let us know so we can make the necessary changes and preparations.

PIR

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, May 7, 2010 9:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Reta Jo

From: PHays [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri May 07 21:02:49 2010
Subject: Reta Jo

Cheryl: Thanks to you and Hillary, Madam Secretary, for a great day for local government. If I had script authority for today, I couldn't have done any better. Please pass on to the Secretary; that on behalf of local government, we'll hold up our part of the partnership. We have a lot to do, but I am very excited that we covered some significant mileage today. Please let me know if I can be of any assistance, you'll let me know. Thanks again....

ps. Local Government, WORLDWIDE, was a big winner with Reta Jo today, and didn't even realize it, thanks.
pss. But a few of us did!!!!

ATTENTION: This email and any files transmitted with it are intended solely for the use of the individual or entity to whom they are addressed. Any unauthorized use, disclosure or distribution is prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender by reply email and destroy all copies of the original message. The views or opinions presented in this email are solely those of the author and do not necessarily represent those of the City of North Little Rock. You are warned to check this email and any attachments for the presence of viruses. The City of North Little Rock accepts no liability for any damage caused by any virus transmitted by this email.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, August 4, 2010 8:17 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 8/4/10 Wednesday

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence
En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:15 am "MONDAY" MEETING w/ASSISTANT SECRETARIES
10:00 am Principals Conference Room 7516

10:00am STATEMENT ON PAKISTANI FLOOD RELIEF
10:15am Treaty Room

10:15 am VIDEOS (7)
10:25 am George Marshall Room, 7th Floor

10:30 am OFFICE TIME
11:00 am Secretary's Office

11:00 am MEETING w/SENATOR JOHN KERRY
11:30 am Secretary's Office

11:30 am OFFICE TIME
2:15 pm Secretary's Office

2:15 pm COURTESY VISIT w/GENERAL JAMES MATTIS
3:00 pm Secretary's Office

3:00 pm MEETING w/JUDITH McHALE
3:30 pm Secretary's Office

3:30 pm OFFICE TIME
6:00 pm Secretary's Office

6:00 pm DEPART State Department
En route Private Residence

6:10 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, August 4, 2010 9:31 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Trip

FYI. Will keep you posted.

-----Original Message-----
From: Burns, William J
Sent: Wednesday, August 04, 2010 8:15 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: Trip

Fyi.

----- Original Message -----
From: Pickering, Thomas R [redacted] B6
To: Burns, William J
Sent: Wed Aug 04 07:39:18 2010
Subject: Trip

Bill: Other side has just asked to postpone trip this weekend inferring unhelpful leaks at their end. Supposed to know more shortly and you will have seen latest news which might be relevant given my contacts role. All best wishes for your vacation! Tom.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, August 4, 2010 5:06 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Kenya Update August 4 2010.docx
Attachments: Kenya Update August 4 2010.docx

fyi

From: Wharton, David B
Sent: Wednesday, August 04, 2010 4:58 PM
To: McHale, Judith A; DiMartino, Kitty; Castillo, Raymond A; Scott, Marianne C; McClanahan, Julie A; Kemp, Edward; Roche, Lynn W; Page, Susan D
Cc: Yamamoto, Donald Y
Subject: Kenya Update August 4 2010.docx

Upbeat report from NDI on Kenyan referendum.

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770226 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

NDI Kenya Referendum Update August 4, 2010

Current Political Situation

- Referendum day enthusiasm: was very high as evidenced by the high voter turnout. Some Kenyans came out at 3:00am to participate – polls opened at 6:00am. There has not been a single reported incidence of violence.

- Security: There has been a marked increase in security as compared with the 2007 elections. There are more military personnel in the polling stations and more police presence. There is a particularly high military/police presence in potential trouble areas like the Rift Valley.

- Political good will: Media coverage (both state-run and private) indicates that most Kenyans have been impressed by the IIEC's transparency, regular updates to the public, and have applauded their efforts to address challenges as they have occurred.

Citizen Participation

- Voter Turnout: Voter turn-out appears high (some polling stations had reported that more than 50% of registered voters had voted by mid-day). The IIEC has said that turnout was 60% at 3pm with two hours of voting still to go.

- The Church Mobilization: The "No" vote was largely mobilized by religious organizations and churches. Thousands of voters turned-out in areas that are thought to be supportive of the NO campaign. The final public statement issued by the NO campaign going into the referendum encouraged Kenyans to vote and called for peaceful polls. However, there were troubling signs contained within the statement as well. For instance, the statement read in part: "We are aware that the government has put an elaborate strategy together to rig the referendum... We will reject the results of the referendum if we find that government has operationalized its rigging plans." The NO campaign statement further stated that "Americans are using Kenya as an experiment of their new method of destabilizing and manipulating African nations. If we as Kenyans allow Americans to influence us and manipulate our new constitution, we shall have set the way for other African nations to similarly be manipulated." It does not appear that some elements are prepared for a loss at the polls. This does not mean that the religious leadership or its supporters will result to violence. This may not be true of some politically motivated elements with the NO campaign structure. However, William Ruto has now delivered a statement stating that he will accept the results. This may be driven by the strong messages of support for the IIEC from Kenyan citizens which have been aired by the media all day which make it more difficult for anyone choosing to undermine their results.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770226 Date: 08/31/2015

IIEC Performance

- Voter Registry Problems: There have been some incidences of misspelled names on the register – with proper identification most citizens were still allowed to vote at most polling stations despite minor spelling errors. However, these problems do not appear to be on a scale that could undermine the credibility of the process overall.

- Materials Distribution Challenges: Throughout the country, most of the polling stations received their ballot materials. Most of the polling stations opened on time (06:00 am) or shortly thereafter. Ballot materials in Tana River were lost once the IIEC's canoes leaked but no one was hurt and the commission stated they would get materials to the center later in the day. There have been a few complaints by the "no" camp that ballot papers were inappropriately colored at some stations (they were orange) – the IIEC responded by stating they would attempt to replace the papers in the affected areas.

- Commissioners' Optimism. NDI held a brief "off the record" meeting with the Chair of the IIEC and later with most of the IIEC Commissioners. In both meetings there was acknowledgement of the challenges that the commission had faced during the first half of the election-day but there was also a visible level of optimism among the Commissioners that the process was generally being seen as an open, transparent and participatory one. The Commission has issued two statements thus far. Both are attached to this update.

- Announcement of Results. Officially IIEC has 48 hours from the close of polls (17:00 today) to release results (pushing the deadline to 17:00 Friday, Kenya team). However, the IIEC is releasing interim results by polling station and the team thinks the picture will be clear as early as tomorrow morning. If the process proceeds smoothly, it is likely that the PVT results will be announced after the IIEC's interim results but before the official results.

Election Observers

- Domestic Observers. The IIEC says that it certified 41 domestic election observation groups totaling close to 30,000 observers. NDI's partner, the Election Observation Group (ELOG) is fielding more than 10,000 observers. 702 of the ELOG observers are dedicated to the PVT exercise. ELOG issued two statements today (both are attached).

- International Observers. There are at least three international observer missions in Kenya for the referendum. The missions are from the Commonwealth (3 observers) that were not deployed outside of Nairobi; the East Africa Community (EAC) delegation is also a small one (8 observers) and is headed by EALA member, Hon. Leonce Ndarubagiye from Burundi; and the European Union has an "informal presence" in Nairobi. Last week the EU released a statement praising the IIEC's preparations for the referendum. The African Union has also sent an observation mission. Finally, a number of Embassies deployed staff "observers" throughout the country.

- "Yes" and "No" Polling Station Agents. Observers from the both campaigns were out in force. According to the ELOG (PVT) observers YES and NO observers were present in close to 68% of the polling centers visited. They are allowed 1 per committee per polling station. With 8 committees the maximum could be as much as 240,000 agents. NDI trained the constituency chief agents for all 8 committees and the PVT qualitative results show that only 7% of polling stations did not have agents present at the opening. Some No observers have raised concerns about inappropriately colored ballot papers (they were orange). Otherwise, there have been no serious complaints reported by either side. Some have also made claims that they were prevented from operating but claims of this type have been sporadic, rather than systematic. There have also been claims from the No side that the heavy police presence in the Rift Valley is designed to intimidate their voters but this has not been backed by feedback from the public at large as aired by the media.

- Regional Liaison Observers: There are 20 regional liaison observers throughout the country - all of their reports have been positive and indicate that the process was smooth and there has been no violence. There have been a few minor problems on the register. At present they are observing the tallying process.

The ELOG PVT Exercise

ELOGs PVT operation faced some challenges early in the day because observers were either prevented from entering the polling station or had their phones confiscated. This was the result of poor internal communication within the IIEC which prevented helpful decisions made by the Commission filtering down to Presiding Officers on the ground.

The IIEC has been helpful during the day in resolving at least some of these problems. By 7pm text messages had been received from all but a few PVT observers (96% of the first message and 94% of the second message). ELOG have been able to use reports from their observers in a representative sample of polling stations to draw conclusions about the overall process across the country.

On opening, they reported that:

- 99% of polling stations were set up for secret voting
- 100% of polling stations had ballot boxes which were empty prior to being sealed
- 96% of polling stations had no key materials missing
- 98% of polling stations were open by 7.15am

On the voting process they reported:

- 99% of polling stations reported no attempts to disrupt the voting process
- 98% of polling stations had no cases of voters not being inked
- 84% of polling stations had no cases of voters being allowed to vote without an ID or without their name on the register
- 42% had no cases of voters not being permitted to vote (because they were not registered), 55% had a few cases (1-14) and 3% had some cases (15-49)
- The only issue observed which is difficult to interpret without additional information is the incidence of assisted voting. 5% reported no cases; 27% reported a few cases; 47% reported some cases and 22% reported many cases (50 or more).

Overall, ELOG has received 162 critical incident reports from its entire 10,000+ cadre of observers. Of these, 111 were observers not being permitted to observe.

NDI Mapping Update: NDI has provided maps to visualize critical incidence to Elections Observation Group (ELOG). NDI also provided routing maps that pinpointed polling stations to IIEC who used them to assist the foreign media and their own staff and to observers from the US and several European embassies.

Challenges Ahead

- Release of the results: The IIEC's wish to show the results from all 27,000 polling stations in real time has proved to be over ambitious. However, the counting is going well and there should not be significant delays in the overall reporting process.

- Acceptance of the results: Perhaps the biggest fear is that the "No" camp is not going to accept the results and this will spark post-electoral violence (especially in the Rift Valley). So far there is no evidence that this will occur. However, the point of greatest danger is after the announcement of the results, not before. So far as the political leader of the No side, William Ruto, is concerned, the results in Rift Valley are at least as important as the national total. If the No side has performed as well as expected there, he may not have an interest in seeking to undermine the credibility of the tallying and reporting process.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 8, 2010 7:50 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: The political ramifications of the Greek/European debt crisis

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Sat May 08 06:57:27 2010
Subject: Re: The political ramifications of the Greek/European debt crisis

Pls share w me whatever S/P prepares.
Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thu May 06 19:18:12 2010
Subject: The political ramifications of the Greek/European debt crisis

As you know, the EU-IMF-USG consensus hope motivating the Greek bailout is that it will buy time for Spain, Portugal, etc. From widening credit spreads to falling stock prices, most relevant market indicators are responding with doubt. Former IMF Chief Economist and NYT Columnist (and influential blogger for bond traders) Simon Johnson has an important rejoinder to this consensus hope in today's NYT, full text pasted below.

As the EU has no playbook for most of the pressing questions it faces, my staff is working to brainstorm as to the least bad of what are only sobering options.

This is long but worth it.

May 6, 2010, 6:11 amIt's Not About Greece AnymoreBy PETER BOONE AND SIMON JOHNSONLouisa Gouliamaki/Agence France-Presse — Getty Images Protesters waved flags from the Acropolis archaeological site behind banners in English and Greek hung in front of the Parthenon temple in Athens.Peter Boone is chairman of the charity Effective Intervention and a research associate at the Center for Economic Performance at the London School of Economics. He is also a principal in Salute Capital Management Ltd. Simon Johnson, the former chief economist at the International Monetary Fund, is the co-author of "13 Bankers."The Greek "rescue" package announced last weekend is dramatic, unprecedented and far from enough to stabilize the euro zone.The Greek government and the European Union leadership, prodded by the International Monetary Fund, are finally becoming realistic about the dire economic situation in Greece. They have abandoned previous rounds of optimistic forecasts and have now admitted to a profoundly worse situation. This new program calls for "fiscal adjustments" — cuts to the fiscal deficit, mostly through spending cuts — totaling 11 percent of gross domestic product in 2010, 4.3 percent in 2011, and 2 percent in 2012 and 2013. The total debt-to-G.D.P. ratio peaks at 149 percent in 2012-13 before starting a gentle glide path back down to sanity.This new program is honest enough to show why it is unlikely to succeed.Daniel Gros, an eminent economist on euro zone issues based in Brussels, has argued that for each 1 percent of G.D.P. decline in Greek government spending, total demand in the country falls by 2.5 percent of G.D.P. If the government reduces spending by 15 percent of G.D.P. — the initial shock to demand could be well over 30 percent of G.D.P.Obviously this simple rule does not work with such large numbers, but it illustrates that Greece is likely to experience a very sharp recession — and there is substantial uncertainty around how bad the economy will get. The program announced last weekend assumes Greek G.D.P. falls by 4 percent this year, then by another 2.6 percent in 2011, before recovering to positive growth in 2012 and beyond.Such figures seem extremely optimistic, particularly in the face of the civil unrest now sweeping Greece and the deep hostility expressed toward Greece in some northern European policy circles.The pattern of growth is critical because, under this program, Greece needs to grow out of its debt problem soon. Greece's debt-to-G.D.P. ratio will be a debilitating 145 percent at the end of 2011.Now consider putting more realistic growth figures into the I.M.F. forecast for Greece's economy — e.g., with G.D.P. declining 12 percent in 2011, then the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio may reach 155 percent. At these levels, with a 5 percent real interest rate and no growth, the country needs a primary surplus at 8 percent of G.D.P. to keep the debt-to-G.D.P. ratio stable. It will be nowhere near that level. The I.M.F. program has Greece running a primary budget deficit of around 1 percent of G.D.P. in that year, and that assumes a path for Greek growth that can be regarded only as an "upside scenario."The politics of these implied budget surpluses remains brutal. Since most Greek debt is held abroad, roughly 80 percent of the budget savings the Greek government makes go straight to Germans, French and other foreign debt holders (mostly banks). If growth turns out poorly, will the Greeks be prepared for ever-tougher austerity to pay the Germans? Even if everything goes well, Greek citizens seem unlikely to welcome this version of their "new normal."

Last week the European leadership panicked — very late in the day — when it realized that the euro zone itself was at risk of a meltdown. If the euro zone proves unwilling to protect a member like Greece from default, then bond investors will run from Portugal and Spain also — if you doubt this, study carefully the interlocking debt picture published recently in The New York Times. Higher yields on government debt would have caused concerns about potential bank runs in these nations, and then spread to more nations in Europe.When there is such a "run," it is not clear where it stops. In the hazy distance, Belgium, France, Austria and many others were potentially at risk.

Even the Germans cannot afford to bail out those nations.Slapped in the face by this ugly scenario, the Europeans decided to throw everything they and the I.M.F. had at bailing out Greece. The program as announced has only a small chance of preventing eventual Greek bankruptcy, but it may still slow or avert a dangerous spiral downward — and enormous collateral damage — in the rest of Europe.The I.M.F. floated in some fashion an alternative scenario with a debt restructuring, but this was rejected by both the European Union and the Greek authorities. This is not a surprise; leading European policy makers are completely unprepared for broader problems that would follow a Greek "restructuring," because markets would immediately mark down the debt (i.e., increase the yields) for Portugal, Spain, Ireland and even Italy.The fear and panic in the face of this would be unparalleled in modern times: When the Greeks pay only 50 percent on the face value of their debt, what should investors expect from the Portuguese and Spanish? It all becomes arbitrary, including which countries are dragged down.Someone has to decide who should be defended and at what cost, and the European structures are completely unsuited to this kind of tough decision-making under pressure.In the extreme downside scenario, Germany is the only obvious safe haven within the euro zone, so its government bond yields would collapse while other governments face sharply rising yields. The euro zone would likely not hold together.There is still a narrow escape path, without immediate debt default and the chaos that that would produce:·

Talk down the euro — moving toward parity with the American dollar would help lift growth across the euroz one.·

As the euro falls, bond yields will rise on the euro zone periphery. This will create episodes of panic. Enough short-term financing must be in place to support the rollover of government debt.·

Once the euro has fallen a great deal, announce the European Central Bank will support the euro at those levels (i.e., prevent appreciation, with G-20 tacit agreement), and also support the peripheral euro zone nations viewed as solvent by buying their bonds whenever markets are chaotic.·

At that stage, but not before, the euro zone leadership needs to push weaker governments to restructure. That will include Greece and perhaps also Portugal. Hopefully, in this scenario Spain can muddle through.

European banks should be recapitalized as necessary and have most of their management replaced. This is a massive failure of euro groupthink — including most notably at the political level — but there is no question that bank executives have not behaved responsibly in a long while and should be replaced en masse.To the extent possible, some of the ensuing losses should be shared with bank creditors. But be careful what you wish for. The bankers are powerful for a reason; they have built vital yet fragile structures at the heart of our economies. Dismantle with care.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 8, 2010 4:09 PM
To: H
Subject: MEPP

Sen Mitchell proposes putting out the following statement tomorrow. We would respond on specific commitments on Ramat Shlomo if asked.

Special Envoy Mitchell left the Middle East on Sunday, where he completed the first round of proximity talks with Israeli and Palestinian leaders. The talks were serious and wide-ranging.

Special Envoy Mitchell emphasized the importance of making progress in the proximity talks and of moving to direct negotiations as soon as possible. We have received commitments from both sides, and we have made assurances to both sides, that are enabling us to move forward. The full scope of these discussions will remain private.

As both parties know, if either side takes significant actions during the proximity talks that we judge would seriously undermine trust, we will respond to hold them accountable and ensure that negotiations continue.

Special Envoy Mitchell will return to the region next week to continue indirect negotiations with the parties.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 8, 2010 4:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: MEPP

I think this is about right too.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat May 08 16:16:36 2010
Subject: Re: MEPP

Sounds right to me.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat May 08 16:09:19 2010
Subject: MEPP

Sen Mitchell proposes putting out the following statement tomorrow. We would respond on specific commitments on Ramat Shlomo if asked.

Special Envoy Mitchell left the Middle East on Sunday, where he completed the first round of proximity talks with Israeli and Palestinian leaders. The talks were serious and wide-ranging.

Special Envoy Mitchell emphasized the importance of making progress in the proximity talks and of moving to direct negotiations as soon as possible. We have received commitments from both sides, and we have made assurances to both sides, that are enabling us to move forward. The full scope of these discussions will remain private.

As both parties know, if either side takes significant actions during the proximity talks that we judge would seriously undermine trust, we will respond to hold them accountable and ensure that negotiations continue.

Special Envoy Mitchell will return to the region next week to continue indirect negotiations with the parties.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 8, 2010 5:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Mitchell statement

After further back and forth, we've come up with a way to mention Ramat Shlomo and incitement to violence that should be acceptable to both sides. The additional paragraph would read:

We have urged the parties to help create an atmosphere that is conducive to successful talks, and they are responding, including President Abbas' statement that he will work against incitement of any sort and Prime Minister Netanyahu's statement that there will be no construction at the Ramat Shlomo project for two years. They are both trying to move forward in difficult circumstances and we commend them for that.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 8, 2010 5:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Mitchell statement

I should add that this is still going back and forth.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sat May 08 17:52:28 2010
Subject: Mitchell statement

After further back and forth, we've come up with a way to mention Ramat Shlomo and incitement to violence that should be acceptable to both sides. The additional paragraph would read:

We have urged the parties to help create an atmosphere that is conducive to successful talks, and they are responding, including President Abbas' statement that he will work against incitement of any sort and Prime Minister Netanyahu's statement that there will be no construction at the Ramat Shlomo project for two years. They are both trying to move forward in difficult circumstances and we commend them for that.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 8, 2010 10:27 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Shuttle

You are all set, seats 3A and 3C on the 8:00pm.

Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Huma Abedin [redacted]
Sent: Sat May 08 21:42:55 2010
Subject: Shuttle

I need to take the 8 since Bill is not going to DC tomorrow.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mikulski, BAM (Mikulski) <BAM@Mikulski.senate.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, August 4, 2010 9:32 PM
To: H
Subject: Good news

Shortly after we talked. Got word that. Pres. Bill was coming to do an event for me. In oct. This the $$$ and juice we need. Will thank him myself but if you see him first --- give him a bug 4 me !!!! Great getting caught up

---

Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, May 8, 2010 10:38 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw:

Fyi

From: Holbrooke, Richard
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat May 08 22:36:56 2010
Subject: Fw:

B6

From: Ashley Bommer
To: Pauli, Rosemarie; Holbrooke, Richard
Sent: Sat May 08 21:58:34 2010
Subject:

Tensions between Eikenberry, McChrystal will be focus of their Washington visit

By Joshua Partlow
Sunday, May 9, 2010; A01

They are both decorated generals, West Point graduates who studied at Harvard University and earnest taskmasters who would rather work than sleep.

The U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, Karl W. Eikenberry, and the top U.S. military commander there, Gen. Stanley A. McChrystal, assumed their posts amid lofty expectations that they could re-create the hand-in-glove partnership that Gen. David H. Petraeus and Ambassador Ryan C. Crocker had while leading the war effort in Iraq.

But the Eikenberry-and-McChrystal team that returns to Washington this week, alongside Afghan President Hamid Karzai, has a much different dynamic.

Both men said in interviews that they enjoy a productive relationship and have built stronger bonds between troops and civilians across Afghanistan. Still, they have had significant disagreements over the course of the Afghanistan war and have struggled to align their visions for how to work with Karzai's government, according to interviews with U.S., NATO and Afghan officials.

Few critics suggest that those differences have harmed U.S. interests in Afghanistan. People who have worked with both men said, however, that clear tensions exist at the top of the Obama administration's most important military and foreign policy endeavor.

At times their differences over strategy have been public, particularly after two of Eikenberry's cables to Washington last year were leaked to the news media. The cables warned that McChrystal's request for new troops might be counterproductive as Karzai was "not an adequate strategic partner." McChrystal's staff members were particularly upset that they weren't made aware of Eikenberry's position before he sent the cables to Washington, they said in interviews.

Eikenberry has resisted some of McChrystal's wartime experiments. The ambassador refused to release funds to expand a military effort to turn villagers into armed guards. He opposed one Army brigade's plan to form an anti-Taliban alliance with a Pashtun tribe and funnel it development money. He criticized the military's proposal to buy generators and diesel fuel for the energy-starved city of Kandahar and supported a longer-term hydroelectric dam project.

Their views have diverged despite shared experience: Eikenberry served 18 months as the NATO commander in Afghanistan, the job McChrystal now holds, before retiring from the military and returning as ambassador. As McChrystal has overhauled the war strategy, some of the legacy he is undoing is Eikenberry's.

Eikenberry wanted to become NATO's senior civilian representative, in addition to his job as ambassador, but McChrystal recommended against it, according to diplomats in Kabul. A British diplomat, Mark Sedwill, got the job.

"You have two generals of similar rank who don't agree on the policy, who apparently don't like each other. It makes for a difficult relationship," said Peter W. Galbraith, who served as the top U.S. official in the United Nations' mission to Afghanistan during last year's contested presidential election.

Both men have tried to dispel notions that they disagree on strategy and don't get along.

"The best metaphor I can give you is of an athletic team," Eikenberry said. "We play different positions. We have different but complementary roles. Of course, sometimes we're going to disagree on what's the best play to call, but we're absolutely committed as teammates to see the president's strategy is well-executed."

McChrystal said that he and Eikenberry cooperate effectively and that their relationship should not be measured against the Petraeus-Crocker pairing in Iraq.

"We've known each other for many years. We talk through all the things we deal with," McChrystal said. "Some people are looking for an Iraq model. But Iraq wasn't a 46-nation coalition."

Civil-military integration

The two generals first crossed professional paths in 2002, when McChrystal, who had worked as chief of staff under Gen. Dan K. McNeill, then coalition commander, helped prepare Eikenberry for a job in Kabul building the fledgling Afghan National Army. Later, McChrystal ran the Joint Special Operations Command when Eikenberry held the top military job in Afghanistan.

They now work more independently because their roles aren't perfectly aligned, they said, with McChrystal in charge of the 130,000-strong NATO coalition, not just the American contingent.

Some disagreements between the men may reflect growing pains, as the military makes room for what has become the second-largest U.S. embassy in the world, after the one in Iraq. When President Obama took office last year, there were 360 American civilians in Afghanistan. Now there are more than 1,000 and counting, the most rapid growth of a U.S. civilian mission since the Vietnam War.

Military field commanders who once may have had political advisers now share authority with co-equal civilian representatives backed by growing staffs. The result is a more forceful civilian voice in decision-making.

When Eikenberry has resisted a military proposal, the rationale is often that he does not want to undermine the Afghan government and the development of its security forces. He says that he must take into account factors beyond short-term stability and that programs without Afghan government ownership won't be sustainable.

"I think that both of us are very proud of the degree of civil-military integration we've been able to achieve in the year that we've been here together," Eikenberry said. "So, of course, there's going to be different perspectives, there's going to be robust debates, and you really want that. You've got to encourage that."

Divided over Karzai

Perhaps the most visible difference in approach is how the men work with Karzai.

McChrystal has adopted a role akin to chief diplomat, building a close partnership with Karzai. In monthly White House review sessions, McChrystal has argued that U.S. officials should show more public deference to Karzai, who he frequently reminds others is "the elected leader of a sovereign country," administration officials said.

In the interview, McChrystal called Karzai a "great partner" who has been "absolutely straightforward with me and been reliable."

Some officials said he has built his relationship with Karzai at the expense of candor. In some instances, he has chosen a less politically controversial path, U.S. officials said, citing his decision to work with Ahmed Wali Karzai, the president's half brother, rather than stress his alleged criminal activity.

"If I don't have credibility with President Karzai, then I think I can't be an effective commander here," McChrystal said. "And it doesn't mean just getting along with him and telling him what he wants to hear. It's convincing him that I'm being a reliable and honest interlocutor with him."

Eikenberry, meanwhile, has had to deliver tougher messages about corruption and governance that often upset Karzai, and his rapport with the mercurial president has seemed to suffer.

During a lengthy policy review in the fall, Eikenberry argued against sending additional U.S. troops to Afghanistan. And U.S. officials said he continues to think that the United States should find other Afghan figures, including provincial leaders, to work with rather than rely so heavily on Karzai. Eikenberry's position infuriated Karzai, who often views U.S. support for "sub-national governments" in Afghanistan as a threat to his authority.

Karzai is a cunning politician who has tried to play Eikenberry and McChrystal off each other and exploit any political differences, U.S. officials said. In recent months, when Karzai has come under U.S. pressure to reform his corrupt government, he has often lashed out publicly.

Since McChrystal took command in June, he has met Karzai more than 45 times, mostly one-on-one, including a regular Sunday morning chat in the presidential palace. In an effort to present Karzai as commander in chief, McChrystal has flown him across the country on five "battlefield circulations."

McChrystal has done more than his predecessors, including Eikenberry, to minimize civilian casualties, such as restricting the use of air power and night raids. He has regularly apologized to Karzai for civilian deaths and shown him video and slide presentations to explain how such mistakes occur.

"He was the first military man to really show that he respected and would respond to Karzai's agenda, civilian casualties, of course, being the biggest issue," one senior NATO official said. "In a sense, Karzai said, 'Here's a soldier that finally I can deal with.' "

Crocker, the former U.S. ambassador to Baghdad, said he and Petraeus rarely differed over policy or approach and carefully calibrated their relationship with Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, another complicated leader. The two almost always saw Maliki together. When meeting him alone, they would brief each other before and after.

Of McChrystal and Eikenberry, Crocker said: "They need to resolve any differences among themselves or take it back to Washington because the stakes in Afghanistan are too great not to have a unified effort."

Partlow reported from Kabul. Staff writers Rajiv Chandrasekaran and Scott Wilson in Washington contributed to this report.

--

Text "Swat" to 20222 to provide $5 to UNHCR for life-saving relief to two million refugees.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Sunday, May 9, 2010 3:08 AM
To: H
Subject: H: Sunday am report UK. I return later today to DC. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo uk state of play 050910.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

May 9, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Sunday, State of Play

Clegg is still in talks with Cameron. About 1,500 Liberal Democrats spontaneously protested at Lib-Dem headquarters against a deal with the Tories given their policies, especially on Europe. But Clegg remains in negotiations. He seems quite intent on working it out with Cameron, it appears. His inner Tory magnetically draws him to his heritage. Clegg has also misplayed almost every turn, presented with big chances and blowing them through a combination of inexperience (derived partly from heading a party out of power for nearly 100 years) and inbred arrogance (from no less a privileged background than Cameron, though seeming less snobbish because he went to Westminster instead of Eton and has a less pronounced upper-class accent, more neutral, because of his more cosmopolitan roots through his family).

What about Labour? Shaun and a couple of others have rounded up about 29 votes from other parties (Scottish National Party, NI parties, Welsh party) that could be part of a grand progressive once-in-a-lifetime coalition that required the LDs. Gordon has said he will allow Clegg-Cameron discussions to play out and a general offer to Clegg is on the table, its terms giving far more on a referendum and policy than the Tories. Behind the scenes, Labour is putting whatever harsh pressure it can on LD leaders. Peter is playing a cynical double game. He is a sectarian in a sect of one. Yet Gordon for strange psychological reasons rooted in his triangle with Tony and Peter relies on Peter. Peter, according to Shaun, has wrung a pledge from Borwn that if Brown emerges from this crisis he, Peter, will replace David as Foreign Secretary. Meanwhile, Peter has advised David to sideline himself. David has done so instead of being forward as a strong party man behind Brown in dire straits. Standing back only makes David look ambitious, waiting for Brown to lose and aiming to a leadership contest afterward, when Peter, as he has promised, would guide David to the prize. The plot thickens: Ed Miliband, David's younger brother, the environment secretary, will run for leader against his brother if Brown loses. Ed has more of a common touch. The outcome of that contest would be more than uncertain. But before that eventuality Gordon's team reaches out to the LDs in private. Yet Shaun's attitude, as I read it, leans toward pessmism. A London Times polls just out says 62 percent want Gordon out. Where were the fickle voters in the election? The poll shows more than discontent with Gordon, but also how people are being whipped by the Murdoch media.

What about the Tories? A secret memo from William Hague to Cameron written before the election was leaked this morning to The Observer (the Sunday paper of The Guardian), proposes an anti-Europe line of the new government. (I've enclosed the article below.) The atmosphere inside the Conservatives is acrid and anxious. But Lord Ashcroft, the Tory moneyman, who spent five million pounds alone in marginal districts, is furious that Cameron failed to win outright, failed in his campaign, made a foolish decision to include Clegg in the debates, etc. Many agree with the evil Ashcroft. But the finger pointing won't matter if a deal works with Clegg. The Conservative strategy would be to coopt Clegg now, do whatever deal can be done, maintain a more or less center-right but moderated government for about a year, call a new election, win outright on the momentum of the recovery engineered by Brown but claimed by Tories as proof that the change was responsible, jettison Clegg and the LDs, and govern from the radical right as the children of Thatcher for five years. The Tories would then move on their electoral reforms: cutting the number of seats in Parliament, redistricting in Conservative favor, and trying to outlaw union contributions to the Labour Party.

What about the LDs? Clegg's deal with the Tories would of course thwart any Lib-Lab coalition, probably the only chance for a grand progressive alliance that would keep the Tories out of power forever. Clegg's personal instincts obviously lean toward the Tories, having little to do with policy. The party's leaders may be opposed, but they are also likely to be feckless and weak as they always have been.

So, whatever the case, I would doubt you'll see David again as Foreign Secretary. Prepare for hauge, who is deeply anti-European and will be disingenuous with you. Tory budget cuts in NI, already announced, would cause havoc with peace and economic recovery. I'd send a private message asap on that score the second a new government is announced, if it is. Tilt publicly to Merkel on Europe for this reason among others.

Article below:

Tory-Lib Dem coalition threatened by secret hardline memo on Europe

• Draft letter by William Hague sets out tough stance on EU
• Leak follows leaders' 'constructive, amicable' meeting

Toby Helm and Anushka Asthana

- The Observer, Sunday 9 May 2010

David Cameron's hopes of forming a coalition with the Liberal Democrats were dramatically undermined last night by the leaking of a top-secret letter outlining the hardline Eurosceptic stance he and William Hague planned to adopt in government.

The document, obtained by the Observer, is headed "draft letter from Foreign Secretary to Prime Minister" and was written last week. It assumed an outright Tory victory and spelt out how Hague intended to adopt a tough approach to Europe at a meeting of EU foreign ministers in Brussels tomorrow.

In the letter, compiled by civil servants but written in the first person, Hague tells Cameron how his message would be that "the British relationship with the EU has changed with our election" to one firmly against any further integration.

Exposing the massive gulf between Liberal Democrat leader Nick Clegg and the Conservative leadership on Europe, Hague says he would demand the right to repatriate powers over criminal justice as well as social and employment policy during the first term of a Tory government – demands many EU leaders say they would resist.

Hague planned to tell his EU counterparts: "Rest assured that we seek engagement, not confrontation. But our aim is to achieve these commitments during this parliament." He would also tell his first foreign ministers' meeting "we will never join the euro" and conclude: "You will find us firm but fair, playing a leading role, fighting our corner, practical and straight-talking."

Last night the Tories said they had no knowledge of the letter. But the Observer understands it was drawn up on the basis of detailed briefings between senior civil servants and Hague. The document came to light as Clegg, a strong pro-European, yesterday met his MPs and senior party figures to discuss a possible coalition with the Tories, who emerged from Thursday's general election with the largest number of seats but short of an overall majority.

Cameron and Clegg held face-to-face talks late yesterday as they continued their attempts to thrash out a power-sharing deal. A senior Conservative party spokeswoman said the talks were "constructive and amicable". The 70-minute meeting took place at Admiralty House in Whitehall. A Lib Dem spokesman also described the discussions as "constructive and amicable".

Tory and Lib Dem sources said last night that discussions would not conclude until the beginning of the coming week at the earliest. An emergency meeting of the 1922 committee of Tory backbenchers will be held tomorrow to discuss the possible coalition. Today, Hague, Oliver Letwin and George Osborne will resume talks with the Lib Dems' Vince Cable, Chris Huhne and David Laws.

But the stark language used in the letter is bound to alarm Clegg, who has been savage in his criticism of the Conservatives' attitude to Europe which he believes is rooted in the past and will limit Britain's ability to fight cross-border crime and meet the environmental challenges of the 21st century.

The document will also be seen by Lib Dem MPs and the party's rank and file as evidence that their pro-Europeanism would be compromised by linking up with the Tories. A Lib Dem spokesman said the party was strongly pro-European, but would not be drawn on the document.

Yesterday Cameron came under pressure from senior figures in his own party not to give in to Clegg's demands by watering down Conservative manifesto commitments. Shadow defence secretary Liam Fox warned that a Tory government could not be "held to ransom" by Lib Dems demanding proportional representation.

Clegg may also face opposition from within his party to any attempt to form a coalition with the Tories, particularly on economic issues.

Yesterday the Social Liberal Forum, which represents left-leaning Lib Dems and includes a third of the party's MPs, issued a set of "red lines" which it said the party must not cross, including any measure that would increase the gap between the rich and poor – ruling out supporting the Tory pledge to cut inheritance tax. Three other red lines were any suggestion of cuts to frontline services in the current financial year, any worsening treatment of asylum seekers and any watering-down of the human rights act.

Meanwhile, Gordon Brown and his closest advisers were working on how to expand their counter-offer to the Lib Dems, including a referendum on changes to the voting system. Senior officials said Labour was planning to draw up a formal "coalition contract" – as happens in Germany – that would bind the Lib Dems and other smaller parties into a deal if the Tory discussions with the Lib Dems were to fail.

Most Labour ministers now believe Brown would have to step down before Clegg would consider a pact, though senior government insiders insisted this was not being discussed as an option.

One re-elected Labour MP, John Mann, of Bassetlaw, called on Brown to step down as Labour leader, claiming that the party would have influence on the outcome of the current negotiations only if Brown agreed to give up the leadership.

"Brown should not lead Labour into any future election and he should stand down before the next Labour party conference," he said. "Gordon Brown's continuation as leader rules out the credibility of a Lib-Lab pact that has to prioritise the modernisation and reform of the antiquated UK political systems."

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770244 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

May 9, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Sunday, State of Play

Clegg is still in talks with Cameron. About 1,500 Liberal Democrats spontaneously protested at Lib-Dem headquarters against a deal with the Tories given their policies, especially on Europe. But Clegg remains in negotiations. He seems quite intent on working it out with Cameron, it appears. His inner Tory magnetically draws him to his heritage. Clegg has also misplayed almost every turn, presented with big chances and blowing them through a combination of inexperience (derived partly from heading a party out of power for nearly 100 years) and inbred arrogance (from no less a privileged background than Cameron, though seeming less snobbish because he went to Westminster instead of Eton and has a less pronounced upper-class accent, more neutral, because of his more cosmopolitan roots through his family).

What about Labour? Shaun and a couple of others have rounded up about 29 votes from other parties (Scottish National Party, NI parties, Welsh party) that could be part of a grand progressive once-in-a-lifetime coalition that required the LDs. Gordon has said he will allow Clegg-Cameron discussions to play out and a general offer to Clegg is on the table, its terms giving far more on a referendum and policy than the Tories. Behind the scenes, Labour is putting whatever harsh pressure it can on LD leaders. Peter is playing a cynical double game. He is a sectarian in a sect of one. Yet Gordon for strange psychological reasons rooted in his triangle with Tony and Peter relies on Peter. Peter, according to Shaun, has wrung a pledge from Borwn that if Brown emerges from this crisis he, Peter, will replace David as Foreign Secretary. Meanwhile, Peter has advised David to sideline himself. David has done so instead of being forward as a strong party man behind Brown in dire straits. Standing back only makes David look ambitious, waiting for Brown to lose and aiming to a leadership contest afterward, when Peter, as he has promised, would guide David to the prize. The plot thickens: Ed Miliband, David's younger brother, the environment secretary, will run for leader against his brother if Brown loses. Ed has more of a common touch. The outcome of that contest would be more than uncertain. But before that eventuality Gordon's team reaches out to the LDs in private. Yet Shaun's attitude, as I read it, leans toward pessmism. A London Times polls just out says 62 percent want Gordon out. Where were the fickle voters in the election? The poll shows more than discontent with Gordon, but also how people are being whipped by the Murdoch media.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05770244 Date: 08/31/2015

What about the Tories? A secret memo from William Hague to Cameron written before the election was leaked this morning to The Observer (the Sunday paper of The Guardian), proposes an anti-Europe line of the new government. (I've enclosed the article below.) The atmosphere inside the Conservatives is acrid and anxious. But Lord Ashcroft, the Tory moneyman, who spent five million pounds alone in marginal districts, is furious that Cameron failed to win outright, failed in his campaign, made a foolish decision to include Clegg in the debates, etc. Many agree with the evil Ashcroft. But the finger pointing won't matter if a deal works with Clegg. The Conservative strategy would be to coopt Clegg now, do whatever deal can be done, maintain a more or less center-right but moderated government for about a year, call a new election, win outright on the momentum of the recovery engineered by Brown but claimed by Tories as proof that the change was responsible, jettison Clegg and the LDs, and govern from the radical right as the children of Thatcher for five years. The Tories would then move on their electoral reforms: cutting the number of seats in Parliament, redistricting in Conservative favor, and trying to outlaw union contributions to the Labour Party.

What about the LDs? Clegg's deal with the Tories would of course thwart any Lib-Lab coalition, probably the only chance for a grand progressive alliance that would keep the Tories out of power forever. Clegg's personal instincts obviously lean toward the Tories, having little to do with policy. The party's leaders may be opposed, but they are also likely to be feckless and weak as they always have been.

So, whatever the case, I would doubt you'll see David again as Foreign Secretary. Prepare for hauge, who is deeply anti-European and will be disingenuous with you. Tory budget cuts in NI, already announced, would cause havoc with peace and economic recovery. I'd send a private message asap on that score the second a new government is announced, if it is. Tilt publicly to Merkel on Europe for this reason among others.

Article below:

Tory-Lib Dem coalition threatened by secret hardline memo on Europe

- Draft letter by William Hague sets out tough stance on EU
- Leak follows leaders' 'constructive, amicable' meeting

Toby Helm and Anushka Asthana

- The Observer, Sunday 9 May 2010

David Cameron's hopes of forming a coalition with the Liberal Democrats were dramatically undermined last night by the leaking of a top-secret letter outlining the hardline Eurosceptic stance he and William Hague planned to adopt in government.

The document, obtained by the Observer, is headed "draft letter from Foreign Secretary to Prime Minister" and was written last week. It assumed an outright Tory victory and spelt out how Hague intended to adopt a tough approach to Europe at a meeting of EU foreign ministers in Brussels tomorrow.

In the letter, compiled by civil servants but written in the first person, Hague tells Cameron how his message would be that "the British relationship with the EU has changed with our election" to one firmly against any further integration.

Exposing the massive gulf between Liberal Democrat leader Nick Clegg and the Conservative leadership on Europe, Hague says he would demand the right to repatriate powers over criminal justice as well as social and employment policy during the first term of a Tory government – demands many EU leaders say they would resist.

Hague planned to tell his EU counterparts: "Rest assured that we seek engagement, not confrontation. But our aim is to achieve these commitments during this parliament." He would also tell his first foreign ministers' meeting "we will never join the euro" and conclude: "You will find us firm but fair, playing a leading role, fighting our corner, practical and straight-talking."

Last night the Tories said they had no knowledge of the letter. But the Observer understands it was drawn up on the basis of detailed briefings between senior civil servants and Hague. The document came to light as Clegg, a strong pro-European, yesterday met his MPs and senior party figures to discuss a possible coalition with the Tories, who emerged from Thursday's general election with the largest number of seats but short of an overall majority.

Cameron and Clegg held face-to-face talks late yesterday as they continued their attempts to thrash out a power-sharing deal. A senior Conservative party spokeswoman said the talks were "constructive and amicable". The 70-minute meeting took place at Admiralty House in Whitehall. A Lib Dem spokesman also described the discussions as "constructive and amicable".

Tory and Lib Dem sources said last night that discussions would not conclude until the beginning of the coming week at the earliest. An emergency meeting of the 1922 committee of Tory backbenchers will be held tomorrow to discuss the possible coalition. Today, Hague, Oliver Letwin and George Osborne will resume talks with the Lib Dems' Vince Cable, Chris Huhne and David Laws.

But the stark language used in the letter is bound to alarm Clegg, who has been savage in his criticism of the Conservatives' attitude to Europe which he believes is rooted in the past and will limit Britain's ability to fight cross-border crime and meet the environmental challenges of the 21st century.

The document will also be seen by Lib Dem MPs and the party's rank and file as evidence that their pro-Europeanism would be compromised by linking up with the Tories. A Lib Dem spokesman said the party was strongly pro-European, but would not be drawn on the document.

Yesterday Cameron came under pressure from senior figures in his own party not to give in to Clegg's demands by watering down Conservative manifesto commitments. Shadow defence secretary Liam Fox warned that a Tory government could not be "held to ransom" by Lib Dems demanding proportional representation.

Clegg may also face opposition from within his party to any attempt to form a coalition with the Tories, particularly on economic issues.

Yesterday the Social Liberal Forum, which represents left-leaning Lib Dems and includes a third of the party's MPs, issued a set of "red lines" which it said the party must not cross, including any measure that would increase the gap between the rich and poor – ruling out supporting the Tory pledge to cut inheritance tax. Three other red lines were any suggestion of cuts to frontline services in the current financial year, any worsening treatment of asylum seekers and any watering-down of the human rights act.

Meanwhile, Gordon Brown and his closest advisers were working on how to expand their counter-offer to the Lib Dems, including a referendum on changes to the voting system. Senior officials said Labour was planning to draw up a formal "coalition contract" – as happens in Germany – that would bind the Lib Dems and other smaller parties into a deal if the Tory discussions with the Lib Dems were to fail.

Most Labour ministers now believe Brown would have to step down before Clegg would consider a pact, though senior government insiders insisted this was not being discussed as an option.

One re-elected Labour MP, John Mann, of Bassetlaw, called on Brown to step down as Labour leader, claiming that the party would have influence on the outcome of the current negotiations only if Brown agreed to give up the leadership.

"Brown should not lead Labour into any future election and he should stand down before the next Labour party conference," he said. "Gordon Brown's continuation as leader rules out the credibility of a Lib-Lab pact that has to prioritise the modernisation and reform of the antiquated UK political systems."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
